Dear Mr. Talley:

You will undoubtedly be interested to know that due to the demand for and excellent reaction to Lew Lehr, his Newsettes and Unnatural History, we have started featuring him on our front.

Located at the continent's principal and busiest cross-roads, our display space is very valuable but we have found that giving some of it to Lehr is a good investment. Lehr definitely draws 'em to the box office.

Under separate cover you will receive a photo of our current front.

Sincerely yours,

BIRDS OF A FEATHER!

ONLY a few, more peculiarly endowed, makers of pictures can hope for the important and significant recognition of booking at the Cameo theatre in New York's Forty-second street, where Union Square, the Red Square of Moscow and Times Square overlap on one corner.

The Cameo programs have been highlighted by such Soviet masterpieces as "Three Songs about Lenin" and "Chapayev," along with sundry other outgivings with the familiar end title: "The Revolution Marches On."

Amusement advertisement in the New York Times

In fact the Soviet's government controlled and operated cinema has long been the most conspicuous supply of box office material for the Cameo. Now, however, there is a promising rival in the field, none other than the cinema of the United States Government's Administration's WPA, which has made its debut in the Red sector on the screen of the Cameo with "The Plow that Broke the Plains."

Great interest has attached to the rivalries of Moscow and Washington these days, and now that it is coming to flower also on the screen it may be expected to be even more revealing and artfully animated.

SUNDAY PIECE

A WEEK ago Sunday Mr. Brooks Atkinson, dramatic critic of the New York Times, did his annual screed entitled "No Sunday Article," this one being a dissertation on his Pekingese. Last Sunday Mr. Frank S. Nugent, screen critic, took off for a half a column of his reflections in the same paper with a discussion of the Pekingese, and some alleged streptococci on the critic's tonsils.

The editor of Motion Picture Herald, who commonly submerges in The Sunday Times all the way from the last breakfast coffee to the first mid-afternoon julep, sitting in the maple-dappled shade of the garden-side, has given the issue his usual unhurried, mature consideration and has decided he'd rather have the streptococci than a Pekingese. Angus McTavish O'Dundee, the terrier who so ably assists in the garden sitting, ate a Pekingese once and was sick for two days.

Meanwhile, it develops that Mr. Nugent pridefully harbours an Airedale, Briar by name. It would be an Airedale, with briars. That sets us wondering what kind of a son-of-a-kennel Mr. Richard Watts has?

MEANWHILE, the weather and the landscape being what it is, there would appear that there will be some difficulty about reaching the desk betimes of a Monday, and The Times is going to be quite a help to this page. For instance, there is a joyous piece about the "appeal to men" policy of Mr. Arthur Mayer of the Rialto in Times Square calling him the Merchant of Menace, and quoting him: "Fertilized by the libido of the neurotic female, the movies have laid an egg." The Times diagnoses this as a hybridization of the jargon of "Sig and Sime." But, continues Mr. Mayer: "An adolescent erogenic art has developed a mother fixation—sic nix pix."

INCIDENTALLY, right half-way down a Tom Collins—that comes before the julep hour—we found some evidence of streptococci — or could they be saprophytic diplococci? — among Mr. Nugent's statistics whereby he proclaims that in the first six months of the year "there appeared in the principal first run theatres of our fair city 275 feature length pictures of which 120 were foreign made."

The implication is that foreign pictures are making a highly important showing on the screen of New York. Now the fact is that if one eliminates the 21 British productions included, the total of patron attendance hours, or circulation, for all the foreign product would scarcely amount to a week's business at the Music Hall. The British material for a lot of reasons running from political geography to corporation structures is not properly to be labeled "foreign." An American is not a "foreigner" in London or Montreal and a British picture may be an imported but not an alien product here. The new International Motion Picture Almanac, now on the presses, our favorite authority in this field, carries a British section, between the American and Foreign sections.

The anglophile Times might take cognizance.

Which reminds us, this otherwise faultless Sunday afternoon, near the bottom of the Tom Collins, that it would be nice if our favorite papers had a policy. The Sunday magazine of the revered Times and the book review section of the able Herald Tribune today are as red as a fox in a pokeberry patch.

This Week

Balaban Slated

Barney Balaban, of the celebrated Chicago circuit of Balaban and Katz, was scheduled to be elected president of Paramount Pictures, Inc., on Thursday, with Adolph Zukor slated for the chairmanship of the board of directors.

Latest developments in Paramount's affairs, including the status of John E. Otterson, are described on page 13.

100 from Britain

British studios are speeding up their production schedules to a new pace, with their eyes fixed upon the vast American market. Advance reports indicate that 100 features will reach this country this season from the shores of Albion, with Gaumont British and United Artists leading the importers.

The assistance that the machinery set up by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has rendered foreign producers of pictures intended for this country has also been utilized and is being used more every day, in the light of figures at the end of the first year of operation.

Details of the British activity are to be found in the story on page 15.

Television Starts

Television finally reached the stage this week where the American public can witness the results to date from the experimental laboratories, RCA launching a public test, to last six months, broadcasting from New York.

A score of additional developments in the new field are described starting on page 25.

Long Reel Instruction

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, in Hollywood, set out this week to instruct the motion picture industry on the manner and method of changing over on September 1st from the present 1,000-foot reel standard to the new 2,000-foot reels. The reels will first be delivered to exchanges in the field on August 15th.

Conflicting Decisions

Courts in two states ruled favorably on Bank Night this week while test cases on the legality of chance games were threatened or begun in four other instances. There are many conflicting court decisions.

Developments in the situation are reviewed on page 44.

Sticking to their Guns

German subsidiaries of three large American producing companies will not suspend operations in spite of increasing censorship difficulties and the impossibility of drawing any revenue from the country, officials of Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox said this week. The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America has taken the stand that any action in the matter must come from the individual companies concerned. A German newspaper, attacking the Government's censorship policy in a series of articles, declared that the threat to close the American distributing offices would seriously affect the film industry in that country.

A survey of the Nazi situation is made on page 38.

Counter-Campaign

Publicity and advertising executives of the major companies are considering the mapping of a national drive to support sagging box office receipts during the political campaign this year. They are agreed that the competition from the Democrats and Republicans in the amusement field will be unusually heavy.

The newsreels this week estimated that they sent to exhibitors some 3,100,000 feet of positive film on both political conventions, the Republicans', at Cleveland, and the Democrats', at Philadelphia.

The story is on page 14.

Fund Mystery

Cancelled checks and vouchers for more than $1,000,000 in funds of Local 306, Motion Picture Operators Union, are reported missing in a story this week in the New York World Telegram which has been campaigning against alleged "racket politics" in the local. The records are being sought in connection with the prosecution of Harry Sherman, former head of the local, on a grand larceny charge. Union officials are reported to have claimed the checks disappeared after the books of the union were confiscated by Assistant District Attorney William Kleinman in 1934.

The status of the case against Mr. Sherman and other court actions involving unions are reviewed on page 44.

Washington Calls

Applicants for the positions of junior motion picture directors and motion picture specialists with the Department of Agriculture are sought by the United States Civil Service Commission. An age limit of 45 has been set by the Commission and several prospective candidates are planning to protest to senators and congressmen that this limit is too low.

Requirements and duties of the posts are given in the story on page 36.

Music Publisher Tilts

Music publishers figured in three battles this week in their relations with the motion picture business: (1) Federal court dismissed the suit of the Music Publishers Protective Association for $150,000 claimed due in royalties from the producers and Electrical Research Products; (2) Canada effected strict governmental control of charges and regulations imposed by the Canadian Performing Rights Society on users of copyrighted music; and, (3) American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers won a court victory against new Georgia tax and licensing legislation.

See page 32.

Clash over Quota

Out of a 200,000-word Blue Book of "evidence taken before the Departmental Committee on Cinematograph Films" in England, testimony from producers, exhibitors, technicians and makers of socalled "documentary films," outstanding suggestions are these: the Federation of British Industries' Film Group wants the Quota increased to more than 50 per cent; exhibitors want it lowered to 10 per cent.

A detailed digest of the report, and of other developments of the week in Britain, starts on page 55.

Odds and Ends

With the 1935-36 season rapidly drawing to a close, various companies are rushing production to meet final release dates, others are signing new directorial, writing and acting talent and others are adding producers to their ranks.

Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox have the largest number of pictures in the cutting room or in the last stages of actual shooting so that they should all be clear of the exchanges by the end of August.

The final details and the clearing up of the odds and ends of the current season are discussed in the story on page 43.

34 from United Artists

Thirty-four features, nine Mickey Mouse cartoons and nine Walt Disney Silly Symphonies will be on the distribution lineup of United Artists next season, delegates to the company's annual sales convention at the Ambassador hotel in Los Angeles were told this week by George Schaefer, general manager of sales and company vice-president, who presided. An increased advertising budget was also announced by Mr. Schaefer to the 50 delegates from the home office, abroad and the field.

Details of the gathering are found in the story on page 57.

More Trouble

The Federal Government, ace creditor of them all, has joined the army of claimants demanding an accounting of the assets of William Fox, former producer, who testified at the opening of his bankruptcy proceedings last week in Atlantic City. The Treasury Department filed a lien against the beleaguered former film executive for $300,808 in taxes for 1929 and 1930 and for $1,060,922 in penalties and interest. Hiram Steelman, Atlantic City attorney, has been appointed trustee for Mr. Fox.

Reception to Britons

In connection with the forthcoming visit to the United States of a group of British exhibitors, members of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, there will be an especially arranged inspection tour of Radio City Music Hall, followed by a reception in the private salon of the Music Hall, on the afternoon of Tuesday, July 28.

Invitation for the inspection tour was extended by W. G. Van Schmus, managing director. In the reception and entertainment following, Martin Quigley, representing Quigley Publications, will be associated with Mr. Van Schmus. A representative list of New York theatre and film company executives will be invited to attend and to join in the reception to the overseas visitors.

The British exhibitors, representing London and Home Counties branch of the C.E.A., are scheduled to arrive in New York on the Queen Mary on July 26th. Several weeks will be spent in the United States in a tour which will include a visit to Hollywood.

WPA Film Index

Compilation of a complete "Bibliographical Index of the Motion Picture in America" has been launched by WPA workers under the auspices of the Federal Writers' Project in New York City. According to the announcement the proposal is "impelled by the growing importance of the motion picture in American life and the need for organized knowledge of film history." The plan is to compile a bibliography and after that a detailed index of the mass of material.

The project has an imposing list of sponsors from the academic and film worlds, among them Professor Allan Abbott, Wilton A. Barrett, Professor Walter Barnes, Iris Barry, Marion Beaufait, Dr. Fannie Dunn, Dr. Cicile W. Flemming, George Freedley, James S. Hamilton, Dr. Cline M. Coon, Dr. William L. Lewin, Dr. Paul Mann, Professor Allardyce Nicoll, Frank S. Nugent, Terry Ramsaye, Professor Milton Smith and Professor M. Thrasher.

Quarterly

So widespread has been the interest accorded the announcement by Quigley Publishing Company of the forthcoming Teatro al Día, Spanish language publication in the theatre equipment field, that decision has been made to issue Teatro al Día quarterly, in July, October, January and April.

Exhibitor Gathering

The Southeastern Association of Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners has scheduled its annual convention and frolic for August 2nd, 3rd and 4th at Jacksonville, Fla. A golf tournament, shore dinner and a banquet and dance are included in the plans.

Activities of Allied affiliates in Omaha and in New England are included in the story on page 56.

Radio "Cleanup"

A "Legion of Decency" movement in radio, similar to that which caused the motion picture business to raise its standards two years ago, was threatened by Congressman Connery, as a result of the broadcasting of program material which he describes as being "objectionable."

Congressman Connery's bitter campaign on this issue is reported on page 18.

Clergy Protests Ban

The action of Canada's Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn in upholding the banning of Warner Brothers' "Green Pastures," on the grounds that the picture is sacrilegious, this week brought a storm of protests both from the clergy and the press.

The reverberations are described on page 49.

At British Studios

Latest news from the British production centers is the subject matter of a new department of Motion Picture Herald starting in this issue. Among highlights of the week were the filming of the first color interior on British soil, by Robert T. Kane's unit making "Wings of the Morning" at London Films' Denham plant. Another event was a visit of Lord Moyne and fellow members of the Statutory Committee on the Cinematograph Films Act to Denham, Iver and Sound City.

These and other developments in England's film capitals are reviewed on pages 35 and 36.

Newsreels by Air

All regular issues of the Gaumont British newsreel are delivered to exhibitors of the United Kingdom by the company's own aviation service. Schedules are in the hands of the showmen and code telegrams referring to those schedules inform the theatremen just when the prints are to arrive.

How the system works, with a reproduction of one of the schedules, is explained on page 60.

BARNEY BALABAN SLATED PARAMOUNT PRESIDENT

Zukor as Chairman; Corporation to Assume Relations with Otterson, Including Salary, End with Close of Year Term

1—Barney Balaban of Chicago theatre fame was scheduled to be elected president of Paramount Pictures Corporation Thursday.

2—Adolph Zukor appeared destined to remain in his post of chairman of the board of the corporation.

3—It was authoritatively reported that the corporation would assume that relations with John E. Otterson, including salary, would terminate with the expiration of his year term as president. This appeared to guarantee a lawsuit on Mr. Otterson's five-year contract.

4—The much discussed and never revealed, and also yet incomplete, report by Joseph P. Kennedy on the state of the corporation, seemed to be, or about to be, "tabled" or "filed" sine die.

These eventuations arrived Wednesday, the ninth day of the Paramount presidential stalemate and in sequel to a large array of proposals, tentative slates and brewings.

There was discussion, for instance, of a plan to set up Mr. Balaban as a general manager of wide authority, officing in the East and specially attending to distribution and related affairs, while the presidency and production responsibility in the West was to be Mr. Zukor's.

Although Mr. Zukor is known to have had strong support for the presidency, he is said to have elected to continue as chairman of the board.

That might have been something tantamount to the Paramount situation, in some aspects, when the celebrated firm of Balaban & Katz was represented mightily in the corporation's affairs and operations by Sam Katz, now a producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Hollywood. Mr. Balaban is one of five new directors added to the Paramount board two weeks ago.

Debate Over Otterson Situation

The election, deferred twice since a special meeting was called last week, was scheduled for late Thursday afternoon. Until Wednesday Mr. Zukor was considered the leading candidate for the presidency and it was believed that the only reason for postponement of the balloting was the problem of what action would be taken on the contract held by John E. Otterson, retiring president.

The situation with respect to Mr. Otterson passed through much debate and it is said that the ultimate decision to assume the complete termination of relations at this time was, and is, based on the contention that despite his possession of a five-year contract, he could not legally be employed for such a term in that post since the board of directors can elect a president for a one-year term only.

Scheduled to Head Paramount Pictures

BARNEY BALABAN

The adventures of Paramount in the last few years have included a considerable array of contract settlements running into large figures.

The change in election plans came also in sequel to a meeting of John D. Hertz of Lehman Brothers, Charles McCulloch of First National Bank of Chicago, Mr. Balaban and Edwin Weisl of counsel for Paramount, at Leona Farms, Mr. Hertz's estate at Cary, Ill. The four are members of a directors committee appointed to prepare a slate of officers for the board.

The calm setting of the Chicago banker's green pastures which, beside being his home, are the site of his internationally known horse breeding farm, was a change of scene for the Paramount debate. The group returned to New York on Monday and discussions since have been held with the other directors.

Mr. Zukor also arrived in New York on Monday to continue "a habit of 20 years standing by spending the Fourth of July with his family on his estate in New York City, N. Y.," according to the Paramount publicity department, which added that his trip was undertaken solely to carry out this family tradition.

Bid to Kennedy Rumored

The continued inaction of the board during the week brought a flood of rumors concerning the new personnel. The New York Evening Journal, a Hearst paper, on Monday said that informed Wall Street observers had reported that "Paramount directors have made another bid to Joseph P. Kennedy to become identified with the corporation as one of its top officers."

The newspaper quoted the opinion of "those in authority to speak" that Mr. Kennedy fits the reported requirement of the board that the new president must be "a man from within the organization." The story pointed out that the financier could be considered a member of the organization through his semi-official office as financial adviser.

The Journal added that "considerable doubt was apparent whether Mr. Kennedy would accept since reports were that he planned to take a part in the coming Presidential campaign." It said that he was expected to attend Thursday's meeting.

Paramount officials said they were unaware that the board had made any new offer to Mr. Kennedy. He told reporters recently that he had "definitely decided" that he would take no Paramount post.

The theatre end of the financial adviser's report on Paramount operations has been completed but work is still progressing on the surveys covering the foreign department, newsreel and personnel.

Joseph P. Kennedy's Report on State of Corporation Apparently To Be "Tabled" or "Filed" Sine Die

Lasky Return Reported

A story which followed Mr. Zukor from the Coast is to the effect that Jesse L. Lasky will leave the Pickford-Lasky organization to rejoin Paramount. Daily newspapers in Los Angeles carried reports that New York bankers interested in Paramount are insistent on the producer's return to the company, thus reuniting him with Mr. Zukor, with whom he founded the organization.

The report gained substance on announcement that the production activities of Pickford-Lasky, Inc., will be suspended after completion of the current picture, "The World Is Mine," because Miss Pickford, who is an executive of United Artists, has been occupied with the affairs of that company.

The board's preoccupation with the election tangle has prevented official action on three operating agreements which were scheduled for action at the regular meeting last week. The contracts for the Wilby-Kincey, Lucas & Jenkins and Hoblitzelle circuits expired on Wednesday but officials of Paramount announced they would be automatically extended for a year to give the board of directors additional time to study the new agreements recommended.

It also was announced that by arrangement with Karl Hoblitzelle the operations in Galveston and Austin, Texas, become a permanent part of the Interstate Circuit in which Mr. Hoblitzelle and Famous Theatres Corporation are equally interested.

Three Carolina Houses Purchased by Kincey

Sale of one theatre in North Carolina and two in South Carolina to companies headed by H. F. Kincey has been reported by L. C. Sipe of the L. C. Sipe Theatres Company. The houses are the Carolina at High Point, the Criterion in Spartansburg and the Criterion in Anderson.

Fox To Build in Paris

Negotiations have been completed by Ben Miggins, European manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, for construction of a 1,000-seat theatre on Champs d'Elysees, Paris.

FILMS TO FIGHT POLITICAL INROADS; NEWSREELS TOP CONVENTION MARK

Advertising Executives Suggest Committee To Lay Out Program to Combat Competition of Summer Spellbinders

Publicity and advertising chiefs of the major film companies are considering the mapping of a special campaign to bolster box-offices late this summer and in the fall when the heat of the political campaign in which elaborate showmanship is expected to be used, will draw heavily on theatre patronage.

Although no definite steps have as yet been taken by any of the companies toward joint action on a campaign of institutional publicity to meet the competition of the political parties in the amusement field, nor have any preliminary conferences been held, several advertising executives have agreed that the formation of a committee to plan an intensive national drive would prove effective in meeting the problem.

Such a committee would lay down a general program for publicity and would work out a schedule of contributions from each member company to support the general drive to benefit the entire industry.

Spokesmen for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors and the national exhibitor organizations already have issued warnings that exhibitors must be prepared to exert their most expert showmanship efforts to carry on even normal summer business in the face of the flood of attractions to be offered by politicians to catch the public's attention.

The Republican and Democratic strategists have not completed their full program but they have announced that the radio and the screen will play major roles in the general scheme of things. At GOP headquarters it was said that radio speakers will be introduced on programs which will employ expensive professional talent, and the Democrats are considering similar procedure.

Exhibitors Get 3,168,000 Feet of Newsreels on Conventions

Estimating that the five newsreels—Paramount, Fox Movietone, Hearst Metrotone, Universal and Pathe—released together enough positive film to exhibitors on the Democratic and Republican presidential conventions to measure 3,180,000 feet—some 600 miles—William Montague, Jr., assistant editor of Paramount News, this week added that the Philadelphia and Cleveland sessions were probably the most economical, from the standpoint of cost to the newsreels, of all national political gatherings to date.

Unlike other years when many political factors viewed the camera dubiously and convention managements allowed newsreels to shift for themselves in the matter of arrangements and accommodations, Mr. Montague attributed considerable of the savings newsreels were able to effect this year to the cooperation and consideration of both political parties.

The convention halls in Cleveland and Philadelphia, first of all, were well lighted. This solved a major problem for the reels as well as eliminating a great expense in additional arrangements and time.

Secondly, speeches were provided each newsreel many hours in advance of their delivery. Editors were thus able to scan the copy for highlights and instruct their cameramen to shoot accordingly, thereby cutting negative print costs considerably.

As early as January, however, newsreels began their own preparations for covering the political talk-fests. Mr. Montague reports that virtually all of the reels were able to work according to these plans.

Nevertheless newsreelmen found a convention day was "a pretty long day," commencing at nine in the morning and usually terminating at three the following morning.

Paramount cameraman, like the others, shot two negatives on every subject. While one negative was being shipped to New York the other was airmailed to the west coast. Thus the companies were able to realize almost simultaneous showings on both coasts and throughout the country.

In all, Mr. Montague figures, the newsreels used approximately 100,000 feet of negative film.

Rehearing Studied In Sales Tax Case

Major distributors in New York were scheduled to come to a decision this week on procedure in their announced intention of protesting an appellate division ruling that local film rentals are subject to the two per cent city sales tax. They may move to obtain a rehearing in the original court instead of carrying the case to the court of appeals at Albany.

The appellate division held that film delivered outside the New York city limits is not subject to the tax but that film delivered to theatres within the city is. About $1,000,000 is expected to be collected by the city for rentals this year under the ruling.

The sales tax was one of the problems discussed at a meeting of the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey on Tuesday.

Distributors Sued In Anti-Trust Case

Anger & Walsh Amusement Company of Providence, R. I., has filed an anti-trust suit in the United States district court in Boston against all large distributors.

Louis Anger and George W. Walsh, who formerly operated the Metropolitan in Providence, charge monopoly and conspiracy which is claimed to have resulted in the closing of the theatre. The company has an option to lease the Metropolitan again when product becomes available. George S. Ryan is attorney for the amusement firm.

Prizes In for Connecticut Golf

The Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association has received prizes for the golf tournament on July 14 at the Racebrook Country Club, from Twentieth Century-Fox, National Screen Service, Showmen's Trade Review, A. W. Smith, Jr., of Warner Brothers and GB.

Tri-States Circuit Adds Six in Iowa

With one swoop of the pen, A. H. Blank's circuit of Tri-States Theatres, Inc., was enlarged from 27 houses to 33, by the addition of six Souix City, Iowa, theatres. The deal was engineered by G. Ralph Branton, general manager for A. H. Blank, and Evert R. Cummings, district manager at Omaha, and B. H. Friedman and Sol Shulkin, the latter having come into control of the six theatres.

The deal calls for a partnership arrangement with the Blank circuit being in active operation of the houses. The six houses are: Granada, Iowa, Hipp, Rialto, Loop and Circle. To complete the switch-over, Eli E. Seff, who operated the Circle, Loop and Rialto, had to sell out his interests to Friedman and Shulkin, who already owned and operated the Iowa and Hipp. The Granada was taken over from Abe Sadoff and added to the group.

100 BRITISH PICTURES FOR U.S. IN 1936-37

All Large Companies in England Now Aiming at American Market; Competing on Their Merits, Says Major Procter

Production schedules in foreign studios have been stepped up to a volume unsurpassed in the past and more than ever, they are addressing their effort at the great American market. Especially is this true in England where practically every major production unit is preparing pictures for release in America as well as in the British Isles and on the Continent.

More product from Great Britain will be shown in this country in 1936-37 than in any previous season, advance reports indicate, with 100 features to be offered throughout America as contrasted with fewer than 80 which in itself was a new high, that achieved worthwhile distribution in the season now closing.

Executives of various home offices in Manhattan say that American distributors depend on distribution in foreign lands, largely English speaking countries, for virtually one-third of the total revenue of all pictures produced by their companies. This figure amounts to approximately $500,000,000. Therefore, it is considered a logical development to see these same companies now arranging for distribution here of English films, particularly in view of the marked improvement in product.

Surveys also have shown that the returns from English pictures in America this past season have increased because the better quality has brought wider distribution.

The aim of every British producer today is to deliver pictures which will be judged on their merits and will find their place in world markets as well as at home without the aid of quota laws or other protective legislation, Major Henry A. Procter, a member of Parliament and an officer of six British producing companies, said in New York this week.

"I feel," he said, "that heretofore British pictures have received fair treatment in the American market. If that continues and the improvement in our product maintains its present pace, I am confident that our pictures can compete on their own merits with American product, not only at home, but also in this country."

Major Procter said that British film interests might be impelled to petition for new and more stringent protective legislation at home only in the event that they are unfairly "frozen out" of the American market or "shelved" by the companies who handle their distribution here. He pointed out that British production today represents a tremendous investment which must be protected now as never before from discrimination.

OLD COAST THEATRE TO BE DEMOLISHED

The Hippodrome, San Francisco, one of the oldest theatrical landmarks in California, is being torn down to make room for an office building.

The theatre has been dark since 1933, when, under the new name of the Filmarte, it was used by Ralph Pincus to roadshow European pictures.

In its earlier days the Hippodrome, a 1,400-seat house, introduced the old 10-20-30 policy to California. Melodrama, musical comedy, farce and vaudeville had their turn on its stage. A new name and policy were given the theatre by the firm of Ackerman and Harris in 1925 when they leased and remodeled it as the Union Square.

Socalled "quota pictures" made in England by American companies were blamed by Major Procter for whatever odium still is attached to the term "British picture" in this market. English producers today, he said, are attempting to overcome that handicap with productions which will make the phrase "British picture" connote a high type of product characteristic of British workmanship in other fields of industry.

As leading in the advancement of British production standards, Major Procter ranked Alexander Korda, Max Schach and Karl Grune in the order named. Mr. Schach and Mr. Grune are associated with companies in which the Major is interested. He is president of Capitol Film Corporation, British Cine Alliance, Cecil Films and Somlo; is a director of Trafalgar Film Company and one of the founders of General Film Distributors.

Mr. Korda's producing organization is London Films, releasing in this country as well as in England through United Artists. He plans six pictures for release in America next season as well as in England.

United Artists also will handle two Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.,-Criterion Films productions. The first is "Accused," co-starring Fairbanks and Dolores Del Rio, and the second "High Treason," from the pen of Adela Rogers St. John, with the producer also starring.

Elisabeth Bergner plans one production, "Dreaming Lips," in which she will be starred under the direction of Dr. Paul Czinner. United Artists also will handle the distribution of this feature here.

British companies have intensified their activities in signing American stars, writers and technicians for work in pictures aimed at international distribution. Gaumont British has been one of the leaders in acquiring American acting and technical talent, this company plans a larger number of pictures for American release than any other English concern.

Foreign Producers Show Growing Tendency to Utilize Service of American Industry in Advising on Scripts and Films

The sales forces of the American branch of the organization, in convention at New York's Hotel Warwick in May, were told there would be 24 features this year.

The 24 will embrace only Class A pictures, according to production head Jeffrey Bernerd, "and, therefore, have been budgeted accordingly," including the appearance of many Hollywood stars and the work of several Hollywood directors, writers and technicians. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and Walter Wanger Productions figure prominently in the loans of talent to Gaumont-British.

Some 29 players will appear in the 24 GB pictures, among them the following recruited from the stellar ranks of Hollywood: Richard Arlen, George Arliss, Nils Asther, Noah Beery, Constance Bennett, Clive Brook, Mary Carlisle, Constance Cummings, Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen, Douglass Montgomery, Sylvia Sidney, Ernest Truex, Helen Vinson and Roland Young.

British International Pictures has completed its schedule for the present season and now is lining up stars and stories for 1936-37. Ten pictures are in preparation.

At the same time it is to be noted that the machinery established in New York by the American industry to advise foreign producers on scripts and pictures intended for this market, in order that they might measure up to Hollywood's Production Code standards, this week completed its first year of operation and with it there becomes recognizable a growing tendency of foreign producers to utilize the service.

In 1935, only one country, England, made use of the service and submitted two scripts on which suggestions were asked. This year, companies in three additional countries submitted 11 scripts, for a total of 13. From England and Italy came five each, from France two, and Spain one.

A year ago the organization examined 44 features from two foreign countries. England, again, led with all but one, that one from Germany. The marked progress is evidenced at this date, 32 pictures, including one short subject, having been submitted by six foreign nations. England already has sent over 18, France and Italy five each, Mexico two, Spain one, and Austria one short subject.

Using the figures now available at this early stage of the 1936-37 season, it is estimated that more than 100 features from several countries will have been submitted for suggestion and approval before the season closes.

"RAMONA" FILMED

THRICE previously "Ramona" has been the subject of motion picture production. D. W. Griffith pioneered it in 1910 with Mary Pickford starred. Six years later W. H. Clune made it. With Dolores Del Rio and Warner Baxter featured, its last appearance, in 1928, was sponsored by Inspiration Pictures. For the past several months "Ramona" has been occupying the attentions of Sol M. Wurtzel and his Western Avenue 20th Century-Fox unit. An important undertaking in his career, certainly one of the most expensive, the confidence which Mr. Wurtzel has in the story as worthy screen merchandise is reflected by a growing Hollywood opinion that in the modernized color version of the Helen Hunt Jackson novel the producer has something of vital interest to theatre goers.

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

The book upon which it is based, like "Uncle Tom's Cabin," was written for a purpose. As the Harriet Beecher Stowe book focused attention on the slavery question, so was "Ramona" influential in centering public attention on the cruelties and injustices practiced upon primitive California Indians by unscrupulous whites, to become an effective instrument in bettering those conditions. With this situation as background, "Ramona" is an engaging story, ingredients of which are romantic interest, stark drama, high adventure, comedy and pageantry.

For ten weeks the company recreating the story has been isolated in the country that is the original locale. Accompanying photographs illustrate the beauty and charm of its rolling mountain meadows dotted with majestic cottonwoods and the pastoral atmosphere of its hacienda. So far removed from other habitation that possibilities of production interference were at a minimum, the troupe has concentrated on the mechanics of making motion picture entertainment.

As "Ramona" is an ambitious undertaking in which great store is set, attention turns toward inspection of cast selections. At first glance Loretta Young, who has established a definite prestige and following, stands as the most prominent name. Her task is to play the role of Ramona as the girl lives in the memories of the thousands who have read the book or seen the previous pictures. For the role of Allesandro, Wurtzel chose to ignore more prominent screen players and select Don Ameche. Widely known among radio listeners, his only other picture appearance was in "Sins of Man." Whatever stature his screen debut may bring him, it is not hazardous to assume that after "Ramona" Ameche will be a name to consider.

RADIO IS THREATENED WITH "DECENCY CLEANUP"

Representative Connery Warns That Failure to Act May Precipitate Public Avoidance of Offending Sponsors' Program

Radio—motion picture's arch competitor in mass entertainment—is facing a "clean-up" by the American citizenry similar to that which was conducted two years ago by the Legion of Decency in motion pictures.

That was the warning boomed this week from the top of Capitol Hill in Washington by William Patrick Connery, fighting New England Legionnaire, who has represented the seventh Massachusetts district in Congress for these 16 years, and who, some 27 years ago, was himself in theatricals, as an actor for George M. Cohan.

Backed by strong support in Congress, standing, as he does, in the dual role of both Republican and Democratic favorite, Congressman of his native Massachusetts, the Representative openly declared that failure of the government's own Communications Commission and the broadcasters —National Broadcasting Corporation and Columbia Broadcasting System being the largest—to "clean up" their programs in all probability will precipitate a public avoidance of the sponsoring advertisers and their air programs by such a popular movement.

Smarting under the refusal of the leaders of the House of Representatives to give consideration to his Congressional resolution for an investigation during the hectic days of the closing sessions, the Congressman, in the appendix to the final Congressional Record for the 74th Congress, this week, declared that the material of certain broadcasts had been held, by the legal division of the United States Postal Department, to be unmailable under the penal code. Mr. Connery did not specify the material or programs which he declared to be objectionable, and a telegraphic request to his home in Lynn, Mass., brought no response.

His introduction of the resolution was made in March, after a so-called "sensational broadcast."

The letter to Representative Connery of Karl A. Crowley, Post Office Department solicitor, holding the material unmailable, referred to "a dramatic sketch."

Launched Campaign Year Ago

Representative Connery's campaign against the issue was inaugurated more than one year ago, following a broadcast sponsored by the Mexican Government in which was included a Spanish song said to be of questionable nature. He protested to the Federal Communications Commission at the time, and the Commission later was accused of "whitewashing" the incident. Since then the Congressman quietly has been collecting data on programs he considered of undesirable character, and four months ago introduced the resolution for a full investigation.

"Apparently those we have entrusted with the regulation and the supervision of radio broadcasting either are unwilling or are unable to protect the American people from the intrusion into their homes of indecent, profane or obscene radio programs, so long as someone will pay the radio broadcasting stations for broadcasting such indecent radio programs," the Congressman charged.

Intimating that the situation was due in part to the fact that two "important organizations"—NBC and CBS—own or control a large proportion of the stations, Mr. Connery declared that although Congress specifically prohibited a radio monopoly, the control of broadcasting rapidly is passing into the hands of the two chains. Every one of the 40 clear-channel stations in the country is controlled or operated by one of the large networks, he asserted. The Commission is charged by the Congressman with doing nothing to stop the "trafficking in radio franchises."

Cites Film Legion Movement

"A few years ago," he continued, "the Roman Catholic Church, aided by the Protestant churches and those representing the Hebrew people, alarmed at the indecency of several motion pictures, initiated a movement to have the American people abstain from patronizing those theatres which exhibited pictures which were indecent or not fit for the young people to see.

"The result of that campaign was that but very few indecent pictures are now produced, the American people so decidedly indicating that they would support the campaign initiated by the Catholic Church."

"It is not at all improbable," he warned, "that the American people may find it necessary, unless the Congress acts—as I expect that they will—to take similar action by refusing to purchase the products of those concerns who use the radio facilities of such radio stations as permit the broadcasting of indecent or otherwise unfit radio programs."

Where the government itself owns and operates radio broadcasting stations, as in Great Britain and Canada, and where no advertising is permitted, such indecent radio programs are unknown, Representative Connery concluded.

Britain Continues Bar on Ads On Radio for Another Ten Years

The government in England announced on Monday, in London, that direct advertising and sponsored programs in British radio broadcasting will be strictly forbidden for at least ten years more.

Press wireless dispatches to New York quoted Postmaster General G. C. Tryon as accepting most of the recent recommendations by Viscount Ullswater's committee of radio inquiry, Postmaster Tryon declaring that, "The complete exclusion of advertisements from British Broadcasting Corporation programs is widely approved."

The committee had suggested that sponsored programs might pay for experimental television programs, but even this was ruled out by the government with the statement that "there is no good ground for making any exception." The government, moreover, agreed "to take all steps within its power" to prevent the broadcasting by foreign stations of advertising programs intended for British listeners.

Broadcasting in Britain is made possible by a license costing 10 shillings paid annually by every owner of a radio receiving set. The revenue from this modest tax is so great that the government will receive and keep approximately $5,250,000 from the British Broadcasting Corporation during 1936 exclusive of the hundreds of thousands of dollars paid in income taxes by the broadcasting division, which the government controls.

The British Broadcasting Corporation, which succeeded the British Broadcasting Company in 1927, operates under license from the Postmaster General. The number of receiving sets licensed on June 30, 1927, was 2,307,000, but by last June 30 it had grown to 7,077,095.

To Set Playdate Hearing

A date for the hearing of the appeal on the preferred playdate bill, which was passed last year by the Ohio legislature, is expected to be set some time this week, according to Rocker and Schwartz, attorneys for the state.

INSTRUCTING INDUSTRY ON 2,000-FOOT REELS

Will Be Delivered for Use On and After September 1; Exchanges to Advise Exhibitors

Studios, exchanges in the field, distribution departments in New York, and the film laboratories on both coasts are now being provided with comprehensive reports and instructions for making the changeover on September 1st of reel lengths from the 1,000-foot standard, that has prevailed for a quarter century, to the new length of 2,000 feet. The reels will be delivered to the exchanges on August 15th, for use on and after September 1st, and exhibitors will be instructed accordingly at that time by the exchanges on the proper method of handling.

"It is anticipated that the new standard will go into effect smoothly and without any confusion or disturbance to existing routine," declared the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, this week, in Hollywood. Reel manufacturers are now building reels to meet the Council's specifications, the Academy having sponsored the changeover.

A group meeting of all film editors working in each studio will be held on each lot during the next ten days to discuss final instructions for changes in cutting procedure necessary as a result of the adoption.

The first of these meetings, all of which are under the direction of Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Academy Research Council, was held at Warner Brothers First National Studios the other day, with Twentieth Century-Fox Western Avenue Studio meeting next, followed in order by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer cutters and RKO-Radio cutters.

Meetings at Columbia, Twentieth Century Fox Westwood Hills, Paramount, Universal, and United Artists will be scheduled within the few days.

Many Changes Already Made

Many of the necessary alterations and arrangements already have been completed in anticipation of the use of the new reel standard on September 1st. Although most release print laboratories now ship prints to the exchanges already mounted on 1,000-foot reels, after the reel standard goes into effect all laboratories will print and ship film to the exchanges in 1,000-foot lengths and not mounted on reels, where the two 1,000-foot lengths will be spliced together and then be mounted on the larger reels.

Where under the old procedure all reels for each company have been purchased from the manufacturer and used at the release print laboratory, where all of the product of that company is mounted for shipment to the exchanges, after the new standard goes into effect reels for use in each district will be shipped to and used at the exchange center in that district.

The 2,000-foot reel will have an outside diameter of 14½ inches, and a hub diameter of four inches, so that practically every existing projector is adaptable to the innovation without change of magazine or base. In projection, no change in equipment is necessary except in possibly two or three hundred theatres having the early type Powers 6A projectors, which require new magazines and base. Of the 6,900 theatres represented in the survey returns (45.5 per cent of the theatres queried), only 800 reported equipment unsuited to the 15-inch reel, and able to use the 14½ inch unit without equipment changes.

Opposition to the larger reel continues, however, from union projectionists, notably in the larger cities. Union leaders assert that the larger reel increases fire hazard.

Lower Cost to Distributor

One persuasive factor operating to make the 2,000-foot reel the new standard unit of film is the reduction in costs to be realized by distributors, and the greater facility in editing permitted the producer. A total of 77 feet of film for leaders and comparable footage will be saved for each eight-reel subject. In addition, a large saving in print replacement is expected due to diminished depreciation of the film, particularly in opening and final footages. William Koenig, chairman of the Research Council, has predicted a total saving to the companies of $250,000 a year, and some later unofficial estimates have placed the saving at two and three times this amount.

Greater facility in editing is achieved by elimination of the necessity to provide for from six to eight changeovers. On an average, only three will be necessary with the 2,000-foot unit in force.

On the other side, the change will impose an initial expenditure on distributors of about $12,000 for reels and cases, and the seven subscribing distributors estimate that each will have to spend this amount during the first year. Part of this outlay will be occasioned by physical adjustments in their branch offices.

St. Louis Transfer Now Set for Friday

Harry C. Arthur left New York for St. Louis Monday to confer with local representatives on the Warner theatre deal. The deal involves the turning over to Fanchon and Marco of three theatres held by Warner Brothers as a part of the agreement which settled the Government's anti-trust suit against Warners, RKO and Paramount, which suit was instituted on complaint of F and M.

Unless last minute complications develop, F and M will take over the Shubert-Rialto, Orpheum and Hi-Pointe, all in St. Louis, on Friday. The boards of the various F and M companies in St. Louis met Monday to ratify contracts in connection with the deal.

Kahane's Contract Extended by RKO

B. B. Kahane's contract as president of the RKO Radio Studios, Inc., was extended last week at a regular meeting of the board of Radio Pictures.

MICRO FILMS STANDARDIZED

The Division of Simplified Practice of the National Bureau of Standards announces that the proposed simplification program for film used in microphotography has been approved by representatives of those at interest, and will become effective August 1, 1936.

Students, technicians, librarians, and others have found it practical to copy on photographic film, miniature-size images of records, manuscripts, books, newspapers, fragile volumes, and rarely accessible documents of all descriptions, for the purpose of future examination and study, at places remote from the location of the original documents.

Under conditions imposed by travel in many countries these copyists have found it convenient to adapt to their specialized use the readily available "movie" films of 35mm. As a natural concomitant of this practice, cameras and reproduction devices are being used to an ever-increasing extent. This has resulted in the need for careful and accurate design of necessary apparatus, to insure an orderly advancement of the art of copying.

The simplified practice recommendation, which is intended to serve as the first step in the direction of orderly advancement of the art of copying, establishes two standard stock widths of motion picture film for use in the process of copying, namely, 16mm. and 35mm, respectively.

Ace in London Gets Educational Product

Distribution of Educational Pictures' short subject product throughout the United Kingdom will hereafter be handled through Ace Films, Ltd., of London. The new agreement was reached between E. W. Hammons, Educational president, and Frank Green, head of Ace Films, and takes effect on the expiration of the contract between Educational and Gaumont-British, applying to the 1936-1937 output. The new distribution contract is for five years.

Ace Films has distributed a limited number of Educational's pictures through the British Isles during the last season.

South Africa Adopts 16 MM. Film Standard

The standard for 16 millimeter sound films developed by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers of America has been adopted by the South African Standards Institution, according to a report from Johannesburg. The decision to adopt the American standard in preference to the German is said to have been based on the fact that the British Standards Institution with which the South African body is affiliated, has decided to follow the American specifications.

TELEVISION "ARRIVES"; GIVEN PUBLIC TEST

Million Dollar Field Experiment Started by RCA from Atop Empire State Building As Film Protection Is Strongly Urged

New York on Monday tuned in on television, in the first public test conducted in America. Television, then, has arrived, with limitations.

As the Radio Corporation of America started unreeling images into space from atop the 102-story Empire State Building near Herald Square, starting a $1,000,000 field test, the United States Government continued its hearings at Washington to determine television's future and its competitive relationship to the motion picture, radio and the news press. Out of this week's hearings, being conducted by the Federal Communications Commission, came the following highlight testimony:

Robert Robins, of New York, pleaded for protection of the motion picture business by placing in its control the new television medium.

Twentieth Century-Fox and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences asked that four television frequencies be set aside for motion picture use.

New York school authorities testified that television is to be adopted for educational purposes.

James M. Skinner, chairman of the Radio Manufacturers Association, declared that television has arrived, and, accordingly, advanced a five-point program for its regulation.

Nor did the interest in television this week involve only RCA's tests and the Government's inquiries, what with New York hearing reports of a television newsreel theatre coming for its fashionable Park Avenue, David Sarnoff, RCA executive, predicting costly test periods ahead for television, and Trans-Lux Newsreel Theatres casting an eye toward the English television market, where actual broadcasting was to start this week.

Ten Kilowatt Station Opens

A 10-kilowatt $1,000,000 radio station atop the Empire State Building began the first regularly scheduled television broadcast in America, on Monday.

The Radio Corporation of America, staging the broadcasts and likewise employing more than 100 observers over a 35-mile radius to report on reception, said their program was purely experimental, but might be the last step in making television available for home use.

Engineers working on the test indicated that they expect the field test to iron out the kinks.

They said television may not be ready for mass production for years, but they also said it might be ready in one year.

Three Difficulties Cited

Three difficulties are outstanding in the obstacles to wholesale production of television units now, it was indicated: (1) receiving sets are not perfect; (2) a receiving set costs $500 or more to build; (3) television waves seem to travel off the earth at the horizon, restricting the effective radius of a broadcasting station to approximately 30 miles.

RCA engineers hope that the broadcasts begun this week will enable them to end the first difficulty; they think that mass production then would eliminate the second, and they have hopes that their new broadcasting station, said to be the most powerful in the world, would solve some mysteries about the behavior of the television waves.

The Empire State station uses a six-meter wave. It is based upon inventions of Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin. Its "heart" is an "iconoscope," a large cathode ray bulb installed in what looks like a camera. It transforms what it "sees" into radio waves in much the same manner in which a microphone acts on sound waves.

Receiving sets scattered in homes and offices about New York and in automobiles which tested reception in every section of the city, have 33 tubes and 14 control dials. The television "picture" appears in a mirror on the inside of the cabinet lid, which is tilted at an angle to reflect it from a tunnel-shaped cathode ray inside.

Television's New York debut was favored with an ideal day in which the image might smile through space without being blurred by static.

Telephone calls which, according to a representative of RCA, "swamped the operators," were said by the New York Times to have revealed widespread interest in the test, many of the inquiries asking where they might go to watch the "performance." They were told that only a few receivers have been set up as observation outposts and that the sites had not been made public.

It is understood restaurant, department stores, night clubs and other public gathering places have requested that receivers be installed so that their guests and clients may look in on the experimental "entertainment."

While amateur experimenters eavesdropped on the six-meter wave band to "hear" what television sounded like, the engineers affiliated with the project held fast to their policy of secrecy. They assert they do not expect to learn much in a few days or weeks, and contend it may be six months before a report can be written on the results.

Those with all-wave receivers which can tune down to six meters reported the signal strong in the metropolitan area, but they had only sound receivers and could not "see."

Visibility at Maximum

No report was available as to how far the images traveled, but the perfect June day was considered to be a clue that the broadcast covered a wide radius. The visibility from the top of the Empire State Building was reported at maximum, and tower attendants said that meant between 25 to 40 miles.

It is known that the ultra-shortwave television signals projected from the 10-kilowatt transmitter have sufficient strength to cover as far as the eye can see. With atmospheric conditions ideal, radio men said, there was no doubt that television in this debut reached at least to the horizon that visitors in the lofty tower could see.

Although official spectators, many of them technical radio men, "look in," it is understood their observations on the quality of the images will be kept secret. The only indication that the tests reveal signs of success is found in the fact that licensees of the Radio Corporation of America will be invited to see the "show" and apparatus on July 7. The demonstration of the 33-tube receiving instrument will be held in studios at Radio City or in a hotel, according to a representative of the corporation.

The entire 85th floor of the Empire State Building is devoted to the television transmitter.

Up to the Images

Comment reported in the New York press from engineers connected with the project indicated they expected television to develop so rapidly in the field test that prophecy would be dangerous at this time. They said they expected to learn much about the new science within the next year; and if all goes well they may then know when and how television will be introduced as home entertainment.

Much will depend upon how images behave amid the skyscrapers when it comes to deciding whether or not television is to reach the mass production scale within a year or five years, according to the experts who for years have been developing the apparatus in the laboratories.

There are no retail price tags on the television sets. They are estimated to cost $500 or more. Reduction of the cost and of the number of control knobs from the present 14 constitutes two of the additional problems the engineers hope to solve as a result of this experiment in the field.

Urges Protection of Film Industry

The plea for protecting the film industry by placing in its control the new television soon to be offered, was made before the Federal Communications Commission late last week by Robert Robins of New York. Mr. Robins has

TELEVISION AND MOTION PICTURES

"Who will guide the destiny of television when it does come?" asked the New York Times, in an editorial expression published this week. This inquiry was made: "Will the radio companies assume control, as their affiliation with sound pictures seems to indicate? Or will the motion picture industry simply evolve into a television organization which will concern itself with the transmission of images and leave the making and selling of receivers to the radio companies? Even now the strategists must be laying their plans to wage a struggle that will decide which of two conflicting groups is to entertain a continent."

20th Century-Fox and Academy Ask Federal Commission to Set Aside Four Television Frequencies for Film Use

RADIO MANUFACTURERS OFFER PLAN

figured prominently in attacks on the "big electrics" in films.

Only by taking such action, Mr. Robins declared, can the Government protect the many millions of dollars invested by the motion picture companies.

Mr. Robins' testimony, together with a brief filed by E. H. Hanson on behalf of Twentieth Century-Fox and the Academy, marked the closing of nearly two weeks of hearings on the engineering problems of frequency allocations to television and other services.

Declaring that his own group of independent picture interests have plans and capital for the introduction of a television service, if assured that it is not to be turned over to the large radio companies, Mr. Robins submitted to the Commission a three-point plan for television operation.

In its early stages, under this plan, television would be confined to entertainment and educational purposes, such as are offered by motion pictures, and should be kept free from advertising. Second, television programs would be a separate and distinct service, offered to users on a service-charge basis. Third, the rates, rules and regulations for the service so offered would be determined by a governmental body.

"The essential features of our plan," he said, "in no way injure or render precarious the status and scope of operations or social benefits of radio, the newspaper industry or the printed word. Past experience in the motion picture industry demonstrates that it is uneconomic to combine advertising with a visual program. Audiences find this even more objectionable than an audible advertising announcement in connection with radio broadcasting."

"Moreover," he pointed out, "it is doubtful whether an advertiser, in order to obtain the real value of his advertising—because the beneficial effects of advertising are obtained by constant repetition—could afford the enormous expense entailed by providing programs acceptable for the eye."

Mr. Hanson's statement was offered in support of his previously filed suggestion that four frequencies in as many bands be set aside for motion picture use, and pointed out that radio has been very valuable for communication by production units on location with their headquarters, particularly where, as frequently occurs, no other means of communication is available.

The two weeks of hearings developed a mass of testimony and suggestions for the best method of allocating radio frequencies as between the various services which now must be digested by the Commission. Before making any decision as to allocation, however, it is anticipated that further hearings will be held, probably late in the summer, at which other problems of television, broadcasting, etc., will be discussed.

"Expert technical opinion holds that television services are ready for commercial exploitation," Mr. Robins testified, adding: "The introduction thereof threatens the capital structure of the moving picture industry, as well as its very existence.

"Briefly stated, according to the U. S. Department of Commerce," he continued, "the vital statistics of the motion picture industry are as follows:

"1. The motion picture industry represents a capital investment of $2,000,000,000.

"2. The motion picture industry provides employment for 270,000 people.

"3. The motion picture industry has an annual revenue of

(a) $700,000,000 from paid admissions;

(b) $220,000,000 from film rentals.

"4. It pays the government $100,000,000 per year in taxes, exclusive of state and municipalities' taxes on real estate and land values.

"6. The annual expenditures for its advertising are:

(a) $70,000,000 domestic;

(b) $30,000,000 foreign.

"7. Insurance paid by this industry is $30,000,000 annually.

"8. 13,386 theatres are now operating throughout the United States.

Cites Cultural Factor

"Finally, the talking motion picture is one of the major cultural factors of American life. Upwards of 80,000,000 people go to the movies every week. Their habits of thought, their tastes, their standards of living, are consciously and subconsciously affected by what they hear, but overwhelmingly determined by what they see.

"The introduction of combined visual and aural programs into the home," continued Mr. Robins, "places the entire investment represented by the exhibition phase of the talking motion picture industry in a very precarious position.

"Who, but those with substantial investments in the motion picture industry, can claim a greater moral and economic priority to assume the development of television," concluded Mr. Robins, who then advanced his plan for control.

Sees Aid to Employment

With further development, television will provide a stimulus to increased employment and national prosperity, James M. Skinner, chairman of the Radio Manufacturers Association, told the Federal Communications Commission at the conference.

Mr. Skinner, who is also president of the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, laid before the Commission a basic five-point program to plan for the successful development of television.

Mr. Skinner urged the Commission to adopt the following television policies:

1. Establishment of a single set of television standards for the United States so all receivers shall be capable of receiving the signals of all transmitters.

2. Development of pictures free from distortion and blur, approaching ultimately the distinctness and clarity obtainable in home movies.

3. Provision for services giving as near nation-wide coverage as possible, so that the benefits of television may be available to all sections of the country.

4. Provision for a choice of programs, that is simultaneously broadcasting of more than one television program in as many localities as possible, to avoid monopoly and to provide variety of educational and entertainment features.

5. Lowest possible receiver cost and easiest possible tuning, to stimulate domestic installations of television receivers, both of which are best achieved by allocating for television as nearly a continuous band in the airwaves as possible.

Cost Less Than Average Auto

While it is not possible at present to determine exactly what the selling price of a television receiver will be, Mr. Skinner said, it will most likely cost less than the average automobile.

Samuel E. Darby, Jr., representing independent radio manufacturers, urged upon the Commission an investigation of what he termed a "monopoly" held by RCA in the radio industry through its system of patent pooling. He asserted that "RCA can grant or refuse to grant permission" for companies to engage in the manufacture and sale of radio equipment through the license system.

New York City school officials told the Communications Commission that schools of the metropolis intended to use television for education as soon as it was perfected.

Albert L. Colston of Brooklyn Technical High School said that television would permit

Present Patent Office Laws Are 100 Years Old This Week

The American patent system under which hundreds of motion picture film processes, projectors and sound devices have been developed, is 100 years old this week.

On July 4, 1836, all existing patent laws were revoked and the nation started with a clean slate. The century since that date has seen the most remarkable era of mechanical and material progress in human history.

The system adopted at that time and in use today required the submission of models and provided for a strict examination of the claims to determine whether the ideas really were worthwhile and original. Since the office started to function the world has been given the telegraph, telephone, automobile, airplane, radio, motion picture, machine manufacturing of all kinds, and mechanized farming, most of which have been developed in America.

Present records of the Patent Bureau hold plans for thousands of odd devices in addition to the ideas on which the trappings of modern civilization are based. In 1828 Isaiah Jennings of New York City received a patent for a means of producing "fire and light" by means of chemicals sealed in a glass tube. Book matches and 13 cent cigarettes came later. Something more practical, although too early to be really useful, was a "method for distilling alcohol from Indian corn."

use of "master teachers" and bring "master blackboards" into the 700-odd schools of the largest city and before more than 1,000,000 students simultaneously.

Asked to Open Channels

The Commission was asked to open up radio channels for experiment with television, by Ralph A. Clark, New York City radio engineer, who accompanied the new transmission request with a prediction that it could be "launched commercially before many months." Mr. Clark disputed the opinions of other radio technicians, as given previously before the fact-finding investigation that television sets and stations would be costly.

"Television stations will be cheaper to build than present broadcasting stations," he said, "and will consume less power."

Mr. Clark, who represented the Television Corporation of America, asserted that receiving sets could be manufactured to "cost the public the price of two ordinary radios." He said a television receiver was "simply two radio sets with two additional sweep circuits tubes, one set for sound and the other for sight."

He said that if the Commission would give to television the same freedom that was granted to sound radio the former would develop naturally, improve in quality and finance itself.

Proposes News Periods

The Twentieth Century-Fox and Academy representative, Mr. Hanson, also recommended that definite periods of the day be set aside for the radio broadcasting of news, because "It must be confessed that the manner in which the broadcast stations today handle news leaves much to be desired." Mr. Hanson spoke in this connection as the delegate for the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Philo T. Farnsworth, president of Farnsworth Television, Inc., pleaded with the Commission to permit radio amateurs to partake in the development of television.

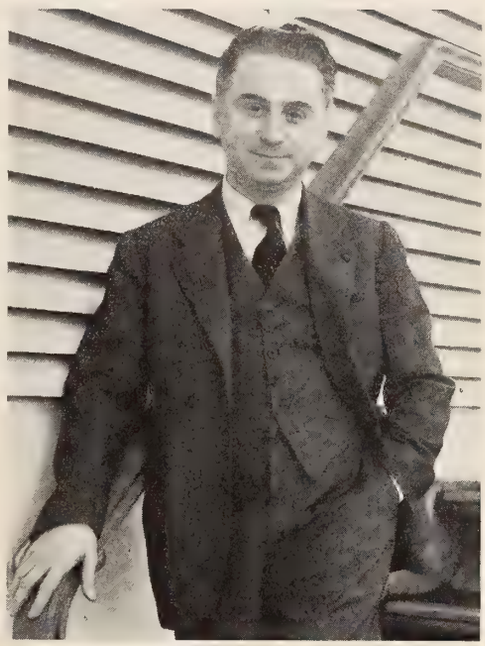
He expressed confidence that television would be commercially usable within "a very short time," but pointed out that certain technical problems must still be worked out.

Mr. Farnsworth also endorsed the view of previous witnesses that television should be introduced gradually on the commercial market, and remarked that at first it would be technically impossible to produce television sets for the public at less than $250 apiece.

Suggests Modest Field

John V. L. Hogan, New York City consulting engineer, told the FCC that television should not attempt too large a field at the start. Mr. Hogan said that most of the motion pictures now were "close-ups" and suggested that television should start with simple transmission subjects, such as the head and shoulders of a speaker.

The engineer said that it was not at all certain that television could ever transmit a large spectacle, such as a football game, with good definition to a home receiving set. He urged the commission to allow experimental transmission in limited fields.



Mr. Hogan pointed out that television could not succeed if it attempted to offer a spectacle "as great as a motion-picture production for each broadcast" because the cost would be prohibitive.

Others appearing before the Commission expressed the opinion that television will be limited to large cities at the start. Its present limit seems to be about 40 miles.

Relay stations can be constructed, it was explained, but these require new radio channels, and an extension of television for 200 miles would use up all the available channels.

RCA spokesmen said a broadcasting station costs about $600,000 and present indications are that receiving sets will retail for about $400.

Theatre Plan Reported

Reports that a television theatre would be constructed at the southeast corner of Park Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, New York, by the Columbia Broadcasting Company, and that the Henry Phipps Estate would lease the northeast corner of Madison Avenues and Sixty-second Street to the Fabian theatre chain of New Jersey, financing the conversion of the present structure into a motion picture playhouse, were circulated in real estate circles this week.

The Park Avenue corner, formerly occupied by the Anderson Galleries, passed to the ownership of the Central Savings Bank in foreclosure proceedings last December, and the broadcasting company is understood to be negotiating the purchase of the property from the bank. It is also said that opposition of property owners to a Madison Avenue theatre project is not expected to be sufficient to interfere with the contemplated improvement.

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, in an address on Monday in Boston before the 32nd annual convention of the Advertising Federation of America, denied that television is even approaching "just around the corner."

"Television is now in the earphone stage of radio," said Mr. Sarnoff. "As a commercial operation, television has not yet arrived. It is not around the corner, nor even around the block. But we have advanced sufficiently far to say that the technical obstacles are not insuperable. The Radio Corporation of America has invested millions of dollars and an incalculable sum of scientific genius in bringing television to the point where it can be moved from the seclusion of the laboratory to the freedom of experimental service in the field.

"The test period may be a long and costly one. Critical technical problems must still be solved. The present range of television transmission from a single station is scarcely more than 25 miles and existing wire facilities are not suitable for interconnecting television stations. Radio relays or a modified wire system must be developed to enlarge the range and potential audience for a single costly program.

"There is also the problem of further increasing the size of the television picture without loss of clarity. The experimental television observer today watches the stage from the back row of the second balcony. We want to give him a seat in the front row of the orchestra.

"The new medium will not supplant nor detract from the importance of present-day broadcasting. Rather, it will supplement this older medium of sound and add a new force to the advertiser's armament of salesmanship.

"Television will add little to the enjoyment of the symphony concert as it now comes by radio to your living room. Sound broadcasting will remain the basic service for the programs particularly adapted to its purpose. On the other hand, television will bring into the home much visual material—news events, drama, paintings, personalities—which sound can bring only partially or not at all.

"The benefits which have resulted from the industrial sponsorship of sound broadcasting indicate that major television programs will come from the same source."

Furber Considers Theatres

Word reached New York this week from London that Percy N. Furber is conferring with Jack Davis in connection with Mr. Davis' plans for an expansion of newsreel theatres on lines of his Monseigneur in Picadilly Circus. The plan is to open in London at Trafalgar Square, Marble Arch, Leicester Square and in Sheffield and Manchester, followed by other large cities.

Mr. Furber's rear projection system, it was said, interests Mr. Davis and he does not deny the possibility of a commercial deal with Furber and his British associates in Trans-Lux, Will Evans and Lord Beaverbrook.

Mr. Davis will go to New York next month, via Canada. He is dickering with the British Broadcasting Corporation for exclusive rights on the screen to any news film made by it for television.

B. B. C. admitted considering several such requests for television concessions. Television to theatre screens is impractical at present, as the maximum picture size is about six inches wide, with possible magnification to 12 inches. B. B. C. transmission will be strictly experimental from early July to September, with October as "dress rehearsal month."

Regular television service with entertainment value is scheduled to begin in November, with three shows daily from 3 o'clock to 4 o'clock, 6:15 to 7:15, and 9:00 to 10:30. The plan is to have a half-hour cabaret or variety show, 10 minutes of news films, and the balance illustrated talks on "How to Play Golf" and other subjects. Transmission will be by Baird and E. M. I., each fortnightly in turn. Receivers will be dual, switching to either system.

Broadcasting will be limited to London at first, but perfection of a coaxial cable will permit later relays to provincial towns, each serving 30-mile areas. Birmingham will be the first of these.

BBC Names Announcers

Rapidly pushing forward their plans for the opening this weekend of the first television experiments the British Broadcasting Company this week announced the selection of two women announcers whose features will soon be appearing daily on the vision screens of the nation. From 1,100 applicants Miss Jasmine Bligh, 22, a former stage star, and Miss Elizabeth Cowell, 23, a manikin, were chosen for this new vocation.

To bring out the "photogenic features" of television announcers and performers, the BBC explained that the lipstick must be yellow and the checks lighter yellow with eyelids of greenish tint.

Seven other posts in the BBC television service have been filled. The music director is Hyam Greenbaum. The producers are Stephen K. Thomas and Dallas Bower and the assistant producer, G. More O'Ferrall. The two stage managers are Harry Pringle and Peter Bax, and the film assistant, Major L. G. Barbrook.

The structural work at Alexandra Park is now nearly completed and the installation of the apparatus is proceeding. Following the engineering tests, shortly to take place, there will be a period of trial programs.

Department Stores Interested

Already London department stores and other interests are becoming interested in television and are making inquiries regarding it. The first television theatres may be established in the Charing Cross and Paddington stations. They will be limited to five rows of eight seats each.

Receiving sets, it is now estimated, will cost from $300 to $400.

Scophony, Ltd., has issued a statement in London that it can produce a receiver "capable of projecting pictures of a size suitable for both home and theatre entertainment." Sir Maurice Bonham-Carter, a director of the banking firm of C. T. Falk and Co., is head of this company. Arthur Levey, an American, is on the board of directors.

The British Broadcasting Corporation is considering a plan of breaking in the public to the idea of televised screen programs by means of demonstration sets in radio and other stores. It is expected that the previous plan, to open a television theatre in Broadcasting House in Portland Place here, will be abandoned.

New Theatre Premiere Is Set in Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires this month will witness inauguration of the new motion picture palace to be known as Gran Teatro Opera. Said to be the most luxurious theatre in South America the new house will be dedicated to motion pictures and eventually vaudeville. The house, which is owned by Clemente Lococco and Oscar Carbone, will present "Showboat" on the opening night at $10 a ticket. The second picture to be shown will be "Modern Times," at the same price for the first night. The gala shows will be dedicated to two benefit societies.

The new offices of Twentieth Century-Fox were opened on June 15 in Buenos Aires. Victor J. Schochet, managing director for the company in Argentina, greeted visitors to the ceremonies, who signed an artistic memorial, which will be delivered to Sidney R. Kent, president of the company. The new building represents an investment of 250,000 pesos.

Warners Believed Ready to Rejoin ASCAP Ranks

A report this week that Warner Brothers may rejoin the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in the near future has been confirmed by persons close to both parties, although it was denied that direct negotiations have been started.

Spokesmen for ASCAP emphasized the fact that no hostility or animosity is felt on either side. The general feeling is that the producing company withdrew from the society to conduct an experiment as a matter of business. If results of the move have not come up to expectations it is believed there will be no difficulty over the resumption of previous relations.

It appears certain, however, that no concessions will be made by ASCAP in order to regain Warner Brothers. Opinion among ASCAP membership is that the return of the company would be in accordance with existing conditions within the society and that none of the demands on the part of Warners which led up to its withdrawal last January 1 would be met now as a condition of their return to membership.

The situation appears to be that Warners will be reinstated at any moment that the request is made, but that no inducements are being proffered by the society.

ASCAP members have declared that the society has not suffered financially by the loss of the Warner membership during the first six months of the current year. The organization is scheduled to declare a dividend next week and it is expected to be one of the largest in the society's history.

New York Circuits Sign For Paramount Posters

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, and Laurence Bolognino of Consolidated Amusements last week end signed up with Paramount for the distributor's rental plan on accessories. Mr. Brandt has about 55 theatres in his circuit while Consolidated operates about 24 houses. The pact was signed in spite of a 10-year contract the Association has with New York poster rental houses whereby the exhibitor receives 50 cents a week for every member theatre using the rental service.

Protests against the new Paramount ad sales plan of giving credit for return of accessories has been decided upon by the board of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners group of North and South Carolina.

Last week's Democratic convention at Philadelphia was not without its touch of Broadway, injected therein by President Roosevelt's personal friend, Eddie Dowling, of Times Square and Pawtucket. Mr. Dowling's job this year, though, was not quite as important as at Chicago in 1932, when Roosevelt lacked a two-thirds majority and an inside deal was under way with Jack Garner. It was imperative that Alfred Emanuel Smith's forces have no access to delegates to steal them from Roosevelt.

"Tom," said Jim Farley to the late Senator Walsh, permanent chairman, "you can't adjourn until you get word from me. Eddie is going to keep 'em happy."

Dowling put on a stream of theatrical stars and vaudevillians that kept the crowds in their places for hours. The inside deal was swung and with it the Rooseveltians had Franklin Delano's nomination cinched. Finally Walsh tapped Eddie on the shoulder.

Leonard Lyons hears from London that Bennett Cerf, the publisher, is on hand at England's capital attending the Conference of International Publishers. A mutual friend had secured for Cerf an invitation to dine with King Edward, who promised a real surprise in that two charming American ladies also would be present. Mr. Cerf really was surprised—more than he ever had expected to be.

The first of these young American ladies was Miriam Hopkins—to whom Mr. Cerf once had been affianced. The second charmer was Sylvia Sidney—from whom he recently was divorced.

"Dear Sir," writes W. F. McBride, of Del Rio, Texas: "Calling your attention to your article in Asides and Interludes referring to Miss Lois De Fee, who was said to have first attained fame by throwing a jockey from the balcony of an Austin, Texas, theatre into the San Antonio River, I wish to state that this 17-year-old girl, who hails from this Lone Star state, has accomplished something unbelievable—for the San Antonio River is about 70 to 80 miles from the City of Austin! This would make it a real throw even for the centerfield gardener of the New York Yankees. Wouldn't it?"

It would.

Then, to make us unhappier, the same mail brought the following, from P. J. Poag, of the Del Rio Amusement Company, likewise of Del Rio, Texas:

"My Dear Mr. Cunningham:

"Marihuana is the name of a weed that is smoked by some of the Mexicans along the border, and it gives them funny ideas at the time. Colonel J. C. Jenkins has been running around down on this Mexican border, and I'm wondering if he slipped any of this weed to you, after I read your article in the Herald, which said, in part: 'Miss De Fee unblushingly told reporters she became bored in Austin and threw the jockey into the San Antonio River.'

"All I can unblushingly add to this is I hope she don't throw the Statue of Liberty into Hollywood."

The Texans, it seems, take their geography all too seriously, and evidently unnecessarily so in view of the wide expanse of territory surrounding them A little mistake of 80 miles in Texas should not bother the natives any more than 80 millimeters should bother Rhode Islanders, or Delawareans. Anyway, a third exhibitor reader likewise rushes to New York in the mails with a protest, Mr. Irwin Waite, of the Melba theatre, Dallas, inquiring "Why couldn't you have Miss De Fee booting the jockey out of the Austin theatre balcony, and landing in the Esplanade at the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas?—that's only 169 miles as the jockey would fly."

We admit that the feat seems impossible, this throwing of a jockey from an Austin theatre balcony into the San Antonio River, some 80 miles distant. But, then, neither Mr. McBride, nor Mr. Poag, nor Mr. Irwin Waite evidently has ever met Bouncing Baby De Fee, six feet two. We have seen that broad and tall expanse of female, and, therefore, we refuse to print a retraction.

In a manner that sort of competes with the motion picture's freak marquee billings, Elias Sugarman's sawdust-trail amusement paper, known as Billboard, offered this week a compilation of the best disc dance records of the day, bearing in mind that each record has two dance selections:

And then there's the late Percy Hammond's pet story about the two brothers who were New York's biggest theatrical tycoons. One night they were riding home in their town motor and all of a sudden one of them let out a horrible shriek. "We're ruined! We're ruined!" he bellowed. "I left the door of the safe open."

"That's all right," answered the brother. "We're both here, ain't we!"

The Hollywood touch is infectious. Mary, Queen of Scots, was actually executed in the comparative privacy of the council hall of Carlisle Castle in Scotland. However, in the forthcoming film, "Mary of Scotland," we understand that RKO beheads her in a spacious courtyard in a massive setting, before howling thousands.

Intimate executions are simply taboo in the land of spectacle.

Broadway's latest Scotch story, as told by Charley Halley, concerns the Scot who went into a Western Union office and inquired as to the rate of a telegram. The blonde clerk told him it was 50 cents for ten words. And five cents for each additional word. But that there was no charge for the signature.

"Well," piped the Scotsman, "I may not look it, but I'm an Indian and my name is I-Won't-Be-Home-Until-Friday."

Dave Rubinoff has pressed his inventive genius into play in the creation of a collapsible violin which he uses for finger practice to save wear and tear on his famous $100,000 Stradivarius. Rubinoff's new contraption is a full-sized violin which folds and fits in a camera case. It has a small tone box and sounds like a muted fiddle when played. The maestro not only uses it for finger workouts but also takes it along on "party" dates. He had it patented and has sold the idea to one of the leading instrument manufacturers.

PUBLISHERS OF MUSIC FIGURE IN FIGHTS ALONG THREE FRONTS

Federal Court Dismisses $150,000 Action Brought by Protective Association for Royalties from Producers and Erpi

The organized music publishing industry this week figured prominently in three controversies, in the courts and elsewhere, in connection with their contractual and other relations with the organized motion picture business, as follows:

1. Federal court dismissed the suit of the Music Publishers' Protective Association for $150,000 claimed due in royalties from producers and Electrical Research Products, Inc.

2. Canada effected strict governmental control of charges and regulations imposed by the Canadian Performing Rights Society on users of the copyrighted music of its members.

3. American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers won a court victory against new Georgia tax and licensing legislation.

Federal Judge John C. Knox in New York dismissed the suit of John G. Paine against Electrical Research Products, the action having been brought by Mr. Paine as agent and trustee for a group of music publishers. It asked for royalties of approximately $150,000 which Mr. Paine claimed to be owing the publishers whom he represents to cover the distribution in foreign territories of American made motion pictures, the music rights for which were controlled in the United States by his principals.

Suit Is Dismissed

Erpi, for the benefit of its motion picture producer licensees, had contracted with the Paine interests for the use of his principals' copyright music in the United States and abroad, and, in order to insure worldwide distribution for these pictures, it also entered into some 200 similar contracts with foreign publishers to secure such music rights as were not controlled by the Paine group. Erpi paid Mr. Paine for the use of his principals' music, and it contended that he could not collect for the foreign use of any music the foreign rights in which they did not control.

Judge Knox ruled that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. There was, he said, no specification of the compositions with respect to which Erpi was claimed to be in default, and there was no proper allegation of ownership and control on the part of the plaintiff of the copyrights constituting the subject matter in the suit. Mr. Paine, the decision said, had not shown himself qualified to hold Erpi to accountability for its acts, and supporting allegations for the damages asked were wholly lacking.

He dismissed the suit with leave to the plaintiff to amend his complaint within 20 days.

Strict government control of copyright charges and regulations imposed by the Canadian Performing Rights Society is provided in a bill passed in the closing hours of Parliament at Toronto.

The new law is the outcome of the investigation into the fees imposed by the Canadian Performing Rights Society of Toronto, and the passing of the bill is a distinct victory for theatre men, radio broadcasters and other amusement operators of the Dominion.

The legislation provides for the setting up of a permanent board of appeal with headquarters at Ottawa for the hearing of complaints or protests that annual or temporary license fees of the society are excessive. The society is required to register its scale of levies for a year with the Dominion Government prior to January 1 and such charges cannot be increased during the 12 months. The board of appeal is empowered to order a downward revision of rates for performing rights if a protest is considered justified.

ASCAP Wins Tax Case

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers this week won a court victory against new state tax legislation, said to have been designed to prohibit the society from collecting music taxes, in a test case brought against the State of Georgia, according to Schwartz and Frohlich, attorneys for the society in New York.

The law required the society to obtain a $1,000 license for every county in the state in which it sought to collect a tax for the public performance of its copyrighted music. There are approximately 160 counties in the state and the $160,000 license fee would have greatly exceeded Ascap's collections in Georgia. In deciding the case brought to test the law, the state court held that only one license was required by the Ascap agent for the entire state. Although Ascap's attorneys said they were of the opinion that any license requirement for their agents was illegal, no appeal will be taken from the Georgia decision.

Several other southern states have recently enacted licensing legislation designed to make it financially impossible for Ascap to operate within the state boundaries and the Georgia decision is regarded by the society as an important precedent in invalidating the legislation in the other states. Indications are that Ascap agents in these states will refuse to take out licenses and thus bring other test cases.

Erpi Puts in Effect Sharply Reduced Recording Royalty

A sharply reduced scale of recording royalties was finally announced on Wednesday by Electrical Research Products, Inc., to all its producer licensees in the United States.

The new rates are effective as of July 1. On Wednesday Erpi advised its licensees of an equipment credit plan by which modification of studio recording equipment now in use as well as other recording facilities and services can be secured by the licensee without further investment.

Under the new royalty plan a single royalty covers recording and distribution throughout the world except Canada. The royalty on feature pictures having a negative cost of more than $50,000 will be $54 a minute of playing time. A royalty of half as much is provided for features costing less than $50,000 and for short subjects. Serial pictures will pay a royalty of $13.50 a minute. Original foreign language versions will bear royalty at one-half the rate which would apply to pictures in the English language. There will be no royalty payable on trailers or dubbed pictures if Erpi has received a royalty in connection with the original picture.

No increase in the minimum annual royalties will be made regardless of the amount of Western Electric recording equipment used by the licensee, it was said. A separate royalty will be made to cover Canadian distribution, but the new rate will be substantially below that which has been in effect for Canada.

Complete overhaul of recording equipment, together with supplementary new studio equipment, special recording services and spare parts, will be furnished on open account to the licensee as it requires them. The open account will be liquidated by credits applied to it by Erpi based on the amount of royalties the licensee pays each year. During the time of the contract such credits can be accumulated by any licensee in sufficient volume to cover any recording equipment program the licensee could require.

The reductions, which had been planned some time ago, were not announced until after the recent closing by RCA of new 10-year recording license agreements with Twentieth Century-Fox, Columbia Pictures and Warner Brothers.

The RCA terms represented many concessions to producers in computation of charges for recording, the use of equipment, free servicing, replacements and availability of new developments. Despite the drastic reductions in Erpi's rates the over-all cost is still said to be more than that established in the new RCA agreements.

The first agreement under the new Erpi rates, it is believed, will be closed with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

WARNER, TECHNICOLOR PROFIT RUNNING AHEAD

Estimates of Warner Earnings Place Them Well Ahead of Third Quarter a Year Ago

Considerable advances over last year in the present earnings capacities of both Warner Brothers and of Technicolor were estimated this week by Wall Street Journal, of the Dow, Jones financial news service.

Earnings of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., for the third quarter ended about May 30, were reported to be somewhat less than the $944,929 or 23 cents a share on the 3,701,091 shares earned in the preceding quarter (13 weeks ended February 29), but, were said to be well ahead of the third quarter a year ago when net was $505,107, or 11 cents a share on 3,801,091 shares.

In the first half of the current fiscal year, net was $1,976,245, or 48 cents a share on the common stock.

Cites Pictures Held for the Fall

"Warner Brothers has been holding back a number of its most important film productions from release, which has had some adverse effect on current income and will detract even more from theatre and film profits during the summer," the Wall Street Journal said. "The purpose, of course, is to get the full benefit of fall attendance for a number of leading pictures expected to have large earning power. The principal pictures held back are 'Anthony Adverse' and 'Green Pastures.' They will not be released until late summer, or early autumn. 'White Angel' is just being released to the key theatres and will not reach neighborhood houses until fall.

"If these films are as successful as is hoped, Warner's earnings should recover again sharply in the first quarter of the new fiscal year, the 12 weeks ending about November 25.

"Plans are still being formulated for the refunding of Warner's $31,924,000 six per cent convertible debentures due in 1939, callable at 102," the paper continued. "It is unlikely that this operation can be completed, however, before the fall. Some form of convertible debenture at lower interest rates probably will be offered. At the same time it would appear likely that consideration will be given to restoring dividend payments on Warner's 103,107 shares of $3.85 no par preferred, which as of June 1, 1936, had $16.36 a share accruals.

Technicolor Orders

Orders now held by Technicolor, Inc., for delivery during the balance of 1936 total more than 37,500,000 feet, the Journal said. "With deliveries for the first half of this year placed at 12,500,000 feet, the total sales of 1936 should exceed 50,000,000 feet, compared with approximately 22,000,000 feet delivered during 1935."

Present cost of Technicolor films to producers is five and one-half cents a foot, so that sales for 1936 should amount to about $2,750,000, they estimate. This would compare with sales of $1,499,845 for the year ended December 31, 1935, when operations resulted in a net loss of $3,472, after all charges.

That further increased volume is anticipated is indicated by the recent action of directors in authorizing appropriation for the erection of a plant and laboratory doubling Technicolor's present capacity of 75,000,000 feet a year. The new addition is expected to cost about $1,500,000, and will be started as soon as the site is selected and engineers complete plans for the structure. The company's cash position obviates the necessity for any additional financing in connection with expenditures for the new plant, according to Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president.

"With the marked increase in volume indicated for 1937, it is considered highly possible that the print price of Technicolor may be reduced from its present base level of five and a half cents a foot," the Journal said.

Dramatists' Guild Agrees on Rules For Play Selling

Objections of film companies to the new Dramatists' Guild-producers contract are reported to have been removed with the approval this week by the joint committee of guild and producing managers of supplementary rules stabilizing the provisions governing the sale of film rights to stage plays.

The producers had threatened to withdraw their financial backing of Broadway plays because the rules were not incorporated in the new five year contract. The companies held that unless the rules were made a part of the agreement they would be subject to change at any time and consequently, a film company which had backed a stage production never could be sure of obtaining the rights to the play which carried its investment.

The new provision specifies that the same conditions prevailing at the time that a backer becomes financially interested in a stage production must prevail for him at the time of the disposal of the film rights.

The guild was opposed to the inclusion of the rules in the five year contract on the ground that they should be kept flexible to meet seasonal changes in the theatre market.

O. Henry Briggs Leaves DuPont To Head Pathe

O. Henry Briggs, sales manager for DuPont Film Manufacturing Company, resigned from his post late last week in order to accept the presidency of Pathe Exchange, Inc., to succeed Frank F. Kolbe. His election was expected Wednesday and the board evidently postponed action.

No successor has been named as yet at DuPont to Mr. Briggs, who left immediately after tendering his resignation for Hollywood. He is to be gone two weeks and will take up his new duties at Pathe immediately on his return. Mr. Kolbe, of Kolbe and Young, representing the principal financial interests in Pathe, is understood to have desired to be relieved of the Pathe presidency in order to spend more time in his brokerage business.

Mr. Briggs was first with the New York Telephone Company and Federal Telephone and Telegraph Company, as district commercial representative in western New York. In 1918 he entered the technical training school established by E. I. duPont de Nemours and Company at Wilmington, Del. In the same year he was assigned to the position of supervisor of transportation at the Carney's Point plant of the DuPont company. In 1919 he was transferred to the home office of the company at Wilmington, where he stayed until 1922 when he was transferred to the Parlin Works headquarters as manager of the promotion department. While he was in charge of this department the company had completed building its $4,000,000 motion picture plant at Parlin.

At this time it was decided to incorporate the DuPont film business as a subsidiary company, and accordingly DuPont with a controlling interest, together with Pathe Freres of Paris and Pathe Exchange, Inc., of New York, formed the DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation in 1924. Mr. Briggs then joined the new company as sales manager.

Meanwhile, it is reported that Pathe will exercise its subscription right to 32,000 additional shares of Grand National stock, giving it a total of 48,000 shares, or eight per cent of the 600,000 shares of Grand National outstanding.

Grand National stockholders can acquire two shares for each share held, at a subscription price of $1.79 per share.

Quick reference information on product started and completed and a panorama of the news of the week

Summer Pace

Production wheels turned at average summer pace as nine pictures started in the last week and six finished. As six studios participated in new work, production was evenly distributed. On the finishing productions side of the ledger, however, Paramount led, checking in with three.

Columbia started two features. In "Craig's Wife" Rosalind Russell and John Boles, making his first picture under new contract to this company, are starred. Support includes Alma Kruger, Jessie Busley, Dorothy Wilson, Nydia Westman, Elispeth Risdeon, Thomas Mitchell, Robert Allen and Raymond Walburn. Direction is by Dorothy Arzner, Hollywood's ranking woman director. The second picture, "Outlaws of Palouse," will present Jack Holt, Robert Allen, Guinn Williams and John McGuire. Erle Kenton is directing.

Two pictures also started at Paramount. More important of the pair as a prospective audience entertainment and showman's exploitation feature is "The Big Broadcast of 1937." Though the cast is far from complete, personalities currently listed are Jack Benny, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Bob Burns, Jane Froman, Ray Milland, Frank Forrest, Martha Raye, Benny Fields, Sam Hearn, Benny Goodman and band, Leopold Stokowski and symphony, Louis DaPron and Eleanore Whitney. Mitchell Leisen is directing. "Three Married Men," which features Lynne Overman, Roscoe Karns, William Frawley, Mary Brian, George Barbier, C. S. Collins, Marjorie Gateson and Mabel Colcord, also got the starting gun. Eddie Buzzell is directing.

At Warner's, "Loudspeaker Lowdown" started. The cast currently lists Ross Alexander, Glenda Farrell, Frank McHugh, Gordon Oliver, Norman Willis, John T. Murray and John Sheehan. William Clemons directs.

At United Artists studio, Goldwyn started "Come and Get It." Under Howard Hawks' direction are featured Edward Arnold and Frances Farmer, with Walter Brennan, Mary Nash, Andrea Leeds, Clem Bevens, Edwin Maxwell and Agnes Anderson in support.

Universal started "A Fool for Blondes." Victor McLaglen is starred. The support presently includes Binnie Barnes, Nan Grey, Jean Dixon, Henry Armetta and Billy Burrud. John Blystone is the director.

"See America First," a unit in the American Family series, was started by Twentieth Century-Fox. The cast lists Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Dixie Dunbar, Tony Martin, Shirley Deane, Florence Roberts and Kenneth Howell. James Tinling is directing.

At Radio, "Second Wife" started. Walter Abel, Gertrude Michael and Erik Rhodes head the cast. William Killy directs.

During the week, "Spawn of the North," a Paramount picture on which considerable preliminary work already had been done in Alaska, was cancelled. Ill health of Carole Lombard, who was to have been starred, prevented her making the trip north.

Paramount nevertheless completed a trio of features that appear to be more than ordinarily attractive. Most important of the group is "Texas Rangers," an historical western produced in grand scale and a picture that has already been widely publicized by the studio and state of Texas. Direction credited to King Vidor and with hundreds of extras appearing, the important names in the cast are Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Jean Parker, Lloyd Nolan, Bennie Bartlett, Edward Ellis, Dora Early, Elean Marinez, Frank Shannon and Irving Bacon. Similar to "The Covered Wagon" and "Cimarron" in theme and scope, the picture is a tribute to the men who founded Texas. The second film, "My American Wife," also possessing a western atmosphere, features Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern and Billie Burke. In the third of the completed trio, "Hollywood Boulevard," which dramatized the towering ambitions and tragic failures of the colony of picture makers, many early screen pioneers will be seen. Listed in important roles are John Halliday, Marsha Hunt, Robert Cummings, C. Henry Gordon, Frieda Inescourt, Esther Ralston, Esther Dale, Betty Compson, Charles Ray, Maurice Costello, Bryant Washburn, Roy d'Arcy, Francis X. Bushman, Albert Conti, Herbert Rawlinson and Purnell Pratt. Robert Florey directed.

At Universal, "Boss Rider of Gun Creek" was finished. The cast includes Buck Jones, Muriel Evans, Harvey Clarke, Mahlon Hamilton, Lester Phelps and Tom Chatterton. Les Selander directed.

National Pictures completed "Wings over San Antonio." Lloyd Hughes and Rosalind Keith are the principals, supported by William Janney, Jason Roberts, George Regas, Russell Hicks, Glen Boles, Joseph Girard and Frank Hagney. Stuart Paton directed.

In the final picture of the complete group, "Lady Luck," Chesterfield features Patricia Farr and William Bakewell with Lulu McConnell, Duncan Renaldo, Jamison Thomas.

ABC of a Guild

In a pamphlet which takes the form of a question and answer catechism, the Screen Actors' Guild makes public its aims and intentions. Prefaced by an article by president Robert Montgomery, Guild says that high among its objectives are "economic security and better working conditions for extras and bit players, fully 50 per cent of whom earn less in a year than an unskilled laborer."

Then in dialogue question and answer the ABC of the Guild is established. It is a union of motion picture actors and actresses incorporated under the laws of California as a non-profit corporation, and it is a labor union. It operates under a charter from the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, a federation of actors affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. A member of the California State Federation of Labor, one of the Guild's representatives holds a seat on the executive board of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council.

The Actor's Guild was formed to obtain through collective bargaining adequate compensation and fair working conditions for its members and to foster the dignity of the screen acting profession. Membership is open to anyone who acts in pictures, and is divided into two classes, junior and senior. Extras, stunt men, dancers, bit and small part players are eligible to junior membership. Senior membership includes part players, freelance and feature players, contract players and anyone who has acted on the stage in a speaking part for at least three years.

There is a close working agreement between the Guild and Actors Equity Association, but the Guild has complete control over its own affairs. Yet Equity members are required to join the Guild when working in pictures.

The Guild points out that it has obtained material wage adjustments for bit and extra players in more than 200 cases, and in many instances has further protected them by preventing non-professionals from taking jobs which belong to extras.

Pigskin Dramas

Last year, Universal's "Fighting Youth" was the solitary football picture to make a general bid for attention from the game crowds. With the field all to itself, the picture scored a handsome number of touchdowns with the result that, this year, at least four other companies are bidding for part of the gate with football stories.

Within two weeks Radio puts into production "The Big Game," which will feature the new contract player, Phil Huston. Already signed are four all-Americans from Stanford: Bones Hamilton, Monk Moscrip, Keith Topping and Frank Alustiza. This production quite likely will be the first of the pigskin dramas to reach the screens, but others will not be far behind.

Columbia is preparing "College Hero," an original story by Robert Buckner, with no principals signed yet.

Paramount is polishing the script for "Rose Bowl," which will feature the annual struggle between star east and west elevens.

Mark Kelly, ex-sports editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, is writing "Pigskin Parade" for Twentieth Century-Fox.

MAJORS NOT QUITTING GERMANY, DESPITE NAZI RESTRICTIVE ACTS

Foreign Managers of Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and MGM Say They'll Ride the Present Storm of Rejections

Three large American film companies which have distributing subsidiaries in Germany are not contemplating any immediate action toward liquidating them in spite of the new and increasingly harsh restrictive action by the Reich Government. Foreign managers of Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer declared this week that they will not withdraw from the Nazi field unless further definitely hostile moves are made by the Hitler Government.

It had been reported in Germany and in this country that the companies are planning to drop their distributing units at once, but executives here said that no such move is being considered at the present time and that no collective action will be taken through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The MPPDA is understood to have taken the stand that any move to vacate the Nazi market must come from the individual companies concerned.

The Essener National Zeitung, the leading and semi-official newspaper of western Germany, publishing a series of articles on what it calls the "present crisis," reported that the three companies will dispose of their German subsidiaries. Immediate occasion for the series was the recent banning by the censorship board of several American pictures on what the distributors called extremely flimsy grounds. The barring of nine films in the last few months, combined with the difficulty of drawing any revenue from the country because of the foreign currency embargo, was given by the newspaper as the reason for its reports of a planned suspension of the American units.

The articles, surprisingly frank, are considered a bold attack on the censorship policies of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Reich Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment. The Zeitung is controlled by Colonel General Herman Wilhelm Goering, Reich Air Minister and Premier of Prussia. In addition to the list of nine prohibited films, which included "The Prisoner of Shark Island," listed as "too cruel," and "The Country Doctor," banned because the censors asserted Jean Hersholt is partially "non-Aryan," the newspaper reported that since the beginning of 1935, nineteen American pictures have been turned down by the Propaganda Ministry.

The articles pointed out that the affected films are mostly super-productions, originally designed by the companies to revive the slowly flowing revenue from the country.

A complete survey of the market was contained in the series and it was said that American films are preferred by exhibitors to those of any other country. The supposition that the withdrawal of American competition would result in increased revenue for the product of any other country or for German-made films was called a fallacy. Even British productions were classified as not equal to the American product. Apart from two or three pictures including "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and "The Scarlet Pimpernel" it was declared that no British film had been an outstanding success in the Reich.

The possible contention by the Propaganda Ministry that the importation of American films is bound to the export of foreign currencies was also branded as erroneous by the newspaper. It pointed out that practically the entire receipts from German exploitation of foreign films are left in Germany because of the difficulty of obtaining permission to transfer them, even in restricted form, to the home offices of the subsidiaries. Even when Sperrmark credits are obtained they involve a loss of from 60 to 65 per cent for the companies.

Capital also was made of the fact that the American units spend more than 3,000,000 Reichsmarks a year in the operation of their offices. Not only do theatre owners profit from foreign pictures but German employees, actors, authors, printing plants and studios which cooperate with the American companies draw immense revenue which would be lost it the threatened suspension is carried out, it was declared. Total expenses for the three subsidiaries for 1935 in wages, dubbing charges and taxes are placed at 3,355,000 Reichsmarks.

				news reels, 742,000
Total expenses in 1935 Reichsmarks				3,355,000

Analysis of the expenditures revealed that wages alone comprise 45 per cent of the total and that the combined overhead expenses take 33.8, 37.6 and 40.4 percent of the total receipts for the three companies. The figures quoted were based on statements for the five years from 1931 to 1935.

Although officials of the three companies agreed that the present outlook is bleak and that further restrictive action by the German Government would make the market unprofitable and almost untenable, they said they will not withdraw unless the Reich Propaganda Ministry bars almost every film scheduled for exploitation in the country.

Walter W. Hutchinson, foreign manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, pointed out that only 16 American films were exhibited in Germany through the three American subsidiaries during the 1935-36 season and that there is a possibility that this quota may be cut in half for the next season. If this should happen, he declared, his company would be willing to liquidate its German interests.

George Vallar, manager for Paramount in Germany, declared on his arrival in New York last Saturday that his company will not move to suspend its subsidiary this year. He announced that he had received kontingents from the Reich Government for the release of eight dubbed and two super-imposed pictures. He regarded the stories about increased restrictions as exaggerated.

Topical Drama

Two of man's greatest transoceanic aviation conquests form the production background and dramatic entertainment basis of this story. As the drama of man's vision, courage and confidence are the underlying forces, the first chapter is devoted to the Clipper ship conquest of the Caribbean Sea, a historical event that was of much topical interest in its time, and the second, from which the picture derives its title, is based upon the recent transpacific flights.

These phases of the production naturally being the angles that most effectively can be adapted to interest creating exploitation, a salesmanship effort in which there are possibilities for unusual contacts with many influential business stimulating groups, the substantiating story in a combination of personal character drama and romantic love interest.

The story, which is entirely headline inspired, is an original screen play by Lieutenant Commander Frank Wead, a writer who has been associated with some of the most outstanding thrill action aviation pictures. Direction is by Ray Enright, maker of the recent "Earthworm Tractor" and most of the pictures in which Joe E. Brown appeared for Warner.

Name value of the cast is of exceptional value. Pat O'Brien is starred. Though his name is well down in the list of credits, the late Henry B. Walthall is one of the story's most important characters. In it, as the designer and builder of the Clipper ship, he dies in a manner closely paralleling his actual death. The romance, which is a part of O'Brien's drama, is shared with Beverly Roberts seen in "The Singing Kid." Other names of more than ordinary appeal to patrons are those of Humphrey Bogart, Ross Alexander, Marie Wilson, Addison Richards, Joseph Crehan and Joseph King.

Sing, Baby, Sing

(20th Century - Fox)

Comedy Romance

Though there are many deviations, a suggestion of the recent widely headlined cross-country romantic escapades of a noted Hollywood picture actor seem to be the basis for this story. It is essentially a music tinged comedy romance which has a light dramatic contrast, but which, nevertheless, is continually comic. The topical experiences of the star who continually called for his Ariel form the entertainment backbone of the story and the exploitation angle which any showman cannot miss.

The vehicle is an original by Milton Sperling and Jack Yellen, who had the collaboration of Harry Tugent in preparing the screen play. The same combination, producer B. G. DeSylva and director Sidney Lanfield, who accounted for "King of Burlesque," are shaping it into screen realism.

The cast undoubtedly was selected for its ability to emphasize the story's comedy content. All many times have demonstrated their fun-making talents, particularly effective when they are aimed at a burlesque objective. Adolphe Menjou, remembered for many roles but particularly for his work in "The Milky Way," plays the part of the continually inebriated Shakespeare mouthing actor. Gregory Ratoff and Ted Healy are the pair who contrive to make Alice Faye his Ariel. The comedy which this pair contribute, working to the chagrin of Miss Faye and causing her legitimate sweetheart in the picture, Michael Whelan, much heart-ache, is furthered by the inclusion of Patsy Kelly and the introduction to the screen of the Ritz Brothers. The picture also will present Dixie Dunbar, Tony Martin, a new singing discovery, Paul Stanton and Douglas Fowley.

Being produced smartly, and with an idea to good taste, the production promises to be a topical exploitation feature to arouse patron interest to an unusual pitch long before its presentation.

Postal Inspector

(Universal)

Thrill Action Drama

As the work of another branch of government detectives, the postal inspectors, is dramatized, this is a story of how Uncle Sam keeps the mails going despite any disaster and protects it safely from a gang of crooks. While concentrating almost entirely on that subject it also relates a pungent story of conflicting romance told against a background of unusual and thrilling circumstances. Production backgrounds for the story depict the floods that swept many eastern communities; thieves stage the greatest mail robbery in history, grabbing $3,000,000 while the flood rages and the populace is thrown into panic. Essentially dramatic entertainment, the story is also semi-educational in character inasmuch as it reveals uses which the Post Office Department makes of modern inventions, particularly two-way radios, in its operations.

A fresh subject, but nevertheless one which makes possible the inclusion of dramatic, romantic and other appealing elements of topically based thrill action yarns, the production apparently has a potential cooperative contact value that should be beneficial in exploiting it.

The story is an original by Robert Presnell and Horace McCoy, for which McCoy did the screen play. Otto Brower, one of Hollywood's younger directors, specializing in thrill action properties, is the director. Among his recent credits is the handling of the battle sequences in "Under Two Flags."

The cast, while not highly impressive, is acceptable. Ricardo Cortez is featured in the title role. Patricia Ellis is the girl, object of his affections and at same time the one innocently broadcasting information that leads to the attempted robbery engineered by Bela Lugosi. Two newcomers, Michael Loring, stage actor, and David Oliver, former wisecracking Universal newsreel cameraman, have important parts. Others to be seen include Wallis Clark, Guy Usher, Henry Hunter, Billy Burrud, Harry Beresford, Hattie McDaniel and Arthur Loft.

France, Germany Sign Film Pact

by J. K. RUTENBERG
in Berlin

A special agreement just completed between France and Germany, provides for the free importation of films originating in either country. It is a one-year arrangement, effective from June 1 last. It is the intention to discuss the formulation of new regulations at the expiration of this agreement.

Under the terms of the arrangement, films made in Germany, either in German or French, may be exported to France without duty, and without limit with respect to nature and length. The number so exported will be subject only to French legislation relative to the reproduction of films of foreign origin. No conflict is seen with the provisions of the new French laws on censorship.

An important phase of the agreement provides that the German Government will permit the transfer of foreign currencies which have been collected in Germany by the exploitation of French films. Each country will compile a list of the films shown within its boundaries, and forward it to the other country. If a film is to be suppressed in either country, the reason must be given within two weeks, according to the agreement.

Frohman On Committee For Federal Theatre

Daniel Frohman will head an advisory committee for the Federal Theatre Project, composed of men and women prominent in social, public and theatrical life, according to a list released by George M. Gatts, New York State director of the project. The group will function as patrons and patronesses of the theatre work, which is financed through the Works Progress Administration. Others on the list are Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, Miss Alma Clayburgh, Joseph P. Day, Herbert Bayard Swope, Henry Breckenridge, Fannie Hurst, S. Stenwood Menken, Edwin Denby, George Gordon Battle, Mrs. Frederick Steinway, Mrs. James Lee Laidlaw and Miss Irene Lewisohn.

Frohman Lauded by Hays

Daniel Frohman's work for the Motion Picture Fund was praised by Will H. Hays in a speech before the Los Angeles Breakfast Club in that city last week. He referred to Mr. Frohman as the "ambassador of entertainment."

Deep Sea Films Made

Otis Barton, inventor of the bathsphere, a deep-sea diving bell, returned to New York last week with thousands of feet of motion picture film showing submarine life. He plans to release the pictures in one sequence.

"Pastures" Premiere Set

"The Green Pastures," Warner Brothers' film version of the Pulitzer Prize Play by Marc Connelly, will open in New York at the Radio City Music Hall on July 16th.

COMPANIES LARGE AND SMALL FINISH PLANS FOR NEW SEASON PRODUCT

Columbia Signs Jules White to New Contract to Head Short Subjects; New DeLuxe Pictures Elects Callaghan

With the termination of the United Artists annual sales convention at the Hotel Ambassador in Los Angeles this week (see page 57), the last of the large companies has given its final instruction on next season's product to its field forces. Both large and small distributors and producers are now drawing together the final unfinished business details of the new programs.

Several companies are signing new talent for their player rosters, writing staffs and directorial ranks. Others have taken new associate producers into the fold, and all are closing distribution deals. New product and sales policy developments this week follow:

British International

British International Pictures in London is launching one of its most ambitious programs, with 10 productions scheduled to go into work shortly. Included in the group are "Stars of the Circus," "Hunt the Pearls" with Buddy Rogers, "The Lilac Domino," "Sensation," "Glamorous Night," "Treachery," "The Dominant Sex," 'The Luck of the Navy" and a series based on the well known character, Bulldog Drummond.

Burroughs-Tarzan

George W. Stour, secretary and treasurer of Burroughs-Tarzan Pictures, who heretofore confined his activities to the financial and executive operation of that company, is personally supervising the production of "Tundra." Ashton Dearhold, vice-president in charge of production, is concentrating his efforts on the completion of "The Phantom of Santa Fe" and in the preparation of the company's serial, "Sky Fighters."

Majestic Pictures Corporation of Western Pennsylvania, Burroughs-Tarzan franchise owner for that territory, has been sold by Joseph S. Skirboll to Lew and Milton Lefton, operators of the Monarch Pictures Corporation in Pittsburgh.

Columbia

Under a new plan put into effect at Columbia Pictures at the recent sales convention at Chicago, divisional, district and branch sales heads in the field will make periodic trips to New York for conferences with home office executives. This is in line with the decentralization of the sales force in the field.

J. H. Seidelman, foreign manager of Columbia, plans conventions in Madrid, Rome and Paris within the next six weeks. Joseph Friedman, managing director of Columbia in London, will accompany him on his visit to Continental territories.

Columbia has signed Jules J. White, head of the short subject department, to a new long term contract. At the same time it announced that the 13 short subjects based on the John Hix newspaper and radio feature, "Strange As It Seems," will be released by Columbia. Closing of the deal has been announced by Richard Kahn, president of the recently organized Screen Classics, Inc., producers of the series.

Prior to his return to New York from the company's sales convention in Chicago last week, Abe Montague, general sales manager, revealed that his company is spending approximately $2,000,000 on "The Lost Horizon." He said that "to date more than 2,000,000 feet of film have been taken and more than a year of preparation has gone into its making."

DeLuxe Pictures

DeLuxe Pictures, Inc., newly formed in Hollywood, has elected George H. Callaghan president, in charge of distribution, with Jed Buell secretary and treasurer in charge of production. The board of directors includes Mary K. Suter, Jed Buell, Hugh W. Darling and E. M. Mortensen. Headquarters will be at the Talisman studios.

Educational

Educational Pictures temporarily will discontinue its production activities in the east for about four weeks beginning July 10. Before the vacation period begins the company will produce a short with Bert Lahr at the Astoria studio.

Guaranteed

Guaranteed Pictures has closed with Cameo Screen Attractions, Boston, for distribution of "Just My Luck" and "Women in White" in New England.

M. H. Hoffman

M. H. Hoffman, who has just returned from England, plans to spend some time in New York arranging a new production program before returning to Hollywood. Although reports have linked Mr. Hoffman with planning to produce 30 next season, he said that the number has not been determined but it will not be that many.

Imperial

"High Hat," from the Alma Sioux Scarberry novel, has been completed by Imperial Pictures in Hollywood. The picture will be released in September. Clifford Sanforth directed, and the cast includes Frank Luther, Dorothy Dare, Gavin Gordon, Lona Andre and Ted Dawson's Orchestra.

Paramount

To wind up the current season's releases, Paramount now has seven pictures in the cutting room to receive final editing in preparation for release in the next six weeks. The pictures are "Three Cheers for Love," "Yours for the Asking," "Rhythm on the Range," "My American Wife," "A Son Comes Home," "Hollywood Boulevard" and "Texas Rangers."

RKO Radio

Albert Lewis has severed an association of many years with Paramount as a producer to accept a similar position with Radio. He leaves for his new office in two weeks. The company has also signed George and Ira Gershwin to do the tunes for "Watch Your Step," the next Astaire-Rogers film.

Harry Goetz, president of Reliance, has arrived in New York for conferences with Radio executives regarding his next season's product which will be distributed by that company. At the same time, A. J. Balaban is en route to the coast to join the studio production staff under Samuel J. Briskin.

"Trinidad," the first release in the new "World on Parade" series produced by Van Beuren for Radio, has been completed.

Republic

Ned Dobson, New York agency operator, has been signed by Republic to act as talent scout. He succeeds Dick La Marr, resigned.

Spectrum

Spectrum Pictures has signed Fred Scott, cowboy who sang with Maria Jeritza, for a series of six musical westerns to be produced by the newly formed DeLuxe Pictures headed by George Callaghan. The first will be "Romance on the Range."

Stage and Screen

Stage and Screen Productions, Inc., has closed a deal for distribution of its serials in Puerto Rico by the Puerto Rico Film Service Company.

Twentieth Century - Fox

Darryl F. Zanuck has cut short his vacation and returned to the Twentieth Century-Fox studios in Hollywood to speed up production. On his first day back he signed director Norman Taurog to a long term contract and purchased J. P. Marquand's story, "That Girl and Mr. Moto" and Charles Francis Coe's "Ransom."

Eight of the company's pictures are in the cutting room or near completion for early release. "Ramona," Technicolor picture being directed by Henry King, is nearing completion, as is "The Holy Lie." "Sing, Baby, Sing," "Girls' Dormitory," "To Mary—With Love," "The Bowery Princess," "Charlie Chan at the Racetrack" and "Pepper" are being edited.

Warner

A. W. Smith, Jr., eastern and Canadian general sales manager for Warners, has left New York for a tour of the New England branch offices.

"The Making of O'Malley" goes into production at Burbank early next month, with Pat O'Brien and Sybil Jason co-starred.

Test Cases Begun On Chance Games

Test cases on the legality of cash gifts to theatre patrons in any form of alleged lottery were started in four states this week and Bank Night was given the stamp of approval in two others. Exhibitors are showing a difference of opinion on the value of the various plans, a circuit on the west coast having dropped the scheme in 11 of its houses while an eastern circuit will install it in three large New York City houses for the summer.

Jury Acquits Manager

By a jury verdict of "not guilty" brought in the trial of R. T. LaMarre, manager of the President, San Francisco, a precedent for the legality of Screeno in California has been set. Mr. LaMarre was arrested five times in as many nights before the case was brought to trial.

The Fox West Coast circuit has announced that it will suspend Bank Night in 11 neighborhood houses in the Hollywood and Beverly Hills district, claiming that the patrons are tired of the plan. An usherette in a San Francisco theatre is suing the manager to compel him to pay her $300 which she claims she won in a drawing when she was attending as a paying patron.

The state attorney general for Iowa has ruled that Bank Night in theatres is a lottery and hence a violation of state laws. The decision is a reversal of one rendered last year.

Commonwealth Attorney E. Poe Harris of Kentucky has started suits against two Ashland operators to force them to discontinue Sweepstakes Night, Bank Night and other forms of alleged lotteries.

The giveaway plan has been labeled as "dangerous" by Attorney General Clyde R. Chapman of Maine who has started a renewed fight to force test cases. He has declared his intention of stamping it out completely in the state.

Certain Massachusetts owers are considering running Bank Night despite legal difficulties as the state supreme court continues to delay decision on the legality of the plan. The giveaway is being run in Quincy on a merchant-newspaper tie-up and other attractions including Beano and horse and dog pari-mutuels are grossing heavily without restraint.

Intake Same Despite Giveaways

Operators of the Tower, Kansas City, reported that business remained on a par with previous weeks during a promotion campaign last week in which they gave away seven fur coats. Bank Night was held not a violation of Missouri lottery laws in a circuit court which upheld a demurrer of R. W. McEwan, Bank Night distributor.

I. J. London has been arrested in Detroit, Mich., for running Skillful Screeno games in three theatres. Hearing was set for later this week.

The plan was ruled illegal in a test case in the city court of Rochester, N. Y., and police were ordered to arrest any manager offering a money giveaway. Loew's Metropolitan, Valencia and Paradise Theatres in New York City have contracted for Bank Night and will start with a $500 gift.

Claiming infringement of their copyrighted Bank Night and Treasury Night, Affiliated Enterprises of Denver filed a $25,000 suit in the United States district court, New York, against Par-Land Theatres, Inc., Landon Realty Company, and Harry Schiffman.

Bank Night was given legal approval in Wisconsin when a district court jury in Milwaukee found Eugene Van Norman, manager of Saxe's Uptown Theatre, not guilty of operating a gambling device. A case against Milton Harman, manager of the Garfield, is pending and the city attorney's office announced that prosecution would be pressed despite the verdict.

Imperial Sets 30 Features, 26 Stories

Imperial Distributing Corporation announces 30 feature pictures for release in 1936-37, and 26 short subjects.

The 26 shorts will be released in two series, 13 one-reel "Color Classics," produced in a new vari-colored process, and 13 one-reel Edgar A. Guest "Poetic Gems."

Missing Vouchers For Union Funds Sought in Suit

Disappearance of cancelled checks and vouchers involved in expenditures of more than $1,000,000 in funds of the Motion Picture Operators Union, Local 306, was charged by Frederick Woltman, staff writer, in a story in the New York World Telegram this week. It was declared that the matter is being investigated by the office of District Attorney William C. Dodge.

The Scripps Howard newspapers, of which the World Telegram is a member, have been campaigning for more than two years against alleged "racket politics" in Local 306.

The story of the lost vouchers is an echo from the confiscation of all the union's records in 1934 by William Kleinman, assistant to District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan of Brooklyn. Union officials claim the checks were not returned with other records after a supreme court justice termed the raid "a clear and definite invasion" of the union's constitutional rights.

The missing records are wanted by Irving Mendelson, assistant to Mr. Dodge, who is conducting a grand larcency prosecution of Harry Sherman, former head of Local 306. He is said to be conferring with Mr. Geoghan in an effort to find them.

A motion by counsel for Mr. Sherman for permission to inspect the minutes of the grand jury which indicted him last month on a grand larceny charge, was denied in general sessions court this week. The indictment alleges theft of $150,961.75 of the local's funds. In an affidavit Mr. Sherman has asserted that the evidence upon which he was indicted was based on a "grudge" held by friends of his predecessor as president of the local, Samuel Kaplan. The latter has been convicted of conspiracy in connection with the management of the local and sentenced to the penitentiary.

Locals of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees are involved in two other court actions in New York and California. Application has been made in the New York supreme court to punish officers of Local 306 and others for alleged violation of an injunction order against picketing in front of the Star Theatre in the Bronx. The petition has been filed by the Burt Amusement Corporation and the New Star Exhibitors and Art Amusement Corporation.

Also named as defendants are the Theatrical Stage Hands Protective Union No. 1, Musicians' Local 302 and Theatre Amusement Employees Union Local 95.

Local 150 of the Alliance won the first victory in its picket campaign against the Rob & Rowley circuit in Pasadena when the appellate division reversed a previous conviction of Emil Schwetzer, newsboy, for selling union papers on Pasadena streets.

Vern Scott to Build Two Houses

Plans for the erection of two new houses in Roxbury and Barnesboro, Pa., have been announced by Vern Scott, president of the Scott Theatre Circuit.

Romantic Drama with Music

Any analysis of this picture reveals that it possesses elements that make for wide popular appeal and ready commercial exploitation adaptation. The title quickly identifies it as being associated with one of the world's most colorful cities. The cast is headed by two high ranking screen names. Clark Gable is of long duration. Jeanette MacDonald has come with a rush the last year or so. Supporting players are well-known personalities. Human interest keynotes the motivating love story that has a quasi-spiritual and religious counterpart to its virile drama and heart touching romance. The spectacle is an amazing demonstration of technical achievement. Many may consider this feature the show's real star. Music is an artistic treat.

The time is early 1906. Ambitious for an operatic career, Mary Blake comes to San Francisco. Circumstances cause her to accept an entertainer's position in Blackie's ribald, roisterous Barbary Coast Paradise Cafe. Grateful to the man who has befriended her, but fearful of him because all his intentions toward her have a lustful premise, she finds confidence in the counsel of Father Mullin. Heard singing by Burley, aristocratic scion of a goldrush pioneer family, Mary, upon Father Mullins' advice, accepts his bid for an operatic opportunity. Thus a situation is established whereby Blackie and Burley determine to destroy each other, with the love of Mary as the reward to the victor. Temporarily Burley triumphs as Blackie's growing honest affection for the girl permits him to take it on the chin. Her engagement to Burley announced, Mary learns at the Chicken Ball, one of the old Coast's historic affairs, that Burley's affections toward her have a dishonest intent. Courageously taking the stage to win the first prize for the now ruined Blackie, her reward is an insult from the man whom she had helped.

Then comes the show's real drama. The city shudders. Earthquake, fire and explosion raze it. Blackie stalks through the destruction seeking Mary. As production effects lift the preview audience out of their seats, Blackie finds her with Father Mullin, ministering to the injured and dying. A regenerated man, he sinks to his knees thanking God that the girl has been spared for him.

A bare story outline cannot convey the picture's completeness or the values with which skillful application of production detail endows it. In character Gable returns to the forceful, dynamic role vividly similar to the many in which he won great favor. Miss MacDonald becomes an accomplished dramatic artist. She plays her part with sure and understanding conviction. Spencer Tracy appears in a role that probably will win as much acclaim for him as the picture's stunning spectacle. That feature, running approximately 10 minutes, is thrill to the nth degree.

While exhibitors can do plenty of talking in regard to the film's personalities, scope and class of production detail, worth of story as solid substantial entertainment, the musical content is something that should not be overlooked. Jeanette MacDonald's singing alone would justify billing the show as a worthwhile musical. The range of numbers provided for her runs all the way from the sacred "Holy City" and "Nearer My God to Thee," the last named sung as earthquake survivors are uncertain of what new disaster may strike them, through the title theme song and sentimental "Would You" to a choral rendition of "Battle Hymn of the Republic," sung as the survivors look down upon the ruins and vision the San Francisco of today. Additionally there are arias from "Faust" and "Il Traviata."

Previewed in Fox Westwood Village Theatre. The reaction was what might be termed terrific. Acting, singing and production features were applauded many times. The disaster spectacle had the audience on its feet cheering. The applause at the finish lasted nearly two minutes. McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. A. W. S. Van Dyke production, produced by John Emerson and Bernard H. Hyman. Screen play by Anita Loos. From the story by Robert Hopkins. Musical direction, Herbert Stothart. Song "San Francisco" by Gus Kahn, Bronislau Kaper and Walter Jurmann. Song "Would You" by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed. Dances staged by Val Raset. Recording director, Douglas Shearer. Art director, Cedric Gibbons. Associates, Arnold Gillespie, Harry McAfee, Edwin B. Willis. Gowns by Adrian. Photographed by Oliver T. Marsh. Operatic sequences staged by William von Wymetal. Montage sequences by John Hoffman. Film editor, Tom Held. Assistant director, Joe Newman. P. C. A. Certificate No. 2180. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 115 minutes. Release date, June 26, 1936. General audience classification.

Three Cheers for Love

(Paramount)

Musical Comedy

This is a light and gay little musical comedy. Not a pretentious picture but one that is acceptable entertainment if one is careful not to make any too extravagant claims for it, its ingredients are music, dancing, romantic love interest and a bit of light drama, all presented against a production background that is more engaging than the story, which nevertheless has a spirited tempo.

In the yarn, Skippy, daughter of Hollywood picture maker Charles Dormant, can't get along with mother-in-law Consuelo. A modern miss, she agrees with her father that she attend an exclusive finishing school. Actually the school is a threadbare affair, devoid of pupils. With the notice that Skippy is coming, arrives Milton Shakespeare, old hoofer pal of owner Wilma Chester, to suggest an idea. He moves in his musical comedy troupe, temporarily at liberty, with the idea that while running an institution that is a recreation of the "Charm School" idea, they'll stage a play starring Skippy that will attract Dormant's attention and get them all jobs in Hollywood.

With complications, that idea works out all right. Skippy, at first believing that all is on the up and up, falls in love with Professor Tuttle, erstwhile song writer. But when he comes under the spell of her charm, he's all for giving the gag away. Skippy stops him by telling him that she knew all about the plot all along. The show goes on, with all its music and dancing. Dormant, in attendance, thinks it's great. Shakespeare and his stooge, Doc Wilson, masquerading as stage producers, connive to make him bid an exorbitant price and agree to unusual conditions prior to the whole melange's migration to Hollywood.

Lacking any outstanding names, but with a coterie of veterans exerting a leavening influence on the youngsters, the show glows with the spirit of youth. The music is tuneful, the dancing rhythmic, and the comedy content makes for light amusement.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale. The audience didn't appear to get very much excited, nor did it feel that the evening was misspent. McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Produced by A. M. Botsford, Supervisor, M. A. Shauer. Directed by Ray McCarey. Assistant director, Edgar Anderson. Three of a Kind

(Invincible)

Comedy

Showmen here have the wellknown old standby, "mistaken identity," as the basic element on which to mount their exploitation campaigns. It's the old story of the confidence men in the luxurious hotel posing as Kentucky colonels and real estate operators while the hero is thought to be the real crook.

The picture, although not a pretentious one by any means, has good character portrayals, suitable production values and photography, and several deft directorial touches that keep the action moving right along to the logical climax.

Name value is supplied by Berton Churchill, Evalyn Knapp, Richard Carle, Bradley Page and Patricia Farr, who paces the others histrionically with her portrayal of a daughter of old Kentucky who keeps forgetting her Southern dialect to lapse into one slightly Russian.

As the picture opens, Chandler is driving a delivery truck for Penfield's Peerless Laundry, run by Carle, who is having trouble with his daughter, Miss Knapp, since she wants to marry a man known to be a fortune hunter. Chandler wins the Penfield prize for efficiency, $1,000 in cash, and quits his job for some fun. At the same time Miss Knapp loses her car while trying to sell it to raise funds to marry Page. Chandler buys the stolen machine.

All the participals wind up at a swanky hotel where they are joined by Miss Farr and Churchill, posing as a Kentucky tobacco grower and out to trim any and every one. Complications set in, but not before romance starts to bud between Chandler and Miss Knapp, who is fast losing confidence in her fiance and his business schemes.

When a detective recognizes Churchill, things start to hum with arrests and counter-arrests, followed by escapes and recaptures. Chandler is thought to be Page and even the hotel manager manages to get caught in the web. All is straightened out, however, with the real crooks locked up, and Miss Knapp and Chandler head for the altar and the laundry where Chandler gets an executive position.

Reviewed at the Loew's Ziegfeld theatre, first-class subsequent-run where the picture was appreciated by a mid-afternoon audience, if the laughter that sprang up now and then may be taken as evidence. BAEHIER, New York.

Where There's a Will

(Gaumont-British)

Farce

Here is a whole-hearted farce; genuinely funny story material made the most of by brisk direction. Will Hay, British variety star, is character actor as well as comedian; his range may be limited, but within it he is brilliant. Backed by the American expertness of William Beaudine and by a liberal supply of Americanisms in the dialogue, the film is one which undoubtedly can be sold to American audiences. Much of its effect is due to action and to individual comedy episodes in which speech is of secondary importance.

Benjamin Stubbins is a lawyer whose business has gone to pieces owing to his easy-going and somewhat drunken habits. His daughter, Barbara, has been given a home by Stubbins' brother-in-law, the pompous Lord Wimpleton. She is engaged to the son of a peer and Wimpleton is very anxious to hide her father from the fiancé, owing to a somewhat unfortunate occurrence when Stubbins, on a visit, leads the butler into a drunken escapade.

In town, Stubbins is picked out by a gang of American crooks who want to rob a bank occupying premises underneath his office. They give him a job to search for an imaginary "ancestor," in order to get access to his office. Stubbins butts in when they are breaking through to the bank. Scared stiff by the fact that the only fingerprints left were made by him, Stubbins decides not to tell the police the truth but to do a little police work himself.

The girl member of the gang has succeeded in ingratiating herself with Wimpleton and engineers a Christmas invitation to his country house for herself and her confederate "brother" in the fashionable name of Van Deusen. Two other members of the gang get in as waiters. In the midst of the festivities, with all the guests arrayed in fancy dress, there is a holdup. Stubbins makes a dramatic "Father Christmas" descent of the chimney and, aided by an opportune appearance of the police, turns the tables.

To sell is the whimsical personality of Will Hay and a story with exceptional comedy values. There is one extraordinarily good scene, though perhaps it is best left to come as a surprise: this is when a squad of police are seen marching to the house, while the holdup is in progress. Just when the capture of the crooks seems imminent, the cops form on the terrace—and begin to sing Christmas carols! As a side angle, note that the story can be sold as a burlesque of the crook drama.

Apart from Hay, there is good acting from Gina Malo and Hartley Power as the feminine and male crooks and from H. F. Maltby as Wimpleton. ALLAN, London.

Produced by Gainsborough Pictures and distributed by Gaumont-British. Original story by Leslie Arliss and Sydney Gilliat. Adaptation by Ralph Spence. Parole

(Universal)

Melodrama

As the title suggests, this is essentially a topical drama of the convict parole system in this country today. Through it is woven a romantic theme, used here more to illustrate an evil of the system. There is an apparent lack of comedy, save for the opening few feet of the picture.

Nevertheless, for showmen, it is the work of those who sought to provide something substantial to create interest on the part of audiences. The subject treated is currently the object of much attention on the part of newspapers, clergymen, welfare leaders and other opinion makers in any community, and exploitation campaigns may be aimed at those audiences who desire to get away from prosaic routine.

With one central group, the picture tells two stories; the difficulties encountered by paroled prisoners in reestablishing themselves in the modern social and business world, and the dangers and hazards to which they are subjected by incorrigible criminals who endeavor to use them to keep the heat away from themselves as they continue their law-defying careers.

Two new players are presented in the leading roles, Henry Hunter and Ann Preston. Hunter is a graduate of the New York Theatre Guild and Miss Preston a product of the Institute Players of Chicago. The young players are supported by a group of wellknown screen personalities, including Alan Dinehart, Grant Mitchell, Alan Hale, Berton Churchill, Alan Baxter, Charles Richman, Noah Beery, Jr., Christian Rubb and Frank McGlynn, Sr.

The picture opens at the state penitentiary where three prisoners, Hale the cruel killer, Mitchell the former lawyer serving time for fixing a jury to aid a man he believed innocent of murder, and Hunter, serving time for killing a man while driving an automobile, are ready to appear before the parole board. Hale kills a fellow prisoner, but escapes detection and is freed. Hunter also is released, but Mitchell is detained on the belief he knows the murderer of the prisoner.

Hale and Hunter arrive in the city and Hale deliberately returns to work for racketeer Dinehart while Hunter takes a job from him while not knowing the nature of his employer's business. Not a criminal at heart, Hunter breaks away and tries to live down his past by denying a criminal record in applying for a job in Churchill's factory.

At this point all is going along smoothly, Mitchell is released and romance is blossoming between his daughter, Miss Preston, and Hunter. Dinehart, however, reveals to Churchill that Hunter has a record and the boy loses his job, but not before he shows the high percentage of ex-convicts working honestly and trying to earn a decent living. The newspapers pick up the expose and when he blames the whole system on Dinehart, killers are sent out to get him. He manages to escape them, however, and in a smashing climax in which the governor, district attorney and grand jury take part, the crooks are rounded up and the corrupt system exposed and remedied along Hunter's suggestions. The finale has Mitchell and Hunter ready to start law practice together and the two youngsters headed for the altar.

ONTARIO'S BANNING OF "PASTURES" BRINGS AVALANCHE OF PROTESTS

Clergymen Line Up with Industry in Protest Against Censor Board's Ruling That Film Is "Sacrilegious"

by J. A. COWAN
in Toronto

"Strangest news of the year," as the Canadian critics dubbed it, was the banning of the film version of "The Green Pastures" (Warner) in Ontario by order of the provincial board of censors, backed up by the personal opinion of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn. Certainly, it has boiled up as the most curious celluloid controversy yet listed on Canadian records.

The picture had been barred throughout England by order of the Lord Chamberlain. The objection was based on the fact that the film portrays the Deity in human form. The Pulitzer Prize winning stage play by Marc Connelly, from which the picture was adapted, was banned in England in 1930 for the same reason.

The Ontario Premier's decision is based on his belief that the film is "an insult to the Christian, church-going people." The Board of Censors has forbidden showings because it was of the belief that the picture would be offensive to clerical and religious circles.

Announcement of the decision produced a whole series of protests which, almost without exception, came from clergymen, social service workers and churchmen of all sorts.

Ontario therefore has been treated to the amazing spectacle of the Legion of Decency and preachers of many denominations rising to the defense of a picture banned on the grounds that it was supposedly sacrilegious.

The distributors, Vitagraph Limited, Warner Brothers' Canadian subsidiary, have taken no part in the furore. They have made no statement to the press beyond saying that no official notification of the ban had been received. The avalanche of protests was entirely spontaneous, without precedent in Canada, and originated among individuals who lined up on the side of the industry.

Given Top Place in the News

The amount of newspaper attention to the subject also sets up a record. In the largest Canadian daily, the protests rated the 8-column front page streamer, thus lifting the affair, as a news story, to the position of the most important censorship yarn yet to break.

Announcement of the ban was made by the Ontario Censor Board. Members of the clergy protested immediately. Premier Hepburn, however, said he had seen the film and was personally in favor of the ban. He did not think that when the film was referred to the Appeal Board, of which he is a member, the ban would be lifted. He described "The Green Pastures" as "silly, ridiculous, insulting to church people," selecting the "ten cent segar" and "kag of likker" lines as examples. But as the volume of protests from clerical and church spokesmen grew in intensity, the Premier intimated that a private showing would be staged for representative clergymen and religious leaders. He carefully avoided binding himself to follow or be influenced by their decision but he did admit that, should they whole-heartedly approve of the film, that might carry some weight with the Appeal Board.

Saw Stage Version

Most of the clergymen quoted based their opinions on the stage version, and a great majority had seen this. Censorship spokesmen intimated that the stage and screen versions differed materially. Another point put forward was that the audiences were different, the film audiences "not as intelligent," and that the story itself was suited to a limited, not a mass clientele. On the other hand, several of those who protested the ban quoted from Legion of Decency and social service reports on the film already issued in the United States.

If the ban is lifted, showings of "The Green Pastures" in Ontario will provide a fine opportunity to get some real concrete evidence on this much-debated problem of the "difference" between film and stage audiences. The implication was that the $2 seat buyers were mentally equipped to appreciate the deep religious motive of the story, its authentic representation in all sincerity of the simple Negro's ideas of "De Lawd," and to accept it all in the spirit in which it was presented. But the 35-cent neighborhood theatre fan, it was intimated, would titter.

CLERGY PROTESTS "PASTURES" BANNING

The action of the board of censors of the Province of Ontario, Canada, in banning "The Green Pastures" on the grounds that it is "sacrilegious," has provoked a storm of condemnation throughout the Dominion, according to Warner Brothers in New York, where it was announced that leaders of many faiths have united in a vigorous protest and a demand that the board rescind its ban.

Reverend Dr. Stanley Russell, one of Toronto's leading clergymen, declared: "The board is inflicting a great wrong on the public."

The Reverend Father M. J. McGrath, secretary of the Ontario Legion of Decency, also protested and pointed out that the Legion in New York City had given it a rank of "Class A-1," the highest rating possible. He quoted the Legion's official report on the picture as follows:

"The story of God, heaven, creation and Biblical incident, as conceived by negroes of the deep south, has been brought to the screen with reverent humor and rich satisfaction. The wide scope of the camera has made possible a more interesting interpretation than the original version, which was confined to the limits of the stage."

Premier Concurs with Board but Intimates That Ministers' Indorsement Might Carry Weight with Appeal Board

Reverend Father A. T. B. Haines, Catholic Vicar-General, addressed an open letter to the Premier urging him to "rescind the ban, for I do not believe the picture contains anything more unedifying than the antics of certain types of preachers."

"From what I saw of the dramatic presentation, there was nothing that might be termed sacrilegious in any part of it," said Dr. John Cockburn, field secretary of the Department of Evangelism and Social Service of the United Church, who added that he could see no reason for the film ban.

Plans Second Sermon

"I will prepare a sermon on this latest move to ban the moving picture version and will preach on the subject Sunday evening," declared Rev. George A. Dickson of Metropolitan United Church. He already had preached one sermon on the play.

One view in opposition was that of Rev. G. A. Leichliter, a Baptist parson, who favored the ban because "the whole tendency of such a movie with movie audiences would be irreverent in the extreme."

Mrs. Adelaide Plumptre, feminine member of Toronto's Board of Aldermen and wife of Canon Plumptre of the Anglican Church, said that "The Green Pastures" was not an irreverent play.

"A reverent and thoughtful audience would see in it only a form of reverent expression but an irreverent and thoughtless one could make it very obnoxious," she said. "I can see the possible objection to it in an ordinary movie show. I can imagine how it would be a very irreverent performance with laughing, giggling people."

Dr. Edmund T. Guest, member of the Board of Education, was quoted along somewhat similar lines.

As for "Intelligence"—

"I did think at the time I saw the play that you had to have a certain amount of intelligence to appreciate it," Dr. Guest said. "Whether the Premier judges his own reaction to it or whether a lot of people haven't sufficient intelligence to appreciate it, I don't know. If there must be censorship and censorship of this particular picture, I could understand it on the ground that it might be beyond the understanding of a great many people who might see it in movie theatres. I don't see anything inconsistent in banning the moving picture and not the play on the legitimate stage, on account of the difference of audiences. In the theatre, you have more thoughtful audiences. In the movies, you have thousands of children and different types of grown-ups altogether."

There is no connection between the ban in England and the present Canadian furore over the film. The English order was made because of the strict regulation which forbids representation of the character of the Deity in a public performance.

An unofficial, private screening was arranged by the exhibitors in Toronto. The comment, after this, was unanimously in favor of the film and against the ban.

"It would have a wholesome influence on those who see it," said J. L. Rutledge, editor of Canadian Magazine. "If there is any heresy or sacrilege in that picture, then we have been taught the same thing at our mothers' knees."

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended June 27, 1936, from 107 theatres in 18 major cities of the country was $978,408, an increase of $55,908 over the total for the preceding week ended June 20, 1936, when 97 theatres in 17 large cities aggregated $922,500.

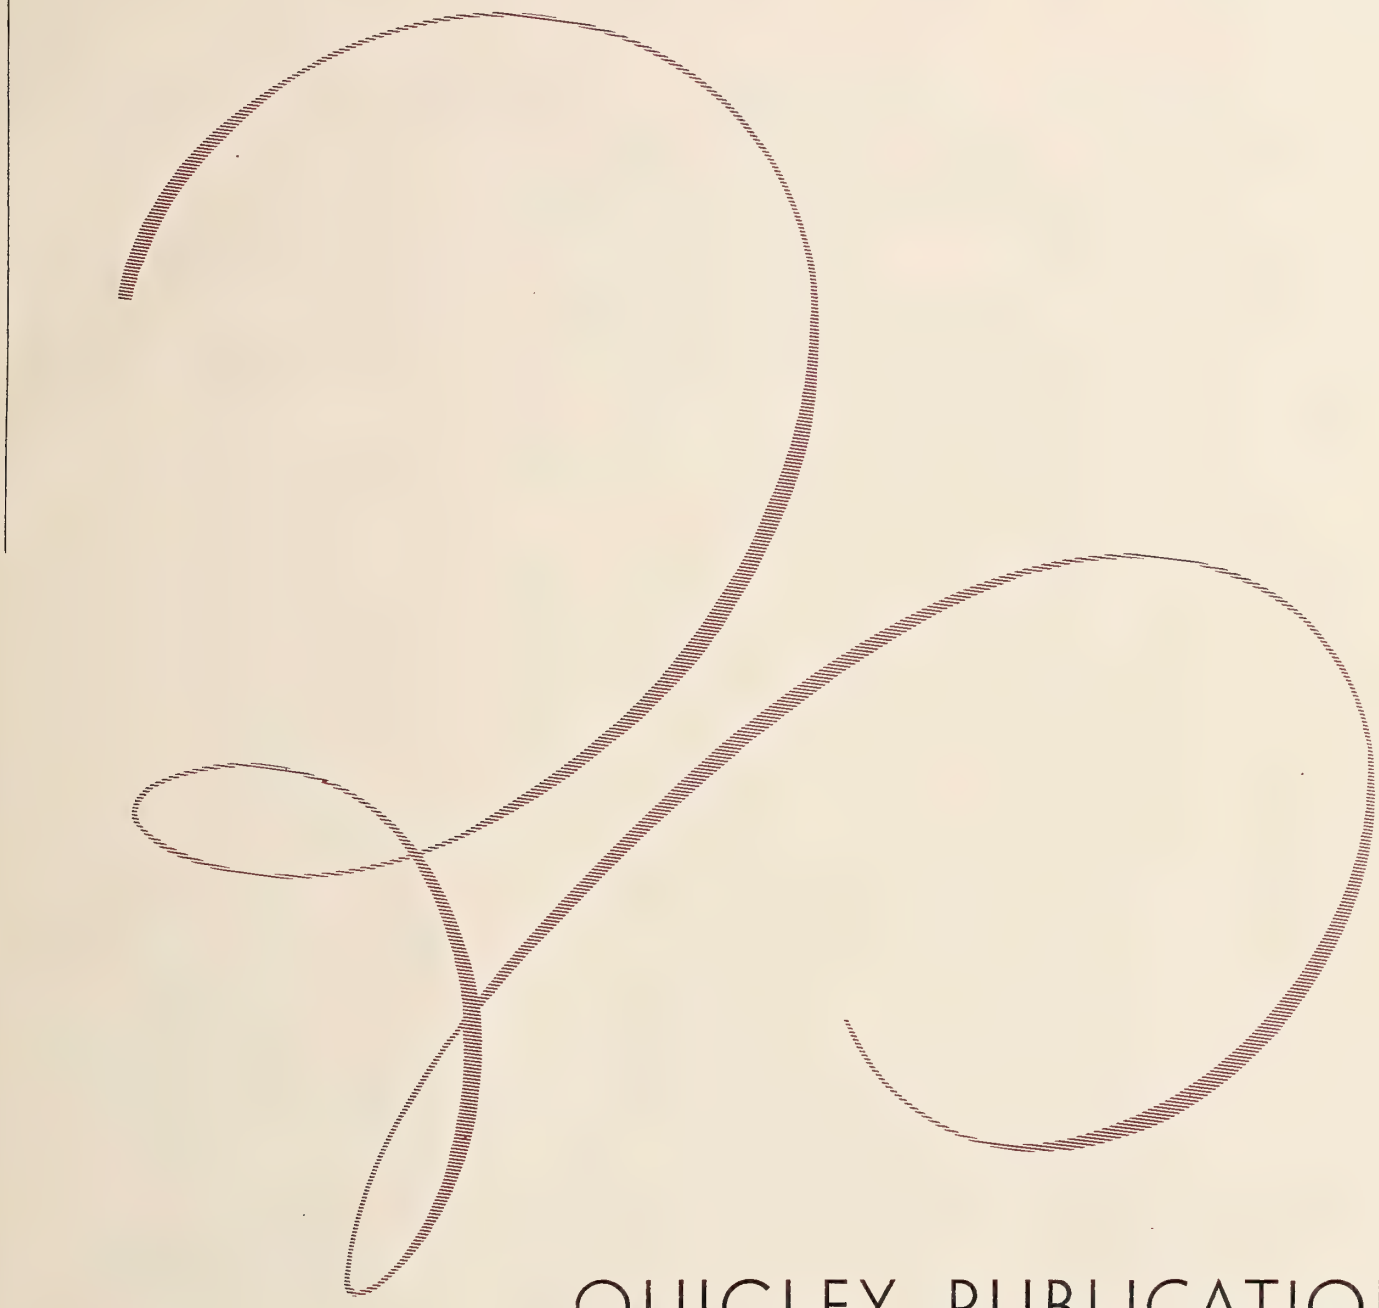
UNEQUALLED



THE record of Super X is unequalled ... both as to the photographic quality it sends to the screen, and the resulting acceptance it enjoys in the industry. Not only in this country, but abroad as well, it rates as the premier motion picture negative of the day. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

VARYING PROPOSALS OF 10 TO 50% QUOTA PLACED BEFORE EMPIRE UNIT

British Films Act Committee Publishes 200,000-Word Blue Book of Testimony of Various Branches of Local Industry

by BRUCE ALLEN
in London

Published as a Blue Book of 96 pages, at the price of 9/-, the "Minutes of Evidence taken before the Departmental Committee on Cinematograph Films" is one of the most massive, as well as one of the most important, official publications ever to be issued in connection with the British industry.

Even without the evidence of the Kinematograph Renters Society, which has still to be presented, and with its contents limited to the first four sittings of the Committee, the Blue Book contains something like 200,000 words, covering formal statements from various interested bodies and a verbatim report of the examination of their delegates by the Committee. Added are detailed tables and masses of statistics covering every aspect of the industry.

Statements From Five Groups

The statements reproduced were submitted by:

The Board of Trade, the official department responsible for the administration of the Films Act.

The Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, representing British production companies.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, which includes practically every theatre owner in the U. K.

The Association of Cine-Technicians, speaking for skilled studio labor.

Associated Realist Film Producers a group of "Documentary" producers.

Omitting the Board of Trade, which presented a historical statement of the inception of the Films Act and official data as to the conditions created by its operation since 1927, each of these bodies made definite suggestions for the extension, limitation or revision of the Act.

The F.B.I. Suggestions

The F.B.I. Film Group suggests:

Extension of the Act for a further ten years.

Revision of the incidence of the Quota from a percentage of all films distributed or exhibited to a percentage of the foreign films so handled.

Films to be classified as eligible for renters' quota or exhibitors' quota or both.

Feature films registered for renters' quota to cost, subject to a reservation to be mentioned, as a minimum £2,500 per 1,000 feet reel, or £15,000 as a whole.

Shorts to be governed by a minimum cost of £500 per reel.

Any film registered for renters' quota which has cost less than the above amounts to carry, as a trailer at its beginning and end, a notice to the effect that

"This picture is a Renters' Quota Film acquired by Messrs. ..... to enable them to distribute foreign films."

A similar description to appear on all publicity matter, invoices, etc., referring to the film.

Renters' Quota to be increased as follows:

Under New Act	New Quota Percentage	Equivalent on Present Basis Percentage
1st year	29	22.5
2nd year	33	25
3rd year	38	27.5
4th year	43	30
5th year	48	32.5
6th and subsequent	54	35
Exhibitors' Quota:
1st year	25	20
2nd year	29	22.5
3rd year	33	25
4th year	38	27.5
5th year	43	30
6th year	50	33.3

Various other suggestions of less importance were made by the Film Group, including abolition of the clause demanding that the scenario writer of a British film shall be British, and of the present right of films made in the British Dominions to rank for British quota.

The CEA suggestions are, in main:

Reduction of the present exhibition quota of 20 per cent to 10 per cent.

Establishment of the principle that a 2:1 ratio should exist between distribution and exhibition quotas.

No minimum cost clause, on the grounds that it would put the small producer out of business, but a standard of quality in British quota films to be secured by a special Committee, which would approve the entertainment standard of all films previous to registration.

No new Act to be for a longer period than five years, or the Board of Trade to be given powers to vary the quota.

Chief points advocated by the Technicians were:

A minimum cost of £12,000 for features of 6,000 feet or over and of £2 a foot for shorter films.

The existing clause demanding that 75 per cent of production salaries shall go to British subjects to be revised to apply to technicians only, excluding carpenters, electricians, etc.

Not more than one foreign technician, of any type, to be employed on any picture. (If a foreign cameraman is employed, for instance, all other technicians to be British.)

Renters' quota to increase progressively to 25 per cent in 1942. Exhibitors' quota, to 12½ per cent in same period.

"Documentary" Interests' Proposals

The Documentary producing interests ask:

That full quota status should be granted to documentary films of all length where they have "National, Empire and Cultural values." Suggested for exclusion from quota are newsreels, advertising films and trailers, as at present.

During the examination of the various witnesses there were several references to a suggestion that, in buying cheap British pictures, American companies had a desire definitely to damage British production.

Problem of "Empire" Films

R. D. Fenelly, of the Board of Trade, on being asked why socalled "Empire" films, cheaply made and acquired for quota, were not bought by British but by foreign controlled companies, answered that "they are, in general, poor films."

Dr. Mallon, a member of the Committee, then asked:

"About these American companies; they are not interested in the production of good English films; that we can understand. Would you put it higher than that and say they are interested in the production of bad English films? Answer: "No, I would not put that against them."

"Then there is no reason to suppose that they do desire to go about and secure that the reputation of the English film is lowered?" Answer: "That has been alleged, but it is difficult, of course, to get any proof of a thing like that . . . We are always hearing that American renters are to make good films here. At times some of them have made an effort."

"So far as bad British films go about the world, the Americans have no responsibility for them?" Answer: "I have no doubt they export their poor British films to the Dominions."

Further questions of alleged American animus against British films were raised in regard to the practice in some West End theatres of showing the British quota footage first thing in the morning, with only scrub-ladies in the theatre and last thing at night, but it seemed that the practice was one also adopted by British exhibitors who had found a shortage of good British films.

A similar passage took place during the hearing of evidence from T. H. Fligelstone, president, and W. R. Fuller, secretary, of the CEA,

CONSULS PROTEST DUBBED FILM SKIT

A motion picture designed to precede the appearance of the vaudeville team of Olsen and Johnson, appearing at the RKO-Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco, has brought protests from the acting German consul general and the Italian consul general.

The picture is a series of newsreel performances of Queen Marie of Rumania, Hitler and Mussolini, with voices of screen and radio stars dubbed in on the sound track. Queen Marie is shown making an address from a balcony but her voice is distinctly that of Mae West. Mussolini, also on a balcony, bursts forth in violent oratory but the voice belongs to Andy of Amos 'n' Andy. Hitler extols the Olsen and Johnson show in a Jewish dialect.

The consuls general complained to Mayor Rossi, who referred the matter to the police department. A morals squad office viewed the picture but decided the film did not come under the department's jurisdiction.

Several Witnesses and Officials Debate the Charges of Anti-British Bias of the American Producers and British Public who had quoted a definite prejudice against British films in Scotland and in certain districts of London. The question was asked:

"How far would it be right to say that it is the foreign and Jewish elements in these parts of London which are mainly responsible for that particular feeling?" Answer: "That is not so. I have a theatre at Walthamstow. I believe that the population of Walthamstow is practically 99 per cent non-Jewish and they resent British films there."

"Is it fairly accurate to say that most Jews in all branches of the industry here and abroad trace their origin to a common mid-European bloc and they have a natural antipathy to the British outlook as represented in the films?" Answer (by Mr. Fuller): "No, the British films, a good many of them, are produced by these people."

Major Bell on America

Providing something of a refreshing change from the returned British traveler who goes all lyrical about Hollywood and other places your side, Major Charles H. Bell had some critical things to say about American film institutions, as a result of his recent trip over. Writing in the Cinematograph Times he declared, in the first instance, that "admission prices are definitely too low for economic operation," leading to the situation that theatres more elaborate than any we have are "suffering terribly from the want of new carpets, chairs and decoration," and, in the second, that many houses "were not even kept in what we would call a clean condition, due to the necessity of employing the minimum amount of staff."

"Consequential, at least partly, on these facts, was the fact that he "found little or no progress" technically, because "there has been practically no building of theatres in the United States for the past five years."

Contrasting the theatre and the studio sides, he found that in Hollywood "enormous progress has been made during the same period."

After investigating the American television situation he expressed the view that "it is not going materially to affect the existing form of cinematograph entertainment for some time to come."

Major Bell, for many years consulting engineer to Paramount British Theatres, is one of the principals of the Amalgamated Studios now in erection at Elstree and scheduled on completion to offer serviced floor space at rates which may give the existing plants food for thought.

Feature Cuts a Problem

The practice of some exhibitors of eliminating footage in order to bring two-feature programs within reasonable time limits, recently attacked in the Cinema, is now attracting the attention of the general press, and patron views are forthcoming which indicate the development of a possibly dangerous situation.

Outstanding are the assertions that as much as 2,500 feet has been eliminated from a feature and that discrepancies between the same film as seen in the West End and in the neighborhoods are well recognized by London fans, and are the subject of complaint from them.

It is likely that the Kinematograph Renters' Society will take steps to cope with the practice, which obviously threatens to affect public confidence very seriously. Contract conditions forbid mutilation of any sort and, in the Inspection Department created to check up exhibitors' takings, the KRS appears to possess machinery to deal with this problem.

When J. H. Seidelman, Columbia foreign manager, talked to the trade press this week he added another definition to the many which his hearers recently had heard applied to color. In the eyes of Harry Cohn, he said, color was a "technical necessity" in the case of certain scenes and it should be used like any other inevitable accessory, that is to say, strictly in accord with the demands of subject matter. Obviously, this implies a very much more reserved policy on the part of Columbia than has been implied by most of our other recent visitors, who seem to differ only as to the exact date at which the "all-color" epoch will dawn.

Mr. Seidelman did not avoid the logical deduction to be made from this statement of policy; Columbia, he said, certainly would not make a feature all-color simply because certain scenes would be better in color, but would mix black and white and color in the same picture.

Accompanied by Joe Friedman, managing director of Columbia in London—whose contribution to the color discussion was a pertinent request to be told of a poor picture made into a good one by color—Mr. Seidelman is starting immediately a Continental tour with Columbia conventions in Madrid, Rome and Paris as its high spots. He will be in Europe for three or four months.

Empire Quota Talks Due

Conferences in regard to the quota situation in Australia between B. S. D. Stevens, Prime Minister of New South Wales, and the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, are seen likely during Mr. Stevens' current stay in London. There already have been informal talks between the Australian statesman and Neville Kearney, secretary of the Film Group.

An outstanding grievance of British producers is that, for purposes of exhibition quota, British films and American alike rank as "imported," and have to be covered by Australian footage. In England, for purposes of British quota, Australian films rank as British. Hints that this classification might be revised were heard when the Australian quota was imposed; unfortunately for British producers, Australian films have no British market to lose.

Possibly to be discussed between the FBI and Mr. Stevens is the "Empire Quota" system recently advocated by Ernest Turnbull of British Dominions Films of Australia. This provides for a 25 per cent quota, of which 5 per cent must be local footage and the other 20 per cent produced in any part of the British Empire.

37 Billion Feet of Film

Official figures issued by the Board of Trade, summarizing returns made by exhibitors under the provisions of the Cinematograph Films Act, show that the footage of film exhibited in the year ended Sept. 30, 1935, was 37,520,000,000. This figure covers the 4,700 theatres in the United Kingdom and represents not actual film used but footage exhibited, counting each run on its footage basis.

Of this total 9,575,000,000 feet exhibited was British; the percentage of the total, 25.5, compares with 26.1 in 1934. The legal exhibition quota was only 15 per cent. Feature footage exhibited was 33,498,000,000, and of this 9,406,000,000 was British, a percentage of 28.1 against 28.4 in 1934.

Marx Brothers On Tour

The Marx Brothers are on a personal appearance tour with scenes which will be incorporated in their next vehicle, "A Day at the Races." Sam Wood will direct the picture, which has a racetrack and a lunatic asylum as settings.

Theatre Owners In Southeastern Group Plan Frolic

The Southeastern Association of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors affiliates include announcement of the annual convention and frolic of the Southeastern Association at Jacksonville, Fla., for August 2nd, 3rd and 4th. The affair is being held in Florida for the second consecutive year and an attendance even better than the total of 300 who were present last year is expected.

The program, incomplete at present, includes registration for Sunday, August 2nd; speeches and the business session for Sunday evening; a golf tournament on Monday at Ponte Vedra and a shore dinner and dance Monday night. Tuesday evening there will be a banquet and dance at the Carling Hotel. Milton C. Moore, Riverside Theatre, Jacksonville, is general chairman and Nat Williams, Rose Theatre, Thomasville, Ga., is in charge of publicity.

The latest bulletin of the New England branch of Allied urges members to contract for the 18 Chesterfield-Invincible pictures this season. The bulletin said in part:

"The present shortage of pictures, which has created a sellers' market, must be cracked down upon by every independent exhibitor if he expects to have a profitable business investment in the future. We state most emphatically that failure on your part to go for this deal will convince Allied that you are satisfied with present market conditions and that you no longer have need of an organization."

Nebraska and Iowa exhibitors meeting at Omaha, Neb., this week discussed the ten point plan proposed by Edward Kuykendall, national president of Allied. Mr. Kuykendall, in an address to the exhibitors, told of the progress made during his three months of negotiations with distributors and explained how much the organization hopes to accomplish as a result of the parleys. David Palfreyman of Affiliated Theatres, who accompanied Mr. Kuykendall from Chicago to the meeting, gave a short informal talk.

Emanuel Rolsky, president of Independent Theatre Owners, has called a meeting of members and former members for July 6th in Kansas City to discuss clearance for the new season's product. The organization has not been active for several months.

Legislation was the theme of the 18th annual convention of the Kansas and Missouri Theatre Association in Kansas City this week. President John Staped addressed the gathering, as did Harry Sharpe, secretary of Associated Industries of Kansas. Ed Kuykendall spoke on dual bills and Dave Palfreyman's talk concerned problems of inimical legislation.

Regional meetings are probable this fall on legislation obstacles in both Kansas and Missouri.

34 UNITED ARTISTS FEATURES COMING FOR THE NEW SEASON

Election of Mary Pickford as Permanent President Expected to Follow Sales Convention This Week in Los Angeles

United Artists will release 34 features, 9 Walt Disney Mickey Mouse cartoons and 9 Silly Symphonies in the new season, delegates to the company's annual sales convention in the Hotel Ambassador at Los Angeles were told Wednesday at the three-day meeting by George Schaefer, vice-president in charge of sales. Mr. Schaefer presided over the sessions. The producers who will contribute to the new lineup include Samuel Goldwyn with plans for seven, Walter Wanger with eight, Selznick International, which is absorbing Pioneer, with six or so, Pickford-Lasky with five or six, and Alexander Korda's London Films will send over six from England. Among other possibilities is a Paulette Goddard vehicle produced by Charles Chaplin as one of two he will present. Douglas Fairbanks is not expected to be represented.

Miss Pickford, who has been serving as temporary president of the company, is expected to be elected to the post permanently at a board meeting immediately following the sales meeting. The board usually meets in July. At the same time, it was announced that following completion of the second picture of the company, "The World Is Mine," Pickford-Lasky Productions temporarily will suspend activities. Miss Pickford plans a trip to Europe on business for United Artists. Mr. Lasky will maintain his offices at the United Artists studio in Hollywood.

Closely following repeated denials, John Hay Whitney said late last week that plans for the absorption of Pioneer Pictures by Selznick International rapidly were drawing to a consummation. Mr. Whitney is slated to be chairman of the board, David O. Selznick, president, and Merian C. Cooper, vice-president. Henry Ginsberg will continue as general manager of production. All the product will bear the Selznick International trademark and will be divided half in Technicolor and half in black and white. Except for a single Technicolor feature which is due RKO, all product will revert to the distribution channels of United Artists.

More than 50 representing both domestic and foreign sales territories were present for the opening session, on Tuesday. Five district managers and 32 branch managers were included in this total, as well as the home office contingent consisting of Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign sales; Harry D. Buckley, vice-president in charge of corporate affairs; Harry Gold, assistant to Mr. Schaefer; James Mulvey, eastern representative for Samuel Goldwyn; Lowell Calvert, eastern representative for Selznick International and Pioneer; Edward Raftery, member of the United Artists board of directors; Paul Lazarus; L. Jack Schlaifer, eastern district sales manager; Monroe Greenthal, advertising and publicity manager; Sam Cohen, foreign publicity director; Hal Sloane, Disney New York representative, and Morris Helprin of the publicity department. Maurice Silverstone, managing director of United Artists in England also is attending, as are Haskell Masters, Charles M. Steele, and N. A. Thompson, and Emanuel Silverstone, American representative of Alexander Korda.

Crediting newspaper advertising for a 40 per cent increase in theatre attendance for the current year, Mr. Schaefer made the pre-convention announcement that his company would spend $2,500,000 in newspaper advertising during the forthcoming year.

"I cannot emphasize too strongly the value of newspaper advertising," he said, "for in my recent survey of key cities of the east I found that where liberal newspaper space was taken to advertise our productions, theatres within a radius of 100 miles of those cities showed an increase in receipts."

Six pictures will be released between August 15 and October 1. The pictures are "The Last of the Mohicans," produced by Reliance; "Dodsworth," from Samuel Goldwyn; "The Man Who Could Work Miracles," from Alexander Korda; "Come and Get It," from Goldwyn; 'The World Is Mine" from Pickford-Lasky and "The Garden of Allah," Selznick-International.

Players to appear on the United Artists roster for the coming season, all under contract to the various producer members of the company for one or more pictures are:

Practically all the individual producers have tentative programs already lined up for production during the coming season. Those pictures which already are down on the schedules are as follows:

Charles Chaplin

Paulette Goddard starring vehicle to be directed and produced by Charles Chaplin.

Goldwyn

DODSWORTH, based on the novel by Sinclair Lewis and the stage play by Sidney Howard who has also adapted the work for the screen. Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Paul Lukas and Mary Astor are in the cast. William Wyler is directing.

COME AND GET IT, from Edna Ferber's novel with the leading roles played by Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer, Mady Christians, Walter Brennan, Andrea Leeds and Mary Nash. Howard Hawks is directing the screen play by Jane Murfin and Jules Furthman.

PONY BOY, starring Eddie Cantor and with the Goldwyn Girls featured.

SHAKE HANDS WITH MURDER, by Joseph F. Dineen, prominent newspaperman. Kubec Glasman and Martin Mooney did the screen play.

WOMEN CAN BE WRONG, starring Miriam Hopkins.

IN LOVE AND WAR, starring Merle Oberon, written by John Balderston. Miriam Hopkins will also be starred in another unnamed film.

Pickford-Lasky

THE WORLD IS MINE, a romance of Mexico with Nino Martini, Ida Lupino and Leo Carrillo. Directed by Rouben Mamoulian.

Selznick International

THE GARDEN OF ALLAH, in Technicolor and starring Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer with a supporting cast of Basil Rathbone, C. Aubrey Smith, Joseph Schildkraut and Tilly Losch. Richard Boleslawski is directing.

TOM SAWYER, taken from Mark Twain's classic of American literature.

THE MAN WITH A YOUNG WIFE, with Edward Arnold.

JULIUS CAESAR, OR, THE WORLD'S ILLUSION, with Ronald Colman to star in whichever story is chosen.

Completing the Selznick schedule will be a Technicolor story to be selected and two unnamed films in black and white.

Alexander Korda

REMBRANDT, starring Charles Laughton with Gertrude Lawrence and Elsa Lanchester in prominent roles. Alexander Korda himself directs.

KNIGHT WITHOUT ARMOR, story by James Hilton starring Marlene Dietrich.

I, CLAUDIUS, starring Charles Laughton and Merle Oberon.

THE DIVORCE OF LADY X, starring Merle Oberon.

THE MAN WHO COULD WORK MIRACLES, starring Roland Young.

DARK JOURNEY, starring Miriam Hopkins and Conrad Veidt and produced under the direction of Victor Saville.

Walter Wanger

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT, by Gene Towne and Graham Baker, will have Charles Boyer as its star.

VOGUES OF 1937, a behind-the-scenes story of the world of fashions.

THREE TIMES A LOSER, with Spencer Tracy, Sylvia Sidney and Henry Fonda.

ARABIAN NIGHTS, Technicolor production with Charles Boyer, Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda and Madeleine Carroll.

A WOMAN LOVES ONCE.

DESERT INTRIGUE, from the novel by Alfred Batson.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS, from the novel by Emily Bronte, with Sylvia Sidney and Charles Boyer.

Reliance

THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS, from James Fenimore Cooper's novel. Directed by George B. Seitz, the cast includes Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Heather Angel, Henry Wilcoxon, Phillip Reed, Bruce Cabot, Hugh Buckler and Robert Barrat.

Bergner

DREAMING LIPS, starring Elisabeth Bergner and directed by Dr. Paul Czinner.

Criterion

ACCUSED, starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Dolores Del Rio.

HIGH TREASON, original story by Adela Rogers St. John, starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Walt Disney will be represented on the United Artists schedule by his annual output of nine Mickey Mouse productions and nine Silly Symphonies, all produced in Technicolor.

General Theatre Plan Completed

Newly issued securities of the reorganized General Theatres Equipment, Inc., are scheduled to be ready for distribution on Monday according to Arthur W. Loasby, chairman of the reorganization committee. The governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange this week approved the application of the company to list 754,105½ shares of no-par capital stock.

The reorganization plan which has been approved by the Chancery Court, Wilmington, provides that for each $1,000 principal amount of debentures and for each $1,024 of secured indebtedness there will be issued 10 shares of capital stock of the corporation and an option warrant to purchase 1¾ units of capital stock of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation. These units consist of two shares of preferred and one common.

Mr. Loasby said that approximately 92 per cent of the holders of the company's debt are participating. Voting trust certificates for about 81 per cent of the preferred stock and about 70 per cent of the common have been deposited.

Trailer Interest To Be Sold

The rights and interests of David O'Malley as assignee in DeLuxe Trailers, Inc., will be sold at auction in the offices of his attorney, Alfred Englander, at 11 Broadway, New York City, on July 8th.

(A) I am afraid many of you did not look up this matter in your Bluebook. This is a Bluebook school first of all, gentlemen, and is carried forward largely for the purpose of helping you to use the book efficiently. Rau and Evans answer correctly, as follows:

"It is important, in a circuit carrying alternating current, that the impedance of the input circuit be equal to that of the output circuit. If the impedances be equal, the maximum of power will then be transmitted, which is especially important where both voltage and current is extremely low, as is the case in certain sound circuits."

J. R. Prater answers, "In order to obtain maximum efficiency in a circuit carrying a. c., it is necessary that the impedance of the circuit from which the power comes, match that of the circuit to which it is delivered. For instance, in a sound amplifier circuit transferring power from the secondary of an output transformer of one stage, to the primary of the input transformer of the next stage, if the input primary has either more or less impedance than the output secondary to which it is connected, there then will be less power in watts flowing into the input primary than would be the case were the impedance of both equal. Since every amplifier of size used in projection has several voice a. c. circuits, connected together in the form of a complete chain of amplification, a slight loss of power due to mismatch impedance in each separate circuit would result in large total power loss."

(B) It did not seem to me that any one of the great mass of answers to this question fully filled the bill, though several possessed consid- We therefore offer you our definition and explanation, as follows:

"Definition: An electrical filter is a device for separating, selecting, or rejecting, electrical currents or voltages on the basis of frequency difference.

"Operation: An electrical filter usually consists of inductors or capacitors, or a combination of both. Its operation is based upon two principles: (1) that the current through an inductor is impeded directly proportional to the frequency and displaced 90 electrical degrees behind the applied voltage; (2) that the current through a capacitor is impeded inversely proportional to the frequency and displaced 90 electrical degrees in advance of the applied voltage. By judicious connection and selection of capacitor and inductor values the individual components of an electrical current comprising of two or more frequency components, can be separated, selected or rejected as desired. The frequency of direct currents, as applied to electrical filters, is considered to be zero.

(C) F. H. and L. Klar reply, "Before painting or recoating a screen, it is first necessary to determine whether or not the material to be used will adhere to the old surface. In making this test, one corner of the screen (preferably, for convenience, a lower one) should be selected and some of the material (paint or whatever it is) applied, which may be washed off with a cloth moistened with turpentine if results are unsatisfactory.

"Upon some old surfaces new paint will, as painters say, 'crawl,' which means it will retreat from some sections as soon as applied, gathering on other sections. This also is true of water colors if the old surface have the least tendency to oiliness. In such case it is best to coat something other than the screen with a light coating of white shellac, let it dry out thoroughly (which it will do in a short time) and apply the proposed screen coating. If it adheres, O. K.; then coat the whole screen with shellac and then coat the same with the paint, or what-have-you. Warning: Do not use brown shellac. Use white instead, as the brown is hard to cover with white. At the dealers just ask for 'white shellac."

Diplomas To Be Given

For a considerable while it has seemed to me "students" of the Bluebook School should have some material evidence that they have passed through the course of study and emerged with honor. Therefore, after consultation with Mr. Martin Quigley, it has been agreed that a suitable "diploma," handsomely made up and of suitable size for framing, will be issued to each "student" who has consistently sent in acceptable answers.

I therefore ask that each present Bluebook School "student" transmit, on a separate sheet of paper, with his next answer, the date (question number will do) of his entry in the "school."

Contact! Gaumont-British Flies All Its Newsreels to First-Runs

Code Telegrams to United Kingdom Exhibitors Flash Time on Arrival

Twice weekly Gaumont-British fleet planes take off from Heston Airport, London, carrying the company's newsreel by three air routes to first-run exhibitors of the United Kingdom as delivery telegrams flash to subscribers key letters denoting exact time of arrival.

Thirty minutes later the pilot on Route 3 lands his ship at Portsmouth, sets out films for theatres in Southampton, Cosport, Southsea and Gosham, wings on to landing fields at Bournemouth, Bristol, Cardiff, Torquay and Plymouth. Plane No. 2, covering the most mileage, flutters to its hangar in Glasgow, last of nine stops, 3 hours and 50 minutes out of London. Flight 1 serves 53 towns 'round about Birmingham, Leicester, Nottingham, Sheffield, Doncaster, Manchester, Liverpool, Chester, Stoke, Blackpool and Lancaster in a total lapsed time of 2 hours and 45 minutes.

Planes leave London on time schedules lettered A to K. The letters correspond to the hours from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., takeoffs being determined by shipping availability of the semi-weekly releases (which the British, with equal authority, describe as bi-weekly). All regular editions are handled in this manner. A convenient time table, a portion of which is reproduced herewith, tells exhibitors—who quickly learn the hours the key letters stand for—precisely when he may expect his newsreel, conditions being ordinary. For this is ordinary service. The planes are not idle between editions.

The Gaumont-British News breaks down the United Kingdom into six zones. It masquerades as the Gaumont-Irish News in a seventh. Events of sufficient sectional interest are filmed for newsreel supplements and flown to theatres in the affected areas for addition to the generally distributed footage. Events of national importance breaking between normal deadlines call for special squadron flights. In these cases delivery telegrams notifying of dispatch and arrival times also describe the new material, enabling exhibitors to advertise it if they will. Some of them do. Gaumont-British awards prizes for superior exploitation of its newsreel, also—such is Albion—for superior projection.

Does all this pay?

Jeffery Bernerd, in charge of all G-B production, says it does.

The company claim as to distribution is the servicing of 1,500 theatres out of a possible 4,000, not counting the kinemas (their word for them) of the Gaumont-British circuit itself. Minimum first-run rental is $50 throughout the United Kingdom, $75 in the West End section of London. The multiplication table operates in the same way, gives the same total result, on either side of the Atlantic.

Regular editions of the newsreel come in 900 feet (10 minutes) and contain 15 subjects on an average. More feet and fewer subjects are provided when King Edward VIII dedicates a bridge or something like that. But you needn't take the regular edition, if you're a small operator, because the company turns out a 500-foot edition (they wouldn't say tabloid) for your special benefit. Big or little, you have five weeks in which to exhibit the reel before it is withdrawn, and if you don't want it at all, long or short, there are four competitor reels to choose from.

Competition in England is not quite what it is in the United States. The pooling system of news coverage, discussed on this side prior to the national political conventions and dismissed as impracticable just now, is in effect in England. Newsreels take appointed turn in covering events unsusceptible to "scoop" technique and prints are distributed among them impartially.

How fast does the system function? The company cites two favorite examples:

Best, perhaps, is that of the Queen Mary and the English Derby. The boat left Southampton at noon of the day on which the race was run at 3 o'clock at Epsom Downs. The company developed, printed and titled the film in its own laboratory, dispatched it by plane to Cherbourg in time to catch the Queen Mary as it touched there and give the merry passengers a screening of the race at 10 o'clock that evening. Nice—eh, what?

Not so good, on points, is the case of the Derby-winner picked by Carleton Knight, while substituting for Mr. Bernerd during his stay in this country. Mr. Knight saw the newsfilm showing Mahmout left at the post in the Two Thousand Guineas race and coming on to finish second by a neck. He included the shots in a pre-Derby release and tipped (touted is a fine old Anglo-Saxon word) the horse to win, which it did at 12 to 1, establishing a first for that sort of thing in newsreel history. The planes had nothing to do with that, turning out as it did, but would have been mighty convenient for Mr. Knight if Mahmout had let him down.

Thomas Campbell Black, aviation manager of Gaumont-British News, won the Mansfield Trophy in 1929 and 1930 for the most meritorious flights in East Africa, received the Royal Aeronautical Society Silver Medal and the Royal Aero Club Gold Medal, not to mention various cups and decorations tending to indicate that he ought to know how to get a picture punctually to the Empire Kinema at Barrow-in-Furness. The sales manager, Squadron Leader Richard G. Shaw, won the Distinguished Flying Cross during the last war and can write A.A.F. (Auxiliary Air Force) after his name when he signs a letter. He's the gentleman exhibitors complain to if something goes wrong with the gas line of the plane on Flight 1 between Leicester and Nottingham.

The use of planes for newsreel delivery is not precedential of course. American newsreels use the airlines frequently, but maintenance of a plane squadron in this country would involve considerations made up in more or less equal parts of overhead (no pun) and distance.

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Butler, Missouri

Dear Herald:

If you should ever want to see Missouri (and everybody ought to see her) you should do it on rubber tires as we have and not try to hitch-hike as we saw a few doing. We started in the state at the southwest corner and went to the northeast corner. We traveled the Ozarks for two days and we also traveled the northern and central parts and are now in the middle western part and are still running at large, which would indicate that the officers are a little slack in their duties.

Washington is what one might call a solid town. It is solid in several ways. It is located on solid ground on the south bank of the Missouri river and the buildings are almost entirely build of brick. The business houses are of brick, the residences are mostly of brick, and it impressed us as a brick town of something like six thousand Missourians, not counting the mules, although we didn't see any mules. It looked like a good town to us and no doubt does to the Washington folks.

We called at Warrenton and had a very nice visit with W. T. Zimmerman, who operates the Vita theatre. We could not remember having ever been in the town before but Mr. Zimmerman recollected that we had called on him sometime back. He was busy putting in a washed air cooling system in his theatre and making other improvements for the comfort of his customers, although we thought he had already provided for that, as he had a very fine theatre, but his theory seemed to be that nothing was too good for his patrons.

Mr. Zimmerman is a very strong booster for the HERALD and he expressed the opinion that nobody could very well operate a theatre as it should be operated without it. We have found a lot more of the boys who hold to that same view. Warrenton is undoubtedly a good show town, as it has several factories which employ quite a number of men, in addition to the agricultural feature. Our guess is that he will do a very good business.

Bowling Green isn't the Bowling Green mentioned in our history of the eastern states, but it is the Bowling Green of Missouri and it has a theatre operated by T. J. Bankhead, and T. J. was putting in a cooling system when we called. T. J. Bankhead and W. T. Zimmerman were two theatremen we found working, strange as that may sound to you, but it is a fact. Our impression is that when T. J. gets through remodeling his theatre Bowling Green will have a playhouse to be proud of.

Jevver cross the Mississippi River at Louisiana, Missouri? Well, when you get to Louisiana don't cross, but stop at the Clark theatre and visit Russel Armentrout, for you will find a theatre and a manager that you will want to write home about. Not only that but you will find Russel about the swellest guy you ever met and you will see a picture in his theatre that will be the best that Hollywood can put out, and then maybe Russsel will go catfishing with you, too. He didn't go catfishing with us, but he did go down to the bank and identified us, or otherwise we might have had to walk part of the way home.

We never expect to visit this state again without coming to this town of Butler, and when we get here we will most surely visit the Fisk theatre, for it is a theatre one should never miss and one that Missouri should be proud of. Charles L. Fisk, who manages it and Mrs. Fisk, who presides at the box office, are two very delightful folks that make one feel right at home and glad that he is connected with the business. Mr. Fisk is an oldtime theatrical trouper and has been on the stage with many of the famous stars in bygone days. He told us that he is contemplating building another theatre in Butler and this would indicate that business was sufficient to warrant it.

Mrs. Rolla Booth operates the Booth opera house at Rich Hill. We didn't get to see Mrs. Booth but we did meet and had a very nice visit with her son, who is her assistant. Mrs. Booth is the oldest operator, in point of service, there is in Missouri. She owned and operated the first theatre in the state at Rich Hill and has continued in the theatre business there ever since. She opened her theatre there in 1908, and if any others can beat that we'd like to hear from them. Her theatre is one of the shining spots of the state.

La Plata is another town in Missouri you shouldn't miss, not that it is such a very big town, but because of the very nice theatre there that is operated by G. Green. We found Mr. Green in the dentist's chair with the dentist working over him with a pair of tongs and a sledge-hammer trying to locate which tooth ought to be extracted. We had a dentist work on our jaw once until he yanked 'em all out before he found the one that ought to be extracted. Since then we haven't cared very much how many of them they sent to the penitentiary. We hope Green lives. Mrs. Green took us down and showed us their theatre, which, by the way, is a very nice theatre for a town the size of La Plata. We had a very lovely visit with them and we wish them good luck and hope to see them again some time.

We found a theatre named "Pal." Jevver hear of a theatre by that name before? Over at Viborg, South Dakota, we found a theatre named "Glud." Well, the Pal theatre is located at Palmyra and is operated by James H. Wesley. Mr. Wesley is going to make some very important improvements in his theatre, and by the way these Missouri boys are improving their theatres one is led to the conclusion that either business is good or they have a hopeful outlook for the future.

We wish we could remember the name of the man who operates the Civic theatre at Brookfield, but remembering names is one of the thousands of things we can't do, and we failed to set his name down in our address book. The time we met him before he was operating a theatre in Monett, Missouri, and Monett is down where they grow strawberries, and other good things. Meeting him was just like meeting our long lost Uncle from South Africa, although we never had an Uncle in South Africa. We wish that all theatres were managed by as swell managers as he is. Doggone this thing of not being able to remember names anyhow.

Kansas City, Missouri

Dear Herald:

This town has something like 350,000 folks, mostly Missourians. The village was built on the east bank of the Kaw river and the south bank of the Missouri creek. Both streams are well stocked with catfish and that made it an ideal place for a town. Kansas City, Kansas, is located on the west bank of the Kaw river and the river divides the two towns, which made it necessary to build a bridge across the Kaw so the folks on the east side could get over there to do their trading.

Kansas City, Kansas, has something like 150,000 people, mostly Jayhawkers, and both towns wave the Stars and Stripes on July 4th while the small boys are shooting firecrackers in the alleys.

If they had built Kansas City, Missouri, on the west bank of the Kaw, just see what a town it would have been, but Missouri might not have liked that, and maybe Kansas would have kicked about it, too. Well, anyhow, they are both good towns and it was none of our business where they located 'em, so we will take it all back.

We drove into Kansas City, Missouri, to meet some old friends we used to know, and while they pretended to be glad that we called, we wonder if they were not glad when we left, although we didn't touch 'em for anything.

Frank Hensler, manager of M-G-M, used to manage the Omaha office, and we had a habit of making Frank's office our headquarters when in Omaha and when the authorities weren't looking. Frank seemed about the same as of old and he seemed glad we called on him. He offered to go our bail, should we require any, and we presume he would have furnished us with beans and sowbelly if we would have mentioned it, but we didn't, although we hadn't had anything to eat since day after tomorrow. We also met John A. Muchmore, office manager and general adviser of Frank, who impressed us as a pretty fine boy, although we had never met him before. Our foggy judgment inclines us to the belief that MGM couldn't have made a better selection for their Kansas City office than these two boys, but we wish Frank would come back to Omaha.

Then we met two others, C. A. Schultz and O. K. Mason, owners of the Commonwealth Theatre Corp., with theatres in Kansas, Missouri and Iowa (twenty-eight in all) and neither of them showed us any violence when we called. C. A. spent a part of his early life in Omaha and the record shows that he knew the address of every red-headed girl in town, although we doubt that. Anyhow, he's a mighty square boy and a theatrical man of wide experience, and we had a very delightful visit with him.

O. K. Mason, the other head of Common-Wealth, got his early theatrical experience in our town. His grandparents used to live across the street from us and O. K. often came there to visit Grandpa and Grandma, while on one of his visits he staged a theatrical performance in the hayloft of our barn. He, with his cousin, Vern McPherson, who is now a dentist with a wide reputation in our town, and some other small boys, put on "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and O. K. played one of the principal parts, but theatrical history doesn't disclose whether he played Simon Legree or Little Eva. Anyhow, the performance gave universal satisfaction and the net results at the box office was seven beans, six washers, two marbles and a ball of twine.

It was this theatrical performance that shaped the life of O. K. He was bitten by a theatrical bug, although we didn't know there were any such bugs around the barn. We knew we had plenty of other bugs, rats, cockroaches and fleas, but we didn't know there was a theatrical bug in the neighborhood. Vern was bitten by a dentist bug, our son Merl was bitten by a telegraphic bug and is now an agent and telegrapher for the Burlington railroad at Powder River, Wyoming. Fred Sellery got tangled with a merchant's bug and is now selling overalls and socks in our town, and the fleas got on very unfriendly relations with us.

The bug that bit O. K. certainly got a good hold, for he has developed into one of the very prominent theatrical magnets of Kansas and Missouri, and the only remedy to cure the bite is a fishing trip to the lakes of northern Minnesota. In fact, that will cure about everything.

Doggone the doggone luck anyhow, we wish these boys would come back to Omaha where they belong, but then what would Missouri do?

Oh, yes, we forgot to tell you about O. K. and Vern practicing shooting at a knothole in Vern's father's barn with a twenty-two rifle, and when they quit Vern's father found that they had shot out the glass in fourteen storm windows, and after that Vern didn't have any twenty-two, but maybe we shouldn't have mentioned that.

We didn't stop at St. Jo, because the boys down there all take the HERALD and they don't like us very much anyhow, but they are strong for the HERALD.

Our next stop was at Savannah, where we wanted to meet our old friend, M. B. Presley, who manages the Savannah theatre, but he had gone to St. Joe. That was just too bad for both of us.

Our next stop was at Mound City, where we met Mr. Yost, who manages Mound City's popular playhouse. He wanted us to stay over and go down to his fishing lodge on the Missouri river with him, but of course we couldn't do it. We wish the boys would stop asking us to stay over and go fishing with them, when we can't do it, for it just makes life one damthing after another.

Two theatre boys wanted the HERALD and sent us their checks and asked us to attend to the matter for them—Joe Lucas of Central City, Nebraska, and Ray Hingst of Emmerson, Nebraska. All right, boys—thanks—your checks have already gone in to the HERALD at Rockefeller Center, New York City. Who's next?

Omaha, Nebraska

If you ever go to Omaha (and everybody ought to go there) we would advise you to go up to the Fontenelle hotel and visit the rooms of the Variety Club. If you will, you will be surprised at the elegant furnishings of this room. We say "room"—we mean several rooms, and those boys will make you feel right at home.

As we understand it, everyone connected with the theatre business is welcome to make these rooms their headquarters while in Omaha. We've got to hand it to those exchange managers, film hounds and exhibitors of Omaha, for these elegant rooms and their courtesy in extending their hospitality to all visitors. As we remember it now, the opening date of the Variety Club is set for June 27 and it is expected that a large gathering of theatre men will attend and the members of the Club are arranging an elaborate program of entertainment for the boys which will make all other entertainments seem like a high school exhibition in comparison. Wish we could attend but we can't. Doggone the doggone luck anyhow.

Writers Elect Officers

The directors of Screen Playwrights, Inc., in an election held this week in Hollywood named Grover Jones, president; William Slavens McNutt, first vice-president; Bess Meredyth, second vice-president; Frank Buter, treasurer, and William Conselman, secretary.

Elected to Council

Herman H. Hable, owner of the Palace Theatre, Winchester, Va., has been re-elected to the City Council of Winchester. The theatre man is the oldest member of the legislative body in point of service, having been in office since 1916.

Income Tax Lien Ties Fox Assets; Trustee Is Named

The troubles of William Fox, former motion picture producer, who faced an army of skeptical creditors last week as his proceedings in bankruptcy opened in Atlantic City, reached an anti-climax this week when the Federal Government took steps to assert its priority over other creditors.

Joseph T. Higgins, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Third District, tied up all but about $600,000 of Mr. Fox's listed assets by filing a lien against him in federal court in New York for $1,361,730. The claim is for unpaid income tax of $300,808 for 1929 and 1930 and for penalties and interest totalling $1,060,922.

Previously this week the appointment of Hiram Steelman, Atlantic City attorney, as trustee for Mr. Fox in the proceedings was announced by Federal Referee Robert E. Steedle who presided at the preliminary hearings. In making the appointment Mr. Steedle pointed out that every claim filed, except one not represented at the meeting, was disputed by some other creditor. He concluded that weeks and weeks of testimony would have to be taken before the validity of the 43 claims could be passed upon and that a trustee, therefore, should be appointed before the conclusion of the hearings.

The Government's claim, if valid as contended by the Treasury Department, further complicates the situation because it must have priority in the bankruptcy court over the general creditors who ask more than $8,000,000. The lien temporarily ties up virtually all of Mr. Fox's listed assets and the receiver may not distribute them to any person or corporation other than the Government without approval of the court.

Mr. Fox received $15,000,000 in cash from the Chase National Bank in 1930 for his personal holdings in the Fox Film Companies and it is charged that in December, 1930, he transferred $6,000,000 and later $850,000 to the All-Continent Corporation of which Mrs. Fox and their daughters, Mona and Belle, are officers. All-Continent is listed in Mr. Fox's bankruptcy petition as claimant for $417,258.

The petition lists assets of about $2,000,000 and liabilities of $9,535,261 including amounts sought in a group of suits in which he is defendant. The hearings before the referee are scheduled to resume on July 10.

Newsreel Men Get Plaques

A plaque for his scenes on the Pennsylvania floods was awarded W. C. Thomas of Pittsburgh, Pathe News cameraman, at the National Headliners dinner held in Atlantic City, N. J., last week end. John Dored of Paramount received an award for the best foreign coverage for his scenes of Addis Ababa.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

BIG HOUSE FOR GIRLS, THE, or SILVER LINING, THE: Maureen O'Sullivan, Betty Compson—This is one of those pictures which are a puzzle to the exhibitor: pictures which are very bad entertainment but are nevertheless pleasing to the patrons and strong at the box-office. Several seasons ago when this picture from an independent source was released by United Artists under the title "The Silver Lining" it was hailed at being above the average for an independent picture, and it was all that. Since its inception, however, production standards of most independent producers have become considerably higher, and this picture therefore shows its age. It is weak in every department. The lighting is poor and the sound is, to say the least, ghastly. Constant attention is required to keep it at an audible level and then it sounds as though coming from a barrel. The story is of New York tenement life, yet the introductory theme music combines "Turkey in the Straw" and similar tunes. Despite all these shortcomings, it was a box office success, so-oo-oo.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Columbia

CATTLE THIEF, THE: Ken Maynard, Geneva Mitchell—A typical Maynard western. Among the western stars we have found only three dependable names, Gene Autry, Buck Jones and Ken Maynard who are listed in their respective drawing power.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

DON'T GAMBLE WITH LOVE: Ann Sothern, Bruce Cabot—Another program picture which is best described as not being particularly good or bad. Just a harmless time killer that we played on a double bill to satisfactory business.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

HELL SHIP MORGAN: George Bancroft, Ann Sothern—Only fair story. Gets monotonous when you realize you've seen it all before. Its the same old story of two men in love with one girl with the usual sacrifice that provides the so-called happy ending. Cast tries hard to inject new life. Played June 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IF YOU COULD ONLY COOK: Jean Arthur, Herbert Marshall—Played this late due to postponement during the March floods but glad we left it in. Its good entertainment and was average on box office strength. Played June 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IF YOU COULD ONLY COOK: Jean Arthur, Herbert Marshall—A very satisfactory screen offering, but our business was considerably below normal. Played June 6.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LADY OF SECRETS: Ruth Chatterton, Otto Kruger, Marian Marsh, Lloyd Nolan—It will take Columbia a long time to live this down, and Ruth Chatterton will probably never fully recover from it. A weak and aged story has been listlessly produced with a cast which is unsuited for its assignment. In a flashback portion of the picture the star is shown as a girl of about eighteen years of age all-a-twitter over her first romance. It was during one of Miss Chatterton's cooing moments that a gallery rascal yelled "Chase me, I'm a butterfly." That gives you an idea.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

PRIDE OF THE MARINES: Charles Bickford, Florence Rice, Billy Barrud—Only fair story. Gets by on merits of its cast. Billy Barrud helps plenty. Played June 12-13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SECRET PATROL: Charles Starrett, Finis Barton—This action picture could not overcome the deficiency of a nameless cast which made it poor boxoffice.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

First National

STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR, THE: Paul Muni, Josephine Hutchinson, Anita Louise—A very good picture but one that we were afraid would not draw very well principally on account of its title. We were agreeably surprised at the ticket office and heard no complaints whatever. Play this one and you can promise a picture both entertaining and instructive. Played June 13-14.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

CLAIRVOYANT, THE: Claude Rains, Fay Wray—This program picture has neither class nor mass appeal. Its subject, psychic research, is not presented in an entertaining manner and the picture is further handicapped by a weak cast. The audience response was quite poor.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Liberty

SWEEPSTAKE ANNIE: Tom Brown, Marian Nixon—A show that holds your interest after the first reel is over. Slow start but finishes O. K. Good enough for any house. Running time, seven reels. Played June 12-13.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ABSOLUTE QUIET: Irene Hervey, Lionel Atwill—A program picture. Lacks drawing power. Running time, 71 minutes.—Mrs. P. J. Zorn, Hippodrome Theatre, Julesburg, Col. Small town patronage.

AH, WILDERNESS!: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore—A very good comedy. Running time, 96 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GARDEN MURDER CASE, THE: Edmund Lowe, Virginia Bruce—Not a very interesting Philo Vance yarn. Gets by with no complaints but certainly didn't gather any applause. Average business for this calibre picture. Played June 10-11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LAST OF THE PAGANS: Mala, Lotus Long—Here's an unusual picture that pleased most of the people. The players seemed to have been acting all their lives in this picture. Of course, they were just acting natural. There is not too much talking and when there is a title on the screen you don't seem to notice it. If this picture is played up as something different and emphasize the wonderful scenery and photography it should do above average business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 9-10.—Rex Flint, Lake Theatre, Baker, Mont. Small town and rural patronage.

MOONLIGHT MURDER: Chester Morris, Madge Evans—A fair mystery. Running time, 68 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PETTICOAT FEVER: Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy—Crackerjack dialogue put across by a nifty cast. The result is dandy film fun. Better draw than we expected at the box office. Played June 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RIFFRAFF: Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy—Not much of a Sunday picture. Seemed to leave the patrons with a depressed feeling owing to the continuous quarreling in the picture. The cast is very good and the picture well acted but something seems wrong. Maybe it's the story. Some of the patrons like it but as a rule they thought it was below the average. Running time, 94 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—Rex Flint, Lake Theatre, Baker, Mont. Small town and rural patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—A natural. Well liked by all. They compared this picture with "Naughty Marietta" and the opinions were about equally divided as to which picture they liked best. Would seem like it would draw a lot of extra business but it wasn't much above average for us. Everybody that saw it raved over the song "Indian Love Call." Give us some more similar to this with these stars. Running time, 103 minutes. Played May 28-30.—Rex Flint, Lake Theatre, Baker, Mont. Small town and rural patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—A beautiful picture. The singing was grand, the scenery wonderful and the story fine. But it did not do any business for us. Maybe it was because we did not play "Naughty Marietta." We'll see what their next one does. Running time, 113 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TOUGH GUY: Jackie Cooper, Joseph Calleia, Rin Tin Tin, Jr.—Good action picture. Suitable for Friday and Saturday. Running time, 77 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROWN EYES: Joan Bennett, Cary Grant—Another of the programmers which fills the bill to perfection. If we could have programs of this quality all the time, our people would be thoroughly satisfied. Running time, 76 minutes. Played June 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

COLLEGIATE: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie—Good program picture that did not draw at the box office. Running time, 92 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DESERT GOLD: Larry Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—Played this one on our Bank Nights. Did extra business and guess should give the picture credit for it. But producers of Western should make a better price on them because they are always short and the program has to be built up with extra shorts, which increases the cost on a Western program, and that isn't right. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DRIFT FENCE: Larry Crabbe, Katherine De Mille—Here's a real surprise western that should go over anywhere that they like them. The scenery is beautiful and the photography perfect. Why don't they put as good camera work in some of the big pictures? The story was good and was one that could really happen. The characters were faithfully portrayed and true to life. There was lots of comedy and kept moving right along. Excellent. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 4-6.—Rex Flint, Lake Theatre, Baker, Mont. Small town and rural patronage.

MARY BURNS, FUGITIVE: Sylvia Sidney, Melvyn Douglas—Good program picture. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MOON'S OUR HOME, THE: Margaret Sullavan, Henry Fonda—Another excellent Walter Wanger production. Since this producer has given Paramount nearly all of its best pictures this season we hope they can carry on as well when he leaves their banner as reported in the trade papers. Excellent work by the star and Henry Fonda. Played June 12-13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROSE OF THE RANCHO: Gladys Swarthout, John Boles—Fair program picture. Running time, 82 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

13 HOURS BY AIR: Fred MacMurray, Joan Bennett—Very thrilling and interesting story, well played. This is one of those ideal program pictures which always pleases our patrons. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 3-4.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Fred MacMurray—An excellent picture. Drew extra business. Well liked by everyone. Running time, 106 minutes.—Mrs. P. J. Zorn, Hippodrome Theatre, Julesburg, Col. Small town patronage.

Republic

SINGING COWBOY, THE: Gene Autry, Lois Wilde, Smiley Burnette—This picture recaptures the mood of the earlier Autry westerns in emphasizing music and novelty situations. It received a perfect audience response and withstood the onslaught of a heat wave. We recently had the pleasure of becoming personally acquited with Autry, whose quiet, unassuming manner makes him just as impressive off screen as on.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

RKO-Radio

BECKY SHARP: Miriam Hopkins, Cedric Hardwicke —O Boy, what a surprise! First biggest walkout on the talkies; get rid of it if you can. We thought the color very good, but the draggy start sent the few out that we did get. About 30% left after the first three reels. Running time, nine reels. Played June 14.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

CHATTERBOX: Anne Shirley, Philip Holmes—Better shelve this if you can. Had more walkouts on this picture than any in months. Might stand up in a double bill if the other feature was very strong. Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 24-25.—Rex Flint, Lake Theatre, Baker, Mont. Small town and rural patronage.

MURDER ON A HONEYMOON: James Gleason, Edna May Oliver—This team of Gleason and Oliver are sure a good one to work together; they are implicated in many situations that one likes to beat the other to solve the murder first; however they both work just in each other's hand and when the end comes they succeed in their efforts and all ends well. Running time, eight reels. Played June 9-10.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S D. Small town patronage.

SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE: Gene Raymond, Margaret Callahan—As nice a little mystery picture as anyone could want. Played it on our Bargain Nights and received many favorable comments. A lot of good comedy and a plausible story. Acting by all very well done. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 26-27.—Rex Flint, Lake Theatre, Baker, Mont. Small town and rural patronage.

SILLY BILLIES: Wheeler and Woolsey—A good comedy drama with a lot of hokum in it. Every Wheeler and Woolsey that we have played has made a little money for us. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TWO IN THE DARK: Walter Abel, Margot Grahame—Interesting. Running time, 76 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TWO IN REVOLT: Warrior, Lightning, John Arledge, Louise Latimer—Good horse and dog picture. Running time, 64 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WE'RE ONLY HUMAN: Preston Foster, Jane Wyatt—Another good programmer. Was well received by the typical Bargain Night crowd. Story moved right along and was well acted and directed. Not a big picture, but one you won't be ashamed to run. Some spots that seem to be impossible, but they will let that go. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 2-3.—Rex Flint, Lake Theatre, Baker, Mont. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CAPTAIN JANUARY: Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee —A generally excellent Temple picture. Too bad they didn't include more atmospheric shots of the sea. Folks kind of expected "to see the sea." Played June 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET: Warner Oland, Rosina Lawrence—This gave satisfaction to the lovers of mystery drama. Business normal. Played June 13. —C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

COUNTRY DOCTOR, THE: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Slim Summerville—Here's another fine small town picture. Didn't do so much business as Rogers or Temple pictures, but was well liked. We spent quite a lot of extra money advertising this, but didn't seem to pay. The story is a small town natural and Hersholt surely played his part well. The babies were fine and probably the best acting in the picture was turned in by Slim Summerville. Play him up. Running time, 94 minutes. Played June 9-10.—Rex Flint, Lake Theatre, Baker, Mont. Small town and rural patronage.

COUNTRY DOCTOR, THE: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—Were forced to play this late and believe lost money by it but better late than never. Believe any small town should play this picture if they have to wait a year or two. It is one of the greatest human interest pictures we have ever played in our 16 years in the game. The birth scene, we believe, to be as fine in audience appeal as was ever shown here. It is so natural. And the Quints! Where in the world again will such an adorable bunch of youngsters be born. Personally just seems to ooze right out of them all. Running time, 94 minutes. Played June 14-15.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GENTLE JULIA: Jane Withers, Tom Brown—This pleased extra well. Running time, 63 minutes.—Mrs. P. J. Zorn, Hippodrome Theatre, Julesburg, Col. Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers, Dorothy Wilson—Very good. Running time, 84 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye—One of the best musicals of the year. Running time, 91 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLEST REBEL, THE: Shirley Temple, John Boles, Jack Holt—Very satisfactory in every respect. Shirley Temple usually draws will in Sodus, but business for her pictures has shown some falling off. Played June 10-11.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SONG AND DANCE MAN: Paul Kelly, Claire Trevor—A good program picture. Audience was pleased. Running time, 72 minutes.—Mrs. P. J. Zorn, Hippodrome Theatre, Julesburg, Col. Small town patronage.

United Artists

SPLENDOR: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—No kicks at all on picture but lost money. No drawing power for me.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Universal

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION: Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor—Here is a great picture as everyone knows. We did better than average business despite rain. Everyone satisfied. Played June 17-18.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

NEXT TIME WE LOVE: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart—Nice picture with A-1 performances from Miss Sullavan and the newcomer James Stewart. Played June 17-18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STORMY: Rex, Noah Beery, Jr., Jean Rogers—One of the best action pictures of the season. Wholesome and well produced.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Warners

BOULDER DAM: Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis, Lyle Talbot—We'll never tell you. But for some unaccountable reason this picture did swell business on our Pal Nights. Unlike the trailer on "Walking Dead," this trailer really did a lot of business for us. And guess it was the name too because so many wanted to see the Dam. Then, when they did not see much of that, still they were satisfied. It was just one of those things. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 10-11.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Short Subjects

Columbia

BIRD STUFFER, THE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Better than some in this series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ALADDIN'S LAMP: Paul Terry-Toons—Very good cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HILLBILLY LOVE: Song and Comedy Hits—Okay reel of hillybilly singing.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LADIES LOVE HATS: Star Personality Comedies —Just fair; nothing to write home about.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

ROLLING STONES: Paul Terry-Toons—A very good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SORORITY BLUES: Song and Comedy Hits—One of the best musical and dance reels that we have played for a long while. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TRIPLE TROUBLE: Ernest Truex—Another poor comedy. Truex is so sappy!—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WESTERN TRAIL, THE: Paul Terry-Toons—Funny cartoon—L. A: Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHITE HOPE, THE: Joe Cook—Awfully bad! Not a laugh in a carload of Joe Cook comedies.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAUTIFUL BANFF AND LAKE LOUISE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A wonderful color scenic, an asset to any program, interspersed with several vocal selections. Running time, 1 reel.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

CALICO DRAGON: Harman-Ising—These Happy Harmonies go over very good with us.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

COUNT TAKES THE COUNT, THE: Charley Chase—An excellent Chas. Chase comedy. Audience in an uproar.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

CREW RACING: M-G-M Sports Parade—Good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

EARLY BIRD AND THE WORM, THE: Harman-Ising—A fine colored cartoon. Will please all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FARMING FOOLS: Oswald Cartoons—A dandy black and white cartoon. Clever and full of laughs.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FOLLIES OF 1936: Our Gang—The kids put on a show, everything from a leg show to a skull dance. I believe it is the best comedy we have ever shown. Played it with "Ah, Wilderness!" Nobody said anything about the feature, but some came twice to see the comedy.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

HEY, HEY, FEVER: Harman-Ising—Very good color cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HOW TO SLEEP: M-G-M Miniatures—Another fine reel released by M-G-M. Running time, 1 reel. —C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

LA FIESTA DE SANTA BARBARA: Musical Revues—An excellent colored musical. Deserves your best spot. Full of stars. Beautiful, clever.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LIFE HESITATES AT 40: Charley Chase—Hope Charley hesitates before he makes another one like this one. The only time they laughed was when it was over. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LUCKY CORNER, THE: Our Gang—An excellent short by the Gang. Everybody pleased. Great for Saturday.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MANHATTAN MONKEY BUSINESS: Charley Chase—Two reels of nothing. I sat through the whole two reels and watched the reaction of the audience and it registered one laugh. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PAN HANDLERS: Kelly-Kelton—This two-reel comedy has entertaining as well as amusing situations. Running time, 20 minutes.—Mrs. P. J. Zorn, Hippodrome Theatre, Julesburg, Col. Small town patronage.

PIRATE PARTY AT CATALINA ISLE: Musical Revues—An excepionally good short from Metro. Very beautiful and several musical stars perform.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

PUBLIC GHOST NO. 1: Charley Chase—An average comedy.—P. E. Braun, Cairo Theatre, Cairo, Neb. Village and rural patronage.

RUN, SHEEP, RUN: Harman-Ising—Very good comedy. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SECOND CHILDHOOD: Our Gang—Would class this as the best laugh-getter Our Gang comedy we have run. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

TABLE TENNIS: M-G-M Sports Parade—A filler on the game of table tennis. Nothing out of ordinary but O. K.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TRAINED HOOFS: M-G-M Miniatures—Nice subject; most M-G-M singles are. Running time, 9 minutes.—G. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

VICTORIA AND VANCOUVER: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—One of the best travel talks I have run. Coloring is beautiful and views of Victoria are very natural. A drill by the Royal North West Mounted Police is one of the best spots in this one. Educational and interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

COUNTRYSIDE MELODIES: Paramount Varieties—A very fine musical. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE NOBODY: Betty Boop Cartoons—Good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MUSICAL MEMORIES: Color Classics—A very pleasing colored cartoon of old time songs. Not for the kids or Saturdays.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RADIO RHAPSODY: Headliners—Very good. Runnuing time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO-Radio

BEACH MAKERS: Struggle to Live Series—A very interesting and educational subject. Tells the story of the seal.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOLLY MOO COW AND THE BUTTERFLIES: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Very good color cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

NEPTUNE NONSENSE: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—Excellent color cartoon with a different story to tell. Clever cartoon antics among the fish.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

QUIET FOURTH, A: Smart Set—Very good comedy. Lots of excitement and the six-year-old boy gets plenty of kick out of shooting the firecrackers, but is surprised when the U. S. artillery starts the bombardment at target practice. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SALESMANSHIP, AHOY: Walter Catlett—Fun from start to finish and Walter makes a good salesman. O. K. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

TICKET OR LEAVE IT: Ruth Etting—Fair subject with Miss Etting's song it's only highlight. She sings several old Irving Berlin numbers.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TRIP THROUGH FIJILAND: Travelogue Special—Well worth anyone's playing time. Done in Sepia tones it reveals many beautiful scenes and contains much of interest.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

ALL AMERICAN DRAWBACK: Edgar Bergen—This ventriloquist act is okay. Well done so that the dummy appears very realistic. Quite comical.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KING OF THE ISLANDS: Broadway Brevities—Good picture of Hawaiian dances. Some thought it ather daring. Played June 12-13.—O. Ingmar Oleson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

RED NICHOLS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very pleasing Melody Master. Good music, good dancing. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

REGULAR KIDS: Meglin Kids—Fine two reeler.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SLIDE, NELLIE, SLIDE: Big V. Comedies—A fine two-reel comedy that will please all. The story of a girls' soft ball team. Plenty of comedy and an eyeful of girls. Play it anywhere and it will please.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WASH YOUR STEP: Hal LeRoy, Preisser Sisters—A fair musical. Numbers okay but story idea flat! Contains one catchy song.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

HAUPTMANN FROM KIDNAP TO CHAIR: Bruno Richard Hauptmann—Very interesting. All about Hauptmann from the day of kidnaping of Lindbergh's baby to the electric chain. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Serials

Universal

FLASH GORDON: Buster Crabbe, Jean Rogers—We have played five chapters so far and think its a very good serial, especially for the children. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Elected to Academy

Erno Metzner, art director for Gaumont British Pictures, has been elected to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood. He is the only art director in England to have achieved this distinction. Mr. Metzner at present is designing sets for the GB production, "Strangers on a Honeymoon," in London.

French Author Signed

Warner Brothers have signed Romain Rolland, noted French author, to write the screen play for "Danton, the Terror of France" which will be directed by Max Reinhardt. Paul Muni will play the title role.

Sound Trucks Banned

Sound trucks have been ordered off the streets of Joplin, Mo., by police because of complaints against noise.

Kilroe Will Attend Copyright Convention

E. P. Kilroe of Twentieth Century-Fox has been designated as the observer for the United States motion picture industry at the meeting in Brussels, Belgium, of the International Copyright Union, which starts September 7th.

The International Copyright Union is meeting to consider and pass on proposed revisions in the Berne copyright convention. These changes are considered important to the film industry because of pending legislation proposing to enable the United States to adhere to the international group.

Union Control Shift Sought by Holmden

The correction of what he regards as weaknesses in the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes setup in the studios and strengthening of control over union men is reported as the chief objective of Harlan Holmden, I. A. T. S. E. third vice-president, who arrived in Hollywood this week. Union officials will shift the control of manpower to locals from the studios which heretofore have executed the closed shop agreement.

DAR Film Program Extended to Orient

The film program sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution has been extended to China, according to the annual report of Mrs. Leon A. McIntire, chairman of the Motion Picture Committee. A joint committee composed of 16 different nationalities functioning under the direction of the Daughters in America, has been formed in China. Special children's programs are its chief objective.

New Booking Office Started on Coast

An independent booking office has been opened in Los Angeles under the name of Pacific States Theatres Service Company. The organization will be in charge of Sam Blowitz, former Fox West Coast booker, and Harry Rackin, formerly with Principal Theatres.

To Study Film Storage

A group including George Crane, Alan Freedman, Sidney Lund, Hugh McClung, J. M. Nickolaus and John Swain has been appointed by William Koenig, chairman of the Academy Research Council to aid in preparing a report on various types of available preservative processes for film.

Two Houses Sold

Carolina Amusement Company has bought Criterion at Spartanburg, South Carolina, and the Criterion at Anderson, S. C., from L. C. Sipe Theatres Company. Carolina Amusement operates three other houses in Spartanburg, the Carolina, State and Strand.

Booker Promoted

Ralph Olson has been promoted to road representative for Universal, his post as booker at Omaha having been filled by Bob Morrison, formerly poster clerk.

B & K DROPS PLANS FOR DOUBLE BILLING

And Thereby Avoids Court Fights by Independents, Says Chicago's Film Row

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Plans that Balaban & Katz may have had for starting double features in Chicago this summer evidently have been dropped. Many are those who say this was a very wise move, as it did away with the possibility of much legal tiffing. That would have been the independents' weapon. Present film contracts are such that the independents cannot play duals unless the distributors grant them the privilege. The distributors generally were willing to grant this favor to B & K if the circuit wished, but independents' charges of conspiracy would have flown right and left.

It is the opinion of some that B & K felt that a fight for duals at this time would have jeopardized its chances for getting—without a fight—an "extra week of clearance"

A good sign that the dual problem is over for the time being, as well as the clearance problem, is that large distributors are not planning to sell product to any Chicago theatres until fall, or at least until after B & K has made its agreements. City selling is practically nil here during the summer months, as everyone waits to see what B & K will buy and on what terms. Exchanges now have their city salesmen working in the downstate territories.

All this indicates a quiet summer and a boisterous fall. On top of the dual and clearance problems will come the operators union demands for increased wages in a new contract.

Jack Miller, former president of the Chicago Exhibitors Association, was the honored guest at the long planned testimonial dinner last Friday evening in the Red Lacquer Room of the Palmer House. More than 300 honored Mr. Miller for his 12 years of very active service in behalf of the exhibitor organization and exhibition in general. The guests presented Mr. Miller with a star sapphire ring.

Felix Mendelssohn was toastmaster.

From out-of-town and seated at the speakers table were Dave Palfreyman of New York, Dick Biechle of Kansas City, Fred Wehrenberg of St. Louis and Ed Kuykendall from New York. Others who spoke were Aaron Saperstein, Clyde Eckhardt, Henry Herbel, Calvin Hermer, Morris Leonard, Sid Spiegel, Sam Myers and Edw. Alcock.

Larry Stein spent Sunday judging a beauty contest at Racine. He assisted in picking "Miss Wisconsin." Incidentally Stein is wearing tinted glasses this week.

Ben Judell leaves the last part of the summer for Hollywood, where he will start production. Judell also will continue to operate his five midwestern exchanges, making periodic trips here. Although his group of exchanges will serve as a nucleus for distribution of his pictures, deals are underway for other independent exchanges to handle the product as well.

Judell said he will make "bread and butter" pictures.

The distributor-producer already has made arrangements for enrolment of his children in college on the Coast and he will move his family there late this summer.

John Balaban and Barney Balaban surrendered to their desire to travel this week and boarded planes for cities in opposite directions. Barney headed for New York to confer with Paramount officials regarding his new position on the Paramount Board and John hied westward for conferences with producers. Both will return to spend the Fourth-of-July with their families.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

WHY POUND THE SAME TARGET?

Some weeks back, a study of the line at the box office of a nearby neighborhood theatre revealed that while some of the folks "shopped" around the lobby display and stills before buying or not buying tickets, there were others who walked directly to the ticket window, took their admissions and proceeded inside without further ado.

Conversation with the manager brought out that this percentage of business was regular, that these patrons had been sold and evidently to their satisfaction on the theatre and the merits of its attractions, that they expected a reasonable evening's entertainment and their steady attendance indicated the effectiveness of the advertising job done by the manager to attract this regular percentage.

Having gotten to this point, the next logical step on the theatreman's part was to switch his advertising attack and to concentrate his drive upon the folks who shop around so that they too would line up with the regulars. But further discussion disclosed that the manager had not changed his "sights" to reach out especially for the new business he was not getting. He continued to pound at the same target upon which he had already scored.

The above situation is not an isolated instance. It represents a cross-section of current theatre advertising procedure that is not flexible enough to allow sufficiently for proper coverage in those directions where more business is most certainly to be had.

GOING TO THE PEOPLE

Though the influence of the newspaper motion picture review is not to be discounted, there is also much to be said for the opinions of the "folks next door." Campaigns are of course aimed to secure sizable openings but in the final analysis success for most any date depends to an extent upon the invaluable word-of-mouth advertising spread from one spot to another by folks who have seen a show and hasten to tell their friends.

Thus are to be complimented Manager George Laby, of the Paramount, Springfield, Mass., and circuit ad director Bill Powell, who adapted the idea to what they called a test preview in advance for "Case Against Mrs. Ames," to which were invited sundry local folk and whose comments and names were used in the theatre newspaper advertising. The slant was reported to have been highly successful, bringing the best opening in months. Interested members will find the story of these activities detailed on a following page.

By going direct to the people, the theatremen found that folks not apt to be swayed by endorsements of newspaper "by-liners" may often be completely won over by the enthusiasm of their neighbors.

PERFECTING A TECHNIQUE

With the recent successes of the class picture due in no small part to the unique and skillful merchandising campaign on Warner Bros.' "Dream", an expected development in the coming season is the release of further pictures by that studio and others, aimed also to attract classes of patronage not usually responsive to motion picture advertising. And now that these new business veins have been uncovered, there is high hope they will be kept open by the fine grade of such screen entertainments and, as important, selling campaigns in keeping with the quality of these attractions.

The increase of class pictures allows the understanding manager who would try his wings in loftier altitudes, a rare opportunity.

The combination of his own special talents reserved for these occasions plus the assistance of carefully-weighed home-office campaigns should mean much in the perfection of a technique to bring this class business more frequently to the ticket-window.

THE SIMONS ILLUSIONS

Pitchmen and circus barkers recognize as an old and valued aid the hocus-pocus of some sleight of hand or other simple illusion in stopping the passing throngs—the first principle in making any kind of a sale. The idea is not often used for the same purpose in theatre advertising which may be traced to the general lack of savvy in this direction.

Of interest therefore is the illustrated article in this issue on illusions in displays by Manager Jack Simons, of Loew's Poli, in Hartford. They have proven to be real crowd-stoppers for this Round Tabler and should serve as well in other situations.

Student Angle Stressed By Benford for "Pasteur"

For his "Pasteur" date at the Orpheum, Philadelphia, Stan Benford contacted district supervisor of schools, who granted permission to bring the picture to the attention of the principals. Special attention was paid to students of the high schools, heads of the science department were personally contacted and announcements were made in all classrooms.

Branches of the public libraries distributed bookmarks and placed stills in strategic spots. Women's clubs, doctors and dentists, and boy and girl scout organizations were circularized and largest drug store in the locality of the theatre devoted entire window to special "Pasteur" display, with theatre credits.

Questions and Answers Stunt Sells Rivoli "Ex-Mrs. Bradford"

Under the direction of Frank Brunner, publicist of the New York Rivoli, a novel campaign was put on theme of which was "Who is the Ex-Mrs. Bradford?" Calling cards carrying the phone and address of the theatre with the title name were distributed city-wide in advance and throughout engagement.

Another feature of the exploitation campaign was the use of a "question and answer" stunt arranged with a mike placed in front of theatre and sign inviting passers-by to ask any question pertaining to the film, which were answered immediately by a hidden announcer. This was reported as being very effective and attracted a great number of persons.

Kid Cartoon Club Staged by Conner

Marlowe Conner, Grove Theatre, Chicago, Ill., reports a successful cartoon club for his kids held on Saturdays. Mimeographed sheets are handed out with instructions and three-inch capital letter. Kids are told to make the letter into a funny face by just adding lines. To the twenty best cartoonists tickets are awarded and contestants invited on the stage to perform for the rest of the kids.

Another stunt that Conner uses is to send his usher out on the streets as a hitchhiker. Lad wears an oversized cutout thumbing hand attached to his arm, palm of which reads, "Take me to the Grove to see," etc., etc., the stunt proving a honey.

City Editors Review "Pastures" Premiere

Importance of the world premiere of Warner Bros. "Green Pastures" at the Ritz, Tulsa, Okla., was stressed by Ralph Talbot who had the city editors of all local dailies on hand to view the picture and to write enthusiastic endorsements of the feature. In advance, special screening was held for ministers of all denominations, cultural leaders and civic officials, to whom was first mailed four-page booklets presenting picture highlights. Comment cards were enclosed for their opinions after the showing.

Radio programs were featured by appearance of Mayor Penney who spoke on the opening and urged local attendance. Further civic encouragement was given with a "first time" permission by the police department for the hanging of a giant banner across street, the flash flooded at night by spots.

Downtown department stores gave full windows to the Bradford novel, "Old Man Adam and His Chillun" from which the picture was adapted and art work, stills and other accessories from the picture were used generously for added decoration.

Co-op newspaper advertising included congratulatory messages from heads of local businesses, a special "Green Pastures" section and much more than the usual amount of publicity was given over to signalize the first engagement of the feature.

Rotsky Ties Up Railway For "Follow the Fleet"

Canadian Pacific Railway cooperated with George Rotsky, Palace, Montreal, on "Follow the Fleet" when they loaned six models of the Company's Empress fleet, electrically illuminated for exhibition in the lobby with title letters pointing to the cars. Auto dealer staged a parade featuring their new model cars, all of which were bannered with title, cast and playdates.

For "Show Boat," George went to town with a calliope which played "Here Comes the Show Boat" as it toured the streets, Highlight of campaign was tieup with bus company which turned over four busses to the theatre during showing, offering to drive patrons to the theatre from different spots in town, busses were bannered and stunt landed newspaper breaks.

PRISON FRONT. Instruments of torture, man in cell with ball and chain and entire front covered to represent prison was the way Louie Charninsky, Capitol, Dallas, Tex., handled "Road Gang" date.

Test Preview Idea Clicks on "Ames"

Deciding that in that location, features other than sensationalism could be more effective in advertising "Case Against Mrs. Ames," Manager George Laby, of Paramount, Springfield, Mass., with Bill Powell, circuit ad head, worked out a test preview idea that clicked well enough to return an out of the ordinary opening on the date.

In this instance the preview was brought right close to patrons by having an invited list of 25 representative locals at a special showing and their comments were sufficiently enthusiastic to encourage George and Bill to put these together in the shape of a two-column newspaper ad, reproduced below. As to be noted, no art work or urge copy was used. The ad was used day ahead and other picture copy carried further references to the comments from the locals.

Despite a heavy rainstorm on the opening day, Laby reports most excellent business and recommends the idea especially in spots where other than the sensational in copy is found more fruitful.

Prominents' Endorsements Used In "Show Boat" Advertising

Three private screenings were held in advance of the "Show Boat" opening at the Rialto Theatre in Lewistown, Pa., by Paul P. Klinger to which prominent locals were invited and their endorsements used for advertising purposes.

Local soft drink manufacturer and friend of Wininger supplied all soda fountains in town using his product, cards with Wininger's tertimonials of the drink and photo. Five-foot letters made of plywood spelling out title were mounted atop marquee, flasher motor attached iluminating the display at night.

"Show Boat" sundaes were featured at fountains, largest store featured bathing suits tying up with film, and music store gave window over to Irene Dunne music display.

Huffman Theatres Tie In On New Train Publicity

New streamline train named "City of Denver" started service between that city and Chicago some weeks back and the Harry Huffman theatres in Denver hooked into the general publicity by awarding, via drawing, five free round trips on the new train and two days in Chicago.

Drive started three weeks ahead with trailers at the various theatres of the circuit and was built up further at the exhibition of the new train at the Union Station with coupons distributed to the thousands who inspected the latest type streamliner.

As a result, business on the night of the draw was capacity, it was said, with railroad reported more than pleased with the publicity gained through the tiein and wide open for more like it.

Holland's "Ballots" Front

An attractive front was created by Sid Holland, Elco Theatres, Elkhart, Ind., for "Bullets or Ballots" (see photo). Newspaper tear sheets, blowups of editorials, stills and cutouts from three and six sheets formed the basis of the display.

ILLUSION IN PICTURE DISPLAY

Connecticut Theatreman Details Workings of Animated Displays Found Effective At the Boxoffice

Up in Hartford, Manager Jack Simons at Loew's Poli Theatre attracts plenty of attention to his current and coming attractions with a number of animated illusion displays in the lobby and prominent windows. Being especially skilled in this form of advertising, Simons has kindly consented to describe some of his most successful.

On this page are detailed and illustrated various moving illusions, Jack explaining how they are put together and operated.

The Dancing Slippers

The dancing slippers is accomplished by setting five or six pairs of ladies evening shoes on a platform. Behind the platform is a jet black drop. Across the top of the set and out of sight is a long thin iron rod, connected by pulleys to a motor also out of sight. A black thread is fastened behind each shoe and runs up to the top of the rod. As the rod revolves by means of the pulley connected to the motor, it automatically lifts the shoes up and down and gives them the appearance of dancing.

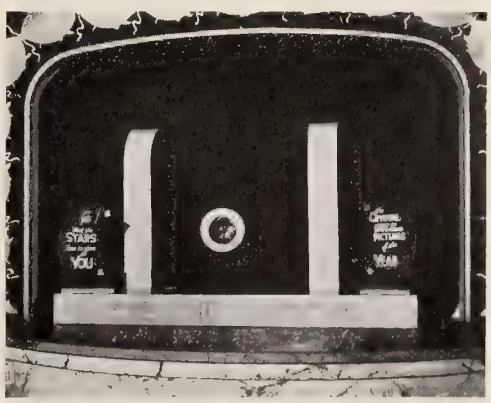
The Floating Cigar Box

This is a highly complicated mechanical set-up that takes a lot of work. As the spectator looks upon the illusion he sees a large metal frame with a glass front. Behind this a box of cigars, or what not, appears to be floating in mid-air. What actually happens is this. The box of cigars is attached to a second pane of glass cut in an oval shape. This oval moves in a circle by means of a small motor and pulley. Thus the box has the appearance of floating in mid-air. Looking at the box through the front glass it cannot be detected that the box is attached to a second pane of glass directly behind it and that the glass moves and not the box.

Light Bulb on Shoe Lace

A very effective illusion and not difficult to make is the electric light bulb suspended from a shoe string. The bulb is lit, yet there is no visible connection. To accomplish this, drill through the metal part of a bulb of any wattage and run the finest kind of silk wire obtainable into the bulb and fasten the terminals to the base of the filaments. Any house electrician can do this in five minutes. Then run the wire up through the center of a shoe lace. Tie the one end of the shoe lace around the base of the bulb ending up in a knot. The other end of the shoe lace can be suspended anywhere but, of course, the electric wire must be concealed from that point on. The ends of this wire are fastened to a male plug-in and the whole thing is then ready for use.

As illustrated in the photo the frame from which the shoe string hangs is made of thin scrap wood. The wire coming out of the upper end of the shoe lace is then pasted on back of the frame, down the left hand side and on through the base of the pedestal on which the frame stands. From that point it is carried to a wall plug. A piece of heavy sticking paper is then run over the entire back of the frame, thus concealing the wire. The frame is then painted white, front and back and absolutely defies detection. It is a fool-proof illusion that gets 'em every time.



The Dancing Shoes

The Moving Cigar Box

The Light Bulb on Shoe Lace

The Crystal Ball Illusion

The Crystal Ball Illusion

The crystal ball illusion is accomplished in the following manner. On a platform sits a box-like affair with a hole cut out of the center. A good-sized bottle with a round bottom or belly is set on a platform behind the face of the box. Thus, only the lower part of the bottle shows in the hole, giving it the appearance of a crystal ball. The bottle is filled with water. Behind this is a heat wheel with coming attractions or any reading matter pasted onto the part that revolves. This piece of mechanism is nothing more than an electric light bulb mounted on a base with a piece of wire extending above it so that cone can ride on top of it. It is nothing more than the novelty lamps that are being sold everywhere, depicting Niagara Falls in action or a forest fire. The bottle is filled with water, which, when one looks into it at the heat wheel in the back, the reading is greatly magnified. Of course, everything is out of view and it is difficult to observe how the reading matter fades in and out of the "crystal" ball.

Sure Winners

Also found effective by Simons was a horse race slant labeled "Sure Winner" constructed as follows: A shadow box of considerable depth is constructed in the form of a horse shoe. The cutouts of the horses and jockeys are in front. By means of an electric fan and pulley arrangement the horses move up and down and are constantly in motion, this requiring nothing more than a small electric fan and pulleys.

Harold Lloyd Head

In front of a jet black background a giant Harold Lloyd head is suspended by heavy black threads. If the scene is darkened the thread will not show. Neon glasses are fastened on the face in the regular way, but the electrical apparatus is out of view, the wire for the connection coming out from behind the back drop. The tire too is a deep black.

Something to Crow About

Using a photo of a rooster and making the head and leg move is accomplished by small electro magnets. After the cutout is made, the head and leg or whatever part it is desired to have move, is fastened from behind to small electro magnets with pendulum arm.

Floating Cigar

The onlooker sees a huge object suspended in midair with a hoop continually passing over and around it to prove there are no supports. The suspended object is held in place by a rod, attached to the rear wall. The hoop is carried on a belt driven by a small electric motor. While the spectator is of the opinion that the hoop actually passes around the object, he fails to see that the hoop goes only as far as the supporting bar, reverses itself and then goes back.

ON OVERSEAS PUBLICITY

Says That Continental Publicist Must Be Mentally Acrobatic and Endowed with Elephant Memory

by EMILE LUCAS

Radio Pub. Dir. for Continental Europe

I wish I could find a snappy, illuminating sentence such as would inform a busy man, in a flash, what constitutes publicity, advertising and exploitation in this part of the world without his having to read the whole of this article. All I can say is that it constitutes harder work than most people imagine and that a Publicity man in charge of Continental Europe and the Far East must be capable of mental acrobatics endowed with the memory of an elephant.

With roughly 28 nations at his beck and call, each one speaking a different language, it stands to reason that an Egyptian editor can hardly claim to have much in common with his colleague in the city of the Boulevards. Likewise a Prague editor may turn down an interview of a potential star or a thundering film magnate, offered him for exclusive publication, whereas some of his Scandinavian colleagues may snatch it up without regret, but on one point they all seem to be of a uniform mind, i.e.: that stills of female stars suggesting the eerie or the deshabillé" are considered good printable material almost everywhere. On the other hand, stills of men stars receive a lukewarm reception and are seldom published unless a "peppy" feminine figure happens to adorn the background. This, very probably, is due to the predominance of the male over the female population, which in most European countries still prevails.

Publicist Must Be Multi-Lingual

A knowledge of various languages is an absolute necessity for a successful Continental publicity man. Without it he may just as well pack up and go home. Half of his battle is won if he has some literary ability of his own. Editorial fortresses, impregnable otherwise, open their doors to him and he seldom finds his publicity material thrown to the four winds.

A rough idea of the progress made by RKO-Radio's publicity in Continental Europe may be gathered from the fact that when this Department started its activities we had a total of 2,000 lines of free publicity in December, 1934, whereas that total reached the creditable sum of 120,000 by the end of May, 1936. Figures, even for the non-statistically inclined, speak for themselves and I claim that the name of RKO-Radio is, at this writing, at the top of the Continental tree.

Extensive merchandising tie-ups such as carried out in America, are practically unknown in Continental Europe where chains of the 1,000, or 2,000 stores, do not exist. You have to overcome the prejudices of complex-ridden and old fashioned individual store owners before you can achieve a tie-up worth writing home about. You have to talk yourself hoarse, get under the skin of a born diplomat, stand on your head, walk sideways, swear like a sailor, drink like a fish and bring flowers to bulbous females, and even then your troubles will not be over. You may still find yourself, heaven forbid, holding the baby.

On the side of advertising I hold truth to be the mainstay of our policy. We strive to avoid inaccurate and bombastic statements, descriptions and designs. We contend that to advertise any of our pictures, however outstanding, and attract the genuine response of the Continental filmgoer—who no longer believes in the fairy-tales of yesterday—a maximum result can only be achieved by restraint and simplicity in our copy. Misrepresentation, to my mind, is a fatuous and futile weapon. It may have worked in the past, but it is hopelessly outclassed by the more progressive advertising technique of today.

Dick Wright Offers Some "Cool" Slants

It's true, says Dick Wright, Ohio Warner district manager in "Ohio Mouthpiece," house organ, that the manager, staff and regular patrons are aware of the theatre's comforts during the hot days, "but are you satisfied in your own mind that your community at large is aware of the fact," queries the Warner head who sets down some angles he has found practical.

Institutional stories in papers with photos of cooling plant under the caption, "Here's What Keeps the Blank Theatre Cool These Days." Use of lobby board with photos of plant showing various important points with card under each offering brief explanation.

Window display card at drug stores, fountains, with blow-up of girl drinking soda plus stills from theatre attraction and lead-off copy—"Two Places to Keep Cool—At Our Fountain and the Blank Theatre." Another co-op idea is tiein with beverage company to serve soft drinks in lobby. Another is tiein with stores on ads presenting summer merchandise and services with hookin plugging shopping in the morning and attendance at theatre afterwards.

Have Doctors Endorse Plant

By mail invite leading physicians to enjoy comfort of theatre and to inspect air-conditioning system. Get letters from them stressing excellence of the system in preventing colds, etc., and post letters in lobby. Have director of Weather Bureau pose at the air-plant and plant this with story on how he envies theatre manager, from the angle that theatre weather is manufactured.

Announcements in ice on street corners as tiein with ice company with delivery trucks bannered and ads carrying copy—"Two Ways to Keep Cool." Place attractive bathing-suit girl in prominent window with camera against background of enlargement of cooling plant with "cool" copy. Have girl snap pictures of those stopping to look in window and post some of the snaps next day for theatre tickets.

Front porches in residential districts are the popular gathering place after evening dinner and to take advantage of this, boys might distribute at that time folders with institutional copy with photos of the cool plant with urge copy, such as "C'Mon Down and Relax in Cool Comfort, etc."

Barcelona Papers Stress Motion Picture Publicity

All Dailies Reported Giving More Space to Films Than Do American Sheets

by HARRY CHAPIN PLUMMER
from Barcelona

Your Showman's Travelogue series now current in the Round Table takes a broad jump this week with a visit to Spain and particularly to metropolitan and cosmopolitan Barcelona where exploitation-minded theatremen have for a long time turned out a highly commendable grade of showmanship on their various attractions.

As in other European situations, the trend, according to correspondent Harry Plummer, is to high-power American publicity methods and these are employed frequently in campaigns comparable in effectiveness with the exploitations on this side.

—A-MIKE VOGEL

Not only is Barcelona Spain's greatest city and principal seaport, but it is her major industrial center. Not less than 60 per cent of the manufacturing in the staple industries of this country is concentrated in this city, which is the Peninsula's chief point of mass production. Machinery, textiles, foodstuffs, glassware, china, porcelain and automotive vehicles and parts and almost every phase of motion-picture projection, sound-recording, studio and laboratory and theatre equipment and furnishings are but items in the vast industrial program of Barcelona. Despite its superb situation at the northwest corner of the Mediterranean, however, Barcelona enjoys relatively inconsiderable export outlets. Other centers of Spain's agricultural areas, such as Sevilla, for olives, olive-oil and wines, Malaga, Huelva, Cadiz, Valencia, Almería, Vigo, Corruña, Santander and Bilbao—and especially the latter—are more favored by foreign consumption, and in the case of Bilbao, not alone agrarian products, but coal, iron and steel and many high-grade manufactures find their markets overseas or overland, beyond the country's frontiers, in France and elsewhere. However, the excellent standard of quality and time-honored reputation of Barcelona's industrial production hold for the city its long-established markets throughout the region of Catalunya of which it is the capital, and all over Spain, and for this reason imports from abroad find it exceedingly difficult to penetrate, let alone hold, the national or regional markets in competition with "made in Barcelona" goods. Motion-picture films and, to a limited extent, thus far, picture equipment and theatre installations, provide the exception. It is a well known fact, of course, that up to the moment films of American production are preferred by the Spanish and Catalan public—original English-language versions with screen-titling in Spanish in the first-run theatres of the larger capitals and dubbed Spanish-language versions in the second-run and lower-classes houses of all parts of the country, while Spanish-language pictures filmed under American producers and directors in Hollywood and in Mexico always find quick response, despite the admitted ascendancy of Spanish home production.

City Is Bi-Racial

One may not estimate Barcelona's position as a consumption center for films or any other foreign product without taking into account the city's bi-racial and bi-lingual heritage. Catalunya, of which it is the capital, is a region composed of several provinces whose people are of distinct ethnological origin and speak a language—not a dialect—that is related to Spanish, as it is to French and to Italian, but that is different in its grammatical construction and forms of speech, as in vocabulary, from Spanish and the other Romance languages.

Physically and in temperament the Catalan is more akin to the Nordic races than to the Latin, and although there is on every hand evidence of admixture through succeeding generations, this has not lessened one whit the preponderant influence of the Catalan language, which is the official medium of the regional Parliament and of the Ayuntamiento de Barcelona, and of some of the courts, as, likewise, of all divisions of the local government within the region. Collegiate and public-school curricula are bi-lingual—in Spanish and Catalan. Thus, in Barcelona and throughout Catalunya, one finds a parallel of the status of Quebec Province and city to the rest of Canada—a people of French origin, speaking the officially recognized French, within the Anglo-Saxon mass of a British dominion. Or that of the Celtic Bretons maintaining their racial traditions and tongue within the Gallic majority of the French republic.

Barcelona counts a population of approximately 1,500,000, of which 75 per cent are working elements of varying grades and degrees. Another 10 per cent of the population would account for the suburban areas from which the city's larger and more important cinemas draw their attendance—the neighborhoods of the metropolis and each suburban "pueblo," or town or village, have their abundance of local picture-theatres, so that only the big first-run houses in the city's center may count upon a clientele from the outlying sections. Naturally that clientele is limited to outstanding film offerings and attractions of a special character. While Barcelona is an outlet and market center for vast agricultural, as well as manufacturing, areas, but a minor proportion of the population of these ever finds its way into the city cinemas or legitimate houses. Local cinemas, in particular, are sufficient to meet the need for entertainment and the lack of any organized drama movement in the Catalan tongue either within or without Barcelona precludes the possibility of a "theatre commuting" public such as has proved to be a box-office factor in the major American cities.

ADVANCE LOBBY. Special advance lobby display of newspaper teaser ads and publicity squibs was used by Herman Starr, Fox Hackensack Theatre, Hackensack, N. J., for "Country Doctor."

Transportation Called Excellent

Unskilled workers constitute by far the majority of the employed population of Barcelona and its environs—60 per cent would be a conservative estimate, but technical and skilled workers would make up another 20 per cent, confined principally to the city proper and another 15 per cent would be accounted for by the "white collar" employee, leaving five per cent for "intellectuals"—artists, newspaper and research workers, professors, teachers, librarians and those assisting them and representing a higher standard of education.

Since the March Spanish elections, the Region of Catalunya enjoys an autonomous form of government, with the regional Parliament centered at Barcelona. The control of theatre operation is vested chiefly in the Ayuntamiento, or municipality, of Barcelona, which assesses a direct tax of ten per cent upon gross receipts, while houses having an admission scale of more than one peseta (7.36c at current U. S. exchange) pay a regional tax of three per cent upon seating capacity. Thus a house of 1,000 seats presenting four shows daily, with an admission price of three pesetas, would be assessed at 12,000 seats and pay a tax of 360 pesetas par day, which is passed on to the attending public. In addition to these are a mendicity tax (for infant relief) of five per cent of receipts while the authors' royalties for Catalunya are fixed at 1.25 per cent on seating capacity. A 50 per cent discount is allowed upon the payment of the governmental taxes in advance.

Barcelona enjoys exceptionally good and frequent transportation service. There are metro (subway) systems tapping the main avenues of pedestrian traffic and trolley system gridirons the city and the nearer suburbs, while, in turn, 'bus lines are active competitors with the electric railways both within and without the city limits. All fares are gauged by zone systems, with 0.15 peseta for the first zone—a distance about equivalent to that from South Ferry to 14th Street in New York—and subsequent zones on the same trip scaled at five to 10 centimos, according to the character of the runs. The taxi operation is both complete and inexpensive, and many cinema patrons proceed to their first-run or second-run house in family or "Dutch treat" groups and, dividing their taxi fare equally, find the transportation but a nominal addition to the collective admission charge.

Low garage space for the theatre hours and abundant free space in the streets in front or immediately adjacent provide parking accommodations for motorists attending the cinemas in both the central and outlying sections of the city. Owing to the situation upon congested traffic arteries of the Capitol and the Catalunya, two of the larger downtown first-run theatres, the parking of cars presents more of a problem, but within a block or two, in the ample spaces of the Plaza Catalunya, accommodations are available for the cars of patrons of both.

Managers' Outside Activities Limited

There are less than ten first-run houses and a slightly greater number of second-runs, but there are 145 cinemas of lesser category and these range from small neighborhood establishments seating an average of 500 to big caravanseries, one-time legitimate theatres of the second or third-class and now converted into what the trade styles "shooting-galleries."

The Fémina, the Coliseum and the Astoria, leading first-run cinemas more nearly comparable to the de-luxe houses of the United States, and under the direct control, respectively, of the Metro, Paramount and Radio Spanish affiliate companies, have resident managers, whose operation policy, naturally, is governed by those entities. Rarely does any of the three show films other than those distributed by the controlling factors and the publicity and advertising policy of each dove-tails with that of the distributing unit it represents. All other houses, first-run and subordinate, are independent of distributor control, although present indications point to the acquirement by the principal American distributors of second-run outlets with the beginning of the 1936-37 season. The Catalunya, while occasionally showing 20th Century-Fox productions, is generally accepted as the teatro de estreno for native Spanish productions and this theatre was the scene of the premieres, this season, of two outstanding Spanish-produced films—"Nobleza Batura" and "Morena Clara"—each of which enjoyed a four weeks' run there. The Capitol about divides its American bookings between 20th Century-Fox and Warner Brothers-First National attractions, with Columbia and Universal closely following, while the Maryland shows Warner Brothers-First National and Columbia pictures and the Urquinaona Metro, Fox, Warner Brothers-First National, United Artists and Universal attractions. Warner films have recently appeared also in the Poliorama, a former legitimate theatre famous for its stage successes, but now converted into a cinema. The Fantasio is a frequent scene of Fox first-runs. Besides the Urquinaona, United Artists books its attractions at the Coliseum, of which S. D. Romano is manager, but which is devoted mainly to Paramount films, with occasional French importations.

The Capitol, a leading first-run house, and the Kursaal, one of the largest and best-situated second-runs, are key theatres of syndicate chains, the proprietor of the former, Antonio Solé, heading, also, the Excelsior, Audion, Condal, San Andrés and two smaller houses in the Pueblo Nuevo, and José La Farga, operating also the Iris Park, Cine Barcelona, Padró and Bohemia. Two other important chains are headed respectively by Francisco Benages and, as a co-partnership, Francisco Fernández and Otto Lehman.

Community and social activities of the proprietors or managers of theatres, large or small, for the express purpose of furthering their business objectives, are not developed in Barcelona or elsewhere in Spain as in the United States. Many of the executives of the more important houses are members of leading clubs and various social and business organizations, but their influence is rarely exerted in a community sense, although virtually all are members of the Asociación de Empresarios de Espectaculos de Catalunya, the exhibitor organization, with headquarters in this city.

Theatres Are Nicely Appointed

The city's chief first-run houses and the better-known second-runs are nicely appointed. Scrupulous cleanliness and excellent ventilation prevail, with heating in the winter months and refrigeration in the summer, but, excepting the Astoria, Fémina and Coliseum, none is in any way comparable, for luxurious and super-scientific standards, with the principal picture theatres of American cities. Western Electric and R. C. A. Photophone sound and projection systems prevail in the distributor-controlled houses and in many other first and second-run theatres, while many of the houses of lesser rank, including, even, some of the "shooting-galleries" are equipped with the former. Tobis Klang-film and Orpheo-Sincronic, respectively German and Spanish, prevail in most of the others, while makeshift sound-projection still rasps the ears and nerves of the patrons of smaller units where the admission prices are nil.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

BABY HEADQUARTERS. This snappy drugstore window was promoted by G. N. Turner, Family Theatre, Pine City, Minn., for "Country Doctor". Store also prepared display for lobby.

The first-run theatres have an average top of 5.50 pesetas, (about 72 cents) with slight advances for Sundays and the more important holidays — Easter, Christmas, April 14 (the Birthday of the Republic) and October 12 (The Day of the Iberian Race), but such outstanding attractions this season as "Top Hat," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "The Milky Way," "Desire," "The Littlest Rebel," ran much higher, two or three of them scaling to 10 pesetas, a good figure for first class stage attractions in this city and approaching the grand opera level. Second-run and neighborhood cinemas, however, fall away below these figures and from one peseta to as low as 0.30 peseta for the "general" section are fair averages in the majority of houses of lesser rank.

Legitimate theatre competition in Barcelona is not a serious factor in cinema calculations, except when an outstanding production with ranking stars comes from Madrid. Then, despite the advanced price scale, the attendance drawn away from the picture theatres is to be reckoned with. But the outdoor attractions, peculiarly favored by Spain's splendid climate — bull-fights, football and baseball, rapidly increasing in popular favor, golf, swimming and motor-boating and all manner of sports—as well as wrestling and boxing matches and the fronton (pelota) indoor arena attractions, all well organized here, show an ever-advancing competition.

Papers Stress Publicity

The Barcelona newspapers feature the cinema, both in news and advertising to an infinitely greater extent than do metropolitan dailies in the United States. The 38-page "Vanguardia," the city's principal morning issue, runs from three to four full pages of film news, none of it, however, syndicated, but, apart from the reviews, virtually all supplied by the distributor and exhibitor units, American, Spanish and European, and some of it directly coming from Hollywood and New York. Interspersed with this news are one and two-column displays of the week's first-runs and even some second-runs, while virtually all of the syndicate and individual third, fourth and fifth run cinemas, even to those of lowest admission level, are represented in an advertising directory of film attractions. All of the morning and evening newspapers devote a greater proportion of space to the motion-picture theatres than do the American papers. For this reason the weekly spread familiar to readers in America is unknown, due mainly to the fact that no one day of the week, such as Sunday, is featured by an issue of unusual size. All newspaper publication is suspended on Monday morning and Sunday evening throughout Spain and a four-page "Hoja Oficial" (Official Sheet), with limited cinema advertising and virtually no reading matter, issued by the local press association of each of the principal cities, presents the national, foreign and local news.

Barcelona Theatres Have Ace Publicists

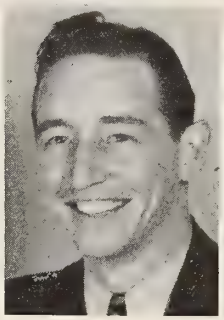
While all of the distributor organizations and exhibiting chains and major units are equipped with publicity departments headed by experienced "live wire" newspaper men and while these keep the press fully supplied with propaganda material, the "tie-up," either with newspapers or with organizations and retail merchants does not represent the advanced stage of development that it does in the United States and Canada, due to the traditional conservatism of the Spanish and Catalan peoples. Despite this inherent handicap, however, attractions of the principal American distributors and those, also, of the Spanish Cifesa and Iberica, the latter now releasing through United Artists, through the season now closing, in particular, showed a distinct trend to the "high-power" publicity methods of American showmanship.

Exploitation Is High-Powered

Outstanding examples of this trend were to be seen in the publicity attending the recent estrenos of "The Littlest Rebel," with a nation-wide "Shirley Temple double" contest offering a 5,000-peseta and silver-cup award that gained hundreds of thousands of dollars of free newspaper and radio publicity; of "Mutiny on the Bounty," featured by an exhibition under quasi-official auspices with genuine buccaneer relics, models and charts and stills of the coming and current attraction and those to follow at the Fémina and including a branch box-office; of "Top Hat," "Roberta" and "Gay Divorcée" with veritable climax-building campaigns that had for their principal motif the public registering of the Astaire-Rogers songs and dances; of "The Milky Way," "Wings in the Night" and "Desire" and, by way of appropriate contrast in technique, of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which, for superlatively good taste and restraint, won the admiration of the discriminating musical and artistic elements of this city and Madrid and the major centres of the republic.



All first-runs are covered by ample reviews in the leading newspapers by competent and experienced critics specializing in cinema history and evolution and while the reviewers patriotically strive to encourage the national production of the Spanish studios, they do not hesitate to bear heavily upon mediocre offerings in acting and technique. In the main they treat justly and fairly the average run of American and European films and not infrequently acclaim unstintedly the bigger features coming from Hollywood.

THE NATIONAL BOARD

THE story presented in the lay press of New York on the news provocation of the resignation of Dr. Louis I. Harris from the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, charging that old and honourable organization with futility, is to be regarded at once remarkable—and, alas, inevitable.

It is one of those stories that the motion picture industry has known and not talked about, for these several years, just as one is reluctant and gentle about pointing to the foibles and infirmities of an old friend.

AND a friend the National Board has ever been, and is, despite its long waning vigour. There is scarcely a producer who has been active more than a decade who has not a debt of appreciation to the friendly and intelligent services of the National Board and its personnel. Through years in which the motion picture industry was less well organized, the National Board and its Mr. William D. McGuire, Jr., and his assistant and successor, Mr. Wilton A. Barrett, constituted the most intelligent and effective defense against the unending flow of censorship agitations, and censorship operations. The National Board and its leaders have ever believed in the motion picture, sometimes even beyond the makers of pictures.

THAT vital element of belief in fact accounts for the very existence of the Board. It was born of a group of public-minded persons attached to the People's Institute of New York way back yonder when the then powerful New York stage was hell bent with propaganda and influence for the suppression of the screen theatre. It got its support, and nourishment, from within the industry from the one man who above all the rest stood for order, discipline, the business of relating the product to American mores—the late and able Jeremiah J. Kennedy, the iron boss who erected and operated the Motion Picture Patents Company. Mr. Kennedy and the Patents Company have gone, and all their chieftains with them. The National Board lingers on. It was the National Board of Censorship when it was founded. The name was good for publicity purposes then. Sentiment running strongly against the pictures from pulpit and press, it suited the boss of the movies then to have a friendly censorship, but emphatically and most publicly a censorship. It was considerably a censorship, then, too. It ordered deletions, changes, and got them — in the United States. The special foreign version was invented in those days. But presently, in a bit over a decade, it became somewhat inconsistent of the motion picture industry, or rather the inconsistency became obvious, to be ever making war against the crying out about censorships and the while stamping its product with the label of one, even though internal and friendly. So it came that the name was changed to the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures.

THAT was good publicity, too, and none was a more persistent and loud contender against censorship than "The National Board." But somewhere about then, by tacit understanding or none, the line "Passed by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures" was as a matter of routine placed on the main title of the pictures in the studios, east and west, long before they went to the reviewing committees of the National Board.

It was a comfortable arrangement. It was the disposition of the National Board to let nature take its course. Pictures were classified "family audience," "juvenile," and the like. "Exceptional photoplays" got a notice. Hollywood and the rest of the world's studios never heard much about it all.

Clubwomen, social workers and socially minded groups did. Better Films Committees, locally important but not very emphatic in New York and Hollywood, were organized by members or affiliates of the National Board, and operated, as they do today, on the basis of the Board's reports, reviews and bulletins.

BUT the National Board that had been the answer to censorship issues in the days of the Patents Company did not prevail, or seem to seek to prevail, against the rising tide of the contaminations that came from the stage and fiction into the sound and all too talking picture. Manifestations were many and, to a few observers, obvious indeed. They ranged from the censorship projects of Canon William Sheafe Chase, starting in 1909, through many mutations to the never quite completely disclosed program of the late William Harrison Short of the Motion Picture Research Council. Mostly these movements were highly personified in their origin and diffuse in their administration.

When, however, the increasing protests against invasion of the entertainment of the millions with persistent violation of the mores of the articulate portion of society brought into action the Legion of Decency, founded in Catholic solidarity and carrying with it the support of Jewish and Protestant churchmen, it became mayhap a bit evident that the prior

The Encyclical

"Signal success in the greatest of the social adjustments of the motion picture, achieved for it by the American industry in its adoption of and operation under the Production Code, is recorded in terms destined to become historic in the encyclical letter discussing the screen by Pope Pius XI," writes Terry Ramsaye.

Mr. Ramsaye's article starts on page 13 and the text of the papal encyclical on page 14.

Motion picture stocks gained $29,000,000 in values during the first six months of 1936, rising in market valuation from a total worth of $692,897,500 at the end of 1935, to $721,668,250 on July 1st.

The reasons for the rise, and a comparison of prices of stocks and bonds, appear on pages 64 and 65.

Still on Warpath

The defeat in Congress of Representative Pettengill's proposal to outlaw block booking and blind buying is by no means the end of his fight to control motion pictures by federal law—his constituents willing. The Congressman comes up for reelection in Indiana in November.

His attitude on the subject is discussed on page 66.

At the Reins

A bright future for Paramount was predicted by the directors and new officers of the company this week as Barney Balaban, head of the Paramount-affiliated Chicago circuit of Balaban & Katz, took over the reins as president of Paramount Pictures, Inc. Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board, who will be in complete charge of production, left for Hollywood expressing great satisfaction at the presidential choice of the directors.

How the news of Mr. Balaban's election was received within the organization and in the motion picture world generally is told on page 84.

Rift over Censorship

Large distributing companies have ignored the "Cuban Board of Censors in New York" which began operations on July 1st as the second of two bodies authorized to review pictures destined for the Cuban market. Film executives have protested the censorship plan on the grounds that there is apparently no final authority to give permission for exhibition in Cuba and that the fee charged for review is excessive.

The deadlock and the details of the Cuban plan are outlined on page 132.

Board Schism

In a letter announcing his resignation from the executive committee of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, Dr. Louis I. Harris charged that the Board cannot fulfill its expressed aims because it is "financed largely by the motion picture industry itself." In Dr. Harris' opinion the Board "is not doing anything significant, dynamic or progressive to give effect to its oft-expressed ideals." Answering Dr. Harris' charges, Dr. George W. Kirchwey, chairman of the Board, said that he and others would not be giving many valuable hours to the work if they felt it was not bringing results.

The charges and the reply are reported on page 85.

British Problems

Out of the Summer Conference of the British Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association at Eastbourne have come, from behind the scenes, several developments predicated upon the tendency of speakers and exhibitor units to accuse American companies of excessive rentals, coercive methods, and overbuilding. A propaganda and statistical committee was decided upon to study methods of combating "redundancy," or overseating.

Other highlights of the Conference are discussed on page 94.

Politics in Films

While there has been marked improvement in standards of pictures in both the United States and England, the censorship authorities in London are finding a problem in the infiltration of politics into films, Lord Tyrrell, president of the British Board of Censors, told the Eastbourne gathering.

These and other highlights of Lord Tyrrell's observations are presented in an article on page 95.

French Dilemma

The wage increase all along the line, coupled with reduction of working hours, as a result of the general strike in France, will mean a 30 per cent increase in production costs, according to Max de Vaucorbeil, director. Of even greater importance, internationally, in his eyes, will be an opening of the market for foreign product because the French producers will be forced to make inferior product.

Details of wage scales and working conditions under the temporary agreements reached by all branches with the Federation of Trade Unions are recorded on page 101.

The Chance Game Front

Activities along the national chance game front were noted this week in seven states. There were decisions in favor of the games as well as resolutions to stamp them out, by state and municipal officials, along with the decision of Loew's, in Manhattan, to install Bank Night in three of its more important theatres.

For details see page 96.

Australia's Strides

Production is looking up in Australia, with four strongly financed companies now actively engaged and a prospect of an output of 30 features within another year if the public's liking for home productions continues to progress, writes Cliff Holt from Melbourne.

Further details on page 102.

GB-Fox Progress

Sale of its 49 per cent interest in Gaumont-British Pictures by Twentieth Century-Fox or purchase by the Fox company of a further and controlling interest in the British concern will result from negotiations now under way between Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the Fox board, and Isidor Ostrer, president of Gaumont. Mr. Schenck confirmed the fact that a deal is contemplated, but would not give further details.

Possible eventuations are analyzed on page 18.

Lawyers Puzzled

Preliminary questioning of Herbert Leitsteen, bookkeeper for William Fox, former motion picture producer who has filed a petition in bankruptcy, proved of little help to counsel for creditors as a federal referee in Atlantic City resumed proceedings to establish the bankrupt's financial status and the validity of claims against him. Mr. Leitsteen professed inability to tell from his records what were Mr. Fox's assets on any given date, claimed that books and records for 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1930 have disappeared, and admitted he could not give an account of the spending of a $15,000,000 check received by the former multi-millionaire in 1930.

The proceedings are reviewed on page 118.

Another Suit

An echo of the St. Louis anti-trust actions of recent months was heard this week when Judge Merrill E. Otis of the United States District court of Kansas City set July 24th as the date of trial of the suit of Emanuel Rolsky versus Fox Midwest and major distributors. At the same time, Charles Franklin, attorney, revealed he had filed papers and issued summons for the Franklin Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of Hawaii, against Warner Bros. in New York, charging conspiracy against the Hawaiian concern. He said he planned to produce contracts to prove his points.

For details see page 96.

Preview

Pearl S. Buck's Pulitzer prize-winning novel of 1931, "The Good Earth," rounds into final form as an Irving G. Thalberg production on the 500-acre location in the Santa Suzanna mountains where Paul Muni and Louise Rainer enact the Wang Lung and O-lan of the story under Sidney Franklin's direction while studio comment compares the maturing production with "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Gus McCarthy's pictorial preview of the picture appears on pages 16-17.

devices of the industry, including the exparte but dependent National Board, had been somewhat less than adequate.

It was, in sequel, with some surprise that a meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in February heard Mr. Wilton A. Barrett of the board, speaking from that motion picture rostrum, remark, as recorded by Motion Picture Daily, that: "Neither the Legion of Decency nor any other groups with an axe to grind have improved films one bit."

Dr. Harris, in his letter of resignation, charges "the board has failed to serve as the spokesman of the American community . . ." And that is rather a more serious matter than his opinion that "it was of questionable propriety for the board to accept for its principal source of maintenance and support money paid to it by the motion picture industry for the review of pictures."

The question before the motion picture industry is: What is the significance of the line on the screen, "Passed by the National Board of Review?"

Has a job been done by the National Board for the motion picture, the motion picture industry and for the public?

The answer seems to be in the papers.

New License Tax

The City Council of Los Angeles is preparing a new schedule of city license fees that will tax film companies an estimated $15,050. Calculated production costs of $93,480,000 this year are being taken as a basis for the schedule. Elimination of the present business license ordinance asking a flat $400 annually from major and independent producers will be sought by the Ways and Means committee of the Council. The new plan will adjust the tax on production from $50 annually for studios showing production costs of less than $25,000, to $700 annually for studios exceeding $500,000 yearly.

Exhibitors Elect

John Stapel of Rockport, Mo., was re-elected president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Owners Association at Kansas City this week and other exhibitor activities included meetings in New York, Boston and Denver.

Giannini Heads UA

Dr. A. H. Giannini on Wednesday was unanimously elected president and chairman of the board of United Artists Corporation. At the meeting were Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Samuel Goldwyn, and Murray Silverstone representing Alexander Korda. Mr. Giannini said he will retire as chairman of the general executive committee of Bancamerica but will continue as director.

Confidence

Inspired or not by Warren William's purchase of his unexpired Warner contract for a reported $10,000, or by Fredric March's similar decision to travel the open road, players are eyeing with enthusiasm the free lance basis of operations, many of them taking it, presumably with consent of agent. A trend, of greater or less duration, is foreseen.

The matter is reported on page 63.

Skouras Auction

Nelson Cunliff, federal bankruptcy trustee in St. Louis, is expected to set a date shortly for the public auction of the assets of the bankrupt estate of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., and the principal assets of the company include a 52 per cent interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company. It is this interest which will attract most of the bids, the strongest of which is expected to come from Fanchon and Marco.

For full details, see the story on page 86.

Minors Bill Signed

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia this week fulfilled an election promise to New York theatre men when he signed a new measure permitting the admission of children to theatres unaccompanied by adults. The permission is not without certain restrictions, however, chief of which is the requirement of a matron at each theatre to care for the children.

These details, and others covering legislation concerning theatres in other states, are discussed in the story found on page 102.

Business Overseas

Two new theatres are nearing completion in South America and building in Egypt and Panama is practically at a standstill although film business in general is good, according to Louis Lober, Jack Neal and William Melniker, representatives for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the three territories.

The reports of the three men who are in New York for conferences are summarized on page 118.

This Week in Pictures

PLAY IS OVER, and so Joan Bennett returns from a vacation in London to start work at Paramount's studio in "Wedding Present," her newest picture.

GOING PLACES. And she started that way, too, for Lilli Palmer, GB junior star, was born on a train. She's in "The Great Barrier."

HONORS FROM OVERSEAS. "For excellence of screen technique and general photography," reads the citation of the Italian Government Cup award to Paramount presented to John W. Hicks, Jr., in charge of the foreign department, by Gaetano Vecchiotti, Italian consul general. The presentation was made in Radio City at the Italian Consulate.

CELEBRITY AT NINETEEN. Jack Dunn (seated), Olympic champion free and fancy skater, has been signed by Universal. It was as skating partner of Sonja Henie that he came to Hollywood's attention. Here he's seen with Gregory LaCava, William Powell, Gail Patrick, Micha Auer and Carole Lombard.

FIGHTS A NATIVE. Maxie Rosenbloom, American pugilist, shows Chut Kangaroo a few pointers (and learns a few himself, maybe) at the Cinesound Productions studio in Australia.

RECEIVING HONORS. (Right) When awards of the Venice International Film Exposition went to RKO Radio's "Becky Sharp" and "The Informer," the presentation was made in Radio City by the Italian consul general, Gaetano Vecchiotti. (L. to r.) Phil Reisman, vice-president of RKO Export; Mr. Vecchiotti; M. H. Aylesworth, chairman of RKO Radio, and Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Distributing.

TALENT HUNT. Louis F. Blumenthal, of Haring and Blumenthal, New York circuit, and operator of the French Casino, goes abroad.

SKATES INTO FILMS. When Kit Klein, women's world ice-skating champion, took a trial spin in a newsreel the other day, MGM brought her to New York for feature work.

TO CAPACITY BUSINESS. Walter King operates the New Rialto theatre at 27th and San Pablo avenue in San Francisco. Here's the way his marquee looked to the passerby when he showed "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head" and "Million Dollar Baby." The 800-seat house was packed.

A GOLFING FAMILY. Charles C. Pettijohn, Jr., of Westchester Country Club, won the Westchester junior championship last weekend at the Whippoorwill Golf Club. Father and son play hasn't gone quite so well, but the Senior Pettijohn doesn't care about that.

OUT OF THE SILENTS. Robert Florey (standing) is directing two stars of the days before sound, Francis X. Bushman (left) and Charles Ray, in Paramount's "Hollywood Boulevard," which has to do with the lives of screen players. More than 30 silent stars appear.

CONVENTIONS CONTINUE. But it's not the United Artists gathering just concluded in Los Angeles. Monroe Greenthal, director of advertising and publicity calls a beaming pair of the Goldwyn Girls to order, and then throws away the gavel. This week he is in Chicago en route to New York.

THE ENCYCLICAL

Its Significance to the Motion Picture and the Industry

by TERRY RAMSAYE

SIGNAL success in the greatest of the social adjustments of the motion picture, achieved for it by the American industry in its adoption of and operation under the Production Code, is recorded in terms destined to become historic in the encyclical letter discussing the screen by Pope Pius XI.

The encyclical was given to the press of the world from Rome July 2, and is presented in full in its official English translation in this issue of Motion Picture Herald.

This document and occasion marks for the screen the most important of its conscious, purposeful movements toward the integration of the art with the fabric of civilization, and in world comprehending terms.

It is significant indeed to read, set down in the words of the supreme pontiff and custodian of the conservative Christian tradition of the centuries, his judgment of the motion picture as "the greatest of the arts."

The larger import of this expression from the Holy See is to the world audience, a declaration of appreciation and acceptance in a position of transcending religious authority to many millions and a figure of moral and social significance to all peoples.

WITHIN the motion picture industry, the encyclical is to be seen as of significant recognition, and approval, of the Production Code adopted in March of 1930, concerning which the letter observes:

"It is promised in this agreement that no film which lowers the moral standard of spectators, which casts discredit on natural or human law or arouses sympathy for their violation will be produced." And this is judged by His Holiness as "a wise and spontaneously taken decision."

Those words will be viewed with special satisfaction by those leaders, members and servants of the organized industry who have laboured to create, supply and maintain the spontaneity.

Also of special interest to the organized industry is the papal approval of the plan, purposes and methods of the Legion of Decency as the instrument of the American Bishops in their endeavour to assist in attuning the moral quality of the motion picture to the standards of society, an activity conducted under the direction of Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati, vigorously successful in support of a common objective of a screen both wholesome and thoroughly vital.

THE production community of Hollywood with its international audience will be conscious of a tribute to attainment significant around the whole world of the screen and its audience, in the words of the Pope addressing the Bishops of the United States, saying that they "will be able to insist with justice that the industry in your country has recognized and accepted its responsibility before society."

In substance the organized American industry's system of operation under the Production Code is held before the world by Pope Pius as an example for study and guidance.

It is not, however, to be gathered that there is any declaration of a state of perfection, and the encyclical sets forth to the churchmen of the world, including the American Bishops first addressed, the importance of an unrelenting vigilance against invasions of the purposes embodied in the Code, and includes provisions for the expression of the moral pressures indicated. Provision for reviewing committees and the issuance of lists of approved product, in the general manner of the Legion of Decency operation, is indicated. There is also significant suggestion that in time there may be encouragement and inspiration for production more specifically addressed to the audiences most specifically concerned.

"Vigilant care" is the title of and are among the most emphatic words of the encyclical.

IN the motion picture industry the encyclical and the matters and movements to which it relates takes a place of culminative meaning in sequence with and sequel to sporadic attentions to the screen from the pulpits and from clergymen as long as thirty years ago, and internal endeavours in cooperation with socially minded persons in the People's Institute of New York in 1909. The organized industry of the era was represented by the Motion Picture Patents Company. The movement for the interpretation of American mores to the producers, strong for its day, waned with the passing of the Patents company and the all too swift fading of its disciplinary influences. Authority went out of the "code" of that day. A marked social consciousness in the motion picture machine was not to significantly assert itself again until the formation of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., some fourteen years ago, installing in leadership Mr. Will H. Hays. It was to this association and to Mr. Hays that Mr. Martin Quigley, publisher of Motion Picture Herald and its affiliated contemporaries, in 1930 presented the plan and document of the Production Code, which became of enhanced and re-recognized utility with the revision of its plan of enforcement and with the rise of the Legion of Decency movement in 1934.

HISTORICALLY the encyclical on the motion picture coming in this year of 1936 is in continuity with the utterances of the Roman Church concerning the written word dating from the middle of the fifth century and coming into full expression with the arrival of the art of printing and the flood of books, resulting in the publication of the Index Librorum Prohibitorum in 1557, with the approval of Pope Paul IV.

The eighteenth Council of Trent, February 1562, finding that the Index, a code of publication in effect, was becoming inadequate, it was presently revised, brought down to date and fortified. From time to time later councils gave the Index attention, including new materials. The last important attention, modernizing the application of the Index, and considerably liberalizing its related provisions, was given by Pope Leo XIII in 1897, when the motion picture, incidentally, was but a year old on the amusement screens of the world.

If one seeks to discover what may be anticipated of applications of the attentions to the motion picture indicated by the current encyclical in the future, excellent delineation of pattern can be found in the canon law and rules pertaining to the Index, which in its modern version is presented to its audience and the churchmen as a guidance beyond its specific provisions and reposing local authority to deal with local conditions and problems in the Ordinary—which means the Bishop of the diocese, or such person as may exercise jurisdiction in his name. With respect to administration the motion picture encyclical is of a piece with the rules of the Index, evolved for the kindred and prior art of publication.

TEXT OF PAPAL ENCYCLICAL

On this and succeeding pages appears the official translation into English of the Latin text of the papal encyclical on motion pictures issued at Rome on July 2nd.

Encyclical Letter
To our Venerable Brethren,
Archbishops and Bishops of the United States of America, and To other Ordinaries enjoying peace and communion with the Holy See:
On Motion Pictures
Pope Pius XI

Venerable brethren, greetings and apostolic benediction:

In following with vigilant eye, as our pastoral office requires, the beneficent works of our brethren in the episcopate and of the faithful, it has been highly pleasing to us to learn of the fruits already gathered and of the progress which continues to be made by that prudent initiative launched more than two years ago as a holy crusade against the abuses of motion pictures and which was in a special manner entrusted to "The Legion of Decency."

It is an excellent experiment that now offers us a most welcome opportunity of manifesting more fully our thought in regard to a matter which touches intimately the moral and religious life of the entire Christian people.

First of all, we express our gratitude to the higher hierarchy in the United States of America, and to the faithful who cooperated with them, for the important results already achieved under their direction and guidance, by "The Legion of Decency." And our gratitude is all the livelier for the fact that we were deeply anguished to note with each passing day the lamentable progress, "magni passus extra viam," of the motion-picture art and industry in the portrayal of sin and vice.

As often as the occasion has presented itself we have considered it the duty of our high office to direct to this condition the attention not only of the episcopate clergy but also of all men who are right minded and solicitous for the public weal.

In the encyclical "Divini illius magistri," we had already deplored that "potent instrumentalities of publicity (such as the cinema), which might be of great advantage to learning and education were they properly directed by healthy principles, often unfortunately serve as an incentive to evil and passions and are subordinated to sordid gain."

In August, 1934, addressing ourselves to a delegation of the International Federation of the Motion Pictures Press, we pointed out the very great importance which the motion picture has acquired in our day and its vast influence alike in promotion of good and insinuation of evil. We called to mind that it is necessary to apply to the cinema a supreme rule which must direct and regulate the greatest of art in order that it may not find itself in continual conflict with Christian morality or even simply with human morality based upon natural law.

The essential purpose of art, its "raison d'etre," is to assist in the perfection of moral personality which is man, and for this reason art must itself be moral. And we concluded amid manifest approval of the elect body—a memory still dear to us—by recommending to them the necessity of making the motion picture "moral, an influence for good morals, an educator."

And even as recently as April of this year, when we had happiness in receiving in audience a group of delegates of the international congress of the motion picture press held in Rome, we again drew attention to the gravity of the problem and warmly exhorted all men of good will, in the name not only of religion but also of the true moral and civil welfare of the people, to use every means in their power, such as the press, to make of the cinema a valuable auxiliary of instruction and education rather than of destruction and ruin of the soul.

The subject, however, is of such paramount importance in itself and because of the present condition of society that we deem it necessary to return to it again, not alone for the purpose of making particular recommendations, as on past occasions, but rather with a universal outlook, which while embracing the needs of your own dioceses, venerable brethren, takes into consideration those of the entire Catholic world.

It is, in fact, urgently necessary to make provision that in this field also, the progress of art, sciences and human technique in the industry, since they are all true gifts of God, may be ordained in his glory and to the salvation of souls, and may be made to serve in a practical way to promote the extension of the Kingdom of God upon earth. Thus, as the Church bids us pray that we may all profit by them in such manner as not to lose the goods external: "Sic transeamus per bone temporalia ut non amittamus aeterna" (unofficially translated. "Thus we pass along the good territory bringing to ourselves the eternal good").

Now, then, it is a certainty which can readily be verified that the more marvelous is progress of the motion-picture art and industry, the more pernicious and deadly has it shown itself to morality, religion, even to the very decencies of human society.

The directors of the industry in the United States recognized this fact themselves when they confessed that the responsibility before the people and the world was their very own. In the agreement entered into by common accord March, 1930, solemnly sealed, signed and published in the press, they formally pledged themselves to safeguard in the future the moral welfare of patrons of the cinema.

POINTS TO IMPROVEMENT ACHIEVED

It is promised in this agreement that no film which lowers the moral standard of spectators, which casts discredit on natural or human law, or arouses sympathy for their violation, will be produced.

Nevertheless, in spite of this wise and spontaneously taken decision, those responsible showed themselves incapable of carrying it into effect. It appeared operators were not disposed to stand by principles to which they obligated themselves. Since, therefore, the above-mentioned undertakings proved they have but slight effect, since the parade of vice and crime continued on the screen, the road seemed almost closed to those who sought honest diversion in the motion picture.

In this crisis you venerable brethren were among the first to study the means of safeguarding the souls entrusted to your care. You launched "The Legion of Decency" as a crusade for public morality designed to revitalize the ideals of natural and Christian rectitude. Far from you was the thought of doing damage to the motion picture industry: rather, indeed, did you arm it beforehand against the ruin which menaces every form of recreation which in the guise of art degenerates into corruption.

Cooperation of Other Faiths

Your leadership calls forth the prompt and devoted loyalty of your faithful people. Millions of American Catholics signed the pledge of "The Legion of Decency," binding themselves not to attend any motion picture which was offensive to Catholic moral principles or the proper standards of living. We thus were able to proclaim joyfully that few problems of these latter times have so closely united the bishops and the people as the one resolved by cooperation in this holy crusade. Not only Catholic but also highminded Protestants and Jews and many others accepted your lead and joined their efforts with yours in restoring wise standards, both artistic and moral, to the cinema.

It is an exceedingly great comfort to us to note the outstanding success of the crusade. Because of your vigilance and because of the pressure which has been brought to bear by public opinion, the motion picture has shown improvement from the moral standpoint; crime and vice are portrayed less frequently; sin no longer is so openly approved or acclaimed; false ideals of life no longer are presented in so flagrant a manner to the impressionable minds of youth.

Although in certain quarters it was predicted that artistic values in the motion picture would be impaired seriously by the reform insisted upon by "The Legion of Decency," it appears quite the contrary happened and "The Legion of Decency" has given no little impetus to efforts to advance the cinema on the road to noble artistic significance by directing it towards the production of classic masterpieces as well as of original creations of uncommon work.

Nor have financial investments in the industry suffered, as was foretold gratuitously by many. Those who stayed away from the motion picture theatre because it outraged morality are patronizing it now that they are able to enjoy clean films which are not offensive to good morals or dangerous to Christian virtue.

When you started your crusade it was said your efforts would be of short duration and the effects would not be lasting because, as the vigilance of bishops and the faithful gradually diminished, the producers would be free to return again to their former methods. It is not difficult to understand why certain of these might be desirous of going back to sinister themes which pandered to base desires and which you have proscribed. While representation of subjects of real artistic value and the portrayal of vicissitudes of human virtue require intellectual efforts, toil and ability, and, at times, considerable outlay of money, it is often relatively easy to attract a certain type of person and certain classes of people to theatres which present picture plays calculated to inflame passions and arouse lower instincts latent in human hearts.

Permanent Movement

Unceasing, universal vigilance must, on the contrary, convince the producers that "The Legion of decency" has not been started as a crusade of short duration, soon to be neglected and forgotten, but that the bishops of the United States are determined at all times and at all costs to safeguard the recreation of the people in whatever form that recreation may take.

Recreation in its manifold variety has become a necessity of people who labor under the fatiguing conditions of modern industry, but it must be worthy of the rational nature of man and therefore must be morally healthy. It must be elevated to the rank of a positive factor for good, and must seek to arouse a noble sentiment. People who in time of repose give themselves to diversions which violate decency, honor or morality, to recreations which, especially to the young, constitute occasions for sin, are in grave danger of losing their greatest, even their national, power.

It admits of no discussion that the motion picture has achieved in these last years, a position of universal importance among modern means of diversion.

There is no need to point out the fact that millions of people go to motion pictures every day; that motion picture theatres are being opened in ever-increasing numbers in civilized and semi-civilized countries; that the motion picture has become the most popular form of diversion which is offered for the leisure moments, not only of the rich, but of all classes of society.

At the same time there exists today no means of influencing the masses more potent than the cinema. The reason for this is to be sought for in the very nature of the picture projected upon the screens, in the popularity of the motion picture plays and in the circumstances which accompany them.

The power of the motion picture consists in this: That is speaks by means of vivid and concrete imagery which the mind takes in with enjoyment and without fatigue.

Even the crudest and most primitive minds,

VATICAN CITY, July 2—(AP)—Pope Pius ordered a permanent, organized fight of the Roman Catholic Church Thursday to save the world from the "debasing" influence of "bad films."

TO THE EDITOR OF MOTION PICTURE HERALD:

"The fact that two competitive news services gave entirely opposite interpretations to the recent letter of Pope Pius regarding films prompts me to send you the enclosed clippings (reproduced above) and ask that you give us a fair interpretation of the letter.

"We feel that there must be some underlying cause for the AP to stress the 'bad' angle of films if the Pope could likewise include in his letter the fact that the industry has made progress in the other direction. Nor do we believe this industry should sit idly by and allow this cause to go uncorrected."—C. B. GRIMES, Manager, Bama Theatre, Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

PEARL S. BUCK'S "The Good Earth" was not written for persons who like to read themselves to sleep. It's been keeping multitudes awake since March of 1931, when the Book of the Month Club claimed it for member readers, and it's been a sort of Chinese Bible to the English-speaking world since the Pulitzer committee named it the book of the year. What the author's twenty years in China taught her about the country her book has taught so widely and well as to make its accurate picturization a quasi-public responsibility. Irving G. Thalberg accepted it as such and studio comment has referred to the maturing result as MGM's "Mutiny on the Bounty" for this year.

Mr. Thalberg had no boats to build this time, but he did have to rebuild five hundred acres of the Santa Suzanna mountains, equip them with rice fields, a complete North China village, a liberal segment of the Great Wall of China and people, animals, streams and trees to suit.

He sought experience and versatility in his executive personnel. To Sidney Franklin, successful with such diversified material as "Smilin' Through" and "The Guardian Angel," he assigned the direction. To Frances Marion, whose writings date from the evolution of the scenario and embrace every kind thereof, he assigned the script.

Paul Muni, fresh from brilliant characterizations in "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "Bordertown," was given the role of Wang Lung, the Chinese farmer, and Luise Rainer, of "Escapade" and "The Great Ziegfeld," was cast as O-lan, his wife. Walter Connolly and Charley Grapewin were placed in principal support, on the American side, with Chinese players, recruited from many sources, performing sixty-eight additional speaking roles.

As to whether the "Mutiny" comparison will be borne out by the box office, only time and the paying public can tell. Meanwhile the camera tells the story of the picture in pictures, ranged hereabouts, while the work of production goes on.

SCHENCK HINTS AIM IS GAUMONT-BRITISH HOLD

20th Century-Fox Chairman Indicates Coming Transfer of $10,000,000 in GB Shares

Transfer of $10,000,000 in shares of Gaumont-British Pictures Corporation in England, and consequently the controlling interest in the company, is expected to result from negotiations being now conducted in Hollywood by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox Corporation, and Isidor Ostrer, president of the British company, in America from London, it was indicated by Mr. Schenck on Tuesday. Both companies are reported willing either to buy or sell their share in G-B.

The Fox company holds 49 per cent of the Gaumont-British stock, the Ostrer brothers, London bankers, controlling the corporation at present with 51 per cent. For a year persistent reports have indicated that the Fox company might be negotiating with the English bankers for purchase of the British concern. Mr. Ostrer arrived in New York last week and left immediately for Hollywood. Mr. Schenck's confirmation of the conference was the first definite indication of the impending sale of interests. The conferences are "in the embryo stage," he said.

Wireless reports from London this week also confirmed the fact that negotiations are under way, but emphasized the belief that Mr. Schenck is willing to sell out the Fox shares rather than buy in further in an effort to control Gaumont-British. The reports added that another group in England connected with production and distribution on a large scale is prepared to acquire Mr. Schenck's Gamont stock if the deal with Mr. Ostrer does not go through, and, in fact, already has approached him on the subject.

Strong Bond of Interest

Purchase of control of Gaumont-British would give Fox probably the strongest foreign film organization in the history of motion pictures. William Fox, at the height of his world-wide expansion program in the late 1920's, purchased the Gaumont shares which constitute Twentieth Century-Fox's present 49 per cent interest in the company. The same expansion program brought Mr. Fox's downfall when he was compelled to bring in Wall Street bankers and his subsequent economic troubles and the general business depression prevented the company's taking advantage of the hold the former executive had obtained on Gaumont.

British Law Restrictions

Since that time there has been a strong bond of interest between the Fox company in America and the British concern. The Gaumont-British schedule of 24 features for next season is to be distributed in the United States through the Fox organization. The American company recently founded World Pictures for production of films in England, although no pictures have been released.

Assumption by Twentieth Century-Fox of complete control of Gaumont-British could only be accomplished, it is reported, by the appointment of a British directorate with complete autonomy, because of the restrictions of British law. The move would put Fox in control of a series of enterprises which extend far beyond the motion picture field.

Among the organization's interests are motion picture production, distribution and exhibition; newsreel, vaudeville and legitimate theatres and productions for them; radio stations and reception equipment; phonographs; amateur motion picture photography and projection equipment; sound and recording equipment; building construction, hotels, restaurants, cafes, "dance palaces" and television.

The company has announced plans for the broadcasting of news and entertainment by television this year.

Loew Legal Director Marks Anniversary

Leopold Friedman, head of the legal department of Loew's, was honored at a luncheon by veterans in the service of the company at the Tavern in New York to mark the completion of his 25th year with the company.

The men joining Mr. Friedman represented a total of 154 years of service. David M. Bernstein headed the list with 31 years to his credit; Charles C. Moskowitz has 24 years; E. A. Schiller, 21; Judge I. Frey, 17; Louis K. Sidney, 15; Eugene Picker, 14, and Oscar Doob, the baby in point of time, seven years.

Bigger Reel Adoption Fought in Boston

Action against the adoption of 2,000-foot reels is continuing in Boston with opponents of the larger coils centering their attack on the Massachusetts film regulations of the Department of Safety which are being surveyed with a view to bringing them up to date.

Critic Turns Playwright

A farce comedy written by Norman Clark, film and dramatic critic of the Baltimore News-Post, and Louis E. Shecter, head of a Baltimore advertising agency, will be presented under the direction of Bruce Conning at the Stony Creek theatre, Stony Creek, Conn., the week of July 20. The play is titled "I Take Care of My Friends."

W. C. Fields Recovers

W. C. Fields on Tuesday was discharged from the hospital in Riverside, Cal., where he has been ill with pneumonia for several weeks. The comedian will rest in a sanitarium in Pasadena for a fortnight and then plans to go on vacation until Paramount is ready to start production of his next film, "Bag of Tricks," scheduled to get under way in September.

Trade Practice Action Left to Sales Companies

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has gone as far as it can in its efforts to bring about a set of fair trade practices within the industry, Edward Kuykendall, president of the association, declared this week in a bulletin in which he intimated that the group will not oppose future legislation nor refrain from a policy of litigation, in the event the organization's 10-point program for trade reform is not adopted by distributors this season.

The bulletin emphasized that from this point on "the responsibility is squarely on the distributors as to whether any sort of self-regulation is possible in this business."

Indicating that the MPTOA may not lend producers and distributors the aid next year which was given during the past session of Congress in the industry's opposition to the Pettengill and Neely bills, if the industry's reform program is not put into effect with the opening of the new season, Mr. Kuykendall said:

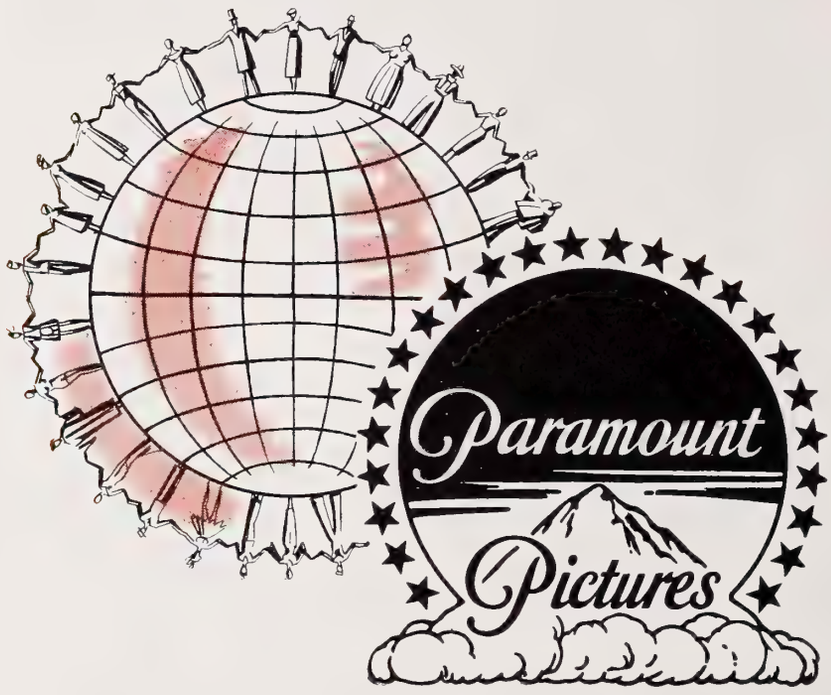
"Distributors must decide whether the theatre owners of this country can hope to have their complaints and grievances taken care of to a reasonable extent within the business, or must look to the courts and the legislatures for a hearing and for any sort of regulation of unfair competitive practices."

After reviewing the work accomplished by the MPTOA trade practice committee in a series of recent meetings with the sales heads of nine national distribution companies, Mr. Kuykendall's statement asserts that "nothing further can be done by us to advance the trade practice proposals until the distributors definitely decide and announce whether or not they will cooperate with us."

Calling upon the companies for immediate action, Mr. Kuykendall intimates that a failure to act may result in a drift toward "litigation, legislation and Governmental regulation."

A cancellation clause has been drafted by the exhibitor committee, according to the bulletin, and submitted to sales companies together with a short form of exhibition contract. The adoption of these and other parts of the exhibitors' program, including the elimination of score charges, correction of designated play-date complaints and the forcing of shorts "require nothing more than a definite modification of any distributor's own sales policies and practices" for immediate solution, the statement continues.

New England Circuit Closes Metro Contract



Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has concluded an agreement with the Mullin and Pinanski circuit for next season's product in the circuit's 70 New England theatres.

Art Director Appointed

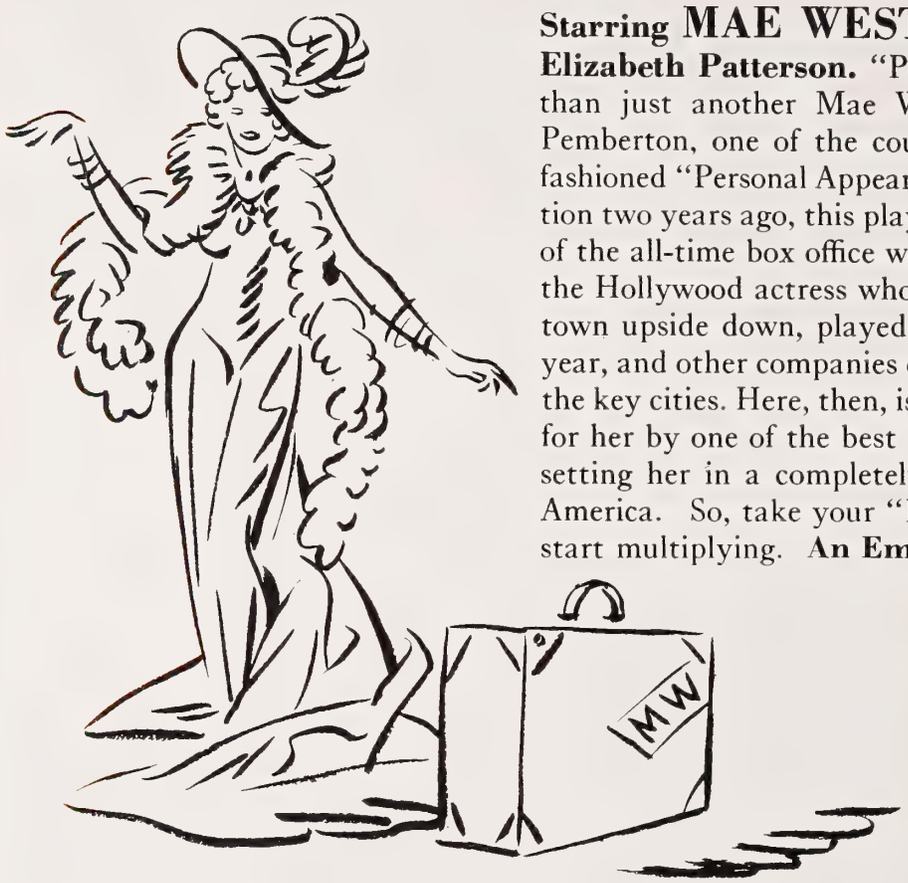
Give 'em
Entertainment !

PARAMOUNT PICTURES 1936-37



It takes all kinds of people to make a world... It takes all kinds of people to fill a theatre... It takes all kinds of entertainment to make a successful box-office season. That's why Paramount offers you, for 1936-1937, the biggest and most diversified program of down-to-earth pictures in motion picture history...

INCLUDING AT LEAST TWO PICTURES OF MAJOR IMPORTANCE EVERY MONTH

Make 'em
Laugh !

"Personal Appearance"

Starring MAE WEST, with Lynne Overman, Elizabeth Patterson. "Personal Appearance" is more than just another Mae West picture. Since Brock Pemberton, one of the country's leading playwrights, fashioned "Personal Appearance" for Broadway production two years ago, this play has established itself as one of the all-time box office wonder-workers. This story of the Hollywood actress who turns a small Pennsylvania town upside down, played New York for more than a year, and other companies enjoyed triumphal runs in all the key cities. Here, then, is a Mae West picture tailored for her by one of the best brains in show business, and setting her in a completely new locale . . . small town America. So, take your "Klondike Annie" figures and start multiplying. An Emanuel Cohen Production.

Harold Lloyd

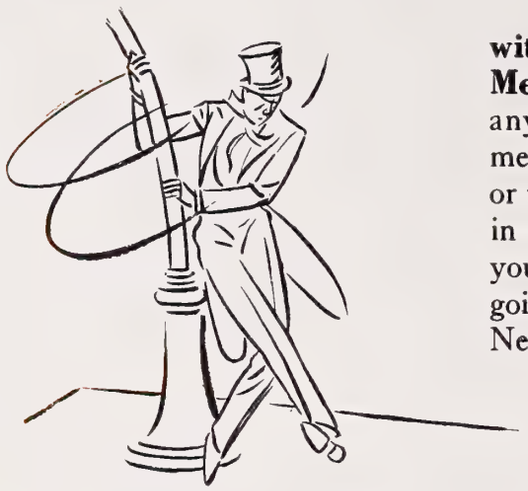
in another Big Time Comedy Hit . . .

With everyone still talking about "The Milky Way" as one of the biggest comedy successes of the past season, news that Harold Lloyd will do another picture of the same calibre entertainment for Paramount this year is Good News for the 1936-1937 Box-Office. Although Harold has yet to select the story, he's already collected a group of top comedies from which to choose "The Milky Way's" successor. And he promises that this new picture will have a supporting cast even stronger than the big name cast which helped him put over the story of the fighting milkman.

"Don't Look Now"

W. C. FIELDS in a picture that Bill has been wanting to do for years—it's his own idea of the real A No. 1 Fields vehicle . . . so you can guess what kind of show America's Grand Old Man of Comedy will put on for you. What's the story? It's Fields' own version of one of the real classics of American Humor—Julian Street's famous "Need of Change". . . In it Fields is a retired gadget manufacturer and when he goes nuts in the stuffed-shirt, tea-with-the-vicar life of British aristocracy you can bet it's just one more "Fields' Day" for the box office.

"Hotel Haywire"



with Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland, George Burns and Gracie Allen, the "International House" of 1936-37 combines two pairs of zanies either of which could put over a big picture. The Ruggles-Boland combine are definitely tops in domestic comedy, as "Early to Bed" is proving right now . . . and Burns and Allen have had America wading knee deep in soup—and gags, all winter.

"The Tightwad"

Charlie Ruggles and a cast of featured players in the Paul Gallico Saturday Evening Post story of the little penny pinching auditor in the business office of a newspaper who gets mixed up with the kind of story he has always thought too expensive. How he turns himself into one of the biggest spenders in the newspaper game is the stuff box office is made of. "The Tightwad" is just the kind of picture Charlie Ruggles can make into an hilarious success.

"Wives Never Know"

with Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland, Adolphe Menjou, Veree Teasdale. What a foursome! When any movie fan thinks of hard-hitting, fast paced domestic comedy, he thinks of either the Ruggles-Boland or the Menjou-Teasdale combination. Here they all are in one picture, directed by Elliott Nugent who gave you "She Loves Me Not". Mr. and Mrs. America are going to laugh themselves into the aisles at "Wives Never Know". Directed by Elliott Nugent.

"Three Married Men"

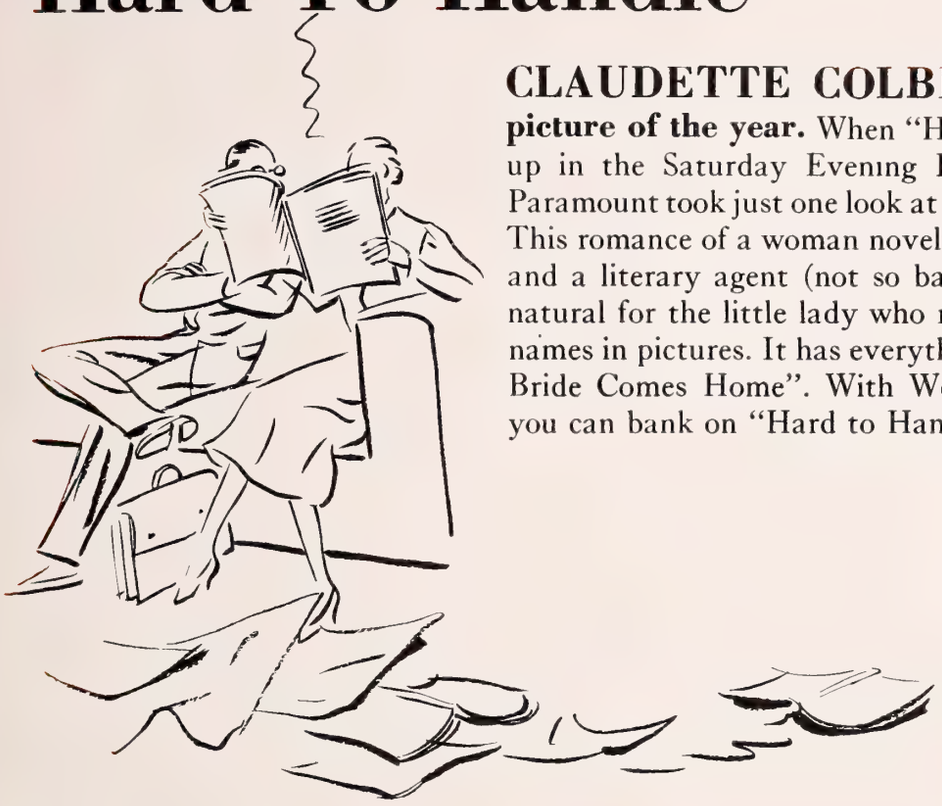
with Lynne Overman, Roscoe Karns, William Frawley, George Barbier, Gail Sheridan, Elizabeth Patterson, Bennie Bartlett, Virginia Weidler. Arthur Hornblow, Jr., who produced "The Princess Comes Across" got such a kick out of Bill Frawley's performance as the beret bonnetted boldster with the cream puff heart that he decided Bill rated top billing in a comedy of his own. Then he got thinking about those other two lads who've put laughs into Paramount pictures every time they've landed a good part, Lynne Overman and Roscoe Karns. This picture then is the once-in-a-lifetime chance for all three to go to town together. Directed by Eddie Buzzell.

"My American Wife"

Francis Lederer, Ann Sothern, Fred Stone, Billie Burke, Ketti Gallian in that ace Saturday Evening Post yarn, "The Old Timer", the story about the foreign count who marries the grand-daughter of a rough and ready old Western multi-millionaire. The old lad doesn't think much of the business, having a pretty sour opinion of "furriners", until the count turns out to be as swell an egg as the old man himself. . . .The story has the same background, the same characters, the same appeal as "Ruggles of Red Gap". Directed by Harold Young.

Give 'em
Romance !

"The General Died at Dawn"



Starring
GARY COOPER and MADELEINE CARROLL with Akim Tamiroff, Porter Hall, Dudley Digges, J. M. Kerrigan and William Frawley. The same setting that made "Shanghai Express" a box office smash! The thrilling tale of a brash Irish-American adventurer and a lovely adventuress caught in the backwash of Chinese revolution, fighting for their lives against the gold lust of a Chinese war lord. With Gary Cooper at the very peak of his popularity after "Desire" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town", and Madeleine Carroll, the beautiful English star. Written by Clifford Odets, the great new playwright whose hard hitting dialogue is the talk of Broadway! Directed by Lewis Milestone.

Marlene Dietrich

A glorious Frank Lloyd production. With "Desire" giving her new laurels as an actress of the first rank and "The Garden of Allah" adding new power to her name at the box office any Marlene Dietrich picture for 1936-1937 means coin at the till. But when you think of her in a Frank Lloyd production ...well...you've got to think in pretty big box-office terms indeed. This picture will be a typical Frank Lloyd out-door action picture. And Miss Dietrich will have a chance to go to town in one of her great roles.

"Hard To Handle"

CLAUDETTE COLBERT'S second big picture of the year. When "Hard to Handle" showed up in the Saturday Evening Post a few weeks ago, Paramount took just one look at it and said—"Colbert". This romance of a woman novelist (a good looking one) and a literary agent (not so bad looking himself) is a natural for the little lady who rates one of the biggest names in pictures. It has everything that put over "The Bride Comes Home". With Wesley Ruggles directing you can bank on "Hard to Handle" to get you results.

"Panama Gal"

Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard now rate as one of the top romantic comedy pairs in pictures. "Hands Across the Table" sent them off to a flying start, and now "The Princess Comes Across" has recently shown that, for modern, fast-stepping romance, these two need take their hats off to no one. "Panama Gal" is right up their alley. It seems Fred is a hard-boiled son of trouble who's doing sentry-go for Uncle Sam alongside the Panama Canal. Carole is a pretty little manicurist on a cruise liner. When the cruise liner goes through the Canal, Carole happens to poke her head out a porthole just in time to meet Fred ...and a series of adventures which end up with the two of them running the ace night club of Central America.

P. S. There will be music in the picture with Fred stepping out as a swing cornet player.

"Wedding Present"

JOAN BENNETT, CARY GRANT and GEORGE BANCROFT Starring in a B. P. Schulberg Production. "Big Brown Eyes" with Joan and Cary in it was one of the year's "sleepers". Starting off without much fanfare, it did plenty at the box-office wherever it played. Here are the two leads in a far better story, Paul Gallico's Saturday Evening Post yarn of the newspaper lad who gave his best gal a four alarm fire for a wedding present. B. P. Schulberg who gave you such Paramount smashes as "Morocco" starts out his new series of Paramount productions with "Wedding Present"... nuff said. Directed by Richard Wallace.

"That's What Girls are Made of"

Starring SYLVIA SIDNEY and FRED MacMURRAY, a B. P. Schulberg Production. Here's the winning combination that sent "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" into the top money-making class of last year. This time these box-office stars will be under the capable production guidance of B. P. Schulberg, and the story will give Sylvia Sidney, one of the screen's finest dramatic actresses, a chance to turn in another of her glorious performances—the kind which made "Mary Burns, Fugitive" one of the highlights of the screen year. Fred will have another of those hard-boiled romantic roles which set the gals' hearts aflame.

"Hideaway Girl"

Frances Farmer and a cast of featured players in one of those fast moving thrill-a-minute adventure stories with plenty of class . . . plus what the box-office fondly labels . . . love.

Please their Ears!

"The Big Broadcast of 1937"

Starring JACK BENNY with George Burns and Gracie Allen, Randolph Scott, Jane Froman, Martha Raye, Sam Schlepperman, Ray Milland, Frank Forest, Benny Baker. Specialties by Leopold Stokowski, Bob Burns, Benny Fields, Larry Adler, Stan Kavanagh, Benny Goodman's Orchestra, and other celebrities of Stage, Screen and Radio. Jack Benny, the highest paid star of radio... George Burns and Gracie Allen even higher in the Crosley radio popularity rating than last year... and a whole lineup of Big Timers. Lew Gensler, builder of a dozen Broadway musical hits, will produce the show... Mitchell Leisen, director of "Hands Across the Table" and "13 Hours by Air", will direct. Directed by Mitchell Leisen.

"Champagne Waltz"

Starring GLADYS SWARTHOUT, FRED MacMURRAY and Jack Oakie, Veloz and Yolanda (the biggest-drawing dance team in the business), Lyda Roberti, Frank Forest. What happens when promoter Jack Oakie takes an American "swing" band to Vienna to compete against Europe's finest waltz orchestra? The "swing" band is about to put the orchestra on the skids until the "swing" band leader, Fred MacMurray, takes a gander at the beautiful singing daughter (Gladys Swarthout) of the Viennese waltz king. From then on it's... love. Directed by Eddie Sutherland.

"The Count of Luxembourg" with IRENE DUNNE, JOHN BOLES, W. C. FIELDS, Frank Forest. Franz Lehar's world famous operetta, with the star of "Show Boat" in the glorious role of the Paris prima donna who was married to the Count of Luxembourg (a rich man's trick to get her for himself) and who found being married to this dashing gentleman so delightful she left the old lad holding the bag (a part ripe to the genius of one W. C. Fields). The glorious Lehar music will be supplemented by a typical list of Paramount song successes.

"College Holiday"

Starring JACK BENNY with Frances Farmer, Louis DaPron, Robert Cummings, Johnny Downs, Eleanore Whitney, Martha Raye. Here's the annual Paramount Christmas gift to Old Man box-office . . . the yearly holiday special for the youngsters . . . the successor to those big box-office hits, "College Humor", "College Rhythm" and "Collegiate"! We don't need to describe 'em to you . . . you know 'em too well . . . the big music show with the college background, the show with plenty of laughs . . . plenty of songs, plenty of swing and plenty of gals! An exploitation natural, the most timely picture of the year

"Follow the Sun"

Starring
BING CROSBY with George Burns and Gracie Allen, Lynne Overman. Made to the measure of that Crosby smash "We're Not Dressing", "Follow the Sun" shows Bing as the son of a big shot ship owner of the Northwest who leaves one of his old man's ships in the Orient to become the proprietor of the swingiest night club from Manhattan to Mandalay. With Bing at the top of his popularity, an ace cast, an ace script, and a bunch of ace tunes, you can check the date "Follow the Sun" hits town as one of the biggest in the 1936-37 box-office calendar. Directed by Norman Taurog.

"High, Wide and Handsome" with IRENE DUNNE and FRED MacMURRAY, Randolph Scott. Here's another "Show Boat". Music and lyrics by those two celebrated writers who wrote the never-to-be-forgotten score of "Show Boat", Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II . . . two names which from coast to coast mean box-office wherever they're billed. And then, playing the lead, the girl who has just succeeded in making the newest version of "Show Boat" one of the all-time box-office successes, Irene Dunne. With her will be Fred MacMurray in the kind of role he can do best . . . how's that for a lineup? And a strong supporting cast.

"Artists and Models"

One of the most lavish pictures of the year—a big flashing musical set in the studios of the leading artists of the country, featuring the world's most beautiful women, the year's leading song hits. The three major roles will be played by the three leading stars in the business. Katherine Brush, S. J. and Laura Perelman and Keene Thompson collaborated on the script and it will be a picture unique among picture hits.

"It Happened in Paradise"

BING CROSBY and IDA LUPINO starring in a typical Crosby winner. This particular Paradise happens to be a mountain lake where a couple of summer camps, one full of lads and one full of gals, hold forth. And the one and only Bing Crosby is the leading lad in Camp No. 1. A big time song and dance show, this picture is planned to catch the late spring trade with a real summer camp musical . . . and with Ida Lupino, one of the smoothest gals in pictures, to step it along . . . it's sure to be a winner.

"Lady Be Careful" with Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle, Larry Crabbe, Benny Baker, Grant Withers, Jack Chapin, Wilma Francis, Irving Bacon. Paramount's group of youngsters in another of their fast stepping musicals, with the same punch and pace as "Millions in the Air". Robert Cummings is one of the most popular juveniles in the business and John Howard is going to be way up in the big star class this year, according to Frank Capra, who claims Howard shows real greatness in Capra's "Lost Horizon", a picture which will precede "Lady Be Careful". Eleanore Whitney is the fastest tap dancer in the world. Directed by Ted Reed.

Feast their Eyes !

"Spawn of the North"

CAROLE LOMBARD, CARY GRANT, RANDOLPH SCOTT and a strong supporting cast. An All-Technicolor Outdoor Action Picture. Directed by Henry Hathaway.

DELIBERATELY built as a follow up of the biggest box-office attraction of the year, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine", "Spawn of the North" presents even greater money-making potentialities. A powerful story of the great salmon runs of the Alaskan Coast and the fierce wars between the canneries, salmon pirates, and poachers, this has all the elements of drama, rivalry between families, blood hates, death fights that made "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" a winner, plus the fact that the action takes place in the mysterious and lovely waters of the Alaskan Coast.

To insure a repeat on the tremendous success of "Trail", Henry Hathaway will again direct, and Grover Jones, Paramount's ace writer, the lad who wrote the punch lines for "Trail", is again doing the script. "Spawn of the North" will feature songs of the same hit calibre as "Melody from the Sky" and "Twilight on the Trail", the song smashes of "Trail".

In cast strength "Spawn of the North" is the equal of "Trail" and in color it will be even more spectacular . . . with the breath-taking Alaskan mountains and sea as a glamorous background for Carole's blonde beauty. You can right now rate "Spawn of the North" as one of your biggest catches of the entire year.

"Slave Ship"

Starring GARY COOPER

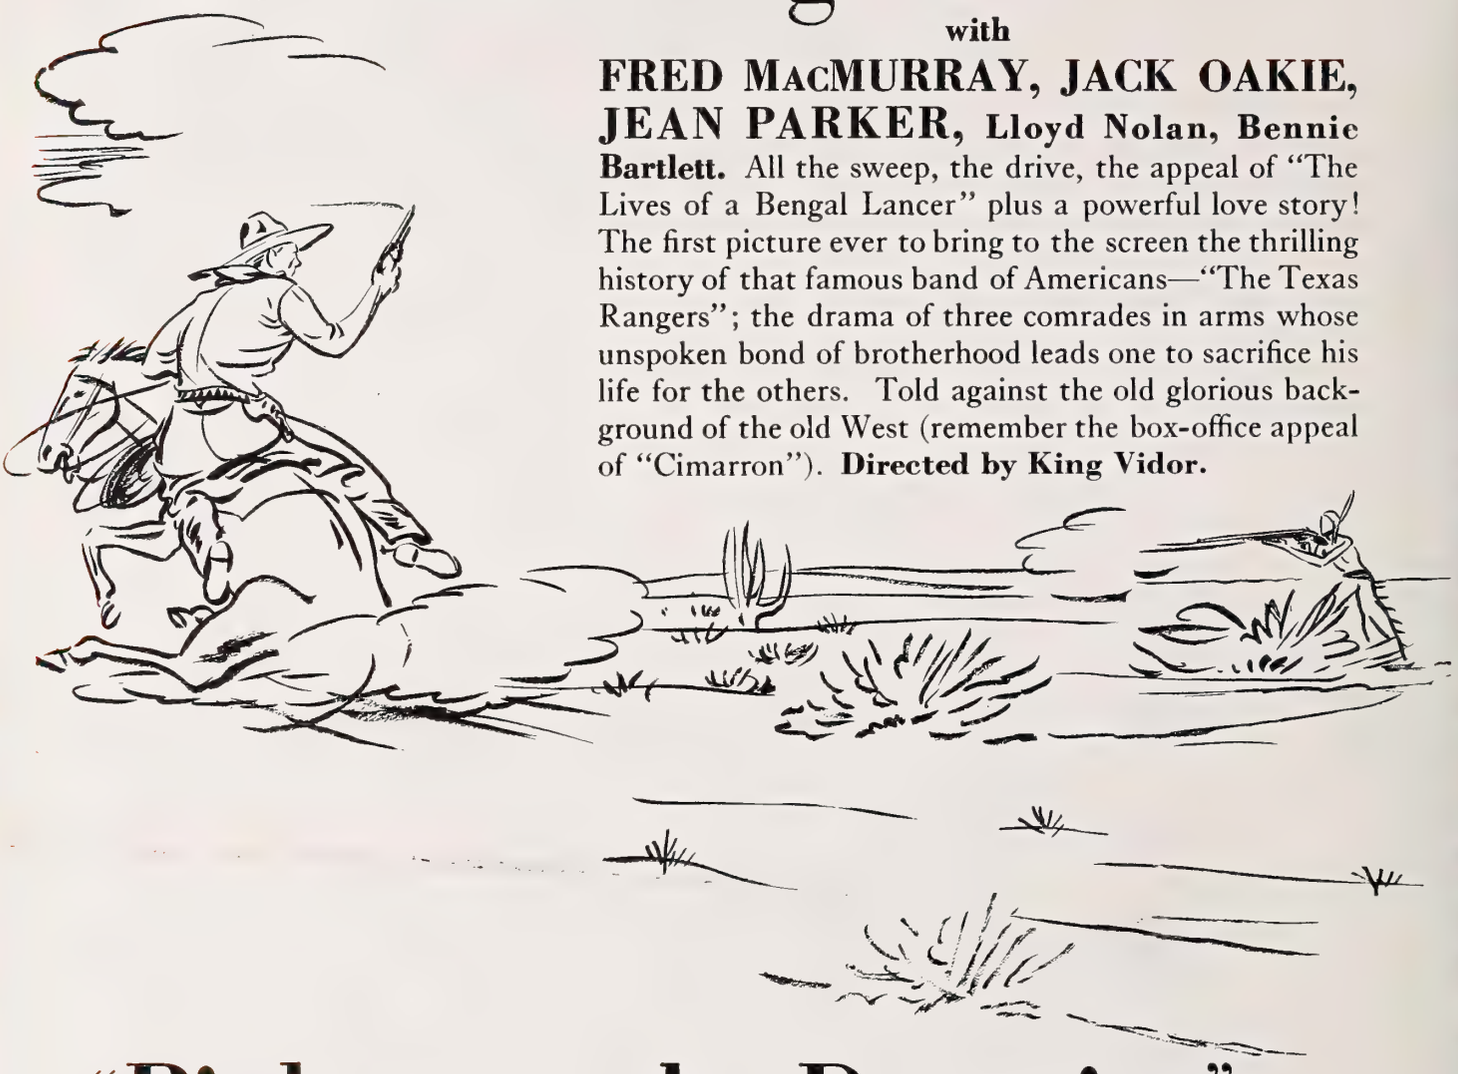
Directed by Henry Hathaway

A GLORIOUS "Bengal Lancers" of the sea . . . the story of two seamen who, covered with glory, won in the War of 1812, when America's little navy, against overpowering odds, gained the United States the freedom of the seas, find themselves in a bitter clash over the slavery question. One of them (Cooper) enlists on a slave ship and shanghais his pal aboard, hoping actual contact with the slave trade will alter his opinion against it. After hundreds of thrilling adventures, the two find themselves in love with a beautiful Spanish girl, whom the brutal ship's captain attempts to trade for 300 slaves. How Cooper defies the slave ship captain and his murderous crew and at the sacrifice of his own life gives his rival and the girl a chance to escape is the climax of a great picture. Henry Hathaway who directed "Bengal Lancer" believes "Slave Ship" written by Grover Jones, who did the "Lancer" script, is an even more powerful story than "Lancer". A rough, tough he-man picture with the surging drive of the sea in its fibre, it cannot miss being one of the most important Technicolor pictures ever filmed.



Coin Out of Color

"Last February 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' was released", says Fortune Magazine in its June issue, "and it became almost over night, a box office hit, but more astonishing to Hollywood was the fact that it was a hit in color. Which was all that was necessary to start Hollywood producers scrambling into color films a second time...'Pine's' success is by no means entirely due to its color for the 3 main ingredients of any hit show are cast, story and selling, and 'Pine' is well enough equipped on all 3 counts to make it attractive to large masses of customers...with color added to these orthodox box office virtues, 'Pine' has stepped from a second rank to nearly first rank picture and thus, judged by 'Pine's' experience, color may mean the difference between a small gross profit and a large one" In other words, what Fortune is trying to say is that Paramount instead of trying any trick experiment with color, built a sure-fire box office picture and by intelligently adding color turned it into one of the big hits of the year. With that experience to go on, you can be sure "Spawn of the North"and "Slave Ship" will both be, not only triumphs in color, but triumphs in coin.

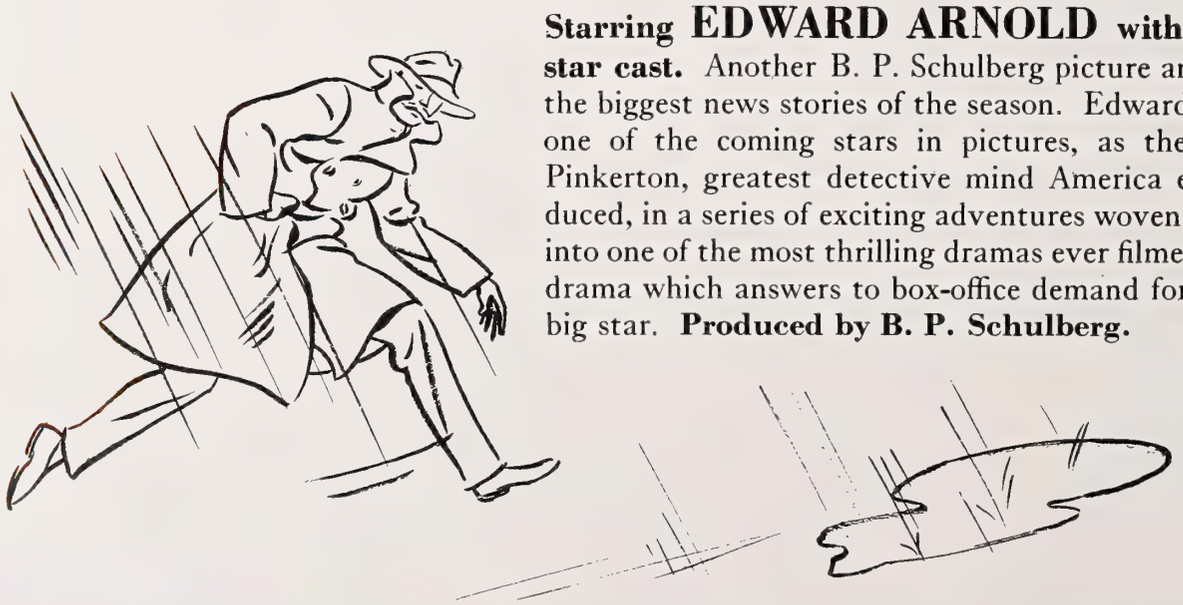
Thrills !



"The Texas Rangers"

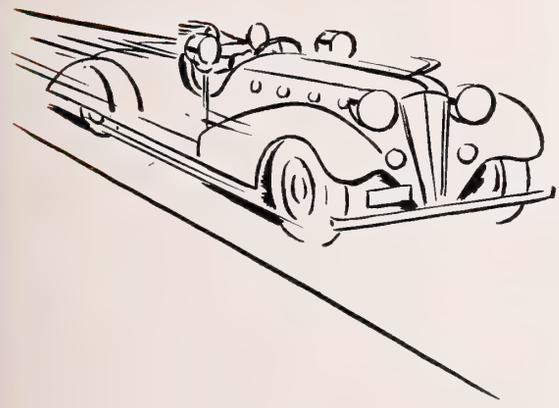
FRED MacMURRAY, JACK OAKIE, JEAN PARKER, Lloyd Nolan, Bennie Bartlett. All the sweep, the drive, the appeal of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" plus a powerful love story! The first picture ever to bring to the screen the thrilling history of that famous band of Americans—"The Texas Rangers"; the drama of three comrades in arms whose unspoken bond of brotherhood leads one to sacrifice his life for the others. Told against the old glorious background of the old West (remember the box-office appeal of "Cimarron"). Directed by King Vidor.

"Pinkerton, the Detective"



Starring EDWARD ARNOLD with an all-star cast. Another B. P. Schulberg picture and one of the biggest news stories of the season. Edward Arnold, one of the coming stars in pictures, as the famous Pinkerton, greatest detective mind America ever produced, in a series of exciting adventures woven together into one of the most thrilling dramas ever filmed . . . the drama which answers to box-office demand for a really big star. Produced by B. P. Schulberg.

"Queen of the Jungle" with Ray Milland, Sir Guy Standing, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman. Show business . . . that's our job . . . and here's one that is sure-fire show business stuff . . . the same kind of ballyhoo buster that "King of the Jungle" was . . . wild animals —"Chang" style, wild tribesmen . . . in fierce, death-at-your-throat battle . . . plus the hottest box-office seller there is . . . jungle romance . . . a lithe and lovely lass of the jungle going for a continental playboy and snaring him! With E. Lloyd Sheldon who produced "King of the Jungle" at the producing helm, you can be sure this is one more to rate up with good money makers of the year. Directed by Max Marcin.

"Hollywood Boulevard" with John Halliday, Robert Cummings, Marsha Hunt, Esther Ralston, Frieda Inescort, Betty Compson, Maurice Costello, C. Henry Gordon, Bryant Washburn, Sr., Francis X. Bushman, Charles Ray, Roy Darcy, Creighton Hale, Frank Mayo. The glamour, the heart throbs of the picture business told in the story of a Hollywood star of yesterday, who, broke, but still stage struck, writes his memoirs for a New York publisher. Directed by Robert Florey.

In addition to that, there will be shots of many of the big time stars and directors on location, making all told one of the big star pictures of the year.

"Murder with Pictures"

with Gail Patrick, Grace Bradley, Benny Baker, Porter Hall, Ernest Cossart, Irving Bacon. "Murder with Pictures" is a murder-mystery told in the hard-boiled lingo of "The Thin Man" and it has a love story with the same punch. When the ace news cameraman of a Los Angeles paper gets mixed up in a sensational murder of the town's leading criminal lawyer, mouthpiece for a big time racketeer, and finds himself in love with the gal who he thinks has done the shooting, there's plenty of plot to work with.

"Broadway Afternoon"

with a cast of Paramount featured players. This is the Saturday Evening Post yarn, that took prizes as one of the trickiest mystery stories of 1935. Speck Darrow, a killer whom the police have just about in their grasp, trades places with his brother, a famous Broadway character, a professional beggar who does a blindman turn every day on the main stem, in an attempt to get by the police net. He almost gets away with it. But Mallory, headquarters dick, happens to have too kind a heart.

"Johnny Gets His Gun"

with Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke, David Holt, Onslow Stevens, Purnell Pratt. Johnny, being an American lad with a lot of old-fashioned do or die in him, isn't content to let a bunch of bad men make a monkey or a corpse out of his father...a swell American yarn, taken from a Saturday Evening Post Story by one of America's favorite writers, Lucian Cary.

"Everything for Sale"

with a selected cast of players. Here is a long awaited yarn made from the great dramatic story of the great produce rackets which have been headline news in the big cities of the country for the past few years. A New York plug-ugly and his stooge make plenty of trouble for the independent fruit growers of the West coast until the plug-ugly falls for a lovely lady and then in a terrific thrill-a-second action sequence beats up the racketeers and wins her love.

"A Gun for Hire"

with a cast of featured players. A thrilling melodrama...the story of a murderer, whose flaming gun ends the life of a great statesman and is about to bring war to the world...and of the beautiful young actress who dares his fury and his trickery to capture him and bring peace to Europe.

Wow 'em!

Give 'em

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

Frank Lloyd

production!

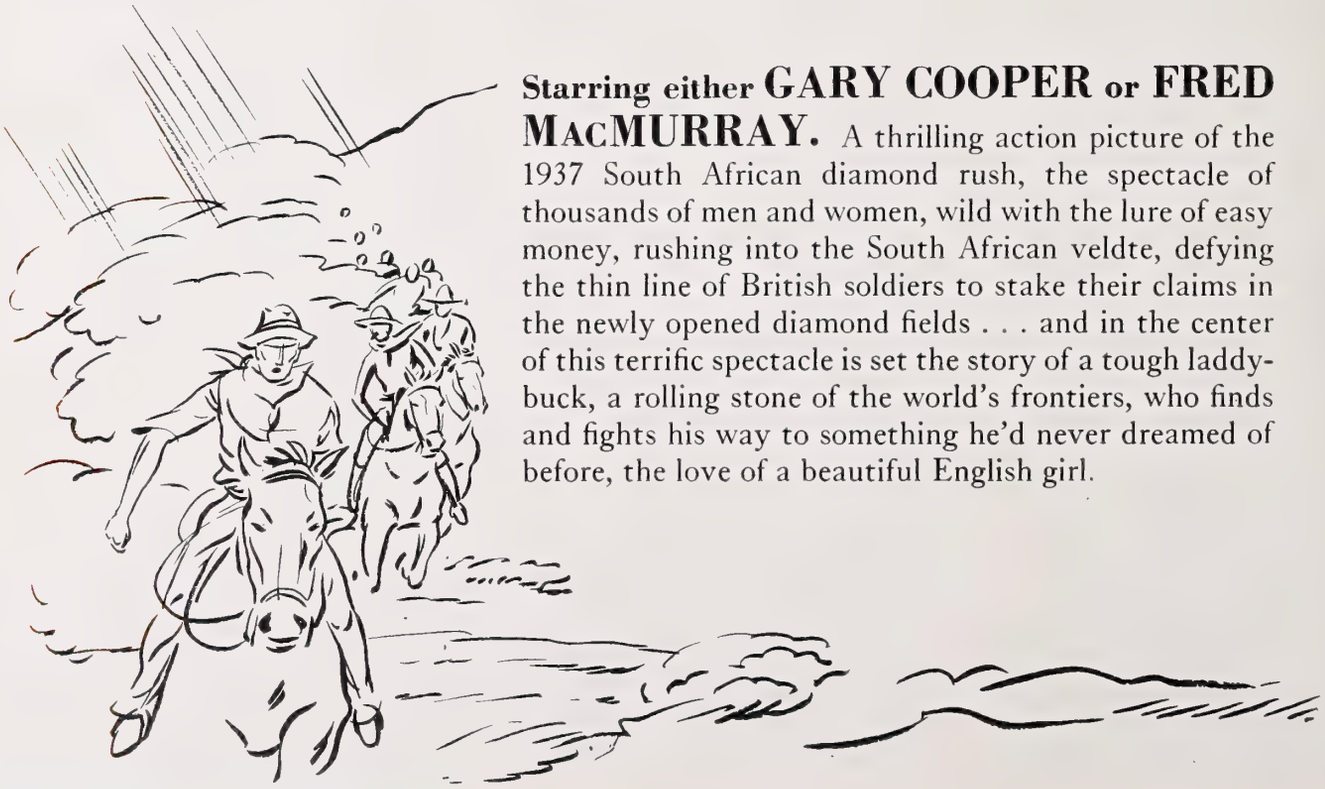
"Maid of Salem"

FRANK LLOYD directs CLAUDETTE COLBERT in a picture of tremendous scope with an all-star cast. Frank Lloyd's first picture for Paramount is a typical Frank Lloyd story, and, by that, we mean a subject as new to pictures as "Cavalcade" and "Sea Hawk". It is the story of a beautiful English girl, the daughter of a woman burned at the stake for witchcraft, who is herself caught in the evil tide of hysteria, the witchcraft persecutions, which swept New England after Cotton Mather's fanatical condemnation of this Puritan-invented crime. The story has depth and greatness, providing the greatest dramatic role Claudette Colbert has ever had. The background has all the sweep and power—huge mob scenes—driving action — which a Frank Lloyd production demands. Here's a picture made to the box-office measure of Frank Lloyd.

Marlene Dietrich

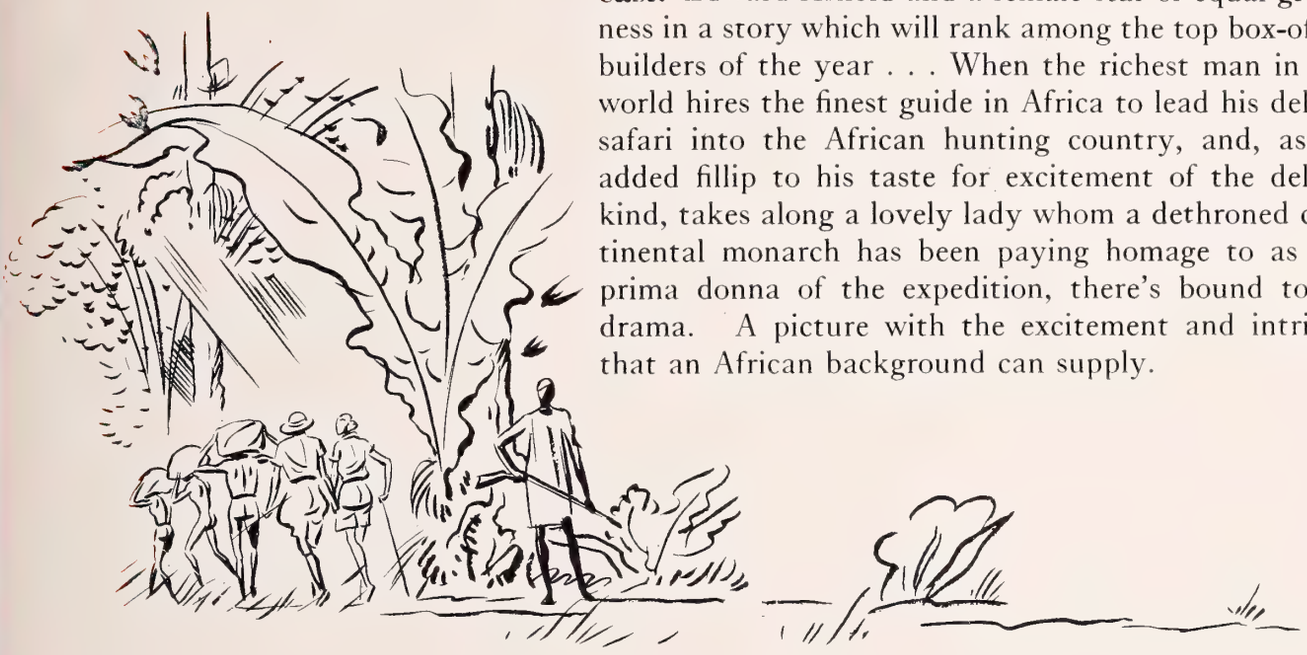
ERNST LUBITSCH directs DIETRICH in a grand romance with music. Ever since "Desire" marked a new high for that famous combination Ernst Lubitsch and Marlene Dietrich, you have been asking when you were going to have another Dietrich picture with the "Lubitsch" touch. Here's your answer. Ernst Lubitsch right now is reading scripts to select the ideal romantic-comedy role for the heroine of "Desire" and this year you will have another picture with all the elements of high comedy and box-office that made "Desire" the hit picture it was. In addition to this, Miss Dietrich will sing a group of songs like her famous "Falling in Love Again". In other words, this picture will be a 1936-37 "Blue Angel" plus.

Give 'em
Excitement !



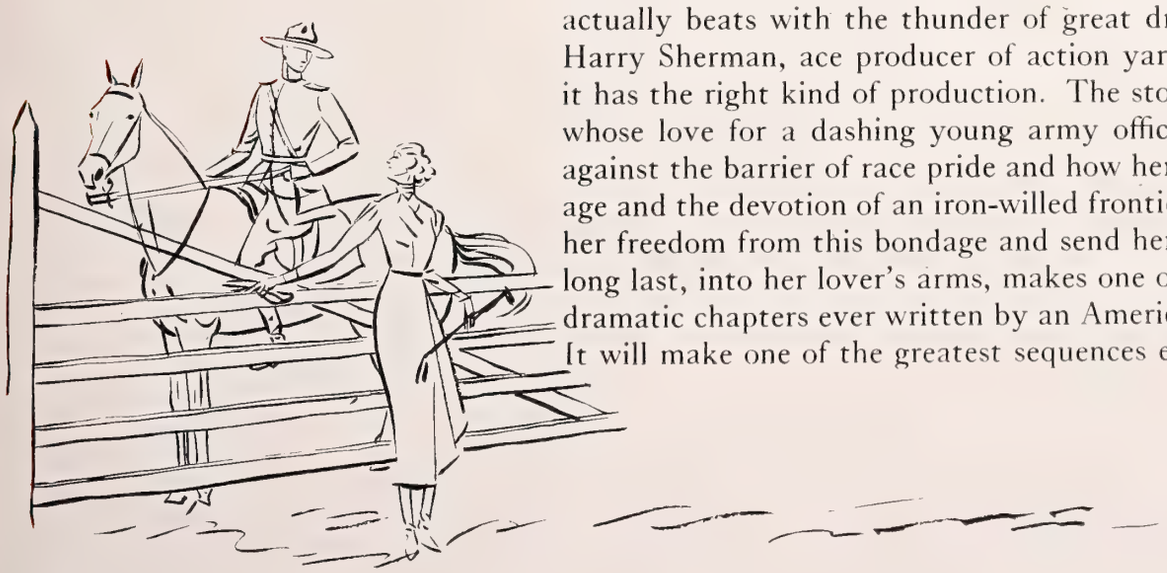
"The Plainsman"

Starring GARY COOPER and JEAN ARTHUR. Think of Gary Cooper as "Wild Bill Hickok". Think of Jean Arthur, Gary's running mate in "Mr. Deeds", as "Calamity Jane". Think of the business Cooper in "The Virginian" did, even as a re-issue . . . Think of the grosses rolled up by Gary and Jean in "Mr. Deeds". Put these things together and you will get a true picture of the stature of "The Plainsman", the box-office giant DeMille is making for you . . . This is no "western" spectacle, but the intimate, personalized story of "Calamity Jane," the Lady Wildcat, toughest but most sought-after girl in the Golden West, and hard-to-get Wild Bill, who shot faster, thought quicker, looked quieter than any man on that far flung frontier. "The Plainsman" is a smash!



A CECIL B. DEMILLE Production

"Diamond Rush"



Starring either GARY COOPER or FRED MACMURRAY. A thrilling action picture of the 1937 South African diamond rush, the spectacle of thousands of men and women, wild with the lure of easy money, rushing into the South African veldte, defying the thin line of British soldiers to stake their claims in the newly opened diamond fields . . . and in the center of this terrific spectacle is set the story of a tough laddy-buck, a rolling stone of the world's frontiers, who finds and fights his way to something he'd never dreamed of before, the love of a beautiful English girl.

"Safari"

with EDWARD ARNOLD and an all-star cast. Edward Arnold and a female star of equal greatness in a story which will rank among the top box-office builders of the year . . . When the richest man in the world hires the finest guide in Africa to lead his deluxe safari into the African hunting country, and, as an added fillip to his taste for excitement of the deluxe kind, takes along a lovely lady whom a dethroned continental monarch has been paying homage to as the prima donna of the expedition, there's bound to be drama. A picture with the excitement and intrigue that an African background can supply.

"The Barrier"

by Rex Beach. Of all Rex Beach's novels, probably the most widely read, the best liked by the masses of Beach readers is "The Barrier". For "The Barrier" actually beats with the thunder of great drama. And Harry Sherman, ace producer of action yarns, will see it has the right kind of production. The story of a girl whose love for a dashing young army officer smashes against the barrier of race pride and how her own courage and the devotion of an iron-willed frontiersman win her freedom from this bondage and send her, happy at long last, into her lover's arms, makes one of the finest dramatic chapters ever written by an American author. It will make one of the greatest sequences ever filmed.

"Stairs of Sand"

a Zane Grey Picture with Larry Crabbe, Marsha Hunt, Raymond Hatton, Leif Erikson. Westerns may come and Westerns may go...but Zane Grey's popularity as the writer of big-time "boots and saddle" sagas goes on forever. Wherever Westerns are box-office, a Zane Grey yarn means business. And "Stairs of Sand" is a typical Zane Grey done in the big production manner that has made Paramount the top ranker in the Western field during the past year.

3 "Hopalong Cassidys"

with William Boyd in the saddle "The Return of Hopalong Cassidy," "Trail Dust," "Cottonwood Gulch." Bill Boyd, in his first year as a Western star, has ridden right into the hearts of the great Western picture public. And the supporting cast always maintaining a high level of box-office value, has done plenty to push the Cassidy yarns into the top bracket. The new Cassidy series will have even bigger productions, for we are all set to build even bigger money-makers out of the Cassidy series than we did last year. These pictures will be equally spaced in release date during the first six months of 1936-37.

"Rose Bowl"

with Frances Farmer, John Howard, Larry Crabbe, Nick Lukats (All-American football star), Benny Baker. Just at the time the papers are full of it —The Biggest Sports Story of the Year...two big teams, the ace pigskin thumpers of the nation lined up to fight for the title of America's football champions in the annual Rose Bowl game in California's great football stadium, here's Paramount stepping right in to grab box-office for you from the Rose Bowl game with A Smash Action Romance based on the big event. So get right up there in the announcer's box and tell the world "Rose Bowl" is a sure choice for all-American laurels as The Football Picture of the 1936-37 Season.

Leave 'em
Breathless !

"Souls at Sea"

GARY COOPER and a strong supporting cast. An All-Technicolor Outdoor Action Picture. Directed by Henry Hathaway.

HERE is a box-office find of the year! An American "Mutiny on the Bounty", the most amazing story in the history of our merchant marine. A ship load of immigrants, Liverpool to Philadelphia, is rammed by a huge iceberg. The ship has only two life boats. One swamps. The second mate sets out in the smaller boat with two sailors and forty passengers.

As they start off, the second mate asks each passenger to search his heart in the sight of God. If he has been guilty of sinful living, he must jump overboard. Forty search their souls. Twenty jump. When, after a grueling passage, the little boat makes port, the second mate is clapped into prison and tried for the murder of the twenty. Every single person he has saved testifies against him. He is sentenced to life imprisonment. Yet public opinion sides with him, and after a struggle which roused the feeling of the entire nation, his sentence is at last commuted to five years.

With Gary Cooper in the lead, with Henry Hathaway, who gave you "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" directing. With Grover Jones scripting the story by Edward Hale, you can be sure that "Souls at Sea" will be one of the most exciting pictures of this or any year, and another tremendous advance for the motion picture, completely filmed in natural color.

THIS PICTURE WILL REPLACE "SPAWN OF THE NORTH" WHICH IS TEMPORARILY CANCELLED

Bring Tears to their eyes!

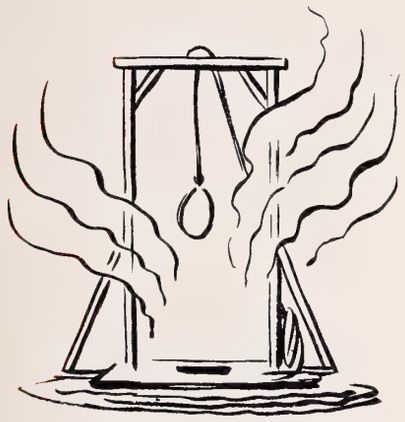
"Valiant Is the Word for Carrie"

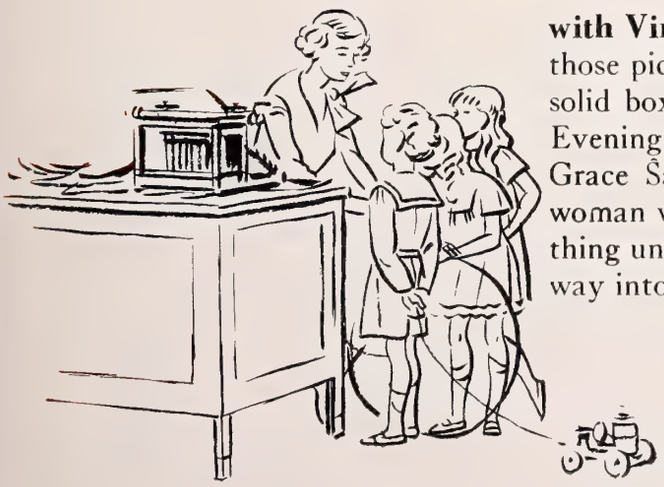


Starring GLADYS GEORGE with Arline Judge, John Howard, Dudley Digges, Isabel Jewell, Harry Carey. Gladys George, who made "Personal Appearance" one of the longest runs Broadway has ever known . . . the gal all the companies have been fighting for . . . has been captured by Paramount. How did we pull the trick, get you the actress who is going to be a sure-fire No. 1 picture star the minute the fans get a glimpse of her first screen job? Wesley Ruggles just climbed into a plane and headed for 'Frisco, Miss George's home town, with the script of "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" under one arm. A single reading of this yarn and Miss George said "okay". And no wonder . . . for Bennefield's best-selling novel has enough drama, enough woman interest (and 85% of your fans are women) to make another "Madame X". The story of a great woman, who, bowed by an early life of degradation and shame, rises to true glory through her devotion to a pair of youngsters whose fate is left in her hands. "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" is great box-office. Directed by Wesley Ruggles.

"Golden Era"

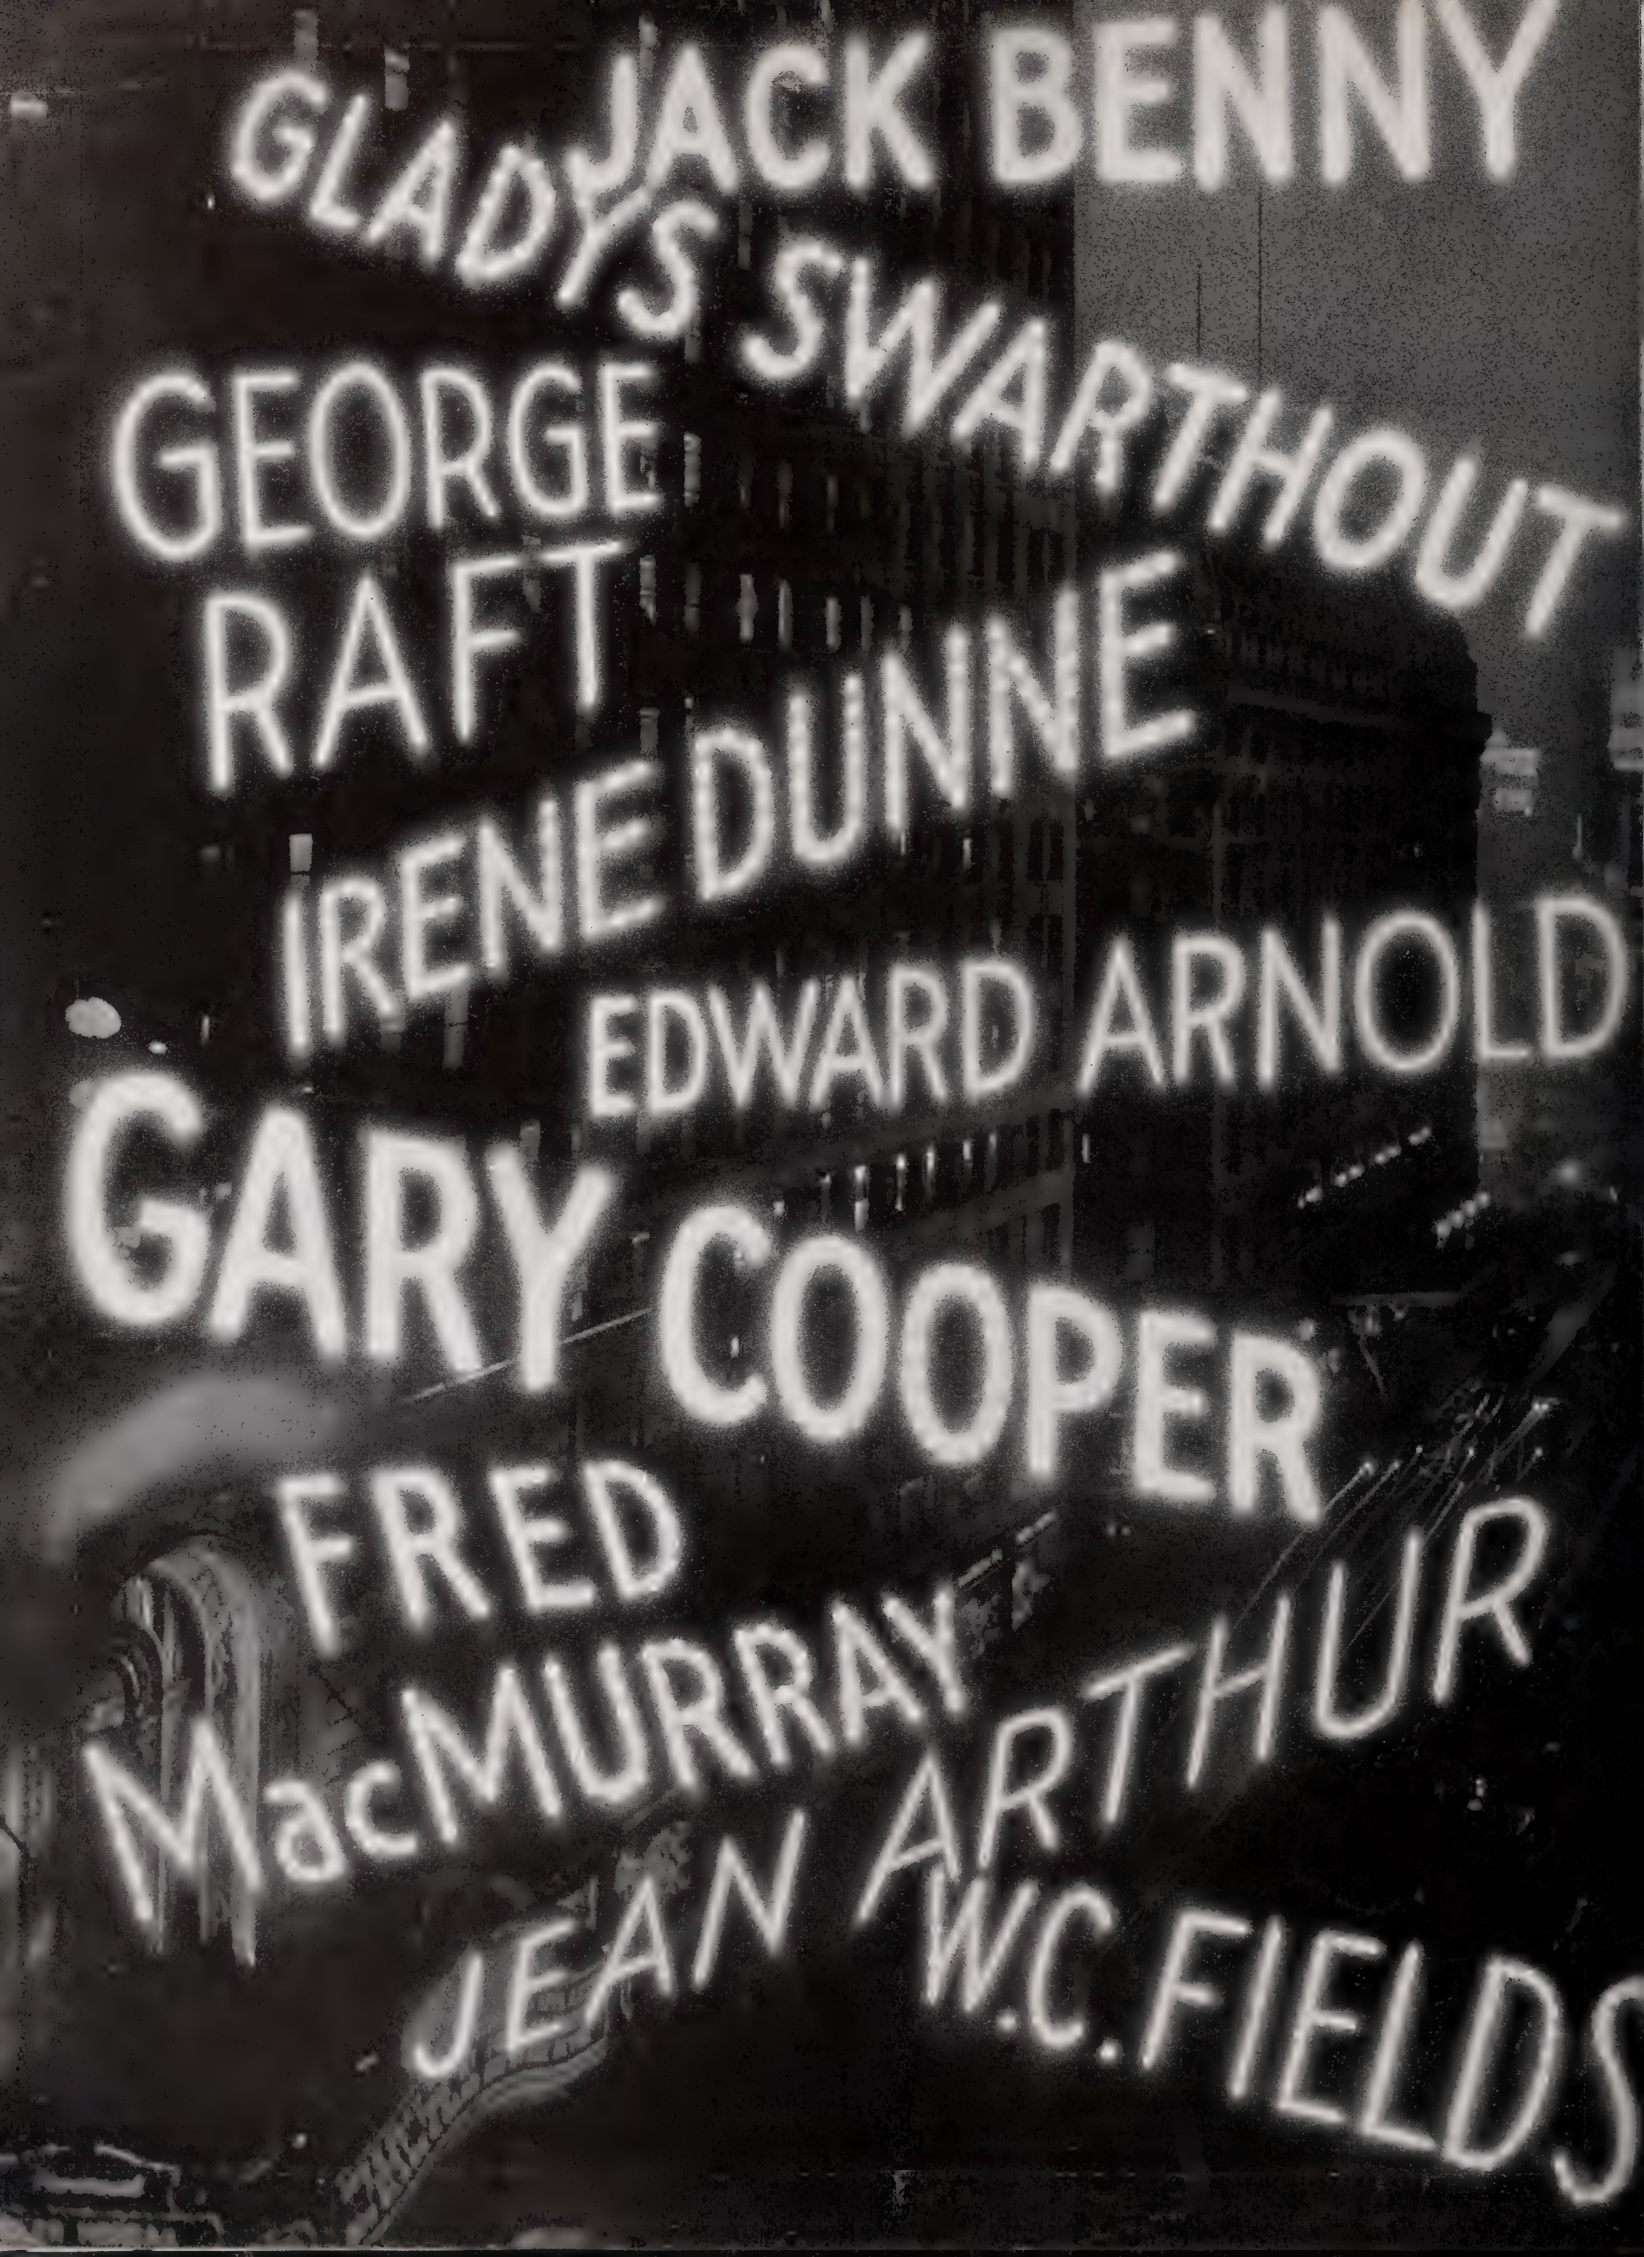
Starring CLAUDETTE COLBERT... A picture that will tear their hearts out...a box-office sensation. The glamorous days of the early century when America's big fortunes were being made...the days of Jay Gould, "Bet-A-Million" Gates, and Canfield ...as a background for one of the most dramatic stories Claudette Colbert has ever starred in...the powerful drama of the daughter of one of these great fortunes in love with the son of America's richest financiers... and their romance shattered, turned into stark, heart-rending tragedy when the sins of their gold-grabbing fathers are visited upon the children.

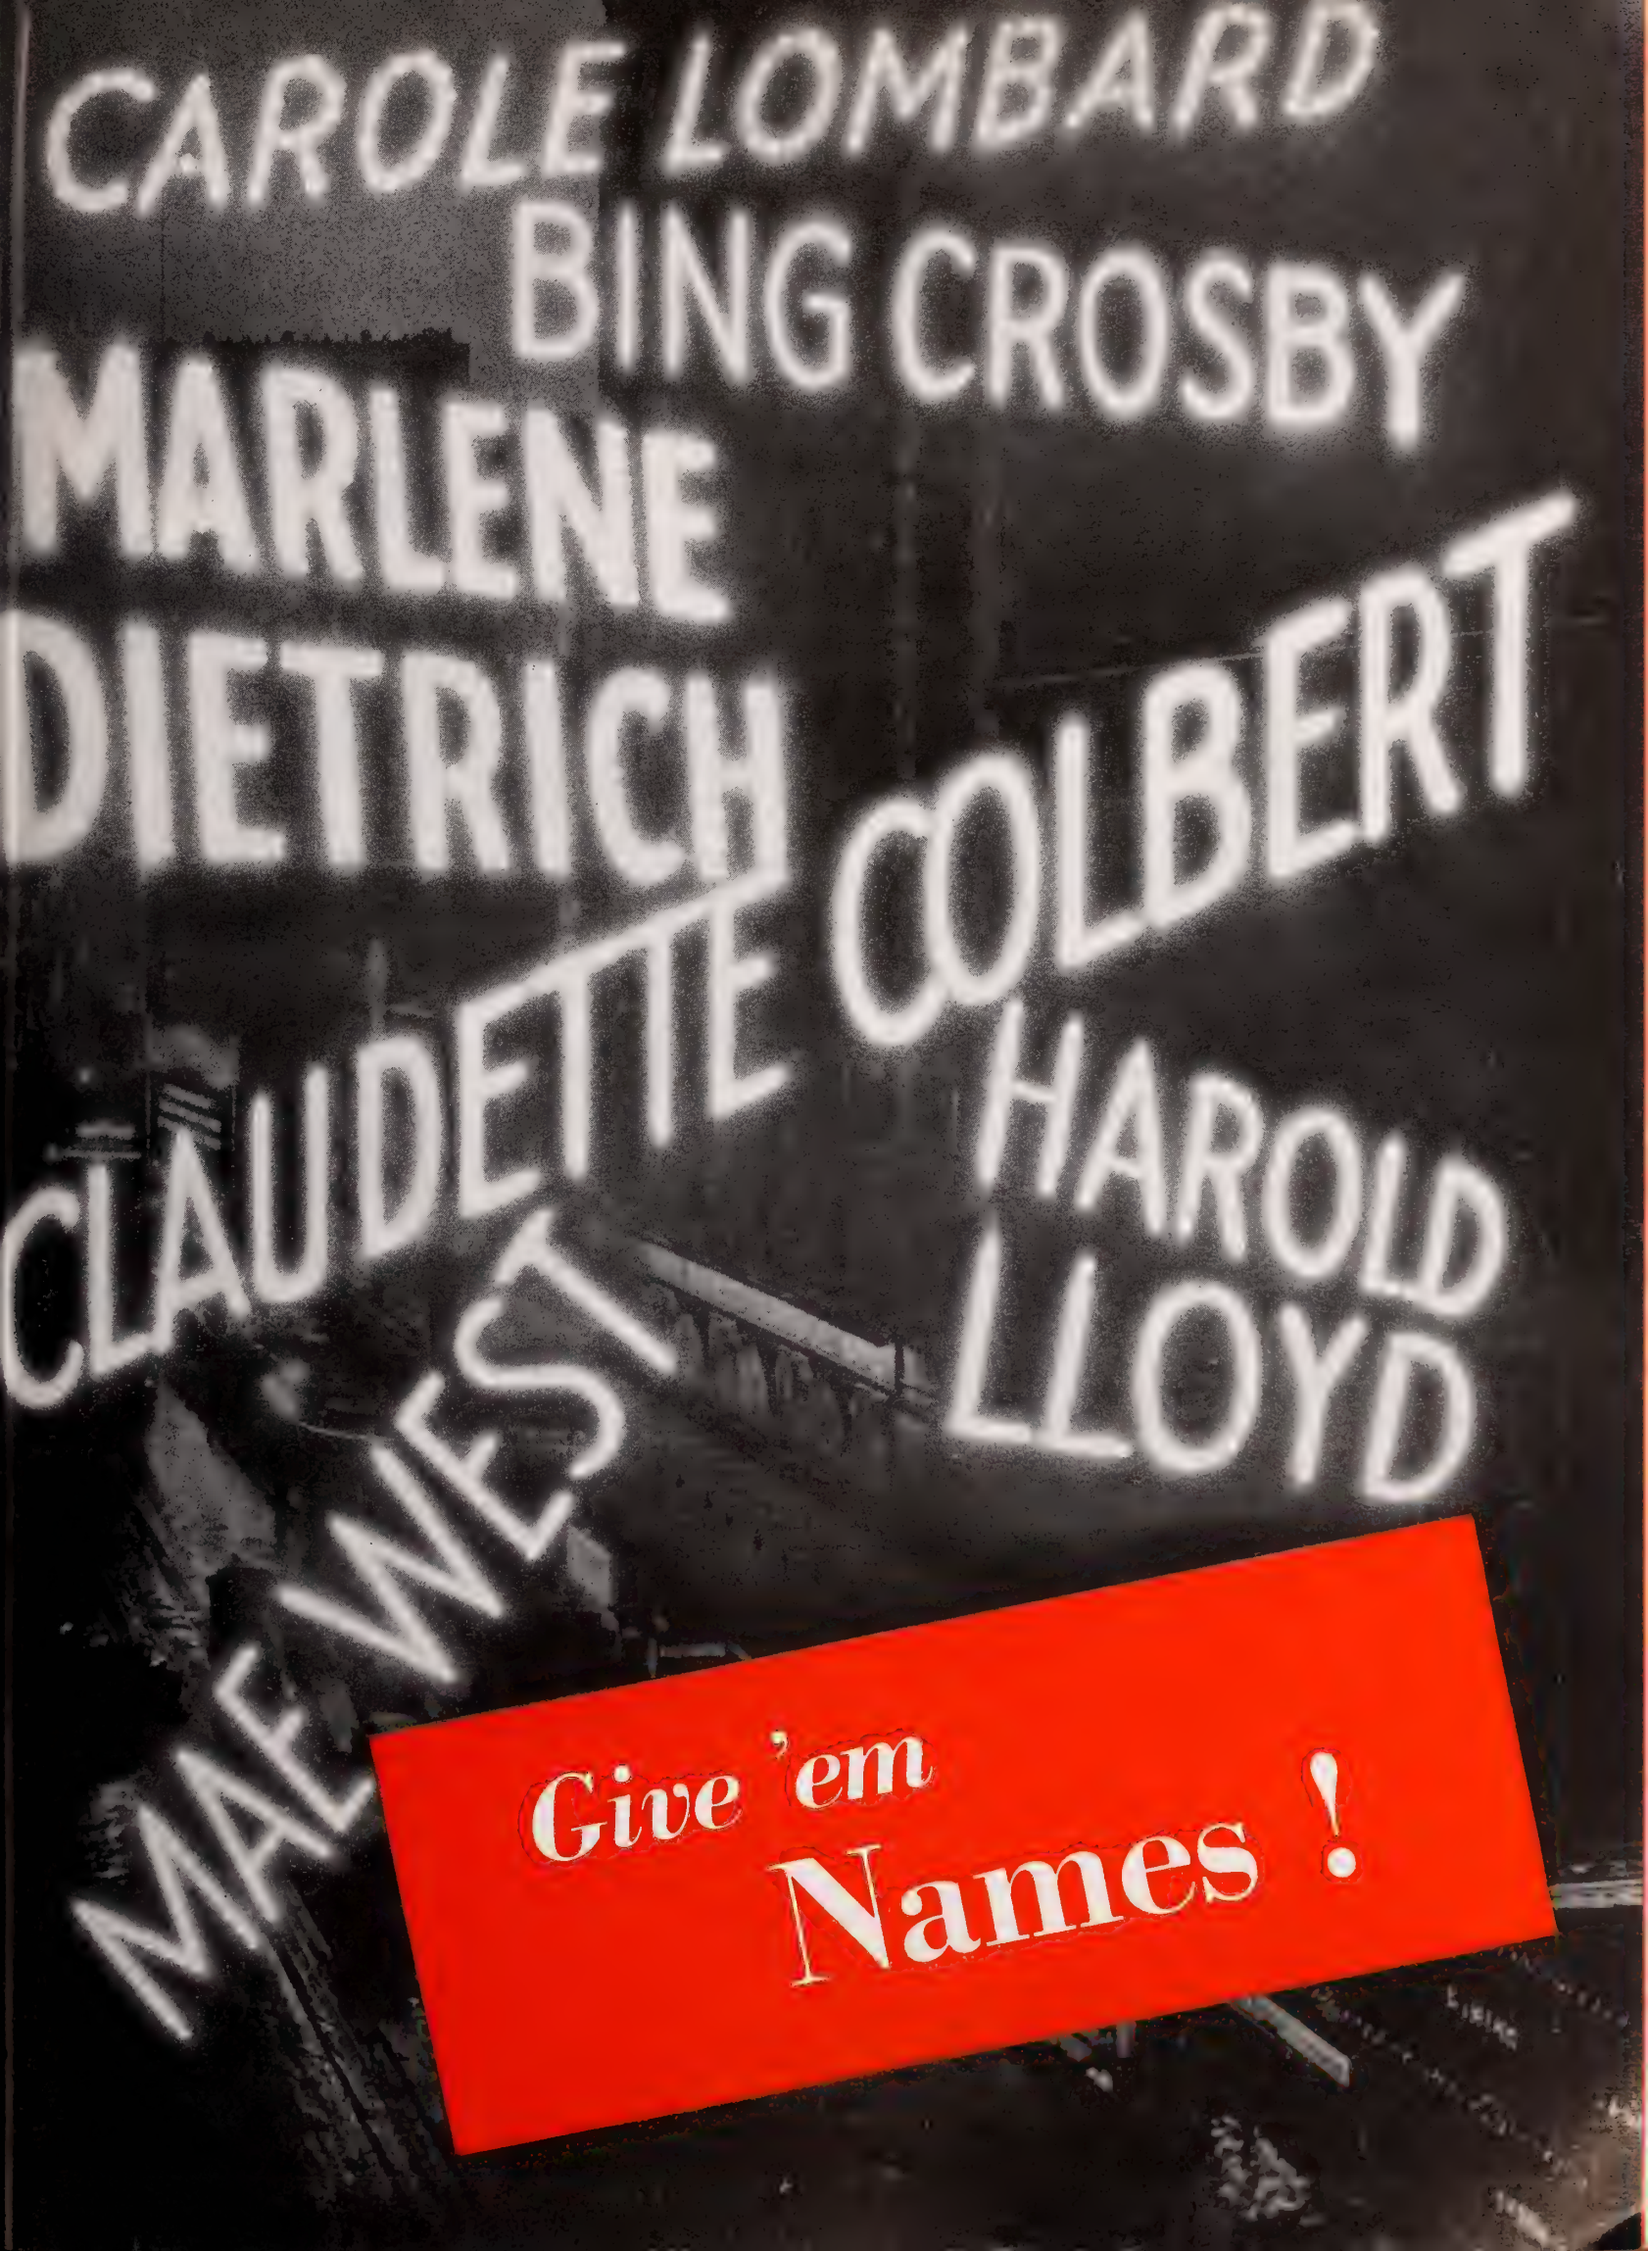
"I'd Give My Life"



with Sir Guy Standing, Frances Drake, Tom Brown, Janet Beecher. This is Richard Rowland's screen version of the famous Willard Mack stage play, "The Noose." As a stage play, "The Noose" was one of the outstanding melodramas of all time. As a picture it gives Tom Brown a chance to go to town in a really important dramatic role. "I'd Give My Life," frankly, is a Thriller, a Tear-jerker, the kind of picture a well-balanced production line-up must have. Good reliable bread and butter box-office!

"The Turning Point"





with Julie Haydon, Paul Kelly, Douglas Wood. A thrilling drama, set against an exciting background of life in smalltown America...a picture that'll have all the punch and human appeal that go to make up box-office...plus a cast of young stars who can put over this kind of story with a bang.

"Our Miss Keane"

with Virginia Weidler and Billy Lee. This is one of those pictures that year in, year out, stand pat as good solid box-office bread and butter winners. A Saturday Evening Post story by the popular woman's writer, Grace Sartwell Mason..."Our Miss Keane" tells of a woman who thought business and a career were everything until a bunch of kids elbowed their rambunctious way into her life and made her their guardian.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Quick reference information on product started and completed and a panorama of the news of the week

Production

Studios continued to hum with activity last week, the production level remaining at the seasonal peak, registered the previous week, of 46 features and six short subjects. Shorts production was greater than last week. Forty-seven pictures were in the cutting rooms and 19 were in preparation.

Seven features were placed in work during the week. Columbia put "Craig's Wife" and "The Road to Nowhere" before the cameras. At Paramount work started on "Wives Never Know" and "Murder With Pictures." Work began on "Second Wife" at Radio, while Universal put "A Fool for Blondes" into production. Warners showed the greatest activity with nine features shooting. In the independent division the Fanchon Royer company started on "Pilot X."

Columbia had five features in work, one in preparation and scheduled for cameras within two weeks and one editing. Samuel Goldwyn had two, zero and zero; M-G-M, six, one and 13; Paramount, seven, three and eight; Pickford-Lasky, one, zero and zero; Republic, one, two and three; Radio, five, four and two; Roach, zero, zero and two; Selznick International, one, zero and zero; Twentieth Century-Fox, four, three and six; Universal, three, two and four; Warners, nine, one and eight; independents, two, two and zero.

In the short subject division Columbia had none shooting, two in preparation and none editing. M-G-M had three, one and four; Radio had two, zero and three; Roach, zero, one and three; Warners, one, zero and one, and the independents, zero, one and zero.

Confidence

Maybe the talent doesn't listen to political broadcasts, which would be in conformity with the ancient tradition that actors don't read anything but their lines and live in a make-believe world of their own, or maybe their predilection for lucid utterance and effective diction limits their tunings-in to the President's addresses. At any rate, there appears to be no apprehension in the talent sector as to the immediate future of the nation and that part of it which is their own especial source of bread, butter and cake. The drift from contract to free lance basis is proof enough of that.

It is not reasonable to suppose that the trend is merely a fad born of Warren William's somewhat spectacular purchase of his unexpired contract with Warners for a reported $10,000. Actors may be like unto sheep in a number of ways, but the outright purchase of a position in the army of the unemployed is hardly comparable to that of a hill top bungalow or a Hispano Suiza. And there are, of course, the agents, extremely commercial gentlemen, who have quite a lot to say about matters pertaining to the mean average incomes of their clients. Which seems to make the agents party to the general belief that everything is going to be all right with the box office for quite a spell.

Mr. William's action differs from others preceding and following it mainly in the detail of payment. Fredric March is another who has chosen the open road, a thoroughfare already familiar and profitable to Lyle Talbot, Edward Everett Horton, Basil Rathbone and others. Something like eagerness to join the procession is being displayed by more than a dozen top flight stars whose contracts are in various stages of progress and the customary assumption that conversation in this vein is horse trader's language isn't widely credited as the complete answer.

It is early to determine the extent or duration of the trend, but quick figures indicate that free lancing has netted a profit, on the whole, for those who have deliberately detached themselves from the relative security of contracts. Hollywood thrives on quick figures. As the calendar unfolds the remainder of the story, other figures, bigger ones spanning more pages of that dependable work, may tell another story. Until then, no doubt, the procession may be expected to continue in the way its leaders have chosen.

EDUCATION HELD ROAD TO "CLEAN" PICTURES

Education, not legislation, is the key to clean motion pictures, in the opinion of Dr. William Lewin of Weequahic, N. J., chairman of the Motion Picture Committee of the Department of Secondary Education of the National Education Association.

"We have found that an aroused public opinion as exemplified in the Legion of Decency drive is more effective than such measures as the Neely-Pettingill Bill, recently introduced into Congress, with a view of securing better pictures through the devious methods of artificial legislation. We cannot legislate good taste," Dr. Lewin said.

Itemization

Frank Lloyd has added Lance Baxter, research, and Silas Prime, story, to his staff at Paramount. . . . Warners have assigned Ann Dvorak to a major role in "The Green Light." . . . Ray McCarey has been loaned by Paramount to Universal to direct "Air Hostess." . . . Sol Lesser will make a picture based on the life of Davey Crockett. . . . Joe Rivkin, casting director for Hal Roach, has appointed Joe Collum as assistant.

George Nichols, Jr., and George Stevens have signed new term contracts to direct for Radio. . . . "Sally, Irene and Mary" will be produced by Twentieth Century-Fox. . . . Lillian Coogan, Jackie's mother, will work with Winifred Dunn on the script of "Everybody's Boy," Sol Lesser production starring Bobby Breen. . . . Irving G. Thalberg will produce "Believed" as the next Greta Garbo vehicle. . . . Mat Levine has 45 writers working on 28 stories in a drive to finish current pictures and launch the new season's program.

Imperial has completed "High Hat." . . . David O. Selznick has acquired the rights to "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." . . . Alex Yokel is in conference with Mervyn LeRoy regarding the picturization of his play, "Three Men on a Horse." . . . Romaine Roland, French novelist, will write the screen play for Warners' "Danton, the Terror of France." . . . "The Bengal Killer" will bereleased as "The Bengal Tiger." . . . Victor McLaglen has started work on "A Fool for Blondes" for Universal. . . . Radio has borrowed Bruce Cabot from MGM for "Don't Turn Them Loose" and "The Big Game."

Juniors

It's long and long since a serial has made major table talk in the production colony, but it's longer and longer since human interest failed to stir a people dedicated to its manufacture and proportionately responsive. "Ace Drummond," the Universal chapter play, is getting itself talked about, especially by the mature, as a potential milestone in the professional sense. The reason is that its cast includes three young men everybody would like to see do well. They are Lon Chaney, Jr., House Peters, Jr., and Noah Beery, Jr.

It would be a little hard to get a Hollywood sophisticate to confess an old-fashioned interest in the second generation of screen players, but that's a pose. At bottom the gilded and glorified are as sentimental in this respect as the doctor, lawyer or clergyman who frankly points his offspring toward the carrying on of the family name in the calling with which they have identified it, possibly more so. And the record of the second generation in this regard is not sensational. If only one of these three find the serial a starting point from which to go on to the heights, as did so many in years agone, the colony will feel pretty good about it.

$29,000,000 GAIN MADE IN VALUE OF FILM STOCKS

First Six Months Show Rise in Shares' Valuation, Reflecting Continuation of Wall Street's Bullish Outlook

by THE ANALYST

Motion picture stocks pulled both ways in the first half of 1936, affected by individual company situations, but, as a whole, the film group listed on the stock exchange gained almost $29,000,000 in market value during the six months.

The collective rise from a market valuation of $692,897,500 at the end of 1935 to $721,668,250 on June 30, 1936, was in keeping with the irregular advance of the general market from the April-May low points, but it also reflected continuation of Wall Street's bullish outlook on the industry, so apparent during 1935, when film shares crossed the half-billion mark in listed value.

This optimism was based on further improvement in the general business picture, in which it was felt that the film industry could not help but participate, both because of the nature of its business and the successful efforts of major producers to whet the public's appetite for film entertainment by constant improvement of their wares.

Fitch Service's latest report on the motion picture industry, issued in June, summarized well-informed financial opinion with the statement that "prospects for a continuation of the general industrial and economic recovery . . . augurs well for the amusement field. . . ."

"Coupled with a further betterment in the improved income of the general public, operations of the major motion picture producing companies have in recent months been on a more successful plane and there is every reason to believe that this development will be maintained over the medium term."

Retail Gains Marked

General business at the end of the first half was auspicious in its possibilities of bringing further prosperity to the film industry.

Sharp gains in retail trade, stimulated by payment of the soldier bonus, promised to continue well into the summer. Activity in the heavy industries that are the barometers of the nation's financial condition was even more marked. The steel industry blazed away at 74 per cent of capacity, highest operating rate since 1930.

Business failures for the week ended June 25, according to Dunn & Bradstreet, Inc., were the fewest in 16 years. The average American citizen in May, said the Investors' Syndicate of Minneapolis, in a study of current national income, had the best income since the recovery started. Freight carloadings, a pertinent index of business conditions, were far above a year ago.

Despite uncertainties of an election year, foreign difficulties and domestic labor troubles in some fields, the business viewpoint reflected well-grounded optimism, with consequent enhancement of the outlook for films. This was justified by the continued advance, however spotty, of picture shares over 1935 levels.

Columbia Picture stocks, while they lost ground during the first half, climbed back strongly from the lows. The voting trust certificates, which touched a low of 34¾, recovered to 43½, near the year's top of 45½. The company's 1936-37 schedule of 58 features, three series of two-reel and eight series of single-reel subjects, was the most ambitious in its history.

Loew's eased off during the six months, but finished near the year's high as earnings for the 12 weeks to June 6 were estimated at $1.50 a common share, against 88 cents a year ago.

Eastman Kodak made a sharp rise on continued earnings improvement. The biggest gainer was Universal preferred, which touched a top of 115 and finished at 101½ for a rise of 49½ points.

Motion picture stocks on the Curb Exchange were uniformly higher, with bull activity in Technicolor because of rising interest in color treatment of films. Leading picture bond issues advanced.

Film Profits Higher, and So Are Filming Costs, Says Wall Street Journal

"Earnings of the motion picture industry so far this year have been well ahead of the corresponding period a year ago," reports Wall Street Journal, "but the industry is slow in getting back to what was regarded in the pre-1929 days as normal profits. Attendance is good, and consumer spending power, as reflected in reports of other industries, notably motors, is apparently back to about normal, but movie profits nevertheless are lagging, due to the mounting costs of hitting the public taste in amusement.

"The difficulty of the industry is an obvious one—to get enough good pictures—and in spite of efforts toward economy good pictures seem to cost more than ever," the Journal opines. "At least the big companies are spending more than ever on their film inventories.

"Besides this, the turmoil in the industry in the last five years has sent many able producers out to make their own productions and while these are generally released through the big companies, the share of the producer is of course large. The main object of the industry is to amuse the American public, and apparently producers, stars, directors and writers who are able to do this can write their own salary checks. The stockholders' share in profits is reduced accordingly and it is difficult to see how 'economy' can change this situation."

LOEW'S, INC., NETS $7,390,495 IN 40 WEEKS

Loew's, Inc., parent corporation of all the Loew theatre and MGM producing and distributing companies, netted $7,390,495 in the forty weeks ended June 4th, an increase of $1,550,144 over the same period in 1935, and comparing as follows:

	40 Weeks Ended June 4, '36	40 Weeks Ended June 6, '35
Company's share operating profit after subsidiaries' preferred dividends	$11,488,106	$9,596,570

Wisconsin Unemployment Law Goes Into Effect

All employers of eight or more persons for 18 weeks a year, including motion picture theatre operators in the state, are subject to the provisions of the Wisconsin unemployment insurance law which went into effect on July 1st. The maximum amount per employee for which employers are liable is $15 a week for eight and two-thirds weeks or a total of $130 in any one year. The minimum benefit is $5 a week for 13 weeks.

PETTENGILL WARNS THAT HIS FIGHT FOR FILM CONTROL HAS JUST BEGUN

Congressman Says He'll Reintroduce Bill to Bar Block Booking If He Is Reelected; Tells Committee's Divergent View

Reelection to the 75th Congress in November of Representative Samuel Barrett Pettengill—if and when—will signal a renewed attack on the motion picture by the Indiana Congressman, who was defeated in the recent session in his vigorous efforts to have enacted a federal law prohibiting compulsory block booking and blind buying. The legislator was backed in his fight principally by Allied States Association, and some clubwomen and others outside of the business.

Declaring this week that the fight for federal control of the motion picture industry has "just begun," Representative Pettengill promises that "if I am returned to Congress, the bill will be reintroduced."

Mr. Pettengill's challenge to the industry was laid down in a "report" on the history of the legislation printed in the Congressional Record under the general "leave to print" granted members of the House.

Hearings held by the House subcommittee of which he was chairman ran from March 9th to 26th, developing testimony which filled a volume of 526 printed pages.

"Thereafter," he continued, "the subcommittee went into executive sessions on the bill and reported it favorably to the full committee, with the exception that the paragraph on blind selling was not recommended."

Wants Blind Selling Barred

"A majority of the subcommittee," Mr. Pettengill now explains, "felt that with block booking prohibited, so that exhibitors would not be compelled to buy films in a block before they were produced, the paragraph on blind selling could be omitted on the theory that exhibitors would then have an opportunity, in many instances, to see a preview of films before becoming bound to produce them.

"I did not favor the elimination of the blind-selling feature. I am simply reporting what the majority did.

"This brought the bill before the full committee. I made an earnest effort to have them report it favorably. The opposition toward its consideration at this Congress was, however, too great."

Parallel Case in Senate

A somewhat similar report, he said, could be made about the Neely bill in the Senate. "There also a subcommittee was named which considered hearings. The subcommittee reported it favorably to the full committee, and I am informed the full committee reported it favorably to the Senate. This gave us ground to hope the Senate would pass the bill and get it over to the House, but in the rush of closing, it, with many other important bills—for example, the pure food and drugs bill—failed of enactment.

"I wish a better report could be made. However, the resistance to the bill was formidable. It might be said also that important legislation seldom is enacted the first session it is introduced.

"If I am returned to Congress, the bill will be reintroduced. The battle will go on. The matter of better movies and community freedom of choice is too important to be lost in the first engagement.

" 'We will fight this out on this line if it takes all summer.' "

Commends Support

Paying tribute to the civic organizations and others who supported him, and specifying particularly Abram F. Myers, H. A. Cole, Sidney Samuelson and H. M. Richey, of Allied States, and E. L. Kuykendall, of the MPTOA, the Indiana Congressman declared that much good has already come of the effort. [Editor's Note: Edward L. Kuykendall appeared as a witness on the producers'-distributors' side, which opposed enactment of the bill.]

Mr. Kuykendall, he pointed out, "did not defend block booking or the evils which have grown up under it, but felt that the remedy was a more liberal cancellation clause." In fact, he revealed, while the bill was under consideration many conferences took place within the industry looking toward ways and means to meet the evils which the bill seeks to cure.

"Disappointing as is the situation to myself and the splendid men and women who gave their time, their efforts and their means to this struggle, we can, nevertheless, take comfort in two things," Mr. Pettengill said. "First, we did our duty by our country and our children as we saw it; and, second, the mere introduction of the bill and the battle that was made for it has unquestionably had a good effect on the motion picture industry. That is apparent from common observation; and, second, it is testified to in private conversation by men prominent in the industry—even among those who fought the bill's passage. The proprieties forbid me to state names, but this is the fact."

"The motion picture industry is not unlike many others," he commented. "There are men in it who may not wish any supervision or regulation by government, yet are fully aware of the men and practices which have given it a bad name and themselves wish to see improvement in the conditions under which films are produced and marketed.

"The struggle for the enactment of the Pettengill-Neely bill has strengthened the hands of those in the industry as well as those outside it who recognize that it cannot defy public opinion and succeed.

" 'Say not the struggle naught availeth.' It has already accomplished much good. The history of the movies, however, is that promises of self-regulation are a frail reed to rely upon."

EARTHQUAKE SEQUENCE CALLED LIBEL ON CITY

San Francisco is libelled in the earthquake scenes from the production "San Francisco" according to a member of the city's legislature, who proposed a formal resolution asking Will H. Hays to delete the offending sequences. His motion was laughed down by his fellow-legislators but a resolution was passed authorizing a member of the body to "officially view and report on the picture."

Report on History of Block Sales Fight Says Promises of Self-Regulation Are "Frail Reed" But Recognizes Improvement

Stapel Is Renamed Leader of KMTO

The Kansas-Missouri Theatre Owners Association at Kansas City has elected John Stapel of Rockport, Mo., president for another year and all other officers have been returned, including E. B. Danielson, Russell, Kan., vice-president; R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, secretary-treasurer, and the following directors: Frank Cassil, Tom Edwards, George Hartmann, Emanuel Rolsky and Clarence Schultz.

Resolutions denouncing radio appearances of screen stars were passed, one of which called upon exhibitors everywhere to protest to the studios by wire and letter immediately against the practice, which, it was resolved, "kills their popularity, destroys their prestige and cheapens themselves."

In New York, film buying for next season's product will be the topic of discussion at the Independent Theatre Owners' Association board of directors meeting this week. Although complaints have been registered within the organization of alleged malpractices by distributors, a committee appointed some time ago to take the matter to Washington has not yet done anything about it.

In Boston, members of Independent Exhibitors, Inc., New England Allied unit, are being urged by mail to communicate with the secretary regarding any problems which can be remedied by legal action.

The roadshowing of films by United Artists in towns where exhibitors have not yet purchased them has been condemned in resolutions passed by the Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain Region, Inc.

CITES POTENTIAL MORAL INFLUENCE

which have neither the capacity nor the desire to make the efforts necessary for the abstraction or deductive reasoning, are captivated by the cinema. In place of the efforts which reading or listening demand, there is the continued pleasure of a succession of concrete and, so to speak, living pictures.

This power is still greater in the talking picture for the reason that the interpretation becomes even easier and the charm of music is added to the action and drama. The dances and variety acts which sometimes are introduced between films serve to increase the stimulation of the pageant.

Since, then, the cinema is in reality an object lesson which, for good or evil, teaches the majority of men more effectively than by abstract reasoning, it must be elevated to conformity with the aims of the Christian conscience and saved from depraving or demoralizing effects.

Everyone knows what damage is done to the soul by bad motion pictures. They are occasions of sin; they seduce young people along the ways of evil by glorifying the passions; they show life under a false light, they cloud ideals, they destroy pure love, respect for marriage and affection for the family. They are capable also of creating prejudices among individuals, misunderstandings among nations, among social classes and among entire races.

On the other hand, good motion pictures are capable of exercising a profoundly moral influence upon those who see them. In addition to affording recreation, they are able to arouse noble ideals of life, to communicate valuable conceptions, to impart better knowledge of the history and beauties of the fatherland and other countries, to present truth and virtue under attractive forms, to create at least the flavor of understanding among nations, social classes and races; to champion the cause of justice, to give new life to the claims of virtue and to contribute positively to the genesis of a just social order in the world.

These considerations take on greater seriousness from the fact the cinema speaks not to individuals but to multitudes, and does so in circumstances, time, place and surroundings which are the most likely to arouse unusual enthusiasm for good as well as for bad and to conduct that collective exultation which, as experience teaches us, may assume the most morbid form.

At Center of Popular Life

A motion picture is viewed by people who are seated in a dark theatre and whose faculties, mental, physical and often spiritual, are relaxed. One does not need to go far in search of these theatres; they are close to home, to church, to school, and they thus bring the cinema to the very center of popular life.

Moreover, the acting of the plot is done by men and women selected for their art, for all those natural gifts, and for the employment of those expedients which can become, for youth particularly, the instruments of seduction. Further, the motion picture has enlisted in its service luxurious appointments, pleasing music, the vigor of realism and every form of whim and fancy. For this very reason it attracts and fascinates particularly the young, adolescent or even the child.

Thus, at the very age when moral sense is being formed, when notions and sentiments of justice and rectitude, or duty, obligations and ideals of life are being developed, the motion picture with its direct propaganda assumes a position of commanding influence.

It is unfortunate that in the present state of affairs this influence is frequently exerted for evil. So much so that when one thinks of the havoc wrought in the souls of youth and childhood, of the loss of innocence so often suffered in motion picture theatres, there comes to mind the terrible condemnation pronounced by our Lord upon the corrupters of little ones: "Whosoever shall scandalize one of these little ones who believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone be hanged about his neck and he be drowned in the depths of the sea."

"In particular you, venerable brethren of the United States, will be able to insist with justice that the industry in your country has recognized and accepted its responsibility before society."

—Pope Pius XI

Urges Use for Education

It is therefore one of the supreme necessities of our time to watch and to labor to the end that the motion picture be no longer a school of corruption but that it be transformed into an effectual instrument for the education and elevation of mankind.

And here we record with pleasure that certain governments in their anxiety over the influence exercised by the cinema in the moral and educational fields have with the aid of upright and honest persons, especially fathers, mothers and families, set up reviewing commissions and constituted other agencies which have to do with motion picture production in an effort to direct cinema for inspiration to national works of great poets and writers.

It was most fitting and desirable that you venerable brethren should have exercised a special watchfulness over the motion picture industry which your country so highly developed and which is a great influence in other quarters of the globe. It is equally the duty of bishops of the entire Catholic world to unite in vigilance over this universal and potent form of entertainment and instruction, to the end that they may be able to place a ban on bad motion pictures because they are an offense to moral and religious sentiment and because they are in opposition to Christian spirit and to its ethical principles.

"It admits of no discussion that the motion picture has achieved in these last years a position of universal importance among modern means of diversion.

"There is no need to point out the fact that millions of people go to motion pictures every day; that motion picture theatres are being opened in ever-increasing numbers in civilized and semi-civilized countries; that the motion picture has become the most popular form of diversion which is offered for the leisure moments not only of the rich but of all classes of society."

—Excerpt from the papal encyclical

There must be no weariness in combating whatever contributes to lessening the people's sense of decency and honor.

This is the obligation which binds not only bishops, but also the faithful, and all decent men who are solicitous for the decorum and moral health of the family, nation and human society in general.

In what, then, must this vigilance consist?

The problem of the production of moral films would be solved radically if it were possible for us to have the production wholly inspired by the principles of Christian morality. We can never sufficiently praise all those who have dedicated themselves, or who are to dedicate themselves, to the noble cause of raising the standard of the motion picture to meet the needs of education and the requirements of Christian conscience.

For this purpose they must make full use of the technical ability of experts and not permit the waste of effort and money by the employment of amateurs.

But since we know how difficult it is to organize such an industry, especially because of considerations of a financial nature, and since on the other hand it is necessary to influence the production of all films so they may contain nothing harmful from the religious, moral or social viewpoint, pastors of souls must exercise their vigilance over films wherever they may be produced or offered to Christian peoples.

Appeal to Industry's Personnel

As to the motion picture industry itself, we exhort bishops of all countries, but in particular you, venerable brethren, to address your appeal to those Catholics who hold important positions in this industry. Let them take serious thought of their duties and the responsibility which they have as children of the church to use their influence and authority for the promotion of the principles of sound morality in the films which they produce or aid in producing.

The number of Catholics who are executors, directors, authors or actors is not inconsiderable and it is unfortunate their influence has not always been in accordance with their faith and their ideals. You will do well, venerable brethren, to pledge them to bring their profession into harmony with their conscience as respectable men and followers of Jesus Christ.

In this as in every other field, apostolate pastors of souls will surely find the best collaborators in those who fight in the ranks of Catholic action, and in this letter we cannot refrain from addressing to them a warm appeal that they give this cause their full contribution and their unwearying and unfailing activity.

From time to time, bishops will do well to recall to the motion picture industry that amid the cares of their pastoral ministry they are under obligation to interest themselves in every form of decent and healthy recreation because they are responsible before God for the moral welfare of their people, even during their leisure.

Their sacred calling constrains them to proclaim clearly and openly that unhealthy and impure entertainment destroys the moral fiber of the nation. They will likewise remind the motion picture industry that the demands they make regard not only Catholics, but all who patronize the cinema.

In particular, you venerable brethren of the

REVIEW OFFICE FOR EACH COUNTRY

United States will be able to insist with justice that the industry in your country has recognized and accepted its responsibility before society.

The bishops of the whole world will take care to make clear to leaders of the motion picture industry that the force of such a power of universality as the cinema can be directed with great utility to the highest ends of individual and social improvement. Why, indeed, should there be a question of merely avoiding evil? Why should the motion picture simply be a means of diversion and light relaxation to occupy an idle hour? With its magnificent power, it can and must be a light and a positive guide to what is good.

Practical Indications

And now, in view of the gravity of the subject, we consider it timely to come down to certain practical indications.

Above all, all pastors of souls will undertake to obtain each year from their people a pledge similar to the one already alluded to, which was given by their American brothers in which they promised to stay away from motion-picture plays which were offensive to truth and Christian morality.

The most efficacious manner of obtaining these pledges and promises will be through the parish church or school by enlisting the earnest cooperation of all fathers and mothers of families who are conscious of their grave responsibility.

The bishops will also be able to avail themselves of the Catholic press for the purpose of bringing home to the people the moral duty and effectiveness of this promise.

The fulfillment of this pledge supposes that the people will be made clearly aware which films are permitted to all, which are permitted with reservations and which are harmful or positively bad. This requires prompt, regular and frequent publication of classified lists of motion picture plays so as to make the information readily accessible to all. Special bulletins or other timely publications such as the daily Catholic press may be used for this purpose.

Review Office for Each Country

Were it possible, it would in itself be desirable to establish a single list for the entire world, because all live under the same moral laws. Since, however, there is here a question of pictures which interest all classes of society, the great and the humble, the learned and the unlettered, the judgment passed upon the film cannot be the same in each case in all respects.

Indeed, circumstances, usages and forms vary from country to country, so it does not seem practical to have a single list for all the world. If, however, films were classified in each country in the manner indicated above, the resultant list would offer in principle the guidance needed.

Therefore, it will be necessary that in each country the bishops set up a permanent national reviewing office in order to be able to promote good motion pictures, classify others and bring this judgment to the knowledge of the priests and the faithful. It will be very proper to intrust this agency to the central organization of the Catholic action which is dependent on the bishops. At all events it must clearly be laid down that this service of information, in order to function organically and with efficiency, must be on a national basis, that is, it must be carried on by a single central responsibility.

Should grave reasons really require it, their excellencies, the bishops, in their own dioceses through their diocesan reviewing committees will be able to apply to a national list—which must use standards adaptable to the whole nation—such severer criterions as may be demanded by the character of the region. They may even censor films which are admitted to the general list.

"The directors of the industry in the United States recognized this fact themselves when they confessed that the responsibility before the people and the world was their very own. In the agreement entered into by common accord March 30, solemnly sealed, signed and published in the press, they formally pledged themselves to safeguard in the future the moral welfare of patrons of the cinema.

"It is promised in this agreement that no film which lowers the moral standard of spectators, which casts discredit on natural or human law or arouses sympathy for their violation will be produced."

—From the encyclical of Pope Pius XI

The above mentioned office likewise will look after organization of the existing motion picture theatres belonging to parish Catholic associations so they may be guaranteed reviewed approval of films. Through organization of these halls, which often represent a considerable clientele for the industry, it will be possible to advance a new demand, namely, that the industry produce motion pictures which correspond entirely to our principles. Such films then may readily be shown not only in Catholic halls but also in others.

We realize the establishment of such an office will involve a certain sacrifice, a certain expense for Catholics of the various countries. Yet the great importance of the motion picture, the necessity of safeguarding the morality of Christian people and the entire nation makes this sacrifice more than justified. Indeed, the effectiveness of our schools, of our Catholic associations and even of our churches is lessened and endangered by the plague of evil and pernicious motion pictures.

Supervision Provided

The office force must be composed of persons who are familiar with the technique of the motion picture and who at the same time are well grounded in the principles of Catholic morality and doctrines. They must in addition be under the guidance and direct supervision of a priest chosen by the bishop.

Opportune understandings for the exchange of that information among offices of the various countries will conduce to greater efficiency and harmony in the work of reviewing films while due consideration will be given to varying conditions and circumstances.

It will thus be possible to achieve unity of outlook in the judgments and communications appearing in the Catholic press of the world.

These offices will profit not only by the experiments made in the United States but also by the accomplishments of Catholics of other countries in the motion picture field.

Even if employees of the office—with the best good will and intentions—should make an occasional mistake, as happens in all human affairs, the bishops in their pastoral prudence will know how to apply effective remedies to safeguard in every possible way the authority and prestige of the office itself. This may be done by strengthening the staff with more influential men or by replacing those who have shown themselves less capable of performing their delicate duties.

International Force for Ideals

If the bishops of the world assume their share in the exercise of this painstaking vigilance over the motion picture—and of this we, who know their pastoral zeal, have no doubt—they will certainly accomplish a great work for the protection of the morality of their people during their moments of leisure and recreation.

They will win the approbation and approval of all right-thinking men, Catholic and non-Catholic, and they will help assure that this great international force—the motion picture—shall be directed toward the noble end of promoting the highest ideals and the truest standard of life.

That these desires which well in our paternal heart may be realized we employ the help of the grace of God, and in pledge thereof we impart to you, venerable brethren, and to the clergy and the people intrusted to you, our affectionate and apostolic benediction.

Legion of Decency Lists 14 Pictures

Class A-1, "Unobjectionable for General Patronage": "Die Csardasfuertin," "Easy Money," "High Tension," "Ich und die Kaiserin," "The Lion's Den," "Public Enemy's Wife," "The Return of Sophie Lang," "Ticket to Paradise," "Wellington Pike Goes West," "We Went to College," "White Fang." Class A-2, "Unobjectionable for Adults": "Anthony Adverse," "The Crime of Dr. Forbes," "Leichte Kavallerie."

William Lyon Phelps Attacks "Pastures" Ban

William Lyon Phelps, professor emeritus of English literature at Yale University and considered an authority on the drama, has joined in the protest against the banning of the Warner picture, "The Green Pastures," in Quebec on the alleged ground that it is "sacrilegious."

Better Film Heads Named

Chairmen for the Wilmington, Del., Better Films Council for the coming year are: Mrs. Edmund M. Barsham, in charge of contact with exhibitors and production companies; Mrs. E. T. Higgins, in charge of Catholic groups; Mrs. Ernest R. Caro, in charge of membership; Mrs. D. B. Coxe, telephone committee, and Mrs. James K. Stack, recording secretary.

Teatro Al Día Is Published for Spanish Owners

The first issue of Teatro Al Día, the new Quigley Publication in Spanish, for all Spanish-speaking countries, appeared this week, further internationalizing the motion picture publishing enterprises of Martin Quigley.

Within the orange-colored cover which is characteristic of the Quigley Publications are some 84 pages of editorials, articles, pictorial displays and advertising pertaining to theatre architecture, theatre technology and equipment, addressed to the Spanish theatre owners, their staffs and theatre technicians.

Featured among the new Spanish theatres described, pictorially and otherwise, is the new Almeda theatre in Mexico City. New air-conditioned equipment and processes are explained by John T. Knight, Jr., who conducts the equipment and operating departments in Better Theatres, the companion publication to Teatro Al Día, published in English nearly a decade and a half by Quigley Publications.

There is an equipment index in the form of a directory of American sources of theatre equipment manufacturing, and a release chart listing American pictures that are suitable for the Spanish speaking countries.

Created in the same standard size as Quigley Publications' MOTION PICTURE HERALD and Better Theatres, the new Teatro Al Día is fabricated in the same format as Better Theatres.

The new export publication, while devoted primarily to maintenance of equipment and construction of motion picture theatres, will also appeal editorially to kindred phases of the motion picture in the Latin American countries, and elsewhere where Spanish is spoken predominantly. Its creation came only after an extensive survey was made among exhibitors in the Spanish countries, and among theatre supply dealers, motion picture producers and importers and exporters.

Harry Rubin, in charge of projection for the Paramount theatre circuit, is another contributor in the first issue, writing extensively on the advantages of certain new styles of carbons and lamps over old styles, and telling how the new developments in this branch of operations has contributed greatly towards the betterment of projection for sound motion picture theatres. An article on acoustics, written by C. C. Potwin and S. K. Woolf, both of Electrical Research Products, Inc., describes how theatres hampered by improper acoustics can remedy their troublesome situation by applying the latest scientific processes to the present constructed theatre.

An article on trouble-shooting in the projection booth, and how to better obtain the required results in the projection of sound films was written by O. C. Schirmer, of Audio Equipment. There are several editorials on maintenance and remodeling, enabling the Latin exhibitor to better plan his purchases in theatre equipment ware as well as to deal with reliable sources for necessary equipment.

Originally Teatro Al Día was intended to be a semi-annual publication, but due to the unusually cordial reception accorded the announcement, it was decided to issue Teatro Al Día quarterly beginning with the July issue.

The first issue includes eighty advertisers representing more than thirty pages of merchandising messages. Among the important manufacturers and motion picture film concerns represented are:

Artcraft Sign Co., The
C. C. Ashcraft Manufacturing Co.
Automatic Coil Winder & Electrical Equipment Co., Ltd., The Brenkert Light Projection Co.

Industry Drive Plans To Be Set in August

Final plans for a campaign by advertising and publicity heads of the film industry to offset the competition of fall political activities are to be decided upon in Hollywood early in August. Several ideas for large-scale exploitation of the outstanding new Hollywood product scheduled for release during September and October are being studied now but decisions on the type of industry-wide campaign to be employed are not expected for another three weeks. Advance indications are that a large number of outstanding productions will be released during September and October and given unusual exploitation throughout the country.

"Old Kate," Famed Actress, Dies as Match Peddler

Katherine Lucille Foote, United States born actress, died in London this week, having spent the last 15 years of her life selling matches for pennies on London's Strand. "Old Kate," as she was known to London theatre patrons, was married three times and three times she gambled away the fortunes left her by her husbands.

Maynard Circus Closed

Ken Maynard has closed his circus for the season and has started one-day or week-end dates in towns near Lincoln, Neb.

Regional Meetings Called This Week By United Artists

United Artists home office executives and sales force members, home from the convention in Hollywood, are busy this weekend with five regional sales meetings in New Orleans, Boston, New York, Cleveland and San Francisco.

Harry Gold is conducting the New Orleans session at which salesmen and bookers from Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas and New Orleans are present.

Haskell Masters is scheduled to speak to the Boston, New Haven and Canadian forces at Boston and Charles Stern is set to discuss the new lineup with the New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Buffalo exchange personnel in New York. Bert Stearn, former Pittsburgh manager, recently promoted to division head, is meeting in Cleveland with the Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Indianapolis men, and L. J. Schlaifer is conducting the meeting of coast members at San Francisco.

The first release for the company next season will be "The Last of the Mohicans" some time in August. The second release will be "The Man Who Performed Miracles," which is being completed by Alexander Korda.

$481,944 Payment Ordered In Theatres Equipment Case

The chancery court at Wilmington, Del., has ordered payment of $481,944.78 for expenses incurred in the organization of General Theatres Equipment Corporation which evolved from the receivership of General Theatres Equipment, Inc.

Assets of the old company recently were sold to a reorganization committee representing a group of debenture holders who organized the new corporation. All parties interested in the receivership consented to the order which permits the new corporation to make payments. The largest allowance goes to Bred, Abbott and Morgan of New York, counsel for the reorganization committee, who were allowed $110,000 less $11,250 previously paid.

Radio Licensees Shown Television Demonstration

Licensees of the Radio Corporation of America witnessed a demonstration of television on Wednesday afternoon in Radio City, New York. Pictures of RCA officers, of moving trains and of a dance ensemble were among the features shown in the exhibition. Transmission was from a laboratory in the Empire State Building. The 225 invited guests were told that there are no plans for designing commercial sets this year.

Copyright Suit Brought

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation has been made a party defendant in the copyright infringement suit of Margaretta Tuttle who charges that "Kingdoms of the World" was infringed by "The Unguarded Hour." The suit was brought in United States district court in Cincinnati.

Wanger Will Produce in Italy

Walter Wanger will produce from one to three pictures a year in Cinema City, just outside of Rome, Italy, as part of his program for United Artists starting June 15 next, the producer said this week on his arrival in New York from Europe. All productions will be made with All-American casts. Mr. Wanger has not yet decided whether he will make Italian versions of the pictures. The first picture will be "Three Times Loser," with Sylvia Sidney and Henry Fonda and either Gregory LaCava or William Howard will direct.

Mr. Wanger said he looks upon production in Italy as ideal in many respects, with the climatic conditions good and the historic cities lending themselves easily to colorful backgrounds. The producer added that while in Italy he had an audience with Premier Mussolini who is anxious to revive film production to a top position in Italy as it held many years ago. Special tax arrangements have been concluded by Wanger with the Italian Government whereby production can proceed on a money saving basis.

United Artists and Mr. Wanger himself will finance the Italian productions, the producer declared, for under his contract with United Artists the company finances 50 per cent of his pictures and he puts up the other half. The new company formed in Rome for the productions is Societe Anonyme Companie Cintematographie Italiano Walter Wanger, with Mr. Wanger as president, Count Parlo de Frasso, vice-president, Dr. A. H. Giannini and Lloyd Wright, directors, and Mario Luprino, general manager.

Mr. Wanger returns to Hollywood late this week and takes with him Lillie Zehner, Broadway stage star, who he signed to a five-year contract.

Van Beuren - Pathe Case Before Court

A report by a special arbitrator, Theodore Kiendl, on the Pathe claim against the Van Beuren Corporation, filed in the New York supreme court this week, held that Van Bueren must pay $240,000 to Pathe as money due on a series of notes. The report also held that under an agreement made in 1924, Pathe was not required to advance money to Van Beuren in order to extend the maturity dates of the notes which were to have been paid up on December 31, 1935.

The arbitrator also reported that Pathe is entitled to the chattel mortgage which has been delivered to it by Van Beuren. He also redelivered to Pathe a release and cancellation of the chattel mortgage covering 1935-36 product.

Dunphy Joins Paramount In Publicity Department

Christopher Dunphy, new director of advertising and publicity for the Paramount studios in Hollywood, has reorganized his department into two divisions. Cliff Lewis heads the advertising section and Terry DeLapp is in charge of publicity. Rufus Blair will head the staff which will service out-of-town newspapers.

"BROADCAST" TO SHOW NEW "VISUAL MUSIC"

"Visual music," produced by means of animated geometrical designs illustrating music playing on a sound track, will be shown in the Paramount picture, "The Big Broadcast of 1937."

The innovation is the work of Oscar Fischinger, who has been experimenting with the novelty in Germany. The inventor's first product in this country is included in the forthcoming picture.

Spanish Dialogue Films Held Vital

The steady growth of the Argentine film industry, and the enthusiastic reception accorded to Argentine and Spanish talking pictures in that country, are factors which doubtless will cause the American film industry further to consider presentation of features in Spanish dialogue, according to Assistant Trade Commissioner Joe D. Walstrom in Buenos Aires.

In 1935, the report states, three or four Argentine production companies released 10 featured pictures. This year the number of companies has increased to eight, and eight pictures have been released in six months. By the end of the year the total is expected to approach 25 and observers predict that there will be 50 releases from national companies in 1937.

The success of these Argentine and Spanish features has been found particularly pronounced in the territory outside of Buenos Aires, where a relatively large portion of the audience is not able to read. It is not unusual for such pictures to earn 10 times as much as an average American film, Mr. Walstrom is informed.

Superimposed titles and "dubbed in" Spanish dialogue have not proved successful, says the Government representative.

Cameramen to Receive $100 Minimum Under Pact

An increase in minimum salaries from $90 to $100, a 40-hour week and the right to hire apprentice cameramen are the chief provisions contained in a new two-year pact signed by Local 644 and the newsreel companies. The agreement went into effect this week.

Stevenson Addressing Institute

Edward F. Stevenson, for many years president of Visugraphic Pictures, will speak at the annual convention of the Technical Advertisers Institute at the Buck Falls Club, in Pennsylvania, the weekend of July 18th. Mr. Stevenson has been lecturing for many years on the use of motion pictures in education and in industry. The New York branch of the Institute has chartered a special train to the convention.

Universal Gets Contract

A contract to supply features, short subjects and newsreels for 34 New York State institutions and agencies has been awarded by the state to Universal Pictures.

St. Louis Theatre Contracts Ready

Attorneys for Fanchon and Marco and for Warner Brothers were scheduled to sign contracts in connection with the St. Louis theatre and product deal on Friday. Fanchon and Marco is to take over leases on the Orpheum, Shubert-Rialto and Hi-Pointe in addition to acquiring Warners' 42 per cent interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company.

F. & M. is planning construction of seven new theatres in the city, each of which will seat over 1,000. Some of the houses will replace obsolete St. Louis Amusement Company buildings.

The United States district court in St. Louis has dismissed an indictment charging conspiracy to violate the Sherman anti-trust law against Abel Cary Thomas, former secretary and general counsel of Warners, who resigned this week. The charge grew out of a dispute between Warners and F. & M. over the furnishing of pictures for first-run exhibition in three St. Louis theatres.

Amendment Requested In Fox Detroit Claim

An amended proof of claim for $4,437,366 against Fox Theatres Corporation was filed in federal court in New York this week by the Union Guardian Trust Company of Detroit as trustee of the first mortgage bonds of the Colwood Company, owner of the Fox Theatre Building in Detroit. The Colwood Company leased the Fox Theatre Building to Fox Theatres in 1931 and the lease was broken in July, 1932, it was stated. The claim covers the period from 1932 to the end of 1936.

Grand National Head To Sign New Contracts

Edward L. Alperson, president of Grand National, is en route to Hollywood this weekend with Carl Leserman, general sales manager, to conclude agreements now being drawn whereby several new producers will join the company.

Adler Named to City Post

Bert Adler, theatrical press agent since 1918, has been appointed Deputy Commissioner of Sanitation for New York City. Mr. Adler has done exploitation work for many producers and for many years conducted an independent publicity agency which served the major producers and distributors.

Emanuel Cohen In Hollywood

Emanuel Cohen has returned to Hollywood from New York and starts his first picture for Paramount distribution this week with Mae West starred. His deal with Paramount calls for eight features a year.

Sanforth in Manhattan

Clifford Sanforth, who just completed direction of Imperial's "I Demand Payment," has arrived in New York from Hollywood for conferences on production plans for 1936-37.

"The Green Pastures" closes a nine day engagement at the Miller Theatre tonight. This house normally plays pictures four and not more than seven days. With the exception of one picture, "Green Pastures" outgrossed any attraction shown in Wichita this year. It brought hundreds of people to our theatre who do not regularly attend and in that respect is a tremendous asset to any theatre playing it. You have a picture that any manager can be proud to show and one that will produce no end of favorable comment.

I am writing today urging that you release this picture immediately for general showing. Along with exhibitors everywhere I am in need of big box-office attractions right now

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

THE SEEMING inevitability of two-feature programs and the extent of conflicting opinion on their desirability has led Jerry Baker, a Fox Midwest Theatre manager in Kansas City, Kansas, to propose what he considers the ideal arrangement for showing double bills—so Senn Lawler reports in "Contact," Fox Midwest house organ.

In effect, Mr. Baker would build a two-story theatre, or remodel all present single-floor structures to utilize balconies, in order to show his two features concurrently.

There would be but one box office, and a single admission would permit the patron to see either or both features as time and inclination allowed.

The advantages in Jerry's plan, he explains, are that continuous runs could be given both pictures; if the patron were not entertained by the picture showing on the bottom floor he wouldn't be forced to sit through it in order to see the other, but could immediately "change theatres" by walking up to the second floor. On family nights, Pa and the kids could eat red meat with Wallace Beery on one floor, while Ma mooned over Bing Crosby on the other.

There's really no limit to Jerry's idea. Pursuing it further, one imagines that if competition got tough, one could merely add another feature to the program simply by adding another story to the theatre; and so on up as far as the building code and the sky permitted. Another thought is that one section of seats could be sandwiched midway between the floors, so that the patron in a hurry could see both pictures at once!

Illinois' Governor, Henry Horner, likes the movies, but he will not accept any passes, on the ground that the exhibitors help pay his salary, in taxes, and, therefore, are entitled to his admission payment. However, his chauffeur and bodyguard, always accompanying him, follows him into the theatre, not on a paid admission, but on the flash of his police badge.

Twenty women and children died when fire destroyed a motion picture theatre at Hyderabad City in India. Hundreds of others were saved freakishly when the wife of a state official tore off her long, gayly-colored scarf wrapped about her waist, and had them slide down the garment from the balcony to the street.

John P. Medbury's favorite gag of this day concerns a scenario writer who was trying to sell a producer an original story.

"It hasn't a routine finish," the scenarist explained. "It has an unhappy ending. The last scene is in Venice, and the hero is killed by a gondolier!"

"You mean," responded the producer, "it falls right from the ceiling on him?"

Lest any of the great minds in motion pictures have been worrying, we hasten to advise that Colleen Moore's priceless doll house has just completed its 50,000th mile of tour without a single injury or breakage of any kind, or the missing of a single schedule on the itinerary of its exhibition.

Not one of its more than 400 small-watt electric bulbs, most minute in the world, has been broken. Its solid gold cathedral organ, electrically played, still recalls "the horns of Elfland." The miniature electrical system is in perfect order. The little fountains continue to spread silver veils across the courts, and the tiny chimes ring beautifully in the steeples. All is still fresh and bright.

The feathered nightingale still sings in the magic tree, while the fairy princess dances in her grotto. The ivory horses of Cinderella's coach drink at the fountain in the little court, before their wild dash over the tiny pin-head cobbles of fairyland.

The fairy palaces were produced by more than 700 artists, workmen and master craftsmen, working for more than nine years, under the direction of Miss Moore's father, C. M. Morrison, an engineer—Colleen's name is not Colleen Moore, but Kathleen Morrison.

The castle is made of aluminum and copper, is nine feet long and nine feet wide, and resting on the edge of its rugged precipice, towers 14 feet in height. It contains some 200,000 original pieces, not counting rivets. Packed in 17 large cases for shipping, it weighs 6,585 pounds, approximately three and one quarter tons.

The doll house has been Miss Moore's dream and hobby, since her father made her first doll house, out of an old cigar box, when she was two years old, 32 years ago, at their home in Port Huron, Michigan. Its tour will continue for years.

Mr. Roosevelt's Works Progress Administration is setting out to out-pasture Warner Brothers' "Green Pastures," a la boondoggle, having become engaged in erecting a large and authentic Negro village in Lincoln Ball Park in New Orleans, where thousands of seats will be set up for the accommodation of an expected audience to see and listen to 1,000 negroes ranging in occupation from college professors to ice-wagon drivers, washwomen and disappointed bettors on Joe Louis. They will sing spirituals, Voodoo incantations, chants, dirges and moans. (The moans presumably will be by the backers of Joe Louis.)

There will be performances in pantomime of Negro convicts, a murder (not real), and many other exciting events, all tied together in a potpourri of play, written by a white man, a southern university professor. The author hails it as a classic that will back the late Hon. William Shakespeare off the boards, to say nothing of Tony Pastor, Lincoln Carter, Eugene Walter, Jack Warner and Marc Connelly.

"What price education among movie stars?" wonders Landon Laird, who critics the movies in Kansas City, in his "About Town" column.

"There lies on your writer's desk a letter from one of the Hollywood greats, regretting her inability to attend a recent function held in these parts.

"We didn't mind so much when she spoke of 'receiveing,' spelled just that way, our 'kind invitation,' but a line that really proved surprising started, 'Mother and I have been happily reminiensing our memories,' etc., etc.

"What is life without its 'reminienses?'"

SHADES OF THE PEERLESS John Drew. For that matter, Shades of the Florodora Sextette, W. C. Fields, Houdini, Bosco, the Strong Man, and other members of the grease paint and footlight clan. Who ever heard of a well-digging machine on the stage of a theatre?

Probably no one ever did until the management of the Strand theatre, at Crawfordsville, Indiana, installed a sure-enough full-sized well-digging machine, like the one that used to work on Uncle Hoke's farm, right in the middle of the Strand theatre's stage where it was started pounding into the earth to tap a fresh water vein.

Probably never before in theatre history has a well-digging machine been placed behind the footlights, even as a prop.

Each morning, at four o'clock, the well digging crew starts operating the machine, and they continue boring into the earth below the stage until noon. Then the workmen call it a day, in time to allow the matinee crowds to enter to watch Clark Gable and Joan Crawford turn on the heat.

The well will be dug to a depth of 112 feet. At that bottom water will be tapped through a four-inch pipe, which will spout from the ground at a temperature of 54 degrees.

The shades of long dead Thespians may slip up through the piping and on to the stage, shaking their heads in wonderment at seeing a well-digging machine at work before the footlights. They may even scoff, in ghostly tones, at the new-gangled didoes which they got along very well without in their days of glory. Be that as it may, Manager Guy Hammitt is installing a cooling system in his Strand theatre and he needs to dig a well 112 feet under the stage to do it.

The other morning a woman visited Rockefeller Center who started out thumbs down on the entire project on the grounds that there used to be such nice little restaurants around here, and now they are gone, superseded by a quarter of a billion dollars' worth of towers of white stone and steel.

The next day another lady, pert and old and elegantly attired in the furbelows of the nineties, entered the revolving doors of the RCA Building (Universal Pictures, NBC, et al), in a gingerly and disapproving manner.

"What is this place?" she demanded. It was explained that this place is Rockefeller Center. She looked very indignant.

"My dentist used to have an office on this very spot," she said. "And how am I going to find him now? I've come all the way from Pasadena, California, to have him fix my teeth."

Two attendants in the full regalia of a Chinese general were on the job by this time and she looked at both of them as if they had the dentist tucked under their gold braid that very moment.

They rustled up some city directories and telephone books, but the dentist's name wasn't in any of them.

"Well," remarked the old lady acidly, "so he's gone. Now I suppose I'll just have to take the next train back to California." And she did.

WONDERFUL, WONDERFUL US DEPARTMENT:—Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, past president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Will Hays' contact between Hollywood and community organizations, the other day urged ladies of the land to remember that America has the only government today which is based on ideals. "Across the sea we watch whole populations compelled to say 'Yes' to dictators," she explained, "but in America we need only say 'O, yeah.'"

O, yeah?

BALABAN IN PARAMOUNT PRESIDENCY, ZUKOR IS GENERAL OF PRODUCTION

Solution to Company's Post-Reorganization Problems Seen in Combination of Home Office and Coast Executives

Barney Balaban is the new president of Paramount Pictures, Inc., taking a hold on the reins of the company this week after a weekend spent in Chicago with his family. The action of the board of directors in returning an experienced showman to the presidency of the film company came as Adolph Zukor was reelected chairman of the board. Mr. Zukor, after the directors' meeting last week, returned to Hollywood to continue supervision of production activities.

Under a policy designed to give management a greater voice in the administration of Paramount, vice-presidents of the company may be elected to board membership in filling vacancies which may occur in the future, it was indicated this week. Present reports are that a company man will be elected to fill the director's seat left vacant by the resignation of Floyd B. Odlum of Atlas Corporation. The board may act on Mr. Odlum's resignation at its next meeting. Several other resignations are regarded as likely in the near future.

Opinion in the trade, emphatically expressed since the election, regards the combination of Mr. Balaban as the new head of home office activities and Mr. Zukor in charge of the west coast studios as a highly effective one, providing the solution to Paramount's post-reorganization problems.

Both men emphasized the phase of cooperation in statements issued after the election in which they expressed satisfaction with the results.

Post Vacant Since June 16

Before leaving for Hollywood, Mr. Zukor said: "The entire industry is obviously in accord with the election. As for myself, I can only repeat that it was my personal wish that Mr. Balaban assume this post and I look forward to a long future of wholehearted cooperation between the east and west coast branches of our organization.

"Planning as I am to devote my time and energies to the production end, I feel I can continue these duties with a feeling of confidence and security that the affairs of the corporation are in the hands of a capable showman and a loyal Paramount executive.

"With the confidence within the organization which the selection of Mr. Balaban already has inspired," Mr. Zukor said, "the leadership which the company consistently has maintained in the industry is immeasurably strengthened."

The feeling of satisfaction in the Paramount ranks was marked especially because of the ending of the uncertainty over the selection of officers prevalent after the adjournment of the special meeting of the board called on June 24th. For nine days, during which time the regular meeting for June was called and dismissed several times without action, various candidates were reported under consideration by the board.

The post had been vacant since the stockholders, at their annual meeting on June 16, failed to reelect John E. Otterson a director, automatically disqualifying him under corporate bylaws for reelection to the presidency which he had filled for one year under a five-year contract. Joseph P. Kennedy, who, as special financial adviser to the company, has prepared a comprehensive report on its affairs, was reported to have refused an offer of the presidential office. Mr. Zukor then was reported the leading candidate for the post but is understood to have preferred to remain in charge of production, in which he has been engaged for two months.

Officers named at the meeting besides Mr. Balaban, Mr. Zukor and Stanton Griffis, who was appointed chairman of the executive committee at the June 24 meeting, are: Neil F. Agnew, R. Earl Anderson, Y. Frank Freeman, John J. Hicks, Jr., and Austin C. Keough, vice-presidents; Walter B. Cokell, treasurer; Austin C. Keough, secretary; Fred Mohrhardt, comptroller, and Norman Collyer, assistant secretary.

Close Working Contact Seen

Mr. Balaban, Mr. Zukor and Mr. Agnew, the last named in charge of distribution, are also members of the executive committee, insuring, according to observers, a close working contact between the management and the board. Indications are that the committee will absorb the work of the finance committee to expedite action on expenditures and hence will be an even more potent factor in board policy and action than it has been in the past. With the company heads of production and distribution as well as the new president, who is one of the highest ranking exhibitors in the country, among its members, all three operating branches have authoritative voices within the executive committee.

It has been announced that Mr. Balaban will remain as president of Balaban and Katz, theatre circuit affiliate of Paramount, for the time being at least, supervising the subsidiary's operations from New York.

The new president is to bring his family to New York, taking over Mr. Zukor's estate at New City, N. Y., for a summer home.

Mr. Kennedy has completed his study of the affairs of the corporation which he undertook two months ago at the request of the board of directors. The board said that it has expressed to Mr. Kennedy its "deep appreciation of his valuable services." The remuneration voted him was not announced. The directors have refused to divulge the nature of Mr. Kennedy's recommendations and present indications are that the report has been tabled and will not be made public. No official comment has been made on rumors circulated in the trade that Mr. Kennedy was voted $50,000 for his work, with an additional amount for his assistants.

Otterson Silent

Mr. Otterson, whose five-year contract was reported to be one of the problems which delayed the election of a president, has refused to make any statement on what action he might be considering on his contract. Financial interests identified with Paramount discount all reports of a settlement being made by the company. Final action, it is indicated, will be in the form of a breach of contract suit brought by Mr. Otterson against the company. He continues to occupy the Paramount offices which were his during the past year, although it has been stated by company officials that his salary was discontinued as of July 1st. Max D. Steuer and Charles Schwartz, attorneys for Mr. Otterson, are out of town.

Operating Contracts Renewed

Settlement this week of suits for damages totaling $5,000,000 which were filed against Paramount Publix in its bankruptcy proceedings, made possible a quick reorganization of the Olympia circuit, last of the large Paramount theatre properties to remain in bankruptcy.

Under the settlement authorized by the federal court in New York, Paramount and Olympia agree to carry out the provisions of the general leases, to aid in a speedy reorganization of the theatres and to pay $25,000 in further settlement.

Renewal of theatre operating contracts, delayed by the confusion which preceded the election of Mr. Balaban, has been cleared up by action on the agreements for the Wilby-Kincey and Lucas & Jenkins circuits according to the Paramount board. The Wilby-Kincey operating contract was extended for one year from July 1st and the Lucas & Jenkins contract for three years from the same date. No changes were made in any of the existing agreements.

SECESSION THREATENS BROADCASTERS' GROUP

The National Association of Broadcasters holding its annual meeting in Chicago this week, heard Isaac D. Levy of Philadelphia, announce that he will form a new organization after he had assailed the association's leadership, particularly managing director James W. Baldwin, and demanded more confidential treatment of the body's internal troubles.

Much of Mr. Levy's attack concerned difficulties over music rights which cropped up last December when Warner Brothers withdrew from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, forcing radio stations to make individual arrangements for the use of music.

Close Working Contact Between Management and Board Called Assured; Otterson Silent on Legal Action

BOARD OF REVIEW IS A FAILURE, DR. HARRIS CHARGES, RESIGNING

"Pulled Hard on the Oars but Stood Still," Declares Former Health Commissioner; Kirchwey Defends Board Activity

Charges that the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures defeats its own ends because "it is top-heavy with a variety of committees and is financed largely by the motion picture industry itself," were made by Dr. Louis I. Harris, former New York City Health Commissioner in a letter, last weekend announcing his resignation from the executive committee of the Board. The criticisms were answered in a statement issued during the week by Dr. George W. Kirchwey, chairman of the National Board.

Describing the Board as a "front" for the industry, Dr. Harris charged that the industry's interest extended to the point of corralling actors and actresses to attend the Board's conferences and pay for the food at its luncheons.

Dr. Kirchwey answered the accusation that the organization is financed from Hollywood by declaring that the fee of $6.25, which the Board charges per reel for reviewing of product, has not been changed since it was established in 1909.

Says Board Achieves Nothing

One reason cited by Dr. Harris for his resignation was his opinion that the Board is "not doing anything significant, dynamic or progressive to give effect to its oft-expressed ideals."

Dr. Harris in his letter summed up the Board's activities as follows: "Rhetorically, we pulled hard on the oars, but actually, we stood still.

"Approximately ten years ago, I was persuaded that I might be helpful as a member of the executive committee, in furthering ideal aims, to which, I was assured, the National Board was dedicated.

"During my association with it the Board has failed to serve as a spokesman-body for the American community to help in realizing the recreational, educational and social possibilities of the motion picture.

"Also, in my opinion, as I have from time to time stated, it was of questionable propriety for the board to accept for its principal source of maintenance and support money paid to it by the motion picture industry for the review of pictures. How could the Board, beholden as it has been to the industry for the money thus received, feel free and with good grace criticize the program, achievements and activities of those in control of the industry?"

The letter of resignation further charged, that "the executive committee luncheon meetings have concerned themselves with discussions of streotyped details such as the annual conference of the Board, the annual bridge party, the discussion of finances of the Board, and other matters which to me seem unrelated to primary objectives of the Board as I was given to understand them."

The National Board of Review, organized in 1909 by the Peoples Institute to select the better type of pictures for recommendation to affiliated Better Films Councils, principally women's organizations, has little influence in proportion to its complicated structure, Dr. Harris said. He asserted that the circulation of The National Board of Review Magazine is only 500 copies and that the publication carries reviews of pictures after they have been released for general exhibition.

Before issuance of the statement by Dr. Kirchwey in answer to the accusations contained in the letter, Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, pointed out that the reviewing of pictures by the National Board is optional with the producing companies and that the reviewing fee is what it always has been.

Factor in Sunday Showings

In several states and communities, while the label "Passed by the National Board of Review" is not required on the pictures exhibited, the classification of the picture and information on it contained in the Board's weekly bulletin must be in the hands of the civil authorities before the film is exhibited. In Rhode Island the legislature repealed the prohibition of Sunday shows provided exhibitors followed the guidance of the Board in selection of pictures. When state censorship threatened in Florida a bill was passed by the legislature which required that all films exhibited in the state be approved by the New York State Board of Censors, now inoperative, or the National Board of Review. A mayor's order in Boston requires that all films exhibited be previously reviewed by the National Board.

Officials of the Board have stressed the objective announced at its founding that its activities are to be considered a defense against censorship rather than a censoring movement.

Kirchwey Answers Harris' Charges

The following statement was issued by Dr. George W. Kirchwey, chairman of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, in reply to charges made by Dr. Louis I. Harris in resigning as a member of the executive committee of the Board:

"When Dr. L. I. Harris recently retired from eight years of service as a member of the Executive Committee of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, the Committee expressed its sincere regret at his resignation. Now the Board wishes to express its pained regret at the eminent Doctor's announced reasons for such retirement.

"Evidently he has expected too much of us. He has failed to find the 'significant, dynamic and progressive' action which he looked for while he was being called upon to participate in the unwearied but undramatic process of educating the American community in the wise utilization of the motion picture.

"This process of public education was its original purpose when, under the wise guidance of Charles Sprague Smith, the National Board came into being in 1909 as a function of the Peoples Institute of New York City, and from this aim it has never wavered. There are, indeed, dramatic moments. These are not at headquarters, however, and around the committee table, but in the wide areas of community activity where such work as the National Board's Young Reviewers Club, with a membership drawn from more than 150 public and private schools in and around New York City, the work of the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays, comprised of outstanding students and critics of the motion picture and the first body in this country to draw attention to the artistic possibilities of the motion picture, and the work of the many affiliated Motion Picture Councils, touch the life of the community. Not to mention the volunteer services of upwards of 300 men and women engaged in the review, selection and classification of films in New York City. An example of the Board's interest in the field of education as it pertains to the motion picture is witnessed by the course which for two years has been conducted at New York University under the auspices of the University and the National Board of Review—the first credit-giving university course dealing with the subject of motion pictures.

At 9 of 24 Meetings

"Without reflection on Dr. Harris, who of course is entitled to his own opinions and to share those opinions with the reading public, the Executive Committee luncheon meetings which have 'concerned themselves with discussions of stereotyped details' have weighed enough with my associates on the Executive Committee, who are devoting their lives to serious effort, to have engrossed many hours of their valuable time—and for a tenure of association with the National Board of much longer duration than that of Dr. Harris. The press of Dr. Harris' duties, fortunately for himself in view of his statement, made it impossible for him to participate in many of these discussions, since he was present at only nine of twenty-four regular Executive Committee meetings held during the past two and a half years.

"Certainly I have not the time nor do I believe my associates on our Executive Committee have the time to devote valuable hours each week and over a period of years, to any organization or activity which is 'not doing anything significant, dynamic or progressive to give effect to its oft-expressed ideals.'

Answers Charge of Subservience

"When Dr. Harris accepted election to the Executive Committee of the National Board of Review, he was fully cognizant of the fact that the Board charges a fee of $6.25 a reel to every motion picture company submitting its product to the Board. This fee was set by the Board in 1919 and has been publicized in all of the Board's literature dealing with the purposes and operation of the organization since then. With knowledge of this he became a member. Dr. Harris asks: 'How could the Board, beholden as it has been to the industry for the money thus received, feel free and with good grace to criticise the program, achievements and activities of those in control of the motion picture industry?' The answer is that the function of the Board from the beginning has been to exercise a critical faculty upon films as films, not upon the program, achievements or activity of those who control the industry.

"Dr. Harris' question implies that the many volunteers in New York and elsewhere who have given years of service in community groups affiliated with the Board, in all cases without compensation of any kind, have been subservient to the motion picture industry. The Board stands on its long record as a volunteer citizen body seeking the best accomplishment and development of a new medium of human expression."

Return to ASCAP Up to Warners

Conferences looking to renewal of the Warner music publishing companies' membership in the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers have been carried to Harry M. Warner in Hollywood, it was reported in New York this week. While no decision has been made, it was indicated that a definite move may be expected almost daily. Both groups were said to be desirous of renewing relations, but each was waiting for the other to move first.

Officials of ASCAP said that they would like to see the Warner companies back in their organization, but asserted at the same time that there was no possibility of the society making any of the changes in broadcasting licenses sought by the Warner companies prior to their resignation from ASCAP. The officials said they were interested in giving the maximum amount of service to their licensees and this aim could be only partially realized without the membership of the Warner companies.

The Society declared that its revenues had not been affected by the withdrawal of the Warner companies and the music catalogues, and added that the next quarterly dividend of the organization, which will be voted on late this week, will be the largest in the organization's history. The second quarterly dividend was estimated at $1,200,000.

Some opposition to reinstatement of the Warner companies was in evidence within ASCAP membership ranks. One member said that if Warner returned to the society he would head a movement to have its applications treated like those of new members and made subject to the approval of the membership committee.

RCA Closes Plant After Picketing

In order to forestall possible acts of violence, officials of the RCA Manufacturing Company's plant at Camden, N. J., where sound reproducers for studios and sound recorders for motion pictures, besides radios, tubes and the like are manufactured, shut down the huge factory shortly after noon last Friday while strikers picketed the gates.

The unexpected closing, which sent 5,000 workers out to the street, followed the announcement that 2,200 members of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, Local No. 1, had voted to support the RCA strike.

The plant reopened Monday and the picketing was still going on, but in a peaceful vein. No arrests were made over the weekend, but 10 employes of the company, arrested last week in strike demonstrations, were reported on a hunger strike against the food served in the Camden County jail.

Meanwhile, a Grand Jury investigation into recent rioting and disturbances in the vicinity of the plant as a result of the strike has been determined upon. Justice Lloyd of the supreme court declared that "we will have anarchy if the rights of persons to safety and the rights of property to protection" were not given.

PINKISH TINGES ON THE SCREEN

To the Editor of the Herald:

In your anxiety to tie together the Soviet pictures shown at the Cameo Motion Picture Theatre in New York City and the very excellent picture made by the Resettlement Administration, entitled, "The Plow That Broke the Plains," I wish to call your attention to an error which you have made on page 7 of your issue of July 4, 1936, in which you state that this picture was made by Works Progress Administration. I regret to say that this is not the case.

Since the motion picture industry refused to aid in the booking of Resettlement Administration's film hundreds of exhibitors all over the United States have requested it for showings to the public by public demand, and I, as one who has grown up in the industry, fail to detect even the slightest pinkish tinge in its arguments.

I believe in all fairness to an already much criticized branch of the Administration you should publish a correction in your statement that this is a WPA film.—Horace Ashton, Washington, D. C.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The "pinkish tinge" that Mr. Ashton has been unable to discover is more in evidence in the principle and procedure of the sponsors of the picture than in the product itself. Vast outcry has been raised because the established motion picture industry has not seen fit to welcome governmental invasion of the screen. The pretext is unimportant, invasion is invasion. Also the fact that there are many worthy causes to be promulgated, many movements to be furthered, many educational campaigns to be waged, does not properly imply that any part of the obligation to do these things rests upon the motion picture industry. The business of the motion picture is entertainment—also that is its sole obligation.—T. R.

"Angry" at Producers, Bette Davis Leaves

Bette Davis, holder of the last award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for acting, has brought her contract "war" with Warners to a culmination by walking out of the company's Burbank studios and refusing to report back for work.

Miss Davis said she would go to court, as did James Cagney several months ago, if she feels circumstances warrant such a move. Her salary, reported to be $2,000 per week, is not the only difficulty, she said.

Studio executives, however, are reported refusing to regard the situation as serious.

Judgment for $81 Given

A judgment for $81 has been filed in the New York supreme court on behalf of Springer and Cocalis as a result of an unsuccessful suit against them by Fox Film Corporation for $9,598 claimed to be due on a group of pictures under a contract dated Oct. 24, 1934. The complaint was dismissed and the judgment was for costs.

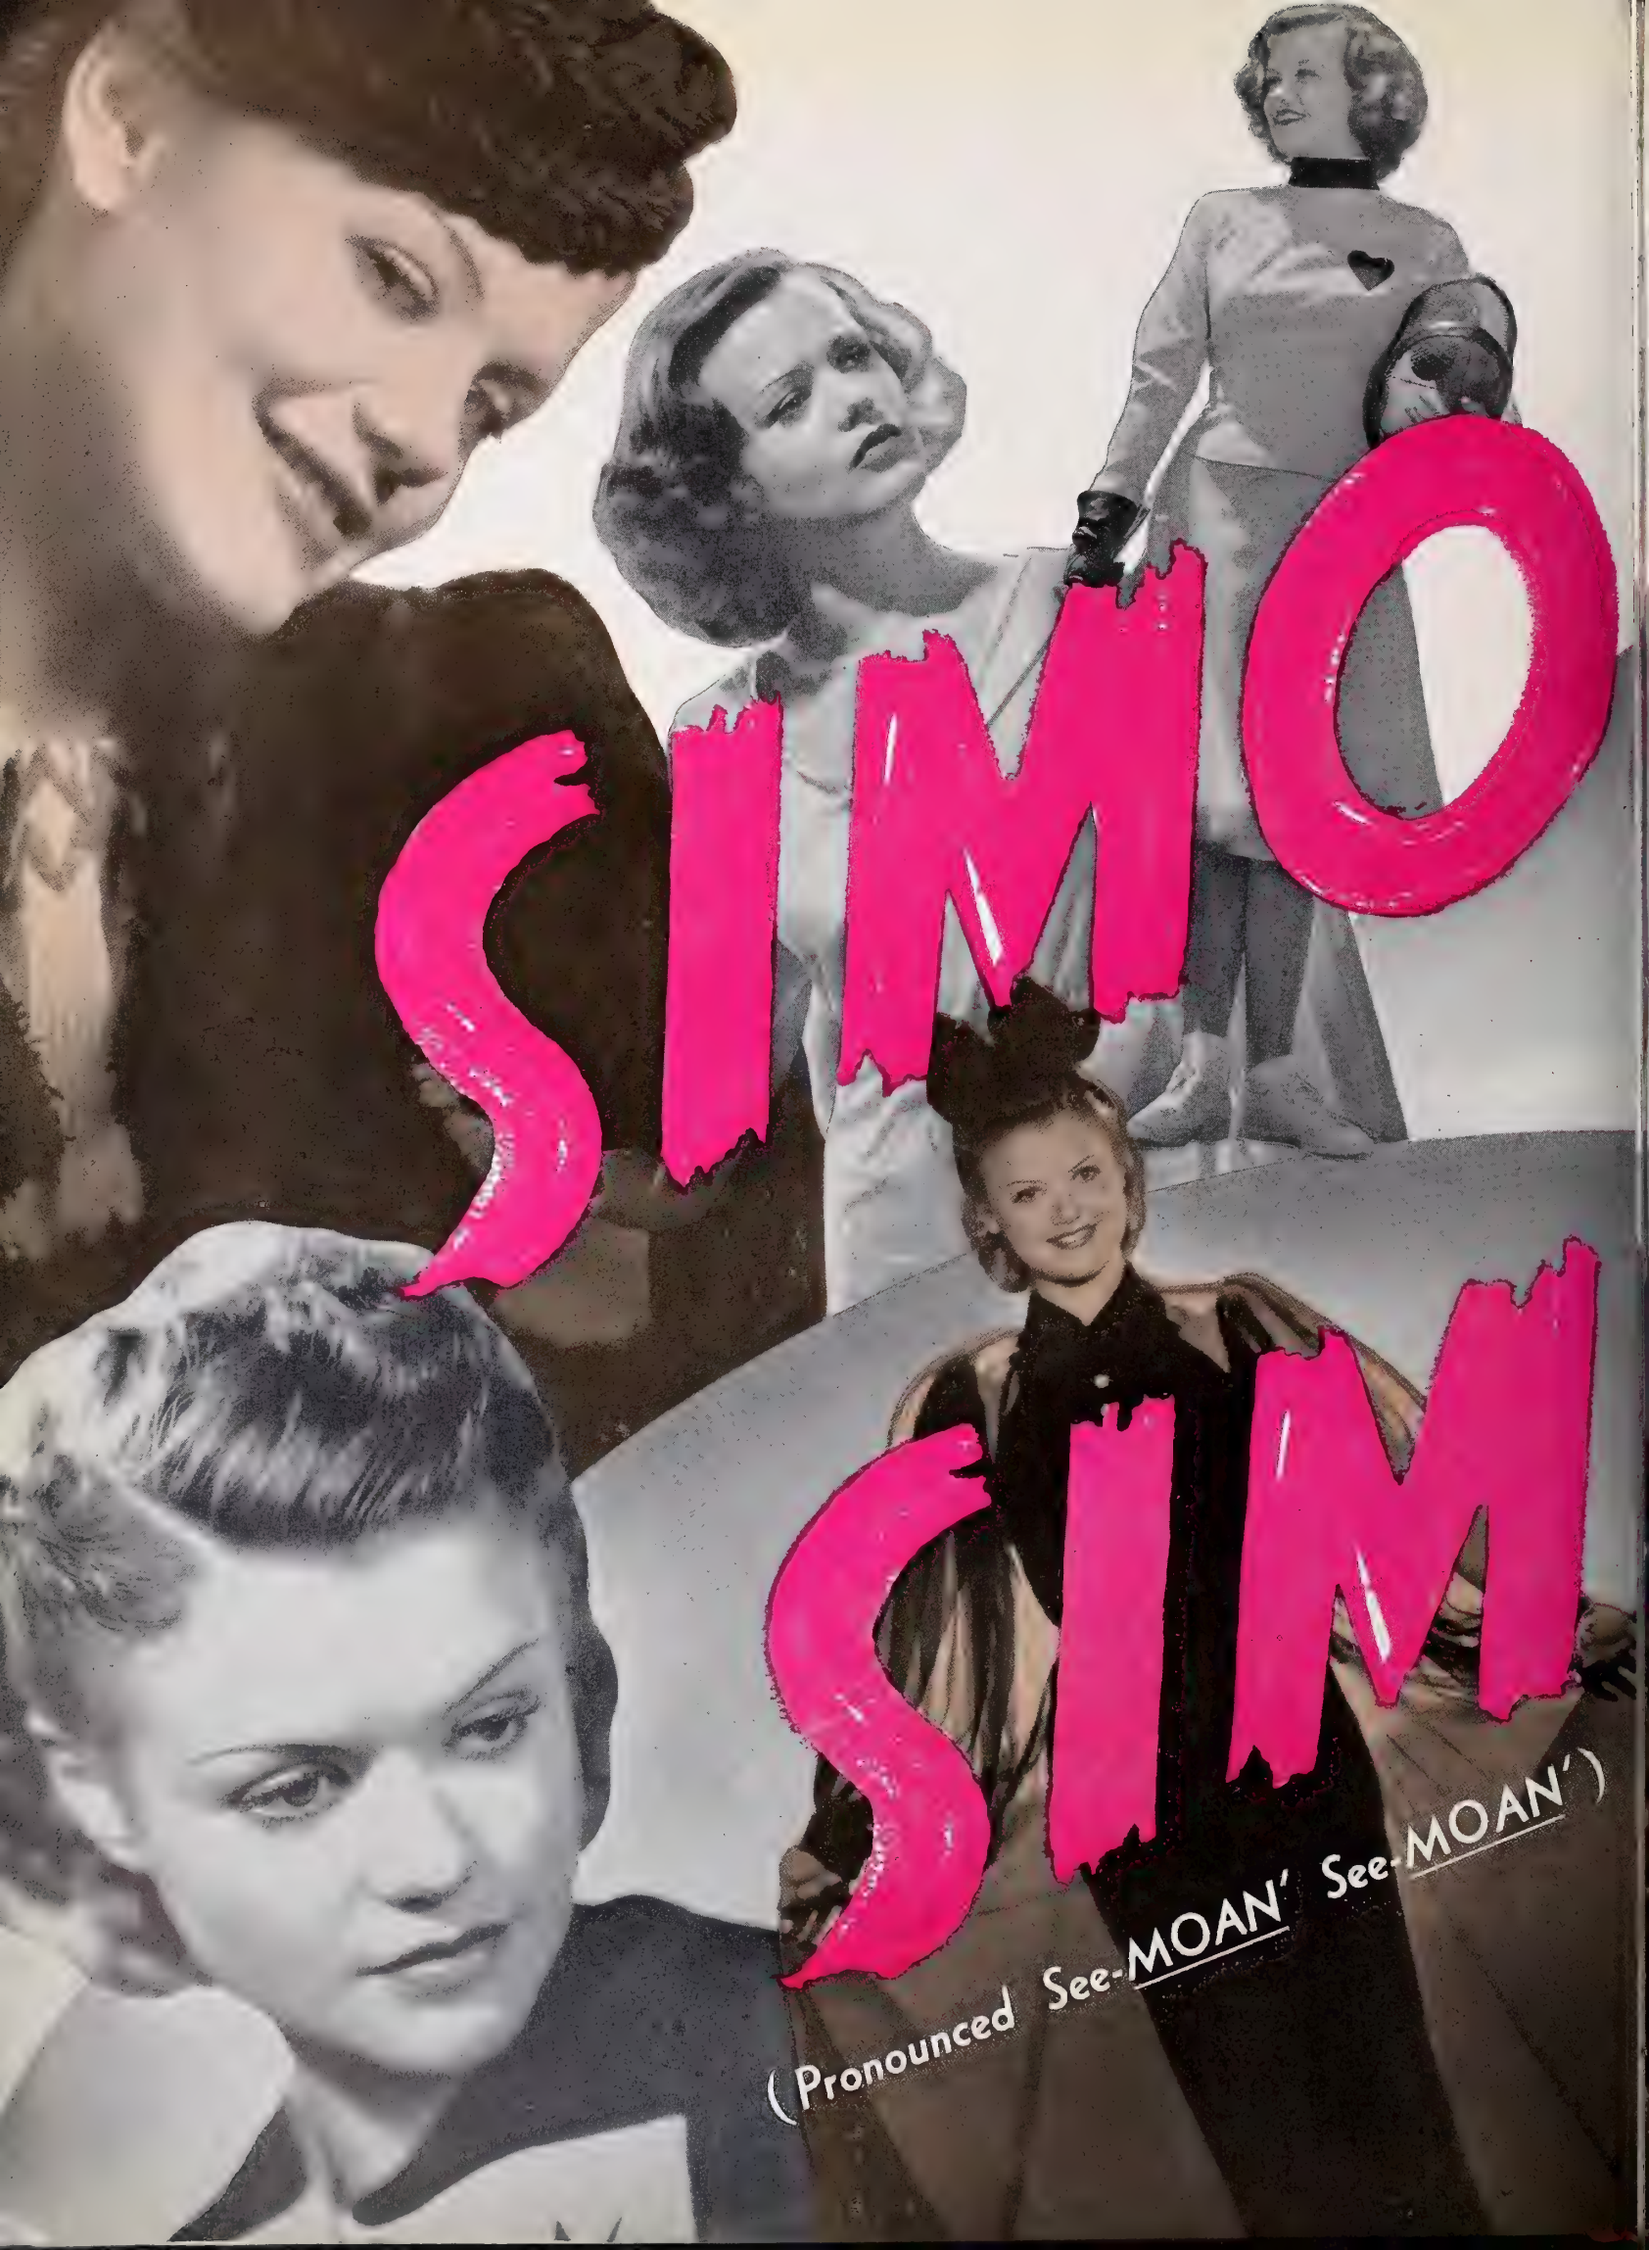
Skouras Bankrupt Sale Date Soon

Nelson Cunliff, federal bankruptcy trustee for the Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., in St. Louis, will set a date within the next four weeks for the public auction of the assets of the bankrupt estate of the company. He has been granted authority to make the sale by Referee in Bankruptcy Hope. The assets have been appraised at $267,611.

The principal assets of the company are a 52 per cent interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company, which owns and operates some 20 second run and neighbor houses in various parts of St. Louis and St. Louis County, and also the West End Lyric theatre.

The company's financial interest in the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres was wiped out through the foreclosure on those properties some time ago. The general claims against the company aggregate $4,500,000. If the properties should bring their appraised value the amount available for payment of claims would amount to about 6 per cent. Aside from the West End Lyric theatre and the stock in the St. Louis Amusement Company the assets of the company are considered of little value.

The bondholders committees for the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres hold claims against the Skouras Brothers Enterprises aggregating $4,385,000. These claims are based on the company's guarantees on bond issues against the first run theatres.



It is anticipated that the Fanchon and Marco interests will be an active bidder at the auction sale to be conducted by Mr. Cunliff. Fanchon and Marco through negotiations with Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., has acquired a 42 per cent interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company. The possibility of making a bid was discussed at a conference of Fanchon and Marco officials held in St. Louis on June 30.

GB to Release Two Monthly

Two releases a month regularly will be forthcoming hereafter from GB Pictures, according to Arthur A. Lee, vice president. With 24 productions on the 1936-37 program, two pictures will be released monthly for the next 12 months. The first release of the new season will be "Doomed Cargo," which co-stars Edmund Lowe and Constance Cummings. This will be followed by "Nine Days a Queen," with Cedric Hardwicke and Nova Pilbeam in the stellar roles.

"Activity at Shepherd's Bush in England has been geared to keep comfortably ahead of release schedule," said GB. "Everything Is Thunder," co-starring Constance Bennett and Douglass Montgomery, has already been completed, while production is under way on "The Great Barrier," and on "Strangers on a Honeymoon," which is nearing completion with Constance Cummings and Hugh Sinclair. Also in the final stages of production is "Everybody Dance," the new "Chuck" Reisner comedy with music.

B-D Family

A few weeks ahead of the transference of British & Dominions production activities to the new Pinewood studios at Iver, Buckinghamshire, details of the board of directors and officers of Pinewood Studios, Ltd., are released. The chairman is J. Arthur Rank, vice-chairman, E. Ronald Crammond; managing director, Capt. the Hon. Richard Norton; directors, C. M. Woolf, Charles Boot, Herbert Wilcox, John Corfield, Spencer Reis and W. H. Cockburn. All these appointments reflect the recently announced deal whereby British & Dominions becomes partner in Pinewood and undertakes the management of the studio, the B & D representatives on the board being Messrs. Norton, Crammond, Wilcox and Cockburn.

C. M. Woolf, managing director of General Film Distributors, is associated with both B&D and the J. A. Rank-Charles Boot interests which built the studio.

Denham Busy

Denham studios go into full commission this month, twelve months after London Film Productions began to plan there. More than 28 acres of studio floor space, laboratory and workshop buildings and accessory departments are available, and something like $5,000,000 has been spent on the whole plant. Already active are stages 1 to 5. Stages 6 and 7, damaged by fire in March, will be in work soon.

In production at Denham at the present time are the following pictures: On stages 1 and 4, "Rembrandt," with Charles Laughton, directed by Alexander Korda, for London Films. The picture, in its third week, has Elsa Lanchester and Gertrude Lawrence in support of Laughton.

On stage 2, "Wings of the Morning," the New World first British all-Technicolor has Annabella, the French star, opposite Henry Fonda, newly arrived from Hollywood. Leslie Banks is another name in the Bob Kane picture, jointly directed by Glenn Tryon and Harold Schuster, with Natalie Kalmus supervising the colour work.

On stage 5 is the Tom Walls Capitol production, "Dishonor Bright," with Eugene Pallette, Betty Stockfeld, Dianna Churchill and Henry Oscar.

On stage 3, Fred Zelnik is completing "Southern Roses," with George Robey, Malo and Neil Hamilton, for Grafton Films.

Scheduled for stages 6 and 7 are "Dark Journey," directed by Victor Saville for London, with Miriam Hopkins and Conrad Veidt, and the Pall Mall production, "Paderewski," directed by Lothar Mendes.

Also on the Denham schedule are "Thunder in the City," Alexander Esway production for Atlantic Films, Marion Gering, director, and Edward G. Robinson, star, having just arrived from Hollywood; "Elephant Boy" interiors; Robert Flaherty and Zoltan Korda are back from India, bringing with them the Indian boy star, Sabu.

Completed is the 200-seated private theatre in which London Films will shortly inaugurate the practice, new to England, of studio press previews.

ROYAL ELEPHANT STARS IN FILM

Chandrasekharen, reputed the biggest elephant in India, will play the star role in a motion picture to be shot in his native state of Travancore. The animal for over fifty years has been one of the most important members of the Travancore Royal Stables. He is the leader of the state elephants and heads all state and temple processions in Trivandrum, the capitol, carrying the Nijan flag of his howdah.

The royal elephant will play the chief animal part in the film "Fil Nishin" or "He Who Rides An Elephant" by the Franklin Granville Expedition. The story is built around the exploits of an elephant and its mahout, and it has India's jungles for its background.

An educational picture of Travancore also will be made by the expedition with the scenery and native life of the country and the ancient temple architecture as its chief features. The film will be climaxed by scenes from the birthday celebration of His Highness the Maharaja of Travancore to be held in November.

Canada-Bound

The Gaumont-British "Great Barrier" unit is en route to Canada. The party traveling with Milton Rosmer, director, and Bob Martin, cameraman, include Richard Arlen, Lilli Palmer, Barry Mackay and Roy Emerton. Barbara Greene, originally loaned for the picture by Fox-British, could not sail, the postponement of the trip from the original date causing a clash with other engagements.

G-B has been improving the 84-acre lot which it acquired twelve months ago at Northolt for exteriors. The whole area has been drained, permanent roads built and dressing-room and workship facilities up to studio standards installed. During the summer the lot will be in continuous use for "The Northing Tramp," "The Nelson Touch," "Sabotage," "Head Over Heels," "Soldiers Three" and "King Solomon's Mines," many of them calling for big street scenes and crowd effects.

75% Exteriors

"Beauty and the Barge," which has gone into production for Twickenham under Henry Edward's direction, will be 75 per cent exteriors, the story offering a legitimate opportunity of providing a practically continuous background of some of the very beautiful English waterways. The unit is at present working on the river at Weybridge. In the cast are Gordon Harker, Judy Gunn, Jack Hawkins, George Carney, Margaret Yards and Margaret Rutherford.

Henry Oscar has joined the cast of Twickenham's "Fall of an Empire," Dolly Haas-Richard Barthelmess vehicle directed by Maurice Elvey.

Wilcox Changes Plan

Herbert Wilcox, acknowledging the prior rights of Warner Bros. to make a Lady Hamilton subject owing to their rights in "The Divine Lady," has abandoned his project starring Anna Neagle in the role and instead will use her in "On with the Dance," Tuillo Carminati co-starring as an impresario. London, Paris and Budapest backgrounds are being placed. Before the "Lady Hamilton" project was abandoned, an attempt was made to get together with Warner on a joint production, but it fell through.

Crooks Brings Concert Competition to Australia

Richard Crooks, the only American Metropolitan Opera star of any consequence who has not invaded Hollywood and motion pictures, brought a new form of competition this week to theatre owners in Australia, in the form of a series of concerts which Australian owners have not had to contend with heretofore, unlike exhibitors in the States. Mr. Crooks started this week with a series of seven concerts in Sydney, and will give four more, all in halls in direct opposition to regular established theatres, sponsored by Fitzhugh Haensel, of Columbia concerts, in New York and the Tait Brothers in Australia.

Authors Win Film Suit

A civil court in Paris has ordered United Artists to pay 6,000 francs ($3,900) to the authors of the French operetta "Chanson d'Amour" for using the same title for the French version of the film "Blossom Time."

BRITISH EXHIBITORS BLAME U.S. RENTALS, OVERBUILDING, COERCION

Hint of Appeal to Board of Trade Follows Complaint of Threat of Distributor to Build a Competing Theatre

Withdrawal of Implied Obligatory Percentage Rental Policy Demanded at Summer Conference at Eastbourne

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Beginning with a small fire on one of the trade exhibition stands and concluding its business sessions to the accompaniment of a resounding thunderstorm, the Summer Conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association at Eastbourne was not nearly so inflammatory an affair as these incidents might suggest. Politeness was the outstanding feature of the discussion on papers, and the visible signs of deeply felt trade grievances were limited to two occasions. It, however, would be a very big mistake to assume that the Conference was unfruitful. Things said and done behind the scenes which may have a very definite influence on the activities of American distributors.

The real highlight of the meeting was the General Council's discussion of coercive trading methods. From this gathering the press was excluded, but both from the official report later issued and from personal impressions obtained from some of those present, it is very obvious that exhibitor policy is tending to shape itself on two assertions; there is felt to be a possible need of Government protection against trade abuses, and those abuses are laid, for the most part, at the door of American companies.

There were two specific grievances before the Council, on communications from branches. The first was a threat alleged to have been made by an American company representative that, unless its films were booked, it would inspire the erection of a competing theatre by "one of the circuits in which we are interested." The second was a "confidential" circular from the Kinematograph Renters Society to its members indicating that, in specific stations where conditions favored the exhibitor as a buyer, flat rate bookings be refused and percentage rentals universally imposed.

May Go to Board of Trade

In regard to the first incident it was declared by C. P. Metcalfe, vice-president of the CEA, that it might be necessary to go to the Board of Trade, through the Films Act departmental committee, to ventilate the problem of "how far foreign interests should have control over British cinemas." There was also a suggestion that exhibitors as a body cease to trade with the offending company. Meanwhile, the matter was remitted to the legal committee of the CEA.

On the second point, the decision was that the association should demand an official withdrawal of the KRS policy, failing which the Council should take "necessary action against certain renters." Unofficially it is believed the action contemplated may be a joint boycott of offending distributors singly in turn.

Significant in the report of the debate were the statement from the president, Theo. H. Fligelstone, that the officers regarded the handling of the matter as "an acid test" of the CEA, and the assertion by S. K. Lewis, one of the "blacklisted" exhibitors, that renters were operating a booking combination after refusing the right of exhibitors to do the same. Of importance also was K. A. Nyman's insistence that the matter must be fought out on the general question of principle, with a refusal of concessions in individual cases.

Second in importance to the Council meeting was the paper on "Redundancy or Progress?" delivered by Ken. A. Nyman on the last morning of the Conference. It led to the only definite resolution passed in open Conference, the decision being to set up a Propaganda and Statistical Committee to investigate the three methods of combating overbuilding listed by the speaker; an appeal to the Government, a joint CEA-KRS tribunal to pass on all new theatre plans, or a continuance of the present policy of action through local licensing authorities.

Hints Official Action

Significant in Mr. Nyman's reply to the debate was his assertion that "something fundamentally rotten is going on in this business," and that government aid might be necessary to check it, and his further hint that, although the KRS previously had refused to cooperate in a tribunal to combat overbuilding, the possibility of official action might cause distributors to change their minds. Quoted also by this speaker was the recent pronouncement of the Premier of New Zealand against the domination of theatres in that country by alien interests.

Still more specific labeling of the American distributor as the main source of the evils afflicting the British independent exhibitor was a feature of J. X. Prendergast's talk on "Scientific Buying and Selling" at an earlier Conference session. The text of this speaker was the high-powered American salesmanship found less resistance from British than from American buyers and that there must be separate organization of the independent group, within the CEA, coupled with a plea for reasonable trading methods to American companies, who are supposed to be representatives of a "friendly country."

Proposes Clearing House

The Prendergast solution of the rentals problem was the old Sliding Scale—a minimum percentage governing receipts up to house average, and a cut of the surplus on an agreed basis. He also wanted a Clearing House established through which independent exhibitors as a group might offer a price for a film which would be competitive with that offered by the circuits. Unlike many other speakers he deprecated appealing for Government protection in regard to prices, on the ground that it would entail discovery of all details of the exhibitor's affairs.

Undoubtedly the week's proceedings as a whole left a definite impression that the British exhibitor is beginning to think it necessary to mobilize resources against the American companies for the purpose, firstly, of reducing rentals, and, secondly, of obtaining guarantees that overbuilding is not encouraged by American investments.

This in ordinary circumstances might be dismissed as just Conference talk, but the present temperature of the British trade is, in plain fact, definitely feverish. Important, in its bearing alike on the price problem and on the problem of theatre control, is the fact that the Moyne Committee has shown a very definite interest in the possible "Americanization" of the British industry, that it is plainly determined to probe the possibility of "quickie" production being designed definitely for the purpose of discrediting British production and that the Board of Trade undoubtedly will give a very careful hearing to any case the CEA may lay before it suggesting that the exhibitor is being victimized by American interests in either of the two directions just mentioned.

Problems Involved

With this atmosphere prevailing, it is unfortunate that the relations of American distributors to organized British exhibitors should be, to the outside observer, epitomized in the facts that an organized attempt has been made to dictate prices higher than can be obtained by ordinary competitive methods; that theatre building threats have been used, and that actual theatre erection, regarded as overbuilding by existing estab-

COMMISSION POSTPONES POLICE RADIO ORDER

A Federal Communications Commission order allocating radio frequencies for use in a nationwide police broadcasting network has been postponed at the request of Purdue University and the National Television Corporation of New York who protested against removal of the frequencies from use by television experimenters.

Commission officials said the entire set-up of frequencies for the projected police network would be resurveyed with a view to determining whether it could be successfully operated without the frequencies now in use for television.

Rowson Advocates Co-op Advertising

lishments, has been inspired very largely by a circuit in which there is an open investment by American distributor interests.

It is true that this is not a complete statement of the position. There are British as well as American interests in the KRS. A salesman's threats do not necessarily reflect his company's policy. Many "redundant" theatre plans are all-British. All these things are known within the industry. Whether they are understood in Whitehall is rather more doubtful. There is undoubtedly a danger that the British Government will be led to regard the British exhibitor as a struggling independent, paying an uneconomic price for his films and threatened with the loss of his theatre to "foreigners." From the American point of view it is unfortunate that representations to this effect are being made to official ears rendered receptive to suggestions of American machiavellianism by what they have already heard of American tactics in the matter of British production.

Co-op Advertising Urged

In his paper before the Conference, on "It Pays to Advertise," Simon Rowson based an argument for a cooperative advertising campaign by the industry on the experience of other industries. He estimated that the weekly film attendance in Great Britain is 20,000,000, but for every two patrons there are three who do not attend.

"An increase in the average attendance of one per cent would produce additional revenue of £370,000 ($1,850,000) a year, and would avoid the necessity of a capital expenditure in building and equipping new theatres," he declared. He cited the instance of campaigns conducted on beer, milk and fruit, and said that if the British advertising expenditure were up to the American level of $7 per seat, the total gross would be £5,000,000 yearly, or nearly treble the present total.

He suggested an annual budget of £100,000, leaving details of a campaign for later discussion. He called it a small, experimental first step toward bringing the British annual receipts from $42 per seat to the American figure of $74.

Possibility is seen of drastic action by the Kinematograph Renters' Society to cope with the evil of film mutilation by exhibitors in order to fit a top-heavy two-feature program into schedule.

Lord Luke Joins GCF

Lord Luke of Pavenham, chairman of Bovril, Ltd., a director of the Daily Express and a governor of the Polytechnic in Regent Street, has joined the board of GCF Corporation, Ltd., the holding company which acquired a 90 per cent interest in General Film Distributors, Ltd., the C. M. Woolf company, at the time the deal was put through giving GFD British distribution of Universal. Capital of GCF, headed by Lord Portal, is £1,225,000.

POLITICS IN PICTURES IRKS BRITISH CENSORS

Marked Improvement in Standards of U. S. and British Product Noted by Lord Tyrrell

Marked improvement in the standard of motion pictures, both in the United States and in England, is reflected by the large increase in the number of subjects passed for "universal" exhibition and a concomitant decline in total of rejected productions, Lord Tyrrell, president of the British Board of Film Censors, told the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association at its Summer Conference, which ended last week, at Eastbourne.

Lord Tyrrell, who became president of the Board following the death of the Rt. Hon. Edward Shortt, K. C., in November last year, coupled with his commendation of elevated plane of production a warning against certain tendencies crystalized as follows:

Politics is creeping into the films, and "nothing would be more calculated to arouse the passions of the British public than the introduction on the screen of subjects dealing either with religious or political controversy."

Small and unrecognized distributors are stringing together parts of old films with scenes from past topical pictures and releasing them as original productions, while actually they are "primarily intended for some form of propaganda."

There is an increasing number of productions "in which hospital scenes are introduced, showing intimate details, which can hardly be said to be either entertainment or amusement."

Twenty-one hundred subjects (6,130,115 feet of film) have been examined by the British Board in the past year, 350 subjects being passed with the "A" (adult) certificate and 1,750 with the "U" (universal) certificate, which is more than 83 per cent of the total number submitted.

"The examiners took exception to 360 productions, which is about 50 per cent less than was the case during the previous year, and is a smaller proportion by far than has been the case for many years," Lord Tyrrell told the convention.

"This proves," he added, "that the standard of film production today, both in this country and in America, is much higher than ever before, and the subjects produced are far less contentious than they were but a few years ago. . . . This is a step in the right direction."

"Horrific" Films Protested

The censorship authority called attention to the passing of the so-called "horrific" picture from the British scene. "Local licensing authorities throughout the country," he explained, "expressed themselves in no uncertain language that they were determined not to allow the exhibition of these films in the kinemas under their jurisdiction, and in view of the fact that the Board has always considered such films to be unwholesome, the 'horrific' category has now ceased to exist. The suggestion that there should be such a classification was no doubt well meant, but it was never considered desirable by the Board, although we gave way to the determined pressure of the few that it should be inaugurated and given a trial.

"It is gratifying to find that those who advocated this innovation have come to the conclusion that it was wrong in principle, and that the Board was correct in opposing the introduction of this third form of certificate."

Submitting Scenarios

There is a growing tendency on the part of film producers to submit their scenarios to the Board "for our comments and observations prior to commencing operations in the studios," the censors' president said. Coupling this development with the improvement of standard of product, he added, "I consider we may take a certain part of the credit for this, due to the increasing number of scenarios which are submitted to us. . . .

"During the first five months of this year we have dealt with 80, which works out at the rate of approximately 200 in the year.

"This number is well in advance of any previous year's figures. One important English producer who, so far, has held aloof, announced last week his intention of submitting all his scenarios in future."

European "Artistic" Films

Lord Tyrrell declared that the Board "has been caused a considerable amount of anxiety during the year in connection with certain European films." He said there had been a noticeable increase of such cases. "Several of these films," he added, "have proved to be quite prohibitive, and one, at least, was banned in its country of origin. Many of these films require drastic cutting before they can be said to be suitable for public exhibition in this country."

Pointing out that for the most part the pictures are intended for showing in a few theatres on socalled specialized programs, and that in some cases they are, as claimed, of some outstanding artistic merit, Lord Tyrrell at the same time had nothing to say for the "quite objectionable and prohibitive" scenes and incidents depicted in them.

Lord Tyrrell made known that the freehold to Carlisle House in Soho had been purchased to provide a larger home for the Board in keeping with its expanding activities.

BJS Pictures Formed To Make 12 Features

BJS Pictures, Inc., has been formed in Hollywood with C. C. Burr, as president; Harold Stretz, treasurer; Ray E. Johnson, vice-president, and Robert Sherwood, secretary. Present plans call for the production of six outdoor musicals and six comedy melodramas. Space has been taken in the Equitable Building and International Studios, Hollywood.

CHANCE GAME FIGHT ON IN SEVEN STATES

Action Against Practice Taken in Four States; Policy Wins Round in Three Localities

Action against chance games was as intensively fought this week as last, with decisions opposing the practice in Florida, Kentucky, Ohio and Oregon. The games won rounds in Massachusetts, New York and Wisconsin.

In Tampa, Florida, crowding at local theatres on the nights when Bank Night drawings are held has drawn the fire of city authorities, led by chiefs of the fire and police departments. Theatre men were ordered so to arrange the attendance that crowding of theatres is ended or drastic action will be taken.

Further north, in Kentucky, civil suits designed to force Ashland theatres to discontinue Sweepstakes Night, Bank Night and other forms of alleged lotteries have been instituted in the Boyd circuit court by the commonwealth attorney, E. Poe Harris. One suit has been filed against Capitol Amusement Company, Inc., operator of the Grand and Paramount theatres. Listing three separate alleged offenses, the suits ask that the commonwealth recover the maximum fine of $5,000 for each offense from each of the defendants.

In Boston Bank Night has been ruled not a lottery by the supreme court. The winning of the lengthy case by Attorney George S. Ryan follows similar victories by the same lawyer in the Maine and New Hampshire courts. The victory clears up a situation that has been confusing Massachusetts exhisitors for some time. Following a recent police crusade, practically no houses in Boston have been using the plan. One or two theatres in surrounding towns have taken chances.

In New York Loew's will give Bank Night its first trial in its large deluxe houses the week of July 20, when the game will be introduced at the Metropolitan, Brooklyn; Valencia, Jamaica, and the Paradise in the Bronx. A prize of $500 will start the game in these three theatres and $250 will be added each week until a winner collects or a maximum figure is reached. At present the circuit is using either Bank Night or Screeno in 35 houses in Manhatton, all in neighborhoods of lesser importance. For a time the Paradise was featuring Screeno but the game was removed when encounters with authorities forced all Bronx theatres to discontinue chance games.

Meanwhile, exhibitor members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio have been warned by Peter J. Wood, secretary, that they should be guided by the advice of their attorneys on the use of the term Bank Night in that state, where, it seems, the word "bank" is limited to actual bankers, under law. The ITO already has sought legal advice on the subject and has been informed by counsel that anyone using the word "bank" unlawfully is subject to a fine of $100 for each day of use.

William E. Minshall, attorney for Affiliated Enterprises, which controls Bank Night, brands the exhibitor group's notice as "silly and an attempt to stir up a controversy and confuse theatre owners."

Terming Bank Night "dangerous, for it attracts persons who are financially unable to attend, but who are drawn solely by the gambling inducement," Attorney General Clyde R. Chapman in Portland, Ore., has renewed his fight against the giveaway. Some time ago he lost a case in the supreme court, but now he says that he "is determined to stamp it out completely in the state."

On the other hand, in Milwaukee, Bank night in a theatre has been again upheld as no violation of the lottery law by a jury in District Judge Howard Harberle's court. Milton Harman, manager of Saxe's Garfield, was acquitted of the charge of operating a lottery.

Van Beuren, RKO Renew for Year

The Van Beuren Corporation, producer of short subjects, has renewed its releasing contract with RKO Radio for one more year and under terms of the new deal will supply 32 shorts for the 1936-37 season.

In the new lineup there will be 13 Bill Corum Sport specials, produced under the supervision of the sports columnist, an increase of six over the number made last season; six in the Struggle to Live series, and 13 World on Parade reels.

The Rainbow Color Cartune series and the Easy Aces group have been discontinued by the company, and it is planned to change the World on Parade group so that besides the usual travelogue material there will be included noted personalities and novelties.

Dunas and Taylor Head Districts

Phil Dunas, Chicago branch manager for Columbia Pictures, and Harry Taylor, Kansas City sales head, have been promoted to district managers, the former to have charge of mid-central sales which will include his present territory along with Milwaukee and Minneapolis, while Taylor will supervise the Omaha and Des Moines territories as well as remain in charge at Kansas City.

Both men have been with the company for five years. The territories taken over by Dunas and Taylor formerly came under one district until Max Roth resigned. The promotions are in line with Abe Montague's policy of advancing men from within the ranks.

Rolsky-Fox Trial At Kansas City to Be Heard July 24

Anti-trust movements this week included the setting of July 24 by Judge Merrill E. Otis of the United States district court in Kansas City as the date of trial of the suit of Emanuel Rolsky et all versus Fox Midwest and major distributors, and the filing of initial papers in New York by Franklin Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of Hawaii, against Warner Bros.

Rolsky and the owners of 11 other independent subsequent-runs in Kansas City filed against Fox Midwest and the distributors February 25, this year, charging conspiracy and violation of the anti-trust laws in connection with clearance and zoning on 1935-36 product. The plaintiffs, besides Rolsky, are E. S. Young, Charles E. Esterly, Frank T. Mountjoy, H. F. Pautz and H. C. Rhode, Abe and Rosa Baier, C. H. Potter and H. H. Barrett.

Later, eight exhibitors filed a motion to intervene, contending that any decision of the court in the original suit would affect their business. This motion to intervene also has to be ruled on by Judge Otis. The intervening exhibitors are Rube Finkelstein, Clarence A. Schultz, J. W. Cotter, Jay Means, J. F. Rigney, William Parsons and Ed Dubinsky.

Fox Midwest and the four large distributors answered the suit some time ago. When Fox Midwest filed its answer, it was determined to try the case on its merits.

In New York, initial papers and summons have been filed and issued in an action charging conspiracy in restraint of trade by Franklin Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of Hawaii, against Warners, according to Charles Franklin, attorney for the complainant. The action will be brought in the federal court in Manhattan. Mr. Franklin declared the action against Warners will be brought separately, with a combined suit of a similar nature against all major distributors except Paramount to be filed later.

Mr. Franklin declared a contract had been signed in Los Angeles for Warner product in the six Hawaiian theatres and that the Warner home office later had advised the circuit that the contract would not be carried out, after another deal had been closed with Consolidated Amusement Company of Hawaii. The contract situation, Mr. Franklin said, will be used as evidence in the conspiracy action against Warner Bros.

At the Warner home office, however, a member of the legal staff declared he had no knowledge of such an action and that no papers had been served.

Restraining Order Issued In Bankruptcy Action

An order restraining Crelian Amusement Corporation and Gemma Amusement Corporation from paying $16,728 to a number of firms has been signed in federal court in New York on petition of Columbia Pictures. The move was in connection with involuntary bankruptcy proceedings against Jaydo, Inc., operating theatres in the Bronx.

POWER FOR THE BOX OFFICE!

IT IS A FINE THING that new financial power has come to Universal, because it means more power for the box offices of Universal customers. In all my years with Universal I have never had more confidence than now in the company's ability to deliver the pictures that exhibitors want.

Exhibitors who buy Universal this year will get even more value in the way of box office power than our announcement indicates because we are not ready at this time to tell our whole story. As the worksheet goes to press we are in the midst of signing up several other mighty important picture personalities and properties. We will announce them as fast as they are closed.

The new Universal is backed up with what it takes to make money-making entertainment — stars, stories, players, producers, directors and technical experts.

In Charles R. Rogers and William Koenig and their staff of associates, the new Universal has one of the most alert producing forces in the industry – men who have proven by past performances that they recognize box office values, and know how to make the most of translating them into showmanship power.

With James R. Grainger and his aides continuing in charge of distribution, the new Universal retains some of its most valuable assets — men whose integrity, whose understanding of exhibitors' problems, and whose fairness in all matters pertaining to releases and bookings are well known to theatre people.

The new Universal will be in the foreground in 1936-37 and thereafter.

The new Universal will be the new power in the box office — and this means more box-office power for all exhibitors purchasing Universal.

Go with the new Universal — full speed ahead!

TERMS OF STRIKE SETTLEMENT CALLED BLOW TO FRENCH FILMS

Increase of 30 Per Cent in Cost of Production Estimated Result of 40 - Hour Week Barring Overtime

Out of the details of the temporary agreements under which the general strike in Paris came to a close, with resumption of activities at studios, distributing offices and laboratories, heavy burdens upon the branches of the film industry have come to light, among them these:

Producing companies and studios were forced to pay indemnities to employees to cover the period of idleness, and these indemnities ranged as high as $30,000 for some concerns.

Distributors agreed, under protest, to pay 50 per cent of wages to employees for the period affected by the strike, which lasted 16 days.

Theatres not only lost the patronage shut off by the strike but are required to hand out increased wages to their staffs.

Three temporary agreements were signed, one for the studios and laboratories, another for distribution, and a third for exhibition. In general the labor unions won out in their demands, achieving a 40-hour week, two weeks paid vacation, abolition of overtime, the right to have delegates in places of employment, and establishment of specified health and safety regulations. Details of the temporary agreements follow:

Studios, Laboratories

It was only after arbitration by the Minister of Labor that an agreement was signed. The trade unions had demanded exclusive control of engagement of employees. All would have had to be members of the Confederation Generale du Travail (Confederation of Trades Unions). In the cinema industry, as in the other French industries, a high percentage of employees and workers do not belong to the CGT and have always refused to be members. The reason is that nearly all members of the CGT, in itself non-political, are also members of the Communist or Socialist political parties. In the film industry the representative of the CGT who was leading the strike was a young Communist.

The Minister of Labor agreed with the employers upon full liberty of engagement and the trade union delegates conceded that point.

Many are the advantages obtained by the workers, however, as evinced by the following:

All work paid under 8 francs 65 (57 cents) an hour will be raised 0 francs 70 (4¾ cents).

Work paid over 8 francs 65 (57 cents) an hour will have a 7 per cent increase.

Weekly wages under 430 francs ($28.00) will be raised $2.00 a week. Weekly wages above 430 francs ($28.00) will be increased 7 per cent.

Monthly wages will be increased according to the following scale:

Between 0 and 800 francs ($53.00), increased 15 per cent;

Between 800 francs ($53.00) and 1,500 francs ($100.00), 10 per cent;

Over 1,500 francs ($100.00), 5 per cent.

For instance, for an employee who was earning 1,200 francs, a month ($80.00), the increase will be calculated as follows:

That part of the wages up to 800 francs: 15 per cent on 800 francs or 120 francs.

Between 800 and 1,200 francs: 10 per cent on 400 francs or 40 francs.

Total new wage: 1,200 + 120 + 40 or 1,360 francs ($90.67), an increase of 160 francs or $10.67. An employee who was getting $120 a month will now have $135, or a $15 increase.

All workers will be paid weekly. For each of them the weekly wages will be 48 times the hour wage.

Temporarily the weekly hours of work will be 48, but the collective contract will reduce the number to 40 hours.

No extra hours will be permitted; previously employees in the studios sometimes worked up to 72 hours a week.

In addition to the wage increases, representatives of the Employers' Associations agreed to grant employees indemnity for the days of strike. This indemnity will be, for each day of strike: 10 francs (66 cents) for bachelors; 15 francs ($1.00) for married employees; 20 francs ($1.33) for heads of families.

Distributors' Agreement

Following the signing of a temporary agreement, negotiations are now being carried on for establishment of a collective contract for the whole of the French Territory, French colonies, and protectorates.

The temporary agreement is obligatory for all distributing companies as well as the administrative staffs of studios and laboratories, as will be, later, the collective contract.

A 200 francs ($13.33) raise in monthly wages is granted to everyone whose pay was under 800 francs ($53.33). For the previous scale of 800 to 1,200 francs the increase is 150 francs ($10.00). A 100 francs ($6.66) raise is granted those with wages over 1,200 francs ($80.00).

The terms of the forthcoming collective contract will be retroactive to the day work was resumed.

The employers agreed to pay all employees, as indemnity, 50 per cent of their wages for the time they were on strike.

This agreement affects employees of distributing companies in the departments of Seine, Seine et Oise, Seine et Marne.

Exhibitors' Agreement

Representatives of the exhibitors met with delegates of the projectionists, electricians and ushers and usherettes.

It has been customary for ushers to pay the management a fixed share of their tips. That is over. The ushers may work for the tips alone, without other pay, but they will retain the whole of these tips.

Wages of first projectionists (Paris and suburb) are now fixed at 450 francs ($30.00) weekly; assistant projectionists, 250 francs ($16.66), this for a 40-hour week; girl cashiers, 275 francs ($18.33) for 40 hours; check-taker and controller, 255 francs ($17.00) for 40 hours.

While the strike is ended, exhibitors still are feeling the effects of it.

The Paramount theatre reopened with a new policy on the times of showing. Previously it had continuous performances from 9.30 a.m. to 2.30 a.m. The hours now are only from 1 p.m. to 1 a.m., with reduced rates of 7 francs or 44 cents before 2 p.m. and after 11 p.m.

The Cineac Newsreels circuit reopened after the management had increased the wages of projectionists, ushers and girl cashiers.

The decision that ushers are not to turn in any of the money from tips is expected in the GFFA circuit of 32 theatres alone to mean more than one million francs loss to the management.

Until adjustment to the new order of things has been made, it is believed that the companies will have to be helped by the state.

Necessary Extension of Producing Period with Consequent Increase in Studio Rental Called Road to Greater Imports

The first logical reform is a concentration of all the branches of the industry in one association. The two rivals, Chambre Syndicale and the Comite du Film must be reunited. The strike conditions required their cooperative action; this situation must be made permanent.

See Loss to Studios

Working hours are fixed at 8 to 12 a.m. and 2.30 to 6.30 p.m. When the 40-hour week is applied, it is probable that the same hours of work will be kept, with a five-day week. Interviewed in the conservative Le Figaro, Max de Vaucorbeil, director, said he felt that most of the demands made by the employees of the studios were legitimate but he could not understand how the 40-hour week would be applied. He pointed out that productions sometimes necessitated working night and day, but with double pay as well as meals, and then plenty of time to rest after completion of the picture.

"The 40-hour week will be a real disaster in studio work," M. de Vaucorbeil said. "Instead of making a film in four weeks, six or eight will be necessary. Producers will have to pay more rent for the studios. They will have to make longer time contracts with directors and players. The cost of the pictures will increase at least 30 per cent.

"For years we were fighting against the competition of foreign pictures. Now we shall be obliged to introduce more German and American films. For French producers will be forced to make fewer pictures (perhaps half of the former number).

"I know that many workers did not want this strike. In a well-known studio, workers had refused to obey orders coming from outside. Result was the arrival in cars of one hundrded people they did not know and not belonging to the cinema industry, who threatened to throw them out.

"No more freedom of work, no more rights for property. This is just what the films sent from U.S.S.R. have shown us for a long time. Now the French market is wide open to these films. In this way perhaps Soviet Russia will be able to recover its cost for propaganda in France."

Technical experts say studio expenses will be increased between 35 and 40 per cent.

Some French producers are considering moving to Germany or Czechoslovakia. Studio costs in Prague are called the world's lowest.

All the decrees concerning importation of foreign pictures, or French pictures made in foreign countries, are effective until June 30, 1937.

French production has been losing more money every year. On one French picture exhibited in France, what with taxes on exhibition and all the other kind of taxes the State takes more money than the price of the film.

The secretary of the trade unions federation, Léon Jouhaux, said in a broadcast speech:

"It is not a small diminution of individual profits which may be a disaster. Recovery of our economy will be a result of increased French consumption. Our exports will be improved by an expanded market."

These theories cannot be applied to the cinema industry. Exportation of French pictures depends only on quality, and quality depends upon profits and steady operation.

AUSTRALIAN STUDIOS EXPANDING ACTIVITIES

National Studios Takes Advantage of Quota by Increasing Capital; Home Product Liked

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

Australia is making rapid strides as a producing country. Four strongly financed companies are actively engaged in production at the moment, and several others are taking definite shape. There is every indication that within another year Australia's feature total will rise to 30 a year, with the industry established on a firm basis if the output meets with the public reception which is anticipated.

One of the most important recent developments is the decision of National Studios, Ltd., to take advantage of the quota by increasing its capital to $1,250,000 and making immediate plans to embark on an ambitious production schedule. The company's directorate includes some of the most influential financial men in Australia.

Heretofore National has operated its highly modern studio merely as a rental plant. It was here that the Gaumont British unit produced "The Flying Doctor," at a cost of $175,000. The film will be released in Australia by Twentieth Century-Fox, the plans calling for a selling campaign comparable to that for any strong American film.

Although few Australian films have met with any notable success outside of the country, they have found considerable favor with the audiences at home.

Cinesound, which brought Helen Twelvetrees from Hollywood for "Thoroughbred," has opened the picture to record attendances in the first city presentations. It is now working on "Wilderness Orphan," from the Cosmopolitan story, with Gwen Munro.

Improved Film Standards

In his 11th annual report, Cresswell O'Reilly, Commonwealth Film Censor, declared "the improved standard of imported films is revealed in the figures which show that, compared with previous years, the percentage of films which have been passed with eliminations was considerably less in 1935, not quite 24 per cent, as against an average of 40 per cent for the preceding three years."

The total of 481 films imported into Australia in 1935, according to the report, was the highest since 1932, when 495 were imported.

Standard Purchases Theatres

The newly organized Standard Theatres, Inc., with principal office in Charlotte, N. C., has purchased the Criterion theatres in Durham, Greensboro and Charlotte, according to official announcement by N. A. Gregg, president of the Criterion chain organization. Officials of the new corporation are: S. W. Craver, Charlotte, president; F. H. Beddingfield, Charlotte, vice-president, and J. M. Gregg, also of Charlotte, secretary.

Briggs Is Named Pathe President

The expected formal election of O. Henry Briggs to the presidency of Pathe Exchange, Inc., was held in New York late last week. Mr. Briggs, who is now in Hollywood on a combined business and vacation trip, succeeds Frank F. Kolbe, who will continue with the company as chairman of the board.

Following the resignation of Mr. Briggs as general sales manager of DuPont, C. D. Ford, who has been with that company since 1918, has been named to the post and will make his headquarters in New York.

Mr. Ford's experience in the film business with DuPont dates back to 1920. He had been in charge of the x-ray and portrait department for four years and also had been head of plant operations at Parlin, N. J.

Meanwhile, a judgment for $1,816 has been filed in the New York supreme court on behalf of Pathe Film Corporation against Frederick L. Gerte. This represents an amount due as royalty on a series of pictures.

Story of "Sing, Baby, Sing" Called Entirely Fictitious

The following statement was issued Wednesday by the home office publicity department of Twentieth Century-Fox, for the studio:

"Denying a recently published statement in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Twentieth Century-Fox Film explains that the story of 'Sing, Baby, Sing,' new musical picture reviewed in the July 4th edition of that magazine, is entirely fictitious and has no reference to any actual event or living person.

"The script for 'Sing, Baby, Sing' was prepared by Harry Tugent with Milton Sperling and Jack Yellen. The latter wrote the original story. Adolphe Menjou, Alice Faye, Gregory Ratoff, Patsy Kelly and the Ritz Brothers are among the featured artists in the cast."

Louisville Trailers Attack New Tax Law

All Louisville first-run theatres are running trailers protesting the new admissions tax. The trailers point out that the patron had to pay the tax which was no doubt distasteful to him, that theatre interests had exerted every known means to stop passage of the bill, and that it was just as distasteful for the house to collect as it was for the patron to pay.

The trailers wind up with the suggestion that if the patron thinks the tax should be removed, he should "write to the Governor."

Minors Film Bill Signed In New York

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia this week fulfilled a promise made to New York theatre men at the time of his election, when he signed the Stand Bill, permitting the admission to theatres of unaccompanied children under 16 years of age, but under certain restrictions.

The law is expected to be put actively into effect in about a week, following the setting up of the necessary machinery. The measure, which was introduced by Alderman Murray Stand, was passed recently by the Board of Aldermen and the Board of Estimate.

Under the terms of the law, theatres wishing to take advantage of its provisions must obtain a license from License Commissioner Paul Moss, at a fee of $10. A special section of the theatre is to be set aside for the use of children, and no adults are to be permitted in that section. A matron must be in that section and she must qualify before the Board of Health relative to her physical condition. The matron's license fee will be $2. According to the provisions, children may be admitted unaccompanied on weekdays from opening to 6 P. M. provided the child's school hours have been completed. During July and August, the summer recess period, they will be admitted from opening to 7 P. M. On Saturdays and Sundays and holidays, children will be admitted from opening to 6 P. M.

Children accompanied by an adult may be admitted to the theatre at any time.

Meanwhile, at Valdosta, Ga., a permanent injunction restraining the county commissioners of Brooks County from levying and collecting a tax of $25 annually on film theatres has been granted by Superior Court Judge W. E. Thomas.

In Louisiana, the state legislature has extended the 1934 amusement tax for another two years, the 1934 law being reenacted without change.

In Boston, however, with the adjournment of the Massachusetts legislature it has been noted that during its tenure no bill unfavorable to the film industry was passed.

A crippling regulation was removed from the operators of San Francisco theatres this week with the passage by the Board of County Supervisors of a new law giving local police authority to regulate the number of patrons who might stand in theatre lobbies, foyers and mezzanines while waiting for seats.

Circus Drama

A thrill action circus story, the ingredients of this picture are melodrama, conflicting romance and sacrifice. Well put together, capably produced, its action featured by several exceptional character performances, feature seems to be of the character that will create much audience interest. As a commercial enterprise, it places in exhibitor hands many opportunities for different showmanship.

The villain in the show is a tiger. A bad animal, he is feared by everyone in the circus save Ballenger, who is determined that he will tame the beast. Going into Satan's cage, while drunk, Ballenger is mauled by the cat and months later when he leaves the hospital he is minus a leg. Rejoining the circus, his kindnesses to Laura, daughter of his old partner Homan, in getting her out of a jam, wins her sympathy to such an extent that they are married. Almost immediately romantic conflict is engendered as Ballenger becomes aware that Laura actually is in love with aerialist Larson and the only reason she had for marrying him was to repay a debt of gratitude. Driven to rage and fury, Ballenger hurls Larson into a cage full of tigers only to undergo a change of heart to dash in and save the boy and lose his own life to Satan.

Production sequences featuring the man-tiger battles and the sequence depicting a fire in winter quarters in which the terrorized animals go frantic are exceptional bits of stark dramatic thrill action. The realism which this detail gives the film is consistently furthered in all other phases. Circus atmosphere which underlies all action is colorful.

Down to the Sea

(Republic)

Melodrama

Though this picture tells an engaging melodramatic tinged romantic story, the substantiating production backgrounds and features are the novel entertainment and potential commercial assets. Located off the Florida Keys, all the characters being Greek sponge fishermen, the production is highly educational in the manner in which, at great peril to the fishermen, this product is gathered.

Two factions are at war for supremacy. The deep sea divers, headed by boastful Londos, consider themselves the only real divers. They look upon the hookers, headed by Kaminas and fishing with rods and poles from boats in shallow waters, as weaklings. The rivalry becomes tensely dramatic when both men fall in love with Helen, daughter of Gregory Pappas, the big boss. Highlighted by an illustration of one of the fishermen's ceremonies, diving for a trophy, underwater photography effectively pictures the skill of divers.

As the conflict for Helen's affections grows, a poaching fisherman, Fotakis, is murdered. Londos is suspected. To preserve the clan's own law within itself Pappas contrives to have Londos appear to be accidentally drowned. Though Kaminas makes an attempt, full of suspense and thrill action, to save him, his effort is ineffectual.

Production is well mounted, acted and moves rapidly. Balancing the elements of drama and romance, together with slight comedy, that make for acceptable secondary entertainment, picture is also one that lends itself to fresh and unique promotion.

Easy Money

(Invincible)

Drama

This picture deals with fake automobile accidents, a subject that is a matter of topical news headlines in many sections of the country. While entertaining in its dramatic, romantic and light comedy contrast phases, it primarily is an exposé film. As such it is an exploitation feature, lending itself readily to cooperative contacts with automobile insurance companies, police departments and newspapers.

In the story, Eddie Adams is a member of a gang that has been defrauding insurance companies by means of the fake accident racket. Caught redhanded, he escapes conviction because his brother, prosecuting attorney Dan Adams, presents a faultily prepared case. Criticized and abused, Dan resigns his post, gets a position as special investigator and determines to break up the racket. From information supplied by crooked attorney Rusnick, Dan obtains information pointing to Trotti as the head of the gang. He, thinking that Eddie has double crossed him, contrives to have the boy killed and make it appear that his death was caused by an auto accident involving Carol Carter. As the film takes on a dramatic mystery atmosphere, Dan, with the help of Carol, discovers how Trotti killed Eddie. Obtaining his conviction, he breaks up the ring and with Carol as an incentive he is restored to his position as prosecutor.

The Bride Walks Out

(Radio)

Comedy

This is romantic comedy of the first order, with general appeal of the type that abounds in exploitation angles to help showmen. Revolving around the matrimonial adventures of a meagerly paid civil engineer, who is convinced that two can live on his wages, and a mannequin, who does not hold the same opinion but who, nevertheless, marries him, the dialogue is funny, the situations hilarious and the action speedy.

Barbara Stanwyck, recently in "A Message to Garcia," Gene Raymond, New Sparks, Helen Broderick and Robert Young head the cast, with the latter cast as a rich young scapegoat who forms the third end of the dramatic triangle but who, instead of being a menace, keeps the lovers together.

It might do well for showmen to see the picture before playing it to pick out themselves those elements best suited for their particular situations for the material presented is of the type typical of modern, everyday American life.

As the picture opens Raymond is having trouble convincing Miss Stanwyck she should give up her job as a model in a dress shop and marry him on his $35 per week. After much haggling and hilarious situations, to which Sparks and Miss Broderick, cast as a long-married couple, add their suggestions, Miss Stanwyck gives in and the wedding takes place.

The bride leaves her job and tries to run the apartment on a budget. Nothing seems to go right, however, and although she manages to keep the true state of things from her husband, it all comes to a head finally and the lovers separate. But, however, not before Young steps into the picture as a delightful drunk and a source of one howl of laughter after another.

Dramatic Romance

Story, production detail, quality of acting and character of direction combine to make this picture substantial entertainment and gives it unusual exploitation value. In theme film is a gangster menaced dramatic romance. It moves fast, creating interest early and holding it continually. Dialogue and action are well balanced and the situations developed are fresh and different.

Desire for revenge upon a common enemy is the premise of the story. Crippled but vicious gangster Joe Emerald is the sworn enemy of four people. Hank Sherman knows that he is responsible for the killing of his brother. Doctor Gattle and his daughter are determined to square accounts with Emerald for his part in having Gattle railroaded to jail as a cover up for one of his crimes. Dumb prize fighter Krupp is convinced that Emerald caused his manager's death. As believable gangster menace drama, contrasted by appealing love interest involving Hank and Margaret Gattle and hilarious comedy mainly provided by Krupp, is developed to the tempo of suspense laden thrill action, exceptional acting and intelligent direction merge to give the film an attention holding character.

Using the familiar, but effective, features common to gangster inspired entertainment, story builds an unique and different climax. In that Emerald's determination to be supremely powerful in the underworld is secondary to his ambition for physical perfection. A cripple, he is pathetically envious of Krupp's strength. When he tries to get the fighter under his management, he sets the stage leading to his own downfall and the elimination of his mobsters.

Production gives ample evidence of careful preparation with a particular eye towards providing something different in a stock pattern to make for interesting entertainment and at the same time have more than the usual amount of showmanship availability.

M'Liss

(RKO Radio)

Romance, Drama

Essentially this is a simple moving story that relies on its dramatic presentation to sustain interest. The setting is in a small town in California, so typical of the mining communities that sprang from nowhere with the discovery of gold in the far west. The story, from the pen of Bret Harte, who is to the west what O. Henry is to the east, might as well have happened in the south, in New England, or in any very small community having the same industry. It is a tale of romance, suffering and gossip.

While never scaling the heights of emotional feeling, the production often is compelling by the erudition of its simple drama. The picture suffers at times, however, from slow-moving sequences that fail to coordinate the story as a whole, in respect to action. There is a modicum of comedy but, in the spirit of the production, never raucous. There is value, too, in the other production features, such as the photography and recording.

Emphasizing the fact that the story is by Bret Harte and that it is a combination of romance and drama in the mining camp days of California, would appear to be the most likely selling endeavors. Anne Shirley and John Beal play the leads with the assistance of a supporting cast containing such names as Guy Kibbee, Douglass Dumbrille, Moroni Olsen, Frank M. Thomas, Ray Mayer and Barbara Pepper.

M'Liss and old Washoe Smith, her father, are forcibly ejected from their home, the largest one in Smith's Pocket, as Morpher, the town mayor, forecloses. Smith's claim peters out and he gives himself to drunkenness. He and M'Liss go to an old shack on his mining grounds to live. Returning to her old home to pick up something forgotten, M'Liss is confronted by Stephen Thorne, the new school teacher, who is quartered there.

Reluctantly M'Liss consents to go to school on the pleading of Thorne. She becomes self-conscious when Morpher's daughter is caught snickering, and leaves the school, but Lou Ellis, her father's friend, persuades her to go back. M'Liss obtains a job in a saloon to help support her and her father. Thorne objects and M'Liss promises him never to go there again. Jack Farlan, a relative of Morpher, arrives in town and brands Thorne a coward.

When M'Liss enters the saloon to seek advice from an old friend and Farlan, drunk, attempts to embrace her, Thorne prevents him. Farlan challenges Thorne to a fight but Thorne refuses. Later Farlan is wounded by Ellis and Thorne is blamed. Farlan recovers and M'Liss and Thorne plan their marriage.

Shake Mr. Shakespeare

(Vitaphone)

Comedy

A take-off on the present-day Shakespeare tendencies of producers, this is fair comedy. A producer orders his assistant to read all of the Bard's works in one night and to report on them in the morning. In the midst of his labors the assistant falls asleep and dreams of a revolt of Shakespeare's characters from their own era to modern times. Appearing are Cleopatra, Puck, Marc Anthony, Romeo and Juliet, Henry VIII, Macbeth and a score of lesser lights. Running time, 20 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction No. 23

(Universal)

Oddities

Eight more oddities are recorded by the camera in No. 23 of this entertaining series. They are: mass marriage in China, as 57 couples are married at the same time; a fire engine 84 years old and still pumping; a bar in Mexico that cashes all checks and trusts they will be made good; Torey pines in California; a machine to test the strength of silk stockings; a motor run by the sun's rays; fish in Florida that are most friendly, and pictures created by a sand-blasting machine. Running time, 10 minutes.

Average

An average aggregation of acts of vaudeville proportions. Included are Gautier's Toy Shop, an animal act with ponies, dogs and a monkey; Sylvia Froos singing, with a dance routine for a background; Hunter and Percival, comedy lasso team, and Mangean's Internationals in a variety of acrobatic stunts. Running time, 10 minutes.

Flippen's Frolics

(Universal)

Entertaining

An entertaining short featuring Jay C. Flippen as master of ceremonies to a group of artists with the setting laid in a night club. Rose Marie, radio and screen star since she was five, sings two numbers. Jay and Lou Seiler, eccentric dancers; the Manhattanites, novelty singing trio and Sid Walker, comedian, complete the roster. The music is played by Bill Power's Steppers. Running time, 18 minutes.

The Lyin' Tamer

(Vitaphone)

Fair Comedy

A Pepper Pot novelty, this subject features George Jessel and allows the comedian full sway in some typical Jessel humor, including a conversation with his mother and other relatives, over the telephone. Jessel is induced to address a banquet on the subject of Africa when the originally scheduled speaker is unable to appear. In the midst of a fantastic story Jessel picks up the phone to speak to his mother. Running time, 10 minutes.

Going Places No. 23

(Universal)

Excellent

A very interesting study of modern Egypt and the Egypt of ancient days that time has failed to erase. The Pyramids and the Sphinx built centuries ago by the Pharaohs still are among the wonders of the world. The temples of Karnak and Luxor, while not so well preserved, are concrete examples of the past. Of modern Egypt there are the world famous Shepards Hotel, the huge Assuan dam and other examples. Running time, 10 minutes.

Emil Coleman and His Band

(Vitaphone)

Tuneful

A "Melody Master" number, this short subject is tuneful and melodious. The band plays several selections including a tango by Emil Coleman. The vocal refrain is ably handled by three Nightingales, girl harmony trio. The short is climaxed with a waltz by Johann Strauss and a dance couple performing against a background of mirrors. Directed by Roy Mack. Running time, 10 minutes.

Very Good

One of the E. M. Newman "Color Tour Adventure" series, this short subject, a trip to Hawaii in natural color, is a pleasurable expedition. Shown are the features of the picturesque island, the historic landmarks, the well attended beaches, and a surfboard tour with accompanying Hawaiian melodies. Running time, 10 minutes.

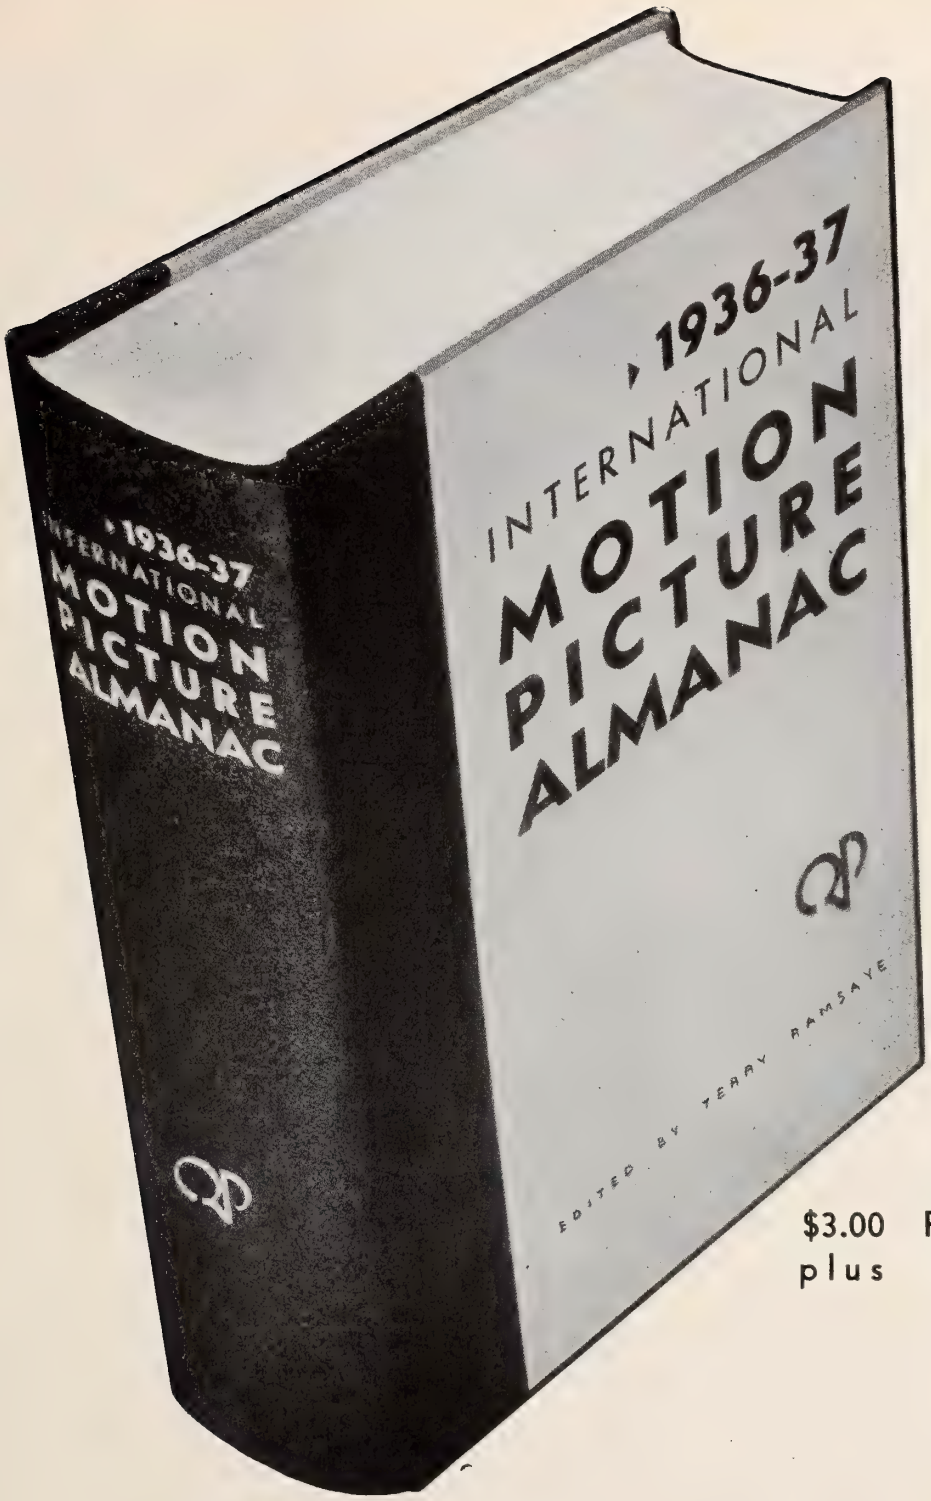
UNEQUALLED



THE record of Super X is unequalled ... both as to the photographic quality it sends to the screen, and the resulting acceptance it enjoys in the industry. Not only in this country, but abroad as well, it rates as the premier motion picture negative of the day. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 31.—(A) Why may power be transported more cheaply at high than at low voltage? (B) Why are inspection forms necessary and what is their value? Explain fully.

Answers to Question No. 26

Bluebook School Question No. 26 was: (A) What is a watt? A kilowatt? What do they represent and how are they used? (B) What should be the limit of projection distance? Name the objections to a too-short or too-long projection distance.

The following made answers that were either correct or approximately so: C. Rau and S. Evans; D. Danielson; G. E. Doe; B. DeVietti; W. C. Brown; W. Limmroth; A. L. Cooper; Nic Granby; A. L. Cooper; T. F. Bochert; C. L. Loft; P. and L. Felt; J. R. Prater; E. H. Toedte; W. Edmonds; R. and K. Wells; H. B. Smith; C. Champney; C. Lonie; C. G. Jones; S. E. and C. Gay; C. Hawkens; M. and J. Devoy; O. L. Harris and S. Myers; F. L. and L. Savlor; R. D. Oberleigh and J. Lansing; D. D. Orr; M. J. O'Brien; R. Holmes and C. J. McCabe; G. L. Snow, R. Galley, R. T. Digby and J. F. Seidman; W. D. Samuels; H. H. Langtry; D. Pollock; L. R. Spooner and G. Johnson; N. R. Tomlinson; I. C. Croft; F. T. Hamilton and J. S. Knight; J. T. McGuire and H. V. Nathan; L. and F. H. Klar and T. H. Morton; H. Martin; T. B. Danielson; F. C. and H. Winkle; L. A. Keller; J. R. Perkins and R. Mills; R. Morris; R. Tomkins and H. K. Abernathy; D. Emmerson; J. W. Ruther, M. L. Lawrence and D. J. Green; M. Wentworth; F. S. King; H. T. Bell, L. Nathan, S. D. Singer and E. N. Quinn; R. Hubbell; R. J. Mayhew; J. B. Roth and A. Garlock; L. B. Hardy; H. D. Lally; G. W. Scott; W. D. Wagner; L. T. Hunt; L. L. Lewis and O. E. Parker; N. G. Kilgen and P. Redman; N. T. Brown and T. N. Powell; R. L. Norton; J. Farraro; F. K. Monroe; L. A. Dodson and H. T. Todd; V. Burton; L. W. Morgan and P. Larcher; J. Jacobs; G. D. Jones; T. R. Fanning and W. Burns; H. F. Stacy; B. L. Shaw.

Various answers to Section A are as follows:

D. Danielson: "The watt is a unit of electrical power, the equation of which is $P = EI$. It represents the power produced by a current of one ampere under pressure of one volt. It is equal to one joule per second. [Not precisely correct in that last, but it is made right by what follows.—F. H. R.] It is approximately equal to 1/746th of one horsepower. The joule, in turn, is equal to the amount of power produced when one coulomb of electricity moves under one volt pressure, whereas the coulomb is the quantity of current delivered by a current of one ampere during one second of time. One international watt is equal to 1.00034 absolute watts. The kilowatt is a unit of electrical power equal to 1,000 watts. The above named units are terms used to express electrical power and to compute problems relating to it and its expenditure."

W. H. Edmunds replies: "The term watt is used to express the amount of electrical power used. It comes nearer to expressing the amount of work performed than does any other single electrical term in general use. We may speak of 100 volts, but unless it be connected with amperes flowing we have not expressed the amount of power produced, which would apply equally did we name 100 amperes but make no mention of voltage. If, however, we speak of 100 watts we express a certain definite amount of power available or produced or work performed. One watt is the amount of energy produced by a current of one ampere flowing under a one volt pressure. Watts is the product of voltage times amperes flowing, thus two amperes times 100 volts would produce or represent 200 watts of power, or 4 amperes at 50 volts would equal 200 watts."

To his answer Brother Edmonds appends this note: "When it comes to learning things by means of our BB School, I can say it teaches me something every week," which comment is printed to permit me to remark that the amount of knowledge gained depends upon how much real study is devoted to each question.

(B) D. Pollock answers, "Limits of projection distance largely center in the projector optical train itself. It is quite true that if the distance be long and the air filled with dust or smoke, a considerable amount of light will be scattered by contact with the floating particles, but the amount of loss is not, after all, a very serious matter. Turning to page 247 of my projection bible, the Bluebook of Projection, I see that 'the projection room should not be too close to the screen or it will require a projection lens of less than four inches E.F.; nor should it be too distant, or it will require the use of a lens exceeding 7 inches E.F.' Analyzing the objections to these lenses, the first named prohibition is because of the fact that with a projection lens of less than four inches E.F., it becomes increasingly difficult to secure flatness of field, for the reason that lenses give critical definition at only one exact distance from their optical center.

"With a screen of any given width, as projection distance is made less, the distance from lens to center and sides of the screen becomes increasingly different. On one end of a table, say, six feet long, draw a straight line one foot in length. At right angles thereto draw a straight line down the center of the table, with marks at each foot of its length. Now using a pencil with a string attached thereto, place the pencil at the first mark, one foot from the screen line and the pencil point at one end of the screen mark. Now, holding the string on the mark, draw the segment of a circle from one end of the screen mark to the other, observing how far the pencil mark is from the screen mark center.

"Next place the pencil at one end of the screen mark and hold the string at the mark furthest away, repeating the pencil movement, and you will instantly see the relation of long and short focal length projection lenses to the screen, remembering that critical focus is not obtained except at one, fixed distance from any lens; also that 'critical focus' means the very best focus or definition a lens can provide. You will observe the difference in flatness of field as between the long and short focal length lens as exemplified by the relative curvature of the pencil marks.

"There are other minor reasons why lenses of too long focal length are objectionable, the chief one of which is that with projector optical systems as planned today, it may be difficult, or even impossible, to get the light beam from the aperture all into the lens, failure of which not only means loss of light, but also increased unevenness of screen illumination, since under that condition the light lost will all be taken from the outer margins of the picture, the effect of which is illustrated on page 126 of our Bluebook of Projection. In that illustration the light almost all enters the lens, but the terrific drop [24.3 to 5.9 candle power—F. H. R.] from center to side is still further increased if it does not."

Columbia

DEVIL'S SQUADRON: Richard Dix, Karen Morley—A swell show. The roaring of the planes can be heard for a block if you leave a window open, which helps to bring them in. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 20-21.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Columbia is up and down but on this one they were up plenty. Not as good as "It Happened One Night," but it is very good entertainment and the two stars are great in their respective roles. Jean Arthur does splendid work in this one and the picture finishes with a bang in the courtroom scenes. Cooper was good, too, as was his supporting cast.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Had more favorable comments on this picture than any I have played. Word of mouth advertising caused it to build for second and third days after slow start and we did strong average business. Running time, 115 minutes. Played June 14-15.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

PANIC ON THE AIR: Lew Ayres, Florence Rice—Just another program picture not long enough to stand up unless played with plenty of short subjects. Running time, 56 minutes. Played June 6-7.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

SINGING KID, THE: Al Jolson—Somewhat of a disappointment. No musical dance numbers of any consequence and a very obvious story. Good cast does its best, including Al. Another thing: Warner's "off the air" radio arrangement makes all their songs unknown quantities. It's hard to get their rhythm in one showing, consequently they seem flat. Played June 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SNOWED UNDER: George Brent, Genevieve Tobin—Very nice program picture which should satisfy any audience looking for amusement and good hearty laughs. This Tobin girl is getting better every picture. Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR, THE: Paul Muni, Josephine Hutchinson—Splendid. Very much appreciated by audience. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 19-20.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

GB Pictures

THE THIRTY-NINE STEPS: Robert Donat, Madeleine Carroll—This English production fell short of our expectations. Sound was very bad and the story quite conflicting. Did below average weekend business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AH, WILDERNESS: Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery—Good picture. Terrible business. I haven't done as well as expected on MGM pictures. Perhaps my people do not appreciate a good picture or something!—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

AH, WILDERNESS: Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery—A swell picture that was ruined at the box office by a terrible title. If you can get them in, here is a picture that will please 100 per cent. Running time, 97 minutes. Played June 21-22.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

CHINA SEAS: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery—A real cast and a real show to the best business since the first of the year. This picture will back up anything you have to say about it. Don't be afraid to boost it. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 7-8.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

EXCLUSIVE STORY: Franchot Tone, Madge Evans—Gee, here is a dandy, too. Stu Erwin had a role in this equally as good if not better than he ever had before. And did he do it to perfection? Tone is always fine and that Evans girl is swell. The acting honors must be shared though with Calleia (you pronounce it) who did a fine job. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MURDER MAN: Spencer Tracy, Virginia Bruce—A well-produced, interesting picture, handicapped by a poor title. The title would indicate a horror picture, but it is not. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 22-23.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE OPERA, A: Marx Bros.—Drew above the average and seemed to please. The piano playing of Chico and harp playing of Harpo fine. Played June 14-15.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

ROBIN HOOD OF EL DORADO, THE: Warner Baxter, Ann Loring—Warner Baxter at his best. A great picture in all respects, it has romance, action and all that goes with a good outdoor picture. Well supported the first day run but did not get the play that it should have done on the second day.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald—One of the grandest musical pictures we have ever had the privilege of playing. Although we did not do a sellout business, we always take pride in meeting out patrons at the door, who always come out satisfied.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—A very satisfactory picture. Pleased all. Miss Gaynor shows she only needs a good part and a little production back-up to be really a fine actress. Played June 28-29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—Story well told and picture enjoyed. A lot of very favorable comment. Running time, 107 minutes. Played June 14-16.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—This picture is a surprise package after the last two or three flops this star made. This is greatly due to the support of Robert Taylor, who has just nosed out Gable in popularity with the ladies. Above average business and everybody pleased.—J. B. Weddle, Walnut Theatre, Lawrenceburg, Ind. Average patronage.

THREE GODFATHERS: Chester Morris, Irene Hervey—This one satisfied the majority. A few of the folks marveled at the baby's fine, neat appearance following his harrowing desert escapade, but maybe it livened up the rather drear atmosphere. In any event we're all glad the little fellow turned out so well! Played June 26-27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNGUARDED HOUR: Loretta Young, Franchot Tone—Very good. Well directed and plenty of suspense. It was liked very much by the audience.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

VOICE OF BUGLE ANN, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan—Another excellent one which was well received here on account of the dog angle. Did not have one complaint. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 21-22.—Horn and Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

VOICE OF BUGLE ANN, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan—Was disappointed with this. Picture is pretty good but not as good as we expected. Business less than feature rental!—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

DESERT GOLD: Larry Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—Very good Zane Grey western for weekend. Average business. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 19-20.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

EAGLE'S BROOD, THE: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Fair Western program. Should be played as a double feature because of its being very short. Will please all western fans. Running time, seven reels. Played June 19-20.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT: George Raft, Alice Faye—I wouldn't rate this better than program; the amateur hour broadcast sequence was interesting and there was several good vocal selections. Business average. Played June 12-13.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES COOKIE: Burns and Allen—Will get by, but nothing to write home about. Got lots of laughs, but some said too silly. Business average. Played June 19-20.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

13 HOURS BY AIR: Fred MacMurray, Joan Bennett—MacMurray very popular here and an air story always clicks. Result good average business. Picture okeh but nothing big. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 21-23.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

13 HOURS BY AIR: Fred MacMurray, Joan Bennett—A very fine picture. Pleased everyone and drew in a few extras. Played June 26-27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TOO MANY PARENTS: Frances Farmer, Colin Tapley—A programmer of unusual merit. Played on dual but will stand alone in the smaller spots. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 17-18.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

WOMAN TRAP: Gertrude Michael, George Murphy Better than average program picture, holding the interest to the very end. This Tamiroff was a scream and held our audiences in roars most of the time. The suspense was fine too. Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 24-25.—Horn and Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Republic

HARVESTER, THE: Alice Brady, Ann Rutherford—It doesn't do us any good to get new customers in the house on the strength of a popular book when it can hardly be recognized from the picture. We have had the same thing from several companies and it never fails to bring complaints. If they are going to pay for the book and use the title, why not follow the story more closely? Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 26-28.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Small town patronage.

HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES: Phillips Holmes, Mae Clarke—A lot of French and English jabber that no one could understand. More walkouts than all others in past year. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 23-24.—J. B. Weddle, Walnut Theatre, Lawrenceburg, Ind. Average patronage.

RKO Radio

CHASING YESTERDAY: Anne Shirley—A good picture good for any day including Sunday. Business poor account hot weather. Running time, nine reels. Played June 23-24.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

DANCING PIRATE: Charles Collins, Steffi Duna—Technicolor without real stars and a good story don't mean a thing. This was a terrible Sunday bust.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

FARMER IN THE DELL: Fred Stone, Jean Parker—Fine program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—This pair always draw extra business, although in my opinion that is not as good as some of their previous releases. It lacks Irene Dunne, whose singing made "Roberta" the success it was. Running time, 110 minutes. Played May 29-31.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

I DREAM TOO MUCH: Lily Pons, Henry Fonda—Much better than expected. Played on "Money Night."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta—Believe you are a real comer, Bobby, if they give you good snappy stories and not too much singing.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

LOVE ON A BET: Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie—A good story and well liked. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 12-13.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

MUSS 'EM UP: Preston Foster—Okay melodrama. No great shakes but can get by. No complaint at any rate. Played June 23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SILLY BILLIES: Wheeler and Woolsey—This is the poorest picture this pair has turned out, not due to their acting, but the story they had to work with. But they still brought in more shekels than some of the socalled specials. Running time, 64 minutes. Played June 13-14.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SILLY BILLIES: Wheeler and Woolsey—The silliest thing about this one is that RKO chooses to throw away a good comedy team in trash like this. No story value, few really funny incidents, no musical numbers, no production values. In short, everything's against the stars before they even started. Too bad!. Played June 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SILLY BILLIES: Wheeler and Woolsey—64 minutes too long. They ought to horsewhip these two boys for allowing themselves to be put into such a bum picture. Running time, 64 minutes. Played June 19-20.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CONNECTICUT YANKEE, A (Re-Release): Will Rogers, Myrna Loy—Only a fair draw compared to the former late pictures.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

CONNECTICUT YANKEE, A. (Re-Release): Will Rogers, Myrna Loy—This reissue was rather disappointing. Did not do any such business as the former Rogers pictures. The poorest Rogers picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN: Irvin S. Cobb, Johnny Downs—Irvin S. Cobb is good in this. The really fine playing of Johnny Downs, though, is deserving of producer attention. The boy has lots of appeal and creates a good audience reaction. We should see more of him. This is a nice picture for your family trade. Played June 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GENTLE JULIA: Jane Withers, Tom Brown—A fair program picture. Good drawing card on account of the story. Running time, seven reels. Played June 21.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES TROUBLE: Paul Kelly, Arline Judge—A good program picture. Should please the majority. Good acting by the entire cast. Running time, seven reels. Played June 17.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Alice Faye, Warner Baxter—One of the best musical pictures we have played this year, however the box office returns were not up to our expectations.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MESSAGE TO GARCIA, A: Wallace Beery, Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles—Took a beating on this on a Sunday date, but it still looks like good entertainment to us. Played June 21-22.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Small town patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND, THE: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—Splendid picture to good midweek business. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 16-18.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Small town patronage.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN: George O'Brien—Zane Grey's name as the author is a help at the box office, but the picture could hardly be given more than a one star rating. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 29-March 1.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

WAY DOWN EAST: Rochelle Hudson, Henry Fonda—With two unknown stars in the leading roles a really fine picture for the family failed to do better than an average business under the best weather conditions since January 1. While the work of Miss Hudson and Mr. Fonda left nothing to be desired, the draw at box office was missing. So far this year we have played only one Fox picture that made us money; that was "The Farmer Takes a Wife." Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 14-15.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DARK ANGEL, THE: Frederic March, Merle Oberon, Herbert Marshall—Played second time. Picture is very, very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MELODY LINGERS ON, THE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Houston—This picture was not suitable for our situation and proved a colossal box office flop.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

DANGEROUS WATERS: Jack Holt, Robert Armstrong—So-so melodrama. Jack Holt is deserving of a decidedly better production than this. Charlie Murray helps fine in the comedy part. Played June 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NOBODY'S FOOL: Edward Everett Horton, Glenda Farrell—Too much Horton unfunny dialogue and not enough action. Not nearly as good as "His Night Out." However, it got by on Screeno Nights. Running time, 63 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

OUTLAWED GUNS: Buck Jones—Good western but business off. Something has just about ruined Jones in my town.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PAROLE: Henry Hunter, Ann Preston—Different, timely and a knockout story of its type. The blond girl, whose name escapes me, stole the show.—Running time, 80 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

SHOW BOAT: Irene Dunne, Allan Jones—A swell picture that failed to do business expected, but no fault of picture.—J. B. Weddle, Walnut Theatre, Lawrenceburg, Ind. Average patronage.

Warner Bros.

BOULDER DAM: Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis—One of the best program pictures in a long, long time. Many, many fine comments. Thanks Warner—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

I MARRIED A DOCTOR: Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson—This is right down the alley for a small town. They can see some of the characters that they know. A small town story. We in the small towns can pick some of these snooty picturizations in our vicinity. I say this, that this director knew small town people or else the scenario writer did. The characters are pretty true in many aspects of the story.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

I MARRIED A DOCTOR: Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson—Just as we expected, this one deserved to be on our "Must See" list for the month even though it did not rate so highly in most places. O'Brien and Hutchinson are both favorites and if they star them again in married roles we feel sure the picture will do real business here. Running time, 83 minutes. Played June 19-20.—Horn and Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SONS O' GUNS: Joe E. Brown, Joan Blondell—Not near as good as some previous ones. Very silly and patrons don't hesitate to say so. Business average.—J. B. Weddle, Walnut Theatre, Lawrenceburg, Ind. Average patronage.

SPECIAL AGENT: Bette Davis, George Brent—Fine picture. Business off.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TIMES SQUARE PLAYBOY: Warren William—See report on "Treachery Rides the Range."—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Small town patronage.

TREACHERY RIDES THE RANGE: Dick Foran, Paula Stone—Had this on a double bill with "Times Square Playboy" and if we had been looking for two miserable pictures to give our customers these two would have filled the bill. There just isn't anything there.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

SCRAPPY'S CAMERA TROUBLES: Scrappy Cartoon—These cartoons have not kept up with other companies. Will get by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

THREE LITTLE BEERS: Three Stooges—The class of the slapsticks. House in an uproar with laughter. The beer kegs rolling down the hill with the Stooges after them brought the house down. Don't pass this one.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Educational

BUSY BEE, THE: Terry-Toon—Not-so-hot cartoon!—L. I. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FRESH FROM THE FLEET: Buster West, Tom Patricola—These boys are big favorites here—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

GRAND SLAM OPERA: Buster Keaton—A dandy comedy. Keaton dances for the first time and makes good. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

KISS THE BRIDE: Buster West and Tom Patricola—These two boys put on a real show and the comedy was one laugh after another. Running time, two reels.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

MAGIC WORLD, THE: Tom Howard—Plenty of laughs all the way through. Say it is a good comedy. Running time, two reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

PERFECT THIRTY-SIXES: Musical Comedy—A good musical with good singing and dancing and some beautiful girls.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Ida. General patronage.

RHYTHM OF PAREE: Musical Comedy—We find Educational comedies 50 per cent good and 50 per cent mediocre and this comes under the latter head. Running time, two reels.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

ROLLING STONES: Terry-Toon—Only average cartoon. Nothing to recommend it.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SAILOR'S HOME, THE: Terry-Toon—A good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHERE IS WALL STREET? Tom Howard—Awfully awful! Once again we had to insult our patronage with a socalled "spice of the program."—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WOLF IN CHEAP CLOTHING, A: Terry-Toon—Only a fair cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BURIED LOOT: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—An interesting two-reel subject showing how the cards are stacking against the criminal, who sooner or later must pay. Running time, two reels.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

HISTORIC MEXICO CITY: Fitzpatrick Travel Talk—A single reel all in color that is a credit to any program. Running time, one reel.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

HIT AND RUN DRIVER: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Brought favorable comments. Everybody should see one of these once in a while.—Elaine S. Furlong, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore. Small town patronage.

HIT AND RUN DRIVER: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Every house should play this picture on their big night. Excelllent picture. Pleased and taught a lesson.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

IMPORTANT NEWS: Chic Sale—If I hadn't been a county editor for 25 years I probably wouldn't be so critical of this subject. To me it was the most inconsistent, asinine short I have seen. It was a shame to waste Chic Sale's talents on such an absurdity. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash, General patronge.

JAPAN IN CHERRY BLOSSOM TIME: FitzPatrick Travel Talk—We can not say enough for these shorts. Educational, beautiful and entertaining.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LA FIESTA DE SANTA BARBARA: Joe Morrison—Marvelous coloring and good music. Joe Morrison singing "The Last Roundup" outstanding. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

LITTLE PAPA: Our Gang—A comedy that will please any audience, young or old, 100 per cent. Spanky McFarland and a sweet little two-year-old miss carry off the honors. I would give it a four star rating. Running time, 20 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

METROTONE NEWS: Newsreel—Always good, none better.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

OLD PLANTATION, THE: Happy Harmony Cartoon—All color with southern melodies and songs. Very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

PAN HANDLERS: Patsy Kelly, Pert Kelton—Kelly and Kelton a great team. This comedy went over with a bang and roars of laughter.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Chic Sale—As fine a short as has been made. Drew applause every show in our house and held them spellbound. Don't miss it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RUN, SHEEP, RUN: Happy Harmony Cartoon—A crackerjack color cartoon. Up to the fine standard of this series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage RUN, SHEEP, RUN: Happy Harmony Cartoon—A splendid cartoon. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

SECOND CHILDHOOD: Our Gang—I rate this the best "Our Gang" comedy to date. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Paramount

HENRY, THE FUNNIEST LIVING AMERICAN: Betty Boop Cartoon—Fair cartoon. Will interest children. It's O. K. Running time, one reel—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE WATERS: Grantland Rice Sportlight reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

MAGIC OF MUSIC, THE: Headliner Series—Just fair. Running time. 11 minutes.—C. A. Jordan, Opera House, Cogswell, N. D. Small town patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: While these are sold for extra money they are worth it. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

RKO Radio

IN LOVE AT 40: Edgar Kennedy—Just a comedy. Kennedy always scares the kids with his loud talking when he gets mad. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

NEPTUNE MYSTERIES: Struggle to Live Series—Fairly interesting. Not as good as we've seen from this series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PATHE TOPIC NO. 3: Pathe Topics—These are very fine reels for fillers.—C. L. Niles. Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

United Artists

THREE LITTLE WOLVES: Silly Symphony—Another dandy Silly Symphony from Disney. The class of the cartoons.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

CAMERA THRILLS: Special—And they're still talking about it. This one rates high in our audience's favor. About the best action subject to date.—L. A. Irwin. Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BETWEEN THE LINE: Bernice Claire—Miss Claire sings and looks lovely in this rather witty bit of celluloid. Production value is fine and all in all a good subject.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOUBLE EXPOSTURE: Bob Hope—Poor. Nothing to it. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

P'S AND CUES: Pepper Pot Series—Billiard champions, male and female, show how they do it. Okay! —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

VITAPHONE HIPPODROME: Molly Picon, Johnny Lee—An excellent vaudeville reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WASH YOUR STEP: Hal LeRoy—Just fair. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

Serials

Stage and Screen

CUSTER'S LAST STAND: Rex Lease—On fourth episode and not going over so hot. It takes about half of each first reel to introduce its fifty characters. —E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

FLASH GORDON: Buster Crabbe—The last of Universal's serials on present contract and this is a honey, the only serials from this company this year that got any extra business. "Flash Gordon" will make up for the other three that failed to draw any extra business.—J. B. Weddle, Walnut Theatre, Lawrenceburg, Ind. Average patronage.

Detroit Delivery Suit In Commissioner's Hands

Taking of testimony before a circuit court commissioner has been completed in the case of the Film Truck Service against Independent Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., an association formed to deliver films for its members. Harold C. Robinson, president of the Film Truck Service, seeks to stop the association from soliciting new members and to prevent delivery of films by the association to its present members.

Gordon To Produce Plays On His Own

Max Gordon will produce three or four plays next season without Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer participating in the financing, he said last Friday upon his arrival in New York from a six week trip to England, France and Scotland.

"The fact that MGM has withdrawn from participation doesn't alter my plans any," Mr. Gordon said. "If the film company had continued, several additional plays would have been scheduled," the producer said.

A. J. Balaban Starts At Radio's Studios

A. J. Balaban starts work this week with the production staff at the Radio Studios under Samuel J. Briskin. It is believed that at a later date he will produce. Mr. Balaban is a brother of Barney and John Balaban and has been spending most of his time the past few years in Europe.

Film Business Found Lively in Australia

The film industry is moving forward rapidly in Australia and theatre construction in the Antipodes is very active, according to Elton Wild, secretary-treasurer of Twentieth Century-Fox in Australia, and Ralph Doyle, head of RKO Radio activities in the same country, both of whom were in New York last week.

All the 1,567 houses in New Zealand and Australia are in operation and all have sound equipment, the officials said.

Two independent companies will produce from 10 to 12 pictures next year on the Continent, they added. Zane Grey is reported to have formed a syndicate to produce a story centered about life on the Great Barrier Reef, in which he also will appear. He also will do one on the life of the Australian aborigines.

Associated Theatres Will Open 28th House

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Sioux Falls, S. D.

Dear Herald:

We presume the most of you boys know what hot weather is. Hot weather is the reverse of cold weather, in other words, when it is hot it can't be cold. For instance, when it is 30 below zero and there is a strong wind blowing, wise people will wear an overcoat instead of B.V.D.'s. Nature has some funny rules, like a political convention, but they are not subject to amendment.

Speaking of hot weather reminds us to say that for several days now the mercury has been pushing pretty hard on the top of the tube while we have known it to push pretty hard on the bottom. Down in Nebraska ("the land of the free and the home of the brave") Nature has been trying to find out just how much the natives can stand without offering an amendment. We are going to introduce one right now. Down there "98 in the shade" has become so common that people are beginning to refer to the hard winter of "'49" in order to cool off. You remember that it was in "'49" that California went on a gold basis and a lot of Californians went on the rocks, and some eastern folks too. When we read of the "gold rush of '49" we are reminded of the rush when the quarterback of the home team called "26-33-41-62-shift" and the rush was on but it stopped about six feet behind the line of scrimmage. Doggone such doggone playing anyhow.

Sherm Fitch, the R.K.O. manager at Sioux Falls, says he's got the hives. We don't know what the "hives" are but we presume the hives are closely related to the heaves, and we know what the heaves are. Our father used to have a buckskin pony that got the heaves every time we fed him musty clover or timothy hay, and we hope Sherm hasn't been eating musty hay. There is a remedy for the heaves but we have forgotten just what it is, so we will have to turn on the radio, that will tell us all about it.

Sherm said to us, "Say, Colonel, the two old parties have had their conventions and nominated candidates and adopted their platforms and now what do you think about it?" We lit a convention cigar and said:

"Well, Sherm, just to be honest about it, and looking at it from out here in 'the prairie state,' it is our belief that if they will continue to tell us of the excellent qualities of gasoline, face powder, soap, cosmetics, cure-all remedies, etc., etc., and if the old lady will continue to manufacture her vegetable compound for falling arches, we ought to be able to continue for at least 'three long years' in spite of hellandhighwater, or words to that effect." Sherm threw a paper weight at us and said, "Oh, you doggone bonehead."

Hot weather gets under our B.V.D.'s and sometimes we don't know whether we are going north or south, but generally sidewise. Our doctor says we must "take it easy." Just what he means by "taking it easy" we don't know. If he had said "You must go bass fishing" we would have understood him and probably would have added a little something to his bill, although that looked like it was plenty high enough already. But this will probably be plenty of bull about the weather, but the weather up here in Dakota is about the same it is "down where the alfalfa grows" and in Alf Landon's state, and you know it is pretty hot down there and it is getting hotter.

Last night we went and saw "Splendor" and we have been trying to figure out just what connection that title had with the story and just how much of a draft that title would have with the public. In fact, it didn't have any at the theatre.

"Splendor" is another of those triangle themes wherein the "heavy" tries to win the bride away from her husband by offering him a palatial home and then tries to send him to South America in the interest of his oil company. All of which was a lot of horseradish, but it served as a basis for a story which we presume the producers thought would be new to the American audiences.

This triangle story is one that Noah brought over with him and it has been used ever since he landed, and was adopted in the early stages of the cinema and by some excellent players who ought to have rebelled against using it. It isn't what the American people want in entertainment; their preference runs rather to "horse opera."

It is to be said of the players in "Splendor" that they did excellent work with what they had to work with. We knew a fellow once who was an excellent artist, and would have painted an excellent picture, but he used a whisk broom instead of a brush.

From the chair. "Will the delegates please be seated that we may proceed with the business of the convention." (Voice from the Nebraska delegation, "Hurrah for the Platte river valley.")

When we left Nebraska she was badly in need of rain, and if they don't get rain down there pretty soon we will all have to go on relief. The small grain crop is practically out of consideration but the corn is still doing fairly well in most places, but even corn needs a drink once in a while, just like a prohibitionist.

"The chair now recognizes Sally Smithers from Coon creek holler." (Voice from the California delegation: "Mr. Chairman, California wishes to inform the convention of our wonderful climate and our sunkist oranges." A cowpuncher from the Rio Grande valley: "Oh, applesause, sit down.")

The weather is so doggone hot that we are going to comply with the doctor's orders and "take it easy." There are several reasons for this. One is the doctor's orders and another is that Ernie wants to use the space for his advertisers, therefore the convention will recess until the delegates sober up. The readers (if there are any) may now start a demonstration.

HORSE CHESTNUT—CHESTNUT HORSE

"High pressure" has by today's generally accepted definition come to be identified with a false forcing in selling, an intensity in endeavor that does not stick entirely to the facts. It applies as well to the merchandising of motion pictures. Therefore, as an opposite to "high pressure" and to emphasize virile, consistent delivery in showmanship that takes advantage of every sound selling point, this pen favors the term "high power," and as such has used it frequently. Most recently it can be found in the issue of June 27, last paragraph of our editorial headed "Christine Knows Her Bally."

But the same meaning is evidently not accepted by every reader for in a recent mail is the following communication from a long-time Round Tabler objecting to such usage. He prefers his name not be used.

Dear Mike:

Christine showed damn good showmanship in her desire to get her dog back and the manner in which she handled her own private little campaign.

But I, personally, don't agree with you when it comes to "the necessity of high-power plugging." At least not in the sense that the term indicates in this business.

I'll wager Christine didn't advertise the loss of Westchester County's greatest English setter with gorgeous twinkling brown eyes, the most intelligent and finest setter ever bred in the county, Champion of Champions, the one and only, etc.

She just let the community know in an honest-to-goodness fashion that she had a message to deliver, a favor to ask no doubt. And, her sincere efforts were rewarded with the return of her pet.

High-power connotes high-pressure. Spirited exploitation and advertising is something different. Just tell the boss you put on a spirited campaign and what would he say? You know as well as anyone else. Tell him "high-power" and he'll think it great.

Let's lay off that high-power selling. There's too much of it in the merchandising of every picture these days. Barnum was right. But so was Lincoln. Ask Billy Rose.

Yes, we agree that there is too much of an intensity in selling every picture, in advertising every attraction with the force that belongs behind only those features that deserve it. But we also maintain there is no disputing the application of "high power" when called upon to obtain honestly the maximum of boxoffice possibilities, week in and week out, from any theatre's attractions and to obtain such without recourse to the high-pressure practices to which our correspondent objects.

No, indeed, high power does not necessarily connote high pressure. We desire to establish as much difference between them as there is between a horse chestnut and a chestnut horse.

WON'T TAKE 5 TO 1

Discoursing on some present day weaknesses in the industry, visiting theatreman got this off his chest.

Some years back he operated a house later taken over by the circuit with which he is now affiliated. In its independent era the theatre consistently grossed a thousand dollars more a week than it is doing today. Reason seems to be that the spot is not receiving the attention necessary and it further appears that very few dollars are being allowed for proper advertising.

So this executive knowing the situation down to the ground is firm in his conviction that an added expenditure of a couple of hundred a week plus some knowing effort, which he is well able to supply, will bring the house back to the former much more profitable state. But the Big Boys solidly entrenched behind columns of figures ignore the tempting odds and refuse to lay down two to pick up ten.

Not so long ago there were plenty of fast-steppers around who offered the same opportunity would slap down plenty of bankroll before you could say Clark Gable. But that seems all in the past.

Too much showbusiness today is cut-and-dried. And that, kind friends, goes both ways.

UNUSUAL FLOAT. For date on "Show Boat," at the Gem, Osceola, Ark., Raymond Cartwright created this unusual float featured in parade that was highlight of local celebration of State Centennial. After the parade, the boat was tied up to its "pier" in front of theatre during run of the picture.

Gets Quarter-Page Ad On Classified Plug

Credit George Spaeth, Lyric, Duluth, Minn., says Minnesota Amusement's ad chief, Charley Winchell, for the clever adaptation of the slant praising local paper for want ad results. George was playing "World's Fair" and could not locate a barker for out front, it seems, until he advertised in the paper. Results were immediate.

Letter of endorsement to the publisher on theatre letterhead was strong enough for quarter-page house ad reproduction with plenty of plug for the theatre.

Burlesk Bathing Revue Clicks for Griffithmen

Working with the local Lions Club in each instance, three Griffiths Circuit managers reported highly successful the presentation of a men's burlesk bathing revue. Here are highlights of the stunt as put over by Dick Klein, of Seminole, Okla., J. Howard Hodge, of Midland, Texas, and J. E. Stribling, of Hugo, Okla.

Each cooperating merchant paid $1.50 entrance fee for representation in the contest by costumed club member appearing in the revue for the store, this money plus percentage of the night's receipts going to the club's crippled children fund. Every member of the club was required to "model" on the stage of the theatre. Lions paid for window cards, heralds, photos for display and cuts for newspapers, the latter going heavily with page one stories.

Wax figures dressed in old-time bathing suits were placed in windows of prominent stores and in Hugo, editor of local paper dressed in suit, vintage of 1889, appeared on the stage of the Erie Theatre to make announcement of the gag.

Contests Sell "El Dorado" Date

A movie star contest was put on by Arnold Gates, Loew's Park, Cleveland, Ohio, for "Robin Hood of El Dorado" with guest tickets going to those who could supply the full names of stars' photos shown in lobby display. Only clue given by Gates was that each of the stars' last names began with one of the first letters in the title of the film shown and he says there were plenty of entrants in the contest.

Sky ad company, whose plane was equipped with a p.a. system for advertising purposes gave picture a plug to demonstrate their novelty, and pet shop cooperated by displaying a certain type police dog, offering tickets to those who named the particular breed and explained in not more than fifteen words why they wanted to see the picture. School principals were circularized, stressing the historical background of the picture and library attendants were guested for plugging the date.

Sells Cool Plants With Smart Booklet

"How to Keep Cool in Washington" is the attractive title of a sixteen-page booklet which is now being distributed to the patrons of Warner Bros. five air-conditioned theatres in the District of Columbia as an experiment in the indirect selling of cooling plants.

The booklet, part of the institutional work done by Frank La Falce, Director of Advertising for Warners' Washington Zone, contains among other features a brief history of man's efforts to keep cool, a long list of attractive places in and around Washington for hikers and motorists, Hot Weather Health Hints prepared by the U. S. Public Health Service, some advice on How to Avoid Sunburn, a page of facts about air-conditioning, and four pages of recipes for summer menus, prepared for the booklet by Mrs. Frances Troy Northcross, director of the Washington HERALD'S Home Makers Club.

Advertising for the five theatres—the Earle, Metropolitan, Ambassador, Tivoli and Penn—has been held to a minimum. Inclusion of the recipes assures the book being taken into the home. The preparation of the booklet was publicized and resulted in numerous requests for copies being received before actual distribution began.

Class Appeal Aimed For In "White Angel" Front

Distinctive treatment of the lobby decorations at the New York Strand for the date on "White Angel" was stressed in the design by B. F. Moore, managing director, and constructed by Sid Nagler, to sell the historical importance of the theme, adapted from the life of Florence Nightingale. Dignity and popular appeal were combined to bring out the picture's high points as follows:

Ten-foot hand-tinted enlargement framed in manner of a portrait was utilized as a nucleus, balance of front constructed of pastel tints with white silk for backgrounds of the display frames which were treated in the same manner, using oval cut portrait moulding mats. The cutouts in the frames also were hand-tinted, mounted on white silk backgrounds to achieve a cameo effect. Title was flitter-faced cutout letters set against panels of frosted glass illuminated from behind with trough lights.

Unusual publicity on the date at Atlantic City was obtained by Sid Blumenstock, local WAR STUFF. In addition to artillery, sandbags, guns and marquee fort, house staff at the Sooner, Norman, Okla., wore helmets about town carrying picture credits. From the left above are Manager L. A. Chatham, assistants Gus Hoenscheidt and J. B. Rhea, service chiefs Leon Smith and James Borjes, cashiers, doormen, ushers and ad department personnel.

Warner Theatres' exploiteer. In place of the regular publicity, Sid planted in the Atlantic City Press, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem, "The Lady With a Lamp," illustrated with a photo of Kay Francis, as Florence Nightingale. Following the poem was a paragraph plugging date and announcement of its showing locally.

'Buy British' Campaign Used by Egan for "Rhodes"

A "buy British" campaign was put on by Pete Egan in connection with his "Rhodes" date at the Palace in Calgary, highlight of which was a double truck spread featuring $25 in prizes to those supplying the names of the merchants whose ads were run minus any clue as to who they were, other than plugging some article for which they were known.

First page called attention to the contest, editorial on Rhodes was run and various picture mention scattered throughout paper.

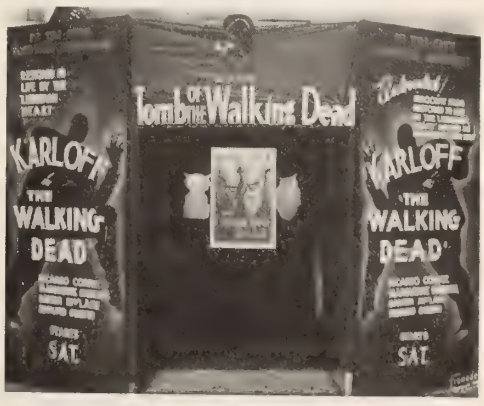
Muchmore Hosts Kids Of Traffic Club

Every year Tom Muchmore picks the most worthy group of boys and girls and entertains them at his theatre. This year, before leaving the Settos Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., for the Alamo in Louisville, Ky., Tom contacted the Traffic Boys and Girls, an organization that protects the little kiddies from injury while attending school and hosted them at his house.

Tom reports that he obtained widespread publicity from various city officials as well as newspaper critics who came through with stories. He further says this is one of the best good-will stunts he has ever used and in the new situation intends if possible to arrange similar tieups.



Murphy Holds Preview For "Mr. Deeds"

An invitational preview of "Deeds" was held Sunday ahead of opening by David Murphy, Rialto, Allentown, Pa., attended by approximately 250 persons from all walks of life, selected mainly because of their wide range of contact. Murphy says Allentown doesn't have Sunday shows and so far as he can learn this was the first Sunday preview ever held there.

Day following preview and for ten succeeding days the Allentown Chronicle and News conducted a humorous column explaining the meaning of the term "pixilated" and inviting readers to submit short letters telling of a habit they had observed in others. Tickets were given to writers of letters run in paper each day.

Fashion strip of Jean Arthur in various ensembles worn during making of picture was used, window displays planted and imitation dollar bills with copy imprint were distributed at night clubs, restaurants, etc.

SPOOK STUFF. Foyer walls were covered by John McKay, Garden Theatre, Davenport, Iowa, for his "Walking Dead" date. Large display boards with Karloff silhouette gave playdates and cast.

Sleeping Girl Stops Pittsburgh Pedestrians

Pittsburgh office workers became vampire conscious when they passed show window of leading store and saw beautiful girl asleep in window supposedly under spell of "Dracula's Daughter." Stunt was put on by Ken Hoel and Bill Zeiler at the Alvin Theatre.

Tying up with the window stunt was a midnite spook premiere. Just before the show, the girl was taken from the window, moved to the Theatre on an operating table where she came to life in the theatre with the first appearance of "Dracula's Daughter" on the screen. Papers played up the spook show and window stunt and spot announcements were received on radio.

Hadaway Dispenses Beer For "Frankie and Johnnie"

When "Frankie and Johnnie" came to the Colonial Theatre in Winston-Salem, N. C., the whole town went for beer and pretzels. Manager Norris Hadaway tied up with local beer parlor, imprinted envelopes filled with pretzels were distributed about town, "Frankie and Johnnie" song cards were handed out and section of lobby (see photo) was turned into an old-fashioned beer parlor with promoted drinks dispensed by usher.

Amateur Critics Contest Staged by Stevens

Twenty-five stores cooperated with A. Stevens, Imperial Theatre, Ottawa, Canada, on an amateur critics contest for which cash prizes and tickets were awarded.

Merchants came through with a co-op page and each criticism had to have a coupon attached, these available only at the cooperating merchants' stores. Window cards were placed in all stores, advertising space was sold by the theatre staff, newspaper donated the prize money and theatre paid for printing of window cards and coupons.

"Petticoat" Thermometer

A twenty-five foot thermometer made of beaver board and wood strips was stationed in the lobby of the Blaine Theatre, Henryetta, Okla., by T. H. Wilson to sell "Petticoat Fever." The red mercury line crowding the top was lettered to title and proved a real attention-getter.

Store Sponsors Temple Club for Stroud

Leading department store in Hamilton, Ontario, cooperated with George Stroud, manager of the Palace Theatre on "Captain January" by erecting a booth in store and inviting all kids to join the Shirley Temple club. Each child possessing a Temple doll had to bring it with her to the booth and register her name, address and age in a large book, she then received ticket to see the picture. Store featured the club in their ads and needless to say, there were plenty of kids not owning dolls, who purchased them at the store.

Lucky number stubs were distributed and accompanying photo shows Stroud with the lucky miss to whom he presented a Temple doll donated by the store. Various merchants devoted windows to displays, 18 three sheet boards were planted about town and front and lobby were especially decorated two weeks ahead.

Displays Merchants' Wares In Lobby for "Country Doctor"

Accompanying photo shows the way Jack Wright, Liberty Theatre, Walla Walla, Wash., reciprocated by allowing merchants to display their wares in his lobby as an exchange for their window displays on "Country Doctor." Savings and loan association came through with excellent window tying up with picture and featuring the kiddies.

Highlight was teaser campaign, the words EHA being carried in all ads and copy, breaking in tabloid section of regular Sunday paper announcing that the letters stood for "everybody happy administration" and a message from the president of the circuit, Frederick Mercy, that every theatre employee was a member of the "EHA" and ready to make patrons happy with entertainment.

Serialization ran in papers, gas company imprinted all bills and banners representing diapers were strung across Main Street.

Kempton Entertains Seniors At Free Kiddie Show

A good-will builder was used recently by Jack Kempton, Sherman Theatre, Goodland, Kansas when he wired the president of the senior class at graduation congratulating the young people on their achievement, and sympathizing with them on the ending of their kid days.

Jack invited them all to attend the show where they were admitted at children's prices. Those who presented themselves dressed in children's clothes were given free popcorn and lollypops. Kempton reports the seniors came in a body and a great time was had by all.

"Mr. Deeds" Checks In At Hotel for Thames

Tying up with local auto dealer, Jimmy Thames, Ritz Theatre, Corpus Christi, Texas for "Deeds" dressed a man in afternoon attire and had him driven by chauffeur throughout town. "Mr. Deeds" visited all prominent stores and arrangements were made for him to register at leading hotels, where he was paged in lobby and dining room at regular intervals during the day. Bally was used week ahead for three days.

Western Union placed inserts in all telegrams, dress shop paid for photos of Cooper and Arthur with store ad and private screening was held for newspaper staff and local prominents.

Recently Closed Cambria Opens with "Two Flags"

A double truck was secured by Bill Decker, manager and Charlie Schiffhauer, publicist at the Cambria Theatre, Johnstown, Pa., on "Under Two Flags" which included sock newspaper copy on the reopening of the theatre. Stories with art on Colman and Colbert were run in papers as were stories on the remodeling of the theatre, closed due to recent flood damage.

Local restaurant came through, paying for cost of printing heralds carrying their ad, and stories were planted on the new radio control featured in the film.

Shannon Uses Various Gags for "Anything Goes"

Telegraph poles around Pittsburgh were tacked with Chuck Shannon's "Anything Goes" copy for his date at the Belmar, cards reading "Found—an explosion of merriment, the best show," etc., etc. Three boys paraded about town, each carrying a banner, one with "Any," the other "Thing" and the third "Goes." Boys would scatter and then get together spelling out the picture title.

Merchant was promoted to take ad on reverse side of novelty throwaway upon which different letters of the title were printed. These were placed at different counters in merchant's store, clerks giving one with each purchase and to those presenting complete sets spelling out title, tickets were awarded. Another contest was planted with shoppers paper in which title letters were scattered throughout the ads, the first six entrants to find the words were guested at the theatre.

Nurse Bally for "Angel"

As part of the exploitation campaign for "The White Angel" current at the New York Strand, six girls garbed in full nurses' uniforms were stationed on busy Broadway corners distributing envelopes containing cards with following message: "Warner Bros. proudly present Miss Kay Francis as Florence Nightingale in 'The White Angel' with Ian Hunter," etc.

Gag Street Stunt Sells "Doctor"

The folks in Tuscon, Ariz., were treated to a laugh by Roy Drachman, Fox Theatre who sent a fellow out on the streets wheeling five baby carriages (see photo) to bally "Country Doctor." Another gag was the distribution of colored cards each bearing a cut of one of the babes with the caption "I am Yvonne (or whichever one she was), find four persons having the cards with the pictures of my sisters, and all five of you will be my guests to see," etc., etc. Roy arranged it so that there weren't too many sets presented.

Arrangements were made with hospital, whereby they bought tickets for all attendants in one block, papers carried story on this and letters were written to all doctors and nurses acquainting them of the engagement. Jeweler came through with nice window of baby cups, bracelets, spoons, etc., copy reading "no matter how many babies are left at your house, we have the ideal gift for them."

Drachman's "Country Doctor" Street Bally

Above is reproduction of two-column newspaper ad and, left, adaptation of same for lobby display poster as utilized by Les Pollock, at Loew's, Rochester, N. Y. Ads are blown up to make posters which are not cluttered with too much copy and, says Les, the idea saves wear and tear on the house artist.

Contests Highlight Lykes' "Sky Parade" Campaign

Local oil distributors formed a Jimmie Allen Cadet Club for Jack Lykes' "Sky Parade" date at Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, featuring a contest whereby every child selling fifty gallons of gasoline received a ticket to see the picture. Company reimbursed theatre for each ticket used and Jack reports over a thousand were given out.

Special screening was held for oil company attendants and newspaper critics. United Air Lines devoted a window display to large glass container, offering prizes to those guessing number of drops of gas in container. Line also furnished display of air trophies for lobby.

Newspaper sponsored an essay contest on "What was your greatest model airplane thrill"; first prize was bicycle and tickets for runnersup. Jack promoted airplane with loud speaker for thirty minute flight over city making picture announcements and special lobby display consisted of compo board replica of airplane hangar, illuminated beacon lights and model planes furnished by airlines.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Special Lobby Display Built for "Road Gang"

Among various displays that were built for his "Road Gang" lobby at the Lyric in Watertown, S. D., Mike Wainstock used an electric sign spelling out title and built a torture rack with dummy hanging from same. Shot guns, shackles, handcuffs, bull whip and reward posters promoted from sheriff's office and local police were made into neat setpieces.

Heralds were distributed opening day, illuminated shadow box was hung directly under screen and used with trailer and spot announcements planted over radio two days in advance of opening.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Scott's "Ziegfeld" Ad

A nice full page co-op ad was secured by Sid Scott, Tivoli Theatre, Hamilton, Canada, for "The Great Ziegfeld." Each merchant's ad tied in some way with glorifying the dollar or purchaser. Center of page contained cut of Powell and Rainer.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

ATMOSPHERIC LOBBY. Real rustic display with pines, log cabin and all the trimmings was used for the "Sutter's Gold" engagement at the Paramount Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., by Tommy Read.

FRONT PAGES. To tiein directly with actual newspaper crime stories for "Bullets or Ballots," Mort Goodman, of Sid Dannenburg's Warner theatres' Cleveland publicity staff, utilized a lot of page one stories for decoration on advance lobby.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Crites Boxing Match Bally on "Milky Way"

A little different "Milky Way" street bally was used by Arlie Crites, Rig Theatre, Gorber, Texas, when he rigged up a ring on the back of a truck for a boxing match between two small boys. Referee was dressed in white and wore horn-rimmed spectacles a la Lloyd and the gag created plenty of comment as it toured the streets.

Three days ahead small bannered beaverboard cow, mounted on wheels with cowbell around its neck, was pulled through streets by boy and a "mechanical" man performed in front of the theatre during engagement.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

ANIMATED BOAT. Designed by Rodney Pantages and J. Lloyd Dearth for the "Show Boat" at the Pantages, Hollywood, Cal., the above lobby animation created attention with wheel on boat revolving in water.

Vote for Joe Brown Ad Sells "Sons-O-Guns"

Ken Grimes, Warner Theatre, Morgantown, West Va. for "Sons-O-Guns" ran a special ad in the political section of paper with copy "vote for Joe E. Brown," etc.; stilt walker dressed as Uncle Sam, paraded streets carrying back banner and special stories were run in paper calling attention to courtesy tickets which would be dropped in parachutes from plane circling city.

Cough drops were distributed by boys, bags carrying copy "for that husky voice you will have after seeing," etc., etc. Special letters were mailed to all members of the American Legion, various stores came through with neat window displays and local five and ten featured a Blondell sundae and distributed cards to all patrons.

Realistic Lobby Sells Ryan's "Road Gang"

For his "Road Gang" lobby, Joe Ryan, Grand Theatre, St. Cloud, Minn., built a special display consisting of tear gas bombs, black snake whip, leg irons, mouth gags, "wanted for Murder" stills and cards, etc., etc. Contest was planted in papers offering guest tickets to those submitting the most number of smaller words from the picture title.

Street bally was man in striped convict uniform who not only covered main streets, but visited offices and department stores. Cards were planted on fire plugs reading "don't park here, or you may land in a Road Gang." Girl using the wrong number gag called suburbanites giving dope on picture and special preview was held to which local prominents were invited; stunt covered by newspapers.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Inquiring Photographer Contest Used on "Deeds"

A reported first time was the inquiring photographer stunt used by manager Rudy Kuehn and publicist Bob Dietch at the Stanley Theatre, Jersey City for "Mr. Deeds," when cooperating newspaper tied in on a ten day publicity contest. Photographer covered streets stopping folks at random and distributing cards with space alloted to answer of question "What would you do if you inherited 20 million dollars?" If picture of contestant together with answer was printed in the paper, guest tickets were awarded. Each day during date one was used, thus insuring all watching particular column in which contest was run.

Theatre boys distributed "fake" money with picture copy, parade of magazine boys with police escort was staged mile from theatre, marching through town to house, where they lined up for pictures to be run in papers.

Broadcasts Louis Fight

Anticipating the opposition that the Louis-Schmeling fight would prove, Harry Moller, Wicomico Theatre, Salisbury, Md., stepped out and tied up a local radio concern to place a radio in the booth connected to the p. a. system. Heralds were distributed citywide and Moller reports he had them literally hanging from the rafters.

THE MILKMAN WAITS. For "Milky Way" opening at Loew's Paradise, New York City, Manager Jerry De Rosa and zone publicist Perry Spencer planted this "milkman" out front. No doubt to tell the folks he was on hand for the opening.

Cheyenne Bank Ballys "Custer's Last Stand"

F. G. Roberts, Rialto Theatre, Clinton, Okla., went out into the country and scouted around until he found a Cheyenne buck to bally his "Custer's Last Stand" date. Fellow was dressed in war paint and full regalia and stationed in front of the theatre beating a tom tom. Stunt was repeated at fifteen minute interval during engagement.

For "Country Doctor" Roberts tied up local baker who donated birthday Dionne cake and to first 100 kids entering theatre cake was distributed.

City of Shanghai Called Best Show Town in China

Motion Pictures Said to Hold First Place in Public Indoor Entertainment

by J. P. KOEHLER from Shanghai

In considering the cinema business in Shanghai, one must bear in mind that population figures have only a minor relation to cinema attendance. It is the economic and educational status of the inhabitants that determine the result at the box-office. Shanghai is credited with a teeming population of some 3,500,000 souls in its 3 districts, but, so far as motion pictures are concerned, its cinema-going population should be reckoned at about equivalent to an American city of 250,000.

The Central Government of China is constantly endeavoring to bring the screen to the masses by affording free educational shows, by the exhibition of educational pictures made by and for Chinese people, and through the screen service of some 45 portable projection sound equipments.

And yet it will be some years before the earning power and education of the lower classes is such that the box-office will really feel the effect.

Shanghai, China's greatest seaport, industrial and manufacturing center is the movie capital of China. Ninety-five per cent of foreign motion pictures have their first release in Shanghai. Practically all Chinese-made pictures for commercial exhibition receive first release in Shanghai since, with few exceptions, all native films with sound track are in the official Mandarin language.

Shanghai presents problems peculiar only to this city and China as regards motion pictures. The city is divided into three areas. The International Settlement of eight and three-quarter square miles, is controlled by the Shanghai Municipal Council, whose censorship by the Film Censor Committee of all films shown in this area is absolute. The French Concession of approximately four square miles, controlled by the French Consul-General and Commission Provisoire d'Administration Municipalite Francais has its own censorship committee, and also passes on all films shown in these two areas. The Chinese area of the City of Greater Shanghai comprises some 30 districts surrounding the two foreign areas, and is about 320 square miles in area. Film censorship in the Chinese area is controlled entirely by the Central Government of China in Nanking through the Film Censorship Committee.

Censorship Rulings Differ

Theoretically, each area needs only to observe its own censorship rulings, but for practical purposes close cooperation is maintained in all film censorship. Thus, should a film be ruled out by the French censors. it will not receive the approval of the International Settlement censors, and will be carefully surveyed by the Chinese before it is allowed exhibition in purely Chinese territory. The same applies to bans placed on films by the International Settlement authorities. There is one exception.

Whether the Chinese and foreign patrons go to the cinema because they like pictures or are there to kill a few hours before the night clubs open, it seems that there is quite a lot of motion picture activity in Shanghai, according to correspondent Koehler who relates for the membership, the why and what of the situation in this Chinese metropolis.

The article is another in the interesting Showman's Travelogue series now current in your Round Table by which readers of this journal have an opportunity to learn how they do it in other key spots, domestic and foreign.

A-MIKE VOGEL

Films banned by the Chinese censors are by courtesy, never exhibited in the International Settlement or French concession, but films banned by the foreign censors, may, if approved by Nanking be exhibited in Chinese areas. Thus, a cinema, located close to the foreign areas, often will receive heavy patronage on the exhibition of foreign banned film. ("I Am a Fugitive," "Rasputin," "Road Gang," "Hell's Highway" and others including numerous U.S.S.R. films.)

There is no charge for censorship in the foreign areas. The Chinese government has set a fee of C. $20.00 (about $6.50) per 500 meters or fraction thereof for all film submitted plus C.$3.10 for license certificate and tax. Fees are not returned when films are banned. For the extension of a three-year license the fee is doubled, and there are numerous and varied fines laid on cinemas for exhibition without Chinese license, or for advertising a film in Chinese publications before censorship has approved, or advertising under a title contrary to the official one on the license certificate. Films banned by the Chinese must be re-exported at once. All cuttings are retained by the Chinese censors. When submitting a film to the Chinese censors several copies of the complete translation of the story and dialogue must be made and handed in with the film for censorship.

ATMOSPHERIC BOXOFFICE. To advertise his "Lonesome Pine" engagement at the Lindell Theatre in St. Louis Milton Bishop designed and built this attractive boxoffice front on the date.

First Run Draw Limited

In Shanghai the drawing power of the two first-run cinemas located in the International Settlement and the two first-run cinemas located in the French concession (by first-run is meant cinemas primarily exhibiting all-foreign pictures without Chinese subtitle or slides) is limited to about 50,000 people who understand English sufficiently not to require explanatory titles, and about 25,000 more who attend high priced first runs as a matter of choice. The type of pictures decides largely the draw upon non-English understanding people.

The attendance at these four cinemas is all a matter of income. Prices are from C. $0.60 to C. $2.00 (30 cents to 65 cents); total seating about 6,200. Up to three years ago, few foreigners occupied the lower-priced stalls, but today, partly due to greater comforts in seating and to the reduced economic position of many foreigners, the lower-priced stalls are extremely well patronized by the foreign residents in Shanghai. At least 75 per cent of the income of these four first-run theatres is from Chinese patronage, consequently a film must appeal to the Chinese people to have a successful run.

Subsequent run cinema prices run from C. $0.20 to C. $1.00 (about seven cents to 35 cents) depending upon class of patronage and locality. The attendance in subsequent run cinemas is 97 per cent Chinese, clerks, higher paid mechanics, and shop attendants, etc., with the grade of patronage running down the scale to illiteracy as the theatre is graded in admission price and order of run. In a very few subsequent run cinemas—mainly second run—the patronage has a high percentage of foreigners who prefer to wait and pay the lower admission price because of their economic condition.

Cinemas in Shanghai are all well served with tram lines, bus service, taxis, rickshas, and private motor cars and all classes, both foreign and Chinese utilize these transportation facilities. Shanghai has no specific "down-town" section, unless it be the Central district of the International Settlement, which contains only one second-run cinema. Two large first-run cinemas, 2,000 and 1,600 seats respectively, are located in what is gradually becoming the heart of the foreign business and recreation center—the Race Course Area—with one other first-run house located within five minutes walking distance of these two cinemas. A first-run, 1,000-seat cinema is located in the heart of the French Concession, business and social center, about one mile from the above three cinemas.

Parking facilities are not excellent, but space has been reserved in all cases for private cars, all within a minute or two walk of the cinemas' entrances. It cannot be said that parking facilities have any noticeable effect upon attendance.

Bus lines, in one or two cases, run special buses after evening performances, as public transportation practically ceases after 11:00 p.m., but rickshas and taxis are available at all hours and the largest taxi companies have stations close to these large cinemas. However, on rainy nights transportation difficulties of congestion arise, and patrons often must await 15 to 20 minutes for an available taxi. On certain Chinese holidays taxis are sometimes impossible to obtain owing to the use of these by "parties" of visiting Chinese. The cost of all transportation bears directly on the admission price, running from 10 to 100 per cent of the admission charges in first runs, as the minimum charge for a taxi is C. $1.00 (about 35 cents). As a consequence, bad weather affects attendance very much, especially in subsequent run cinemas, where the patronage consists mostly of people who walk and to whom even tram or ricksha fare is of consequence.

Distributors Aid Exploitation

As far as the cinemas themselves are concerned, operation of the first runs is on the whole efficient, orderly and with a minimum of discomfort to the patrons. Crowding a box-office is a major difficulty, as it seems almost impossible to get a Shanghai crowd to line up in orderly fashion. Consequently, one never sees a line extending outside of lobbies, no matter how great the rush. Part of this is due, as has been asserted by local exhibitors, to the objection of guiding rails in the lobbies by the Fire Departments and also to the lack of real insistence to "line-up."

Managers as a rule, have limited authority, and confine their efforts to maintaining order, attending to the general welfare of the house and assisting in exploitation and advertising. There is no manager's club as such. Exploitation is in nearly all cases assisted by the distributor and much is in part financed by the distributors. In the last year, outdoor exploitation has taken a large step towards improvement. Interview of several managers indicates little attempt to utilize social or personal opportunities to increase attendance, except where such may result in the use of large shop windows, etc.

One must give main attention to the first-run cinemas when it comes to service, etc., as subsequent runs give little more than a seat, a fairly clean auditorium, and a fair degree of sound and picture presentation. First runs do offer the patrons air-conditioning, cooling systems, comfortable seats, orderly audiences, with a fair share of restful surroundings, clean, modern retiring rooms, and courteous attention, and as good sound as heard anywhere in the world, since all are equipped with wide range or high fidelity sound systems, high intensity arcs and modern projection equipment. Shanghai's best first run house is probably not as good in its entirety as a first-class neighborhood 2,000-seat theatre built within the last three years in New York, Chicago or other large American city. Subsequent run houses in Shanghai are little more than "picture houses" with conditions in some bordering on a mere place to sit and see the picture.

Chinese Theatres Heavy Competition

Newspaper advertising for the past three years has been limited by agreement among the first run exhibitors and the newspapers. There are two English morning papers, one Chinese-owned English language morning paper, one American evening paper and at least three large Chinese daily papers. The newspapers as a whole have cooperated in exploitation in return for advertising, and have for the most part lent themselves heartily to merchant tie-ups, etc., and give a generous space allotment to pictures. All foreign papers run daily motion picture space, and are quite free with information as to what's playing and where in reviews, pre-announcements and syndicated articles and Hollywood letters.

The cinemas do not yet spend heavily on general exploitation, one reason being its cost, and another, being an apparent disinclination to do anything more than to inform the public what is coming through the ordinary channels of newspaper ads and billboards. In the last few months, however, out-door exploitation has taken a spur, due mainly to the quality of the new product being exhibited. Window cards, shop windows in large department stores, tramcar and busses, sniping of walls and dead areas, hand-bills, direct mail, and in one recent case dance contest and special outdoor displays have come out this past half year, together with double truck merchant ad tie-ups in newspapers.

It can be stated that theatre operators and managers are generally disposed to take advantage of, or to create opportunities for exploitation within reasonable limits, and that merchants are also willing to cooperate in the use of windows, etc. One large department store makes an almost weekly practice of a window tie-up with a picture as a good business draw.

Cinema competition in Shanghai is fairly heavy. Numerous large Chinese playhouses cater to great numbers, and it is not uncommon to see hundreds of motor-cars parked in the surroundings of a theatre at which a popular Chinese stage-play or artist is being presented. However, such plays have no effect upon the attendance of foreigners in the cinemas. A Chinese motion picture, with a popular star or feature player will draw heavily in a Chinese first run cinema of which Shanghai has at least one of 1,600 seats.

While there are plenty of night clubs and cabarets, such places usually come to life after the cinemas close for the day. Occasional travelling shows, or artists, of which Shanghai now has very, very few, will bear on a night or two, and race days will affect matinees. Legitimate shows are almost limited to the productions of amateur companies, though these shows charge comparatively much larger admission prices than cinemas, and in general have but small effect upon picture attendance and draw largely only foreign patronage. Sports are numerous, and a fine day with popular sport teams playing will affect matinee trade.

Attendance in Shanghai's first runs is strongly affected by product suitable for the locality, and no amount of competitive amusement will deter patrons from attendance at one of the average of 21 performances per picture in these cinemas if the picture appeals. Some part of the cinema trade in the evening performance which starts at 9:15 P. M. consists of patrons who, not wishing to go to a night club until 11:00 P. M. or later attend the cinema simply because there is nothing else to do to fill in the time between dinner and night club.

Shanghai is the best show town in China. Stage shows in connection with films are limited, and it is very seldom that a picture theatre offers anything but the picture program in the first run house. Some of the subsequent run cinema catering to 20-cent and 40-cent class run stage shows of crude artistry, ballets of poorly paid and poorly trained girls whose main appeal to the audience is their ability to disclose as much of their person as the law permits. To the extent of public indoor amusement, the cinema in Shanghai holds, by far and large, first place in box office returns.

FURTHER "BEST" EXPLOITATIONS

Inaugurated in the issue of May 23 and continued in that of June 6, on this page are detailed additional top-line exploitation ideas put over by various of the members and which have proven themselves ace money-getters at the boxoffice. Names are alphabetically arranged.

Round Tablers were asked to contribute what they considered their "bests" put over during their years in showbusiness, to disregard whether the stunts were old or new just so long as they carried the wallop. The response has been very encouraging and further pages of the same will be carried in early issues. Managers who have not as yet forwarded their ace stunts are invited to join the party.

Adlman Ties Theatre to Bridge Opening

Situated in the Washington Heights district of New York City, Manager Archie Adlman, Loew's 175th Street Theatre, has obtained nice results from cooperation with various civic projects and among the more effective reports tiein with the local neighborhood chamber of commerce for the grand opening of the George Washington Bridge in that neighborhood a few years back. Adlman was allowed to plant huge banners across important Heights thoroughfares, copy including plugs for current attractions. Parade of civic and patriotic organizations was also organized with band concerts held in front of theatre and on stage.

The parade idea was used by Adlman also for the celebration of the theatre's fourth anniversary which fell on a Washington's Birthday and for this reason he was able to secure some 1,500 boy and girl scouts to take part together with six bands furnished by the Scouts, American Legion, etc.

Merchants Aid Christmas Tiein

During the pre-Christmas season of 1934, Adlman arranged a four-week tieup with some 125 stores, members of local merchants' association. Purchase coupons were distributed by each merchant, many of the coupons entitling holders to gifts and guest tickets. In exchange for the tickets during the four weeks, the manager secured windows and displays in the cooperating stores.

Stores were also tied in on this member's campaign for "Palmy Days" some years back wherein 10-foot drapes were placed over the doors of some 100 stores, copy reading: "Buy Now. Enjoy 'Palmy Days' Here and at Loew's 175th St."

Crawl Through Fence Hole And Receive Free Ticket

Besides being unique, the stunt reported by Manager K. K. King, Melba, Batesville, Ark., sounds very amusing, King tieing in with his public schools on "Hoosier Schoolmaster" in this wise. Fence was built in the entrance with a small hole and admission given to any boy or girl who could crawl through it. Laughs were furnished by the larger children who just could not make it.

Also helpful to King was an ice-melting contest on "Little America," cake of ice planted out front with tickets to those who came closest to the time it would take the block to melt.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Rosy Runs for Office On "Politics" Date

While serving at the Capital in Wilkes-Barre at the time "Politics" was current, Rosy Rosenthal, now at Loew's Majestic, Bridgeport, Ct., decided to run for office as a build up on the picture. Pennsylvania law allows any one to run for office if endorsed by 12 signatures, so Rosy got the Mayor interested in the gag and between the two, they dug up the office of Superintendent of Docks and Piers, a non-existent position, as Wilkes-Barre is an inland city. The Mayor, his assistant and other prominents in on the gag, all signed the application, it was filed legally and the campaign got under way with the slogan "A New Candidate for a New Position" and announced that the Capitol Theatre was in "Politics." Papers all went for it and Rosy promised he would build docks and piers if he was elected.

Campaign speeches were written and delivered, and week before election trailer on the picture was run featuring a political parade which gave the Round Tabler an opportunity to make speeches from the stage tieing in with the picture. Folks out front caught on and went out talking. Day ahead of opening, band was planted on float with red fire, etc., and followed by hundreds of kids with noise-makers stopped at the public square where Rosy's assistant in prop mustache and frock coat made a "Communist" speech.

Police, tipped off, pulled an arrest and with forthcoming publicity on every front page in town all tieing in the gag with the picture which opened on same day, with business away up as a result and Rosenthal winning an MGM prize for high-power exploitation on the date.

Harris' Wet Paint Telegraph Pole Cards

Francis Deering Stages Lobby Refrigeration Show

Most recent of Manager Francis Deering's highspot exploitations was the one reported from Loew's, in Houston, Texas—the second annual refrigeration show in the lobby of the theatre. Six leading companies participated in displaying their latest models and in exchange for the space participated in a special eight-page special newspaper section of the Houston Post in which most of the publicity was given over to the theatre's air conditioning system and dope on current and coming attractions.

Cover Cutouts With Silk Panties

While at Loew's, Richmond, Va., working with Elmer Brient, Deering recalls the date on "Footlight Parade" when cutouts of lightly-clad females, taken from the 24-sheet, were tacked around the box-office. An ancient Virginia law giving local censors the right to also supervise advertising was revived by the authorities and the theatremen ordered to cover the figures or remove them.

So seizing upon this order to grab a bit of front-page, the boys covered the figures with silk panties purchased from the five-and-ten, with the newspapers hopping aboard to keep the argument alive for three days with page one stories, photos, etc.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Obtains Rare Publicity With "Wet Paint" Signs

To spruce up Cleveland for the current Great Lakes Exposition, the city fathers voted to repaint all the city light poles, and the Loew houses, via publicist Milt Harris, tied right in on this by receiving an exclusive to furnish the city with signs placed on each repainted pole (see photo) reading: "Keep Away. Wet Paint. Keep Cool at Loew's Theatre in Cleveland. Home of the Great Lakes Exposition." Signs remained on the poles for three days.

Another such slant was put on with the recent Republican party convention, Loew's furnishing small memo books, front cover carrying convention and exposition copy and the back cover "Cool" copy for the two Loew downtown houses, the State and Stillman. Memos were distributed by assistant sergeant-at-arms to all delegates, given out at downtown hotels, department stores, etc.

Ace Clark Gable Letter Contest

Just finished in Cleveland is another honey by Harris and associates on a contest tiein sponsored by the News, Loew's State and the Cleveland & Buffalo Transit Co., first prize being an all-expense Great Lakes boat cruise. Entrants were asked to write a letter in 50-words or less on "Who Would Be Clark Gable's Perfect Leading Lady."

Exploitation was aided by all local travel agencies by the cooperating paper editorially and with cards on newsstands, banners on delivery trucks. Boat companies carried banners on lake steamers, in waiting rooms, etc. Other prizes were given including an all-expense trip to Niagara Falls.

COMPANIES AND CUBA AT ODDS OVER CENSORS

Majors Refuse to Submit Product to New Board; Cuban Consul Withholds Invoices

The "Cuban Board of Censors in New York," which began operations on July 1st, has had very little to do since its inauguration, according to spokesmen for large distributors and for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The board was set up in accordance with an announcement by the Cuban Secretary of the Interior that two censorship authorities henceforth would operate, one in New York and one in Havana.

Film companies in New York have refused to submit their product to the new board for censorship, partly on the ground that the fee to be charged is excessive, but principally because the Cuban plan leaves much doubt as to who will have the final judgment on whether the pictures can be exhibited in the West Indian island. The situation is deadlocked by the refusal of the Cuban consul in New York to grant invoices for film export until the New York board's seal of approval is attached to the pictures and by the rejection in Havana last week of a shipment of American films which lacked the seals.

Major Frederick L. Herron of the MPPDA office has sent a protest to the State Department at Washington, and a committee of distributors in Havana has submitted a formal protest to the Cuban Film Board of Trade.

Effects of the refusal to submit film to the new board and the decision by distributors not to ship films to Cuba until the situation is straightened out will not become apparent for several days, it is predicted, as there are sufficient pictures on hand in Cuba to keep theatres there supplied with American product for a short time.

The New York censorship unit, which has been placed under direction of Roberto Hernandez with offices at 1775 Broadway, New York, has announced that the fee for reviewing pictures will be $10 per 1,000 feet of film and $7.50 per 1,000 feet for each duplicate of the original picture reviewed. Distributors consider this out of proportion with fees charged by various state boards in the United States.

Mr. Hernandez, in a statement this week, emphasized that the New York approval is final. He said that the Havanan board of censors has been stripped of any authority over American films which have received the approval of the board in New York and maintained that the new ruling, when fully in effect, actually will facilitate the shipment of film to Cuba. He claimed that the plan would result in a saving to American distributors, who will have their product accepted or rejected in New York.

Court Orders Examination

Examination before trial of officers of Eureka Products Company, asked by counsel for Intimate Theatres, Inc., and other defendants, has been ordered in the New York State supreme court. The examination is in connection with an injunction suit brought by Eureka Products over the title of "Ecstasy."

Theatre Building Reported Slow in Egypt, Panama

Theatre building in Egypt, Panama and South America is practically at a standstill, according to Louis Lober, Jack Neal and William Melniker, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer representatives who are in New York to confer with Arthur M. Loew.

Mr. Melniker, who will take over his new post as foreign theatre head for the company, said that MGM is building a 1,100 seat house in Montevideo and a 1,500 seat theatre in Rio de Janeiro, both to be ready for opening in September. Outside of these there is no building activity, he said.

Despite a lack of new construction Mr. Lober stated that there is a marked increase in American and British films over the French product in Egypt. About 10 pictures in Arabic were produced in Egypt last year by local companies, he said. The natives have an appreciation of American humor, he added, and they are particularly fond of American film stars, event to the extent of naming their camels after them.

The representative said that there are about 75 theatres in Egypt, mostly in Cairo and Alexandria. Censorship is normal and there are no laws affecting distribution, he added.

Approximately 35 MGM pictures are released annually in the country. They are shown with superimposed French titles and in most theatres there is a side-screen translating the French into Arabic and Greek. When the cotton crops are good the gain is immediately reflected in the theatres, Mr. Lober said.

According to Mr. Neal there are 40 theatres in the Republic of Panama, including the Canal Zone. A theatre in Panama City which is being remodeled for a first-run house marks the only activity current in that territory.

In the Canal Zone pictures in the English language as shown in the United States, are the rule while in the Republic all pictures are shown with superimposed Spanish titles. There is no production locally.

Business has increased due to the steady growth of the Army forces, according to the representative. Of the 40 theatres the Army operates 12 and the Bureau of Clubs and Playhouses has nine, five of which are for white and four for negroes.

La Empresa Barrios has control of Colon City, which has three theatres. He recently bought out his opposition, giving him a clear field. The city has 35,000 inhabitants. Panama City with 79,000 has seven theatres.

Bankruptcy Books Of William Fox Puzzle Lawyers

A battery of lawyers began threading their way through the intricate mazes of the accounts of William Fox, former motion picture producer, whose bankruptcy proceedings were resumed this week before a referee in Atlantic City, N. J.

Counsel for Mr. Fox's many creditors spent this week questioning Herbert Leitsteen, bookkeeper for the former multi-millionaire since 1909, as efforts were begun to establish the validity of the more than $9,000,000 in claims which Mr. Fox listed in a voluntary bankruptcy petition filed May 29th.

In his first day on the stand Mr. Leitsteen admitted his inability to tell from his books what were Mr. Fox's assets and liabilities at any given date, or to trace the spending of a $15,000,000 check which Mr. Fox received April 7, 1930. He insisted that books and correspondence for 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1930 were lost when he and Mr. Fox moved from their offices at Tenth Avenue and 55th Street, New York, in 1930. He said he had no idea who had taken the records.

At one point during the testimony Frederick W. Pride, one of the claimants' lawyers, stated for the record that "we are making an effort to secure records for 1929 and previous years without which, we believe, the investigation into the Fox affairs will be greatly hampered, if not stopped. We believe those records are in existence."

Mr. Leitsteen maintained all during the testimony that the records have disappeared.

Several times protests were made to Referee Robert E. Steedle about Mr. Leitsteen's loss of memory and the referee reminded the bookkeepr that " 'I don't remember', if it is not true, is just as much perjury under oath as an outright false statement."

Unable to gain any definite answer from Mr. Leitsteen on where a list of the bankrupt's assets as of May 29th could be obtained from the records introduced, the attorneys swung into questioning on the recent affairs of the All-Continent Corporation, which, according to previous testimony, is owned by Mrs. Eva Fox, wife of the former motion picture executive, and their daughters, Mrs. Mona Tauszic and Mrs. Belle Schwartz. The corporation is listed as a creditor.

Libel Suit Proceeds To Go to Charities

Three charities will receive the proceeds of a judgment received by Gabriel L. Hess, counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, from the Churchman in an action for libel against that publication. Mr. Hess, through his attorney, announced division of the proceeds among the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, the American Red Cross and the Salvation Army.

Rowe Enters Politics

Roy Rowe of the Rowe Amusement Company, Burgaw, N. C., has been nominated for state senator on the Democratic ticket.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variatitle denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are protions also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after duction numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.

CHICAGOLAND HONORS JACK MILLER

More than 300 friends of Jack Miller, retiring as president of the Chicago Exhibitors Association, joined in the testimonial dinner in the Red Lacquer Room of the Palmer House, following his twelve years of active service in exhibitor organization.

FOUR of Hollywood's feminine screen stars gave Chicago's perspiring newspaper photographers a good workout over the weekend. Arriving from Hollywood and passing through on the way East were Katherine DeMille, Ruth Etting and Genevieve Tobin. On the City of Los Angeles came lovely young Kay Griffith, Chicago's own pride and joy, who got her start to stardom singing in a local night club.

Arthur Dickinson of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in town for a discussion of practical application of the 2,000-foot reel.

David Palfreyman was in Chicago following the convention of the Kansas-Missouri theatre owners.

Ben Elrod, country booker for the local Paramount office, has returned with his bride, the former Lucy Clark from their honeymoon in New York.

Emma Abplanalp of the local Film Board of Trade, received a ruby glass cigaret box for her birthday. She doesn't smoke, but it's on her desk for visitors to her office to help themselves.

Schoenstadt Theatre Company on Monday took over the New Regent Theatre, 69th and Halsted Streets, in Chicago from the Van Nomikos organization. No changes in personnel are contemplated.

William F. Crouch and his bride took the vows Monday and left for a two weeks' honeymoon in a quiet retreat in Minnesota.

Ollie Garver, in charge of production for National Screen Service, passed through Chicago on his way back to the Coast from a New York business trip.

Fred Barrow of the local MGM office said that "The Great Ziegfeld" will close in Chicago on Saturday, after a 13 weeks' run at the Erlanger theatre. Barrow will beat the drums in advance of "San Francisco" for several weeks and then will leave for a well-earned vacation.

Oldtime Films Shown As Regular Features

Starting last Tuesday, Flicker Frolics, oldtime pictures of the "came-the-dawn" era, are being shown at Tudor City Open Air theatre in New York. Miss Dorothy Stone, sponsor of the showings, is the head of a film library comprising an extensive collection of pictures from nickeldeon days. The Frolics will continue through the summer and will comprise a four-reel feature, a two-reel comedy, one-reel novelties and newsreels, all of ancient vintage. The program will change weekly.

Sabath To Continue Theatre Lease Study

The Sabath Congressional committee is now engaged in a study of reasons behind the disaffirmance of theatre leases by companies in bankruptcy or reorganization and the methods employed by companies in obtaining reductions under leases which were renewed.

RKO officials were questioned on theatre lease changes during the past week and officials of other companies may be called in the near future. A. H. McCausland, trustee's representative in RKO was one of those called for questioning by the committee's counsel recently.

Court Decision Asked On Securities Plan

A federal court in St. Louis will decide shortly on the problem of disposition of the $110,000 par value preferred stock and $110,000 par value in debentures of Paramount Pictures, Inc., which the voting trustees of the reorganized Missouri Theatre Building Corporation received on a rent claim against Paramount. A petition for a ruling was filed by Boatmen's National Bank, as trustee under the $2,000,000 income mortgage bond issue which the holders of the original bonds received in the reorganization. The bank asked that these assets be turned over to it. The trustees, in answer, requested authorization of an exchange whereby the Paramount securities would be used to retire some of the new bond issues.

Seeks Reorganization

The Coney Island Theatre Corporation filed a petition to reorganize under Section 77-B of the Bankruptcy Law in Federal court at Brooklyn last week. The company operates the Coney Island theatre and leases an office building in connection with the theatre. The company's petition said that its gross receipts had declined from $360,000 in 1930 to $272,000 in 1935 and that rental on the office space had declined proportionately.

Weiss to Aid Benefit

Joseph M. Weiss, motion picture and radio composer and arranger, heads the Motion Picture Division of the Community Councils of New York for the benefit performance of "Aida" to be given on August 1st in the George Washington Stadium, New York. Proceeds of the benefit will be used to provide additional swimming pools and hydrotherapy service for physically handicapped children of the city.

PICTURE OF A PEN RARIN' TO GO!

It belongs to JOHN P. EXHIBITOR and it's headed for M-G-M's DOTTED LINE!

Even without "SAN FRANCISCO" it was a foregone conclusion that M-G-M in 1936-37 was the intelligent buy. "SAN FRANCISCO", in midsummer actually outgrossing "Mutiny On The Bounty," settles the matter definitely for thousands of showmen. There is no secret in the trade about the success of M-G-M productions. M-G-M makes BIG HITS because it shoots the bankroll, takes chances, puts heavy dough on big-winning possibilities. The M-G-M Studio is clicking with a success-stride unprecedented in history! BIG current-season productions are still to follow "San Francisco" this hot summer! Many of the BIG BUDGET HITS of the NEW SEASON are completed. A landslide for M-G-M in 1936-37! We think so. And we feel, with pardonable pride, that it's justified!

TIME TWITTERS ON

THE cock sparrow journalism of Time dressed in the pomp of a drum major and tancying its adolescent strut to be a grand march of omniscient authority, last week gave demonstration of its skill, judgment and intent with respect to both the printed word and the screen.

This revealing occasion was Time's attention to the Encyclical letter of Pius XI on the subject of the motion picture, its moral and social responsibilities as a world art.

Since Time is both a publisher and a producer of pictures, seeking to extend its scope across the theatre's screens, its policies and methods become a matter of interest, perhaps concern, to all showmen.

TIME, it must be understood, is a re-write newsmagazine, gathering its materials, raw materials, from the press, mainly the newspapers, using the technique of the twittering sparrows, hunting the pages of the world press for tasty bits of shockery which have eluded the decencies of editors, even as the birds of the pavement find nourishment in the grains that have escaped the digestive functions of the horse.

This process inevitably makes available, for those who seek, everything printed that is not fit to print. By assembling the week's editorial indiscretions and infractions of civilized taste the world around it is possible to arrange an aromatic bouquet of great appeal to the coprophagous.

SUCH a viewpoint not unnaturally is accompanied by some of that editorial perspective which considers good news as no news. In that school of thought it takes trouble, vehemence, innuendo, grief and pain to make headlines.

Devastating exemplification of the method and taste, in another item, in the same issue may be gathered at a glance. One of America's most eminent, and incidentally wealthy, citizens is ill of neuritis. After regaling its audience with a tedious account of his sick bed movements, Time's rewriter, obviously turning to a medical reference work, finds it necessary to enumerate the many causes of neuritis, and, taking pains the while to include syphilis and gonorrhea. The relevancy is in the mind of the writer.

So it has come that Time, publisher and producer, has been able to find in the Encyclical from Pius XI reproach for the American screen. Time sees the Roman Church officially imposing a censorship extraordinary on the motion picture to the surprise and confusion of the "cinema producers" who were thereby "undeceived" in a prior assumption that "their wares matched the highest standard of Christian morality."

THE fact that Pius XI substantially held up as a world example the present system of operation of the American industry under the attentions of the Production Code Administration, was not found available by the sparrow doing the rewrite job appearing under the title of "Cinema" and "Hollywood Encyclical" in the issue of Time of July 13, page 50.

Time found Hollywood mystified and "undeceived" in spite of the fact that the Pope in addressing the American Bishops said:

> You . . . of the United States will be able to insist with justice that the industry in your country has recognized and accepted its responsibility before society.

It takes a cock-eyed sparrow to see a note of mystery, rebuke and disaster in those words. So, readily enough, the method is not to see them, positively not to see them. Time has officially declined to set that portion of the Encyclical and matters thereunto related, before its readers. Who was it boasted "Curt, Concise, Complete"?

IN simplest terms, Time would hold up to its public a representation that the motion picture industry and Hollywood are in trouble with the Church—this despite the existence of the most complete adjustment of relations that the industry has seen in all its history.

Just incidentally, this "curt, concise, complete" account in Time takes equally accurate measure of the Legion of Decency and its operations, including also the statement that the "prime mover" of the Legion has been Cardinal Daugherty of Philadelphia, whereas the movement took its rise in St. Louis and has all the while been conducted under the express supervision of Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati.

And in passing, a straw to denote Time's motion picture attitude, it remarked: "the humble U. S. trade press was expressing, in its own way, thanks for the compliment of so much attention from the Vatican."

IT is just possible that Time is slightly confused about the quality and nature of humility, too. Time's goose-stepping march, ballyhooing as the news of the world its potpourri of

This Week

New Deal on Screen

Screen activities of agencies under the New Deal came under trade scrutiny this week with announcement that the Works Progress Administration is planning to produce and distribute 30 pictures at a cost of $6,000 each and word that the Resettlement Administration is ready to accept bids for foreign rights to its "The Plough That Broke the Plains."

A detailed news discussion of these and other developments starts on page 13.

Paramount Plans

Indications that Paramount Pictures, Inc., plans to extend simplification of its corporate structure, begun some time ago, were stronger than ever this week with the revelation that the company shortly will dissolve Paramount Productions, Inc., now that Adolph Zukor is in complete charge of production.

These and other Paramount matters such as action toward settlement of the contract of John E. Otterson and payment to Joseph P. Kennedy for services rendered, are to be found in the story on page 29.

51 Stories Bought

There was a sharp decline in the story buying activities of various Hollywood studios during the month of June, with only 51 purchases being made, including 25 originals, 21 books and five plays. Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer led all other studios in purchases, with a total of eight buys each, with Paramount, Columbia, Radio and other following.

Titles of the purchases together with all available filming credits, are to be found in the story on page 31.

Net Profits

The net profit of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation for the 13 weeks ended June 27, 1936, amounted to approximately $1,500,000, Joseph M. Schenck revealed this week prior to his departure from Hollywood for New York. At the same time it was shown that the earnings of Columbia Pictures Corporation and RKO were ahead of corresponding periods past.

For details, see page 27.

Shopping Public

The end of the first year of resumption of American distribution in the Czechoslovakian market finds Hollywood product predominating but the public had learned to shop for its entertainment, and no longer will it accept everything and anything on the screen, writes Harry Knopf, HERALD correspondent at Prague.

Further details on page 70.

Delayed

The reported three-cornered deal under which Loew's, Inc., would acquire a 25 per cent interest in Gaumont British Pictures with the cooperation of Twentieth Century-Fox, owner of 48 per cent of the British stock, was still in the rumor stage early in the week following a delay of conferences between Joseph and Nicholas Schenck and Isidor Ostrer, president of Gaumont. Mr. Ostrer conferred with Joseph Schenck in Hollywood last week and was scheduled to continue the conversations with the two brothers in New York but stopped over in Chicago on his way east.

Present stage of the negotiations and the possible setup are outlined on page 28.

Music Problem

Canadian commercial users of copyrighted music owned by members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers will have to conduct their own individual negotiations with the copyright owners for the use of the music as a result of the impending withdrawal of ASCAP from the Canadian Performing Rights Society, it was pointed out in New York this week. At the same time it was revealed that the Society sent out dividend checks to members totaling $1,050,000, the largest quarterly payment in the history of the organization.

The story is on page 70.

Upheld

The circuit court of appeals at St. Paul, Minn., has upheld the right of Judge Albert L. Reeves of the federal district court at Kansas City to decline to assume jurisdiction of the suit of Jacob Smith and other General Theatres Equipment bondholders against the Chase National Bank, Fox Film Corporation, Fox Midland and Fox Rocky Mountain last spring. At the same time it was revealed in New York that the Stock Exchange will strike from trading on August 7th the General Theatres Equipment, Inc., 6's, 1940, debentures.

For details, turn to the story on page 29.

Profits in Australia

The total number of theatre tickets sold in a year to patrons of the cinemas of General Theatres Corporation and Hoyts Theatre, Ltd., in Australia exceeded twenty-six millions, or more than four times the entire population of Australia. And speaking of statistics, the Hoyts circuit in six years has paid out in taxes, including the entertainments tax, almost as much as it has shown in net profit.

The business picture cinematic in Australia, as reported by Cliff Holt, appears on page 18.

Deadlocked

The deadlock resulting from establishment of a Cuban board of censorship in New York continues with Senor Roberto Hernandez, head of the new organization, scheduled to go to Havana this week to confer with Secretary of the Interior Carlos Pelaez. Major distributing companies are unalterably opposed to the board and are refusing to submit their product to it for review. A shortage of American product in Cuba looms unless the matter is settled shortly.

Senor Hernandez' statements and the distributors' stand on the matter are detailed on page 39.

St. Louis Legion Board

Announcement that a board of review to supplement the work of the National Legion of Decency will be established in St. Louis was made by His Grace John J. Glennon, archbishop of the diocese, following publication of the encyclical on motion pictures by Pope Pius XI. The group will give attention to motion picture theatre advertising, watch that pictures which have been cut by censors elsewhere are not shown in their original version, and make weekly reports on its progress to the national headquarters of the Legion in New York.

The announcement is quoted on page 32.

Social Values

Increasing public interest in the social importance of the motion picture was cited by F. W. Allport, of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, as basis for the prediction of rapidly increasing success for the efforts of the film industry to solve the problem of what effect, if any, pictures produced solely for entertainment have on the characters of theatre patrons, in an address before the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

The address is abstracted on page 33.

March of Time Birthday

The magazine newsreel, March of Time, has issued an anniversary booklet in which the editors candidly relate "confidential" sales and financial data for the company for its first year, an unusual procedure in the film industry. The portfolio, illustrated with extraordinary news pictures from Time Magazine, the related Fortune magazine, and the March of Time film productions, also takes occasion to make some frank criticisms of the regular newsreels.

The booklet is reviewed on page 67.

Producers Divided

Dissent of Associated British Pictures and Gaumont-British from the application for a more stringent quota put forward by the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries is causing considerable commotion in Wardour Street.

What it is all about is discussed on page 69.

Chance Game Suits

Chance game activities this week concerned themselves with suits in three states, and two of the three actions concerned insurance of prizes rather than the games themselves. However, in Ashland, Ky., the commonwealth attorney is seeking to have all the games declared lotteries and illegal.

sadisms, rapes, lynchings, nudists, infantile genitalia, candid caesarian operations, and executions, would not indicate it as an authority on the subject of humility or any of the related qualities.

So it is the humble opinion of this editor that Time, and its policies being what they are, and Time, the while declaring its periodical topical two reel release to be in fact, with Fortune, its "third major publication," it may be well to consider a moment who the publisher of a motion picture really is.

A considerable experience and observation, not too humbling in their effect, confirm the contention that the motion picture pertains, in the consumer mind, considerably more to the theatre which shows it than to the producer who makes it.

The theatre of the screen has not been reduced to the status of a newsboy.

The motion picture exhibitor is the publisher and with the publisher's final responsibility, legally and socially, of that which he spreads upon his screen.

The publisher of the printed page can hunt out, please and serve one reader at a time, and he who is offended may cast the page away. But the publisher of the motion picture, the exhibitor, must please and serve thousands at a time, offend none. Let even a few protest and ask for their money back and there is trouble, alarm—and action.

Just for instance Monday of this week a storm of protests against the treatment of the Dominican Republic in the March of Time was made to the management of the nation's greatest theatre, the Music Hall in New York. Forthwith the subject was cut, by the Music Hall, without argument. The point is the protest went to the Music Hall, the publisher, and the editing by deletion was done there too.

The exhibitor must inevitably be interested, mayhap concerned, with the policies, viewpoints and tastes revealed by the publisher who as a producer seeks the screen, the attention of the exhibitor's public and audience—and who would share with the exhibitor the making of the name and repute of his theatre.

"The editors of Time" in a recent brochure state that the March of Time exists "under rules quite different from those which ordinarily govern journalism. . . ."

It is the customers who make the rules for journalism, and the motion picture, too. That has been demonstrated.

Production Spurt

In keeping with custom, the production colony dawdled through the week ending in celebration of Independence Day, then plunged seriously into the important business of making pictures.

Gus McCarthy's complete report of productions started and finished during the fortnight is published on page 58.

Refusal

Two major developments featured the bankruptcy trial of William Fox in Atlantic City, N. J., this week. The first was the refusal of Mrs. Fox to submit her All-Continent Corporation books for examination by creditor attorneys and the second was the attempt by the same attorneys to ascertain from Herbert Leitsteen, Fox family bookkeeper since 1909, the method of dispersing more than $20,000,000 which Mr. Fox had in 1930.

Details of the hearings are to be found on page 57.

Rebound

Rebounding from the effects of a trade sanction applied to eight major American distributors during the year preceding, business in Mexico last year silenced a spreading belief that stage theatres were on the way toward replacing cinemas as entertainment leaders. These, in common with bull rings, experienced a sharp decline in popularity.

James Lockhart supplies the statistics for all three forms of entertainment on page 34.

Meighan's Death

Death overtook Thomas Meighan last week at his home at Great Neck, L. I., following a lingering illness of over a year. Mr. Meighan contracted pneumonia approximately 12 months ago while in Hollywood. Star of stage and film, Mr. Meighan rose to his greatest triumphs on the silent screen a decade ago.

This Week in Pictures

BRITISH THEATRE ROYALTY. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, star of the English screen as well as the stage on the other side of the Atlantic, arrives on the SS. Queen Mary to play a leading role in "The Green Light" at the Warner studio.

DASHING. Carol Hughes as a senorita at a Hollywood masquerade. She has been cast for Warner's forthcoming "Stage Struck."

RADIANCE AND RADIUM. Irene Dunne returns from Europe where she visited Eve Curie, who has written a book on the life of her mother, subject of Universal's forthcoming "Madam Curie."

DOWN TO THE SEA ON SURF BOARD. Betty Grable, starlet of rapidly widening recognition, will be seen in "Swing Time," a new Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers film musical for RKO.

TO THE VICTOR. Ken Hodkinson, formerly GB's San Francisco manager, now assistant to George Weeks, is honored for winning a company drive. (L. to r.) Arthur A. Lee, C. M. White, A. Greenblatt, C. E. Schwengeler, Ken Hodkinson, G. W. Weeks, R. McGrath, C. Macgowan, Al Selig, Irving Jacobs.

DARING. Jean Rogers of the serials, recently in "Flash Gordon," co-stars with John King in "Ace Drummond" for Universal.

AS THE IMMORTAL LOVERS, Romeo and Juliet, in the balcony scene of MGM's screen production of the Shakespearean play. Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard are starred. Gus McCarthy's review appears in the "Showmen's Reviews" department of this issue on page 48. George Cukor directed.

ANOTHER KIND OF LAUNCHING. (Left) When Sammy Cohen, foreign publicity director of United Artists, made his first visit to Hollywood, Merle Oberon greeted him this way, while Monroe Greenthal, Jock Lawrence, Al Vaughn and Morris Helprin showed their approbation.

HAPPY RETURN. Helen Vinson, who has just completed a picture tentatively entitled "His Majesty's Pyjamas" for Gaumont British, arrives in New York from Shepherd's Bush, outside London, on the Normandie.

CURLS. Anita Louise, as she appears in the role of Maria, in Warner's production of "Anthony Adverse," scheduled to open soon at the Strand theatre on New York's Broadway.

VACATION FLIGHT. Bert Wheeler of Wheeler and Woolsey, and Owen Davis, Jr., one of RKO's Leading men, arrive at Newark Airport. Here their holiday paths diverge, Wheeler to idle in Europe, Davis to appear in his father's Pulitzer Prize play, "Icebound."

TO WALTER WANGER, LEGIONNAIRE. Members of the S. Rakin Drew Post of the American Legion were hosts to Walter Wanger, producer, at the Hotel Astor in New York on Friday, with a number of film folk in attendance. Mr. Wanger, honorary member of the post, home from Italy, contrasted conditions with those when he was a war flier.

NEW DEAL SCREEN ACTIVITY SCRUTINIZED BY INDUSTRY

Note WPA Plan to Make and Distribute 30 Films and Sell Foreign Rights to "Plough That Broke the Plains"

Governmental production of motion pictures portraying activities of agencies set up under the New Deal came under trade scrutiny this week as Washington dispatches revealed new and elaborate plans for dissemination of information through the medium of the screen.

Principal interest attached to announcement of 30 pictures to be produced and distributed by the Works Progress Administration at a cost of $6,000 each.

Simultaneously came the news that the WPA is to accept bids from commercial distributors for the foreign rights to its much discussed documentary film, "The Plough That Broke the Plains", demand for which having developed in other countries as a result of general interest in the prolonged American drought.

Recently quiescent apprehension on the score of possible governmental invasion of the screen, long predicted by New Deal antagonists, flared in home offices of the major film companies and stirred newsreel executives. New Deal policies and views had been regarded as revealed to the organized industry in the printed forms distributed among the newsreels by the Federal Housing Administration under date of March 17, 1936. These included the stipulation that:

"Producer must undertake at his expense but at the election of the Federal Housing Administration to photograph with sound at such points within the United States as might be selected by the Administration at least five events of Better Housing News importance and secure release in national newsreels — other than in Better Housing newsreels — prior to June 30, 1936."

Here, said all but one of the newsreel companies circularized, was invasion tantamount to an attempt to take over the theatre screen, and that one, Pathe News, interpreted "release" and "national" to its own satisfaction. FHA films were made and obtained a limited distribution. No invitations to bid on the forthcoming WPA pictures have been received to date.

Quotable persons in the motion picture industry, in New York and Washington, are currently not to be quoted, what with the industry's endeavor at neutralities on matters that may be political, and what with the notion that maybe November's election will "like as not" find the New Deal still dominant. Meanwhile the New York Sun, certainly no partisan of the Administration, has been having some of its industrious young men looking into what might be called some of the cinema aspects of the current government. A special article by that newspaper's Patrick Lee in its July 8th edition trace activities of the Motion Picture Record Division of the WPA from its acquisition of Sydney H. MacKean as Director in June, 1935, to the present.

Mr. McKean, formerly identified with various standard newsreels, was summoned to Washington and instructed to set up machinery necessary to "keep the American people informed of the status and value of projects upon which funds of the Works Progress Administration are being expended" and to do this "objectively by means of motion pictures." He was given an operating budget of $81,000 and he employed 22 persons, including five camera men, former employees of commercial newsreels.

It was Mr. McKean's assignment to photograph WPA projects and submit the footage thus obtained to the standard newsreels. It was hoped that some fifty items could be put into exhibition each year by this method. The newsreel editors didn't care much for the idea. They consented to receive and screen the footage offered them. About a dozen bits were used in one or more reels during the first year. For the most part, it appeared that the material just didn't fit in with current needs. Mr. MacKean's men shot a little less than 200,000 feet during the period.

"Smacked of Propaganda"

To Mr. MacKean himself, a veteran of commercial newsreel experience, Reporter Lee imputes the admission that the material submitted "smacked too much of propaganda." In February of this year he and his department were transferred to the control of Colonel Laurence Westbrook, whose job it had become to coordinate WPA publicity units, and Col. Westbrook showed Mr. MacKean a picture entitled "Making a Better Indiana" which had been produced by Pathe News on contract and exhibited in the state named. WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins also saw the picture and asked Mr. MacKean whether the WPA staff, as constituted, could produce 20 of like character within sixty days. (National election in November.)

Mr. MacKean replied to Mr. Hopkins that it might be possible to produce 10 such pictures in the specified time. To do more would require more men and money. A few days later he was informed that the number had been raised to 30 and that the work could be let out on contract to commercial companies.

Republicans Protest

The contract provision roused a storm of protest from Republican quarters. Representative Bertrand H. Snell publicly charged the Administration with political purposes and misuse of PWA funds. "Whatever this project costs," he declared, "the amount represents a direct diversion of funds from the WPA appropriation to the campaign chest of the Democratic National Committee. I, for one, vigorously protest this shocking distortion of the relief program to the direct services of the New Deal presidential campaign."

Administrator Hopkins' reply to Representative Snell was to the effect that "The War Department has a record of the world war. They have in pictures Vimy Ridge, the Argonne and all that. Anyone can see them. Why shouldn't we have one? Anyone can see ours who wants to." To Representative Snell's charge that newsreel scenes of local WPA projects would be captioned in such a manner as to include the names of local Democratic congressmen Mr. Hopkins did not reply directly.

Nevertheless, the Motion Picture Record Division of WPA had obtained authority to let contracts to private concerns for the production of agency films. According to Reporter Lee this had come about in somewhat unusual manner.

For some eight months the Motion Picture Record had been in operation at a total expense of approximately $90,000 and Comptroller General McCarl had declined to approve vouchers covering this outlay. To Mr. McCarl's inquiry as to the authority on which the expense had been incurred, Mr. MacKean quoted Administrator Hopkins. Mr. McCarl said he knew of no authority given Mr. Hopkins to expend monies for the production of motion pictures and continued to withhold approval.

Mr. MacKean's subsequent search for

TEST CASE CLEARS WAY FOR SUNDAY SHOWING

Theatres in Charlottesville, Va., can legally exhibit pictures on Sundays as the result of the acquittal of R. A. Eason, manager of the Paramount theatre, by a jury of five in a test case in the corporation court in that city. Mr. Eason who was arrested for opening his theatre on Sunday, had appealed his case from the police court where he had been fined.

Senator John S. Battle, defense attorney, based his plea for a reversal on the ground that conditions have changed since the passage in 1779 of the state statute against "unnecessary" labor on Sunday. He pointed out that golf, baseball and similar activities are permitted. The prosecution called the police chief, school superintendents and ministers who testified that Sunday shows, in their opinion, were not absolute necessities.

NEW DEAL SCREEN ACTIVITY STUDIED

authority covering the point led him to a study of the executive order whereby President Roosevelt had established the Works Progress Administration and he found therein a provision granting Administrator Hopkins authority to "formulate and, with the approval of the President, to require uniform periodic reports of progress on all projects; and, where any avoidable delay occurs, forthwith to recommend to the President appropriate measures for eliminating such delay."

Letter Quoted

On February 3rd, according to Mr. Lee, Mr. MacKean disclosed this paragraph to his superiors. On February 6th, likewise according to Mr. Lee, the following letter was signed by President Roosevelt, addressed to Administrator Hopkins, with photostatic copies sent to Comptroller McCarl's office:

"This will confirm verbal authority given you in July, 1935, relative to Executive Order 7034, paragraph 1, section C-a, to formulate the permanent record of periodic progress on works progress by means of motion picture recordation.

"The above instruction was given to you by virtue of and pursuant to the authority vested in me under the Emergency Relief Act of 1935, approved April 8, 1935 (Public Resolution No. 11, Seventy-fourth Congress)."

On this authority Comptroller McCarl okayed the accumulated vouchers.

Although criticism of New Deal activities in the motion picture field has centered chiefly about the various WPA enterprises, on the ground that WPA funds were obtained from the Congress for the prime purpose of providing productive employment for the unemployed, other agencies have been more or less steadily engaged in the manufacture and release of screen material. Outstanding among these productions, in point of publicity given it and criticism offered, is "Commerce Around the Coffee Cup", produced by Pathe for the Department of Commerce and exhibited at the Capitol theatre, New York, to a mixed reaction.

"Commerce Around the Coffee Cup" is a nine-minute production featuring Lowell Thomas as narrator. By means of charts, graphs and scenic exhibits Mr. Thomas, seated at coffee and so giving the picture its title, explained various intricacies of commerce in a manner showing the operations of the governmental department sponsoring the subject. Patrons attending the theatre were supplied with response cards and invited to indicate whether they enjoyed the picture, whether they learned anything from it, and whether they would care to see more of the same general kind. Partially because of this provision, critics were prompt to label the subject a "trial balloon."

Less comment was aroused by the Department of Agriculture's three-reel silent film, "Norris Dam," detailing construction progress of the TVA project, although the picture, like others from this department, was made available in both 35mm and 16mm prints for distribution to schools and other non-theatrical outlets. Prints in both measures were supplied likewise for the Department of Agriculture's "Stop Forest Fires," another three-reel subject, and "The Life of Plants," in one reel.

A Picture With a History

It is to the Resettlement Administration's "The Plough That Broke the Plains," now suddenly become an at least theoretically salable asset through force of climactic circumstance, that critics of the New Deal point with most alarm as a precedent susceptible of extensive development. The RA itself somewhat proudly describes the pictures as "the first real film produced by the United States Government." It is by way of becoming a picture with a history.

The story was written by Pare Lorentz, motion picture critic, and location shots in the Great Plains were made by Ralph Steiner and Paul Strand, cameramen, with Leo Hurwitz. The musical score was composed by Virgil Thomson and was recorded by musicians from the Metropolitan Opera and New York Philharmonic orchestras with Alexander Smallens, conductor, wielding the baton.

Field Force Aids Bookings

Following production, Mr. Lorentz went to Hollywood in an attempt to interest the major producers in taking over distribution, but without success. Following tentative showings in Washington, and reports of imminent drought, requests for the picture began to come into the Resettlement Administration from independent exhibitors.

Without distribution organization or personnel in the RA with motion picture distribution background, the Tugwell agency utilized its field force to help with showings and bookings, copies being sent to each of its 12 regional offices for "preview" before administration employees. Each of the regional offices has an experienced publicity man in charge of information work, and these agents were instructed to seek bookings wherever possible.

In Texas, two circuits, Interstate and Griffith, took over distribution for their area, which includes more than 100 theatres in key cities in that state and New Mexico.

But not all was rosy in Texas for the Tugwell film. A Texan state representative threatened to "punch Tugwell in the nose" if he permitted the film to be distributed. Although that remark was said to have been made for its re-election campaign publicity value, the threat was picked up and used from coast to coast—good publicity from the RA point of view, as was the Texan's further threat at the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia to introduce a resolution condemning the film.

The Resettlement officials believe their cleverest achievement was the zoning of the United States into four principal areas. The New York-New England sector was placed under the jurisdiction of George C. Gercke, regional information adviser at New Haven, Conn. The mid-states area, including the Mississippi Valley, was placed under Dean S. Jennings, Chicago, who was the central figure in the famous case back in the NRA era when the San Francisco Examiner mixed with the American Newspaper Guild, in which Jennings was active.

Distribution in the West was placed under Paul H. Jordan, another guild member, at Lincoln, Neb., and the Southeastern area was placed under the Washington headquarters. All the work of exploitation and booking was done by the regular staff of the administration.

Publicity on "The Plough" exceeded all expectations and RA press agents capitalized to the fullest extent the Hollywood attitude toward handling distribution. They also made the utmost possible use of reviews in such publications as "The Nation", "Survey Graphic", and magazines like "Time" and "The Literary Digest", but one of the answers to a press agent's prayer came with the June issue of the "National Board of Review Magazine", which played up the picture.

The picture had its Broadway opening at the Rialto and since has played at the Casino de Paris and Cameo.

So unexpectedly favorable was the response that the Resettlement Administration was caught with an insufficient number of prints to supply the demand, and a contract recently was made with DeLuxe for an additional supply. The disastrous drought in the Northwest brought the picture in for a lot of attention and resulted in numerous bookings, the tieup of drought and dust with the Tugwell film making top flight exploitation.

COOLING PLANTS, FILMS KEPT GOING ALL NIGHT

Twenty-four Essaness theatres in Chicago remained open all one night last weekend to accommodate city residents seeking escape from the heat. The refrigerated air plants and the films were kept going all night, as long as patrons came in. An announcement had been made in the press and people thronged to the theatres until the early hours of the morning. Rules of silence were suspended and patrons were permitted to bring lunches and move about freely. The circuit plans to continue the innovation as long as there is heat and public response.

Permit Sunday Matinees

The Board of Selectmen of Westport, Conn., have granted George Comden permission to operate the Fine Arts theatre on Sunday afternoons. Previously performances had been allowed only on Sunday nights.

RKO Schedules Golf

Committees have been named for the annual RKO golf tournament July 21st at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club, Rye, N. Y.

MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC FOR 1936-37 SHOWS TRADE GAINS

New Edition, Published This Week, Is International in Scope; 66 Text Divisions Purvey Vital Trade Facts

Fat with facts, heavy with significance and broad in coverage as the calendar with which it coincides to a split second, the International Motion Picture Almanac for 1936-37 came from the press this week. A year in preparation for a year of service as the prime reference book of the motion picture industry, the volume is international in scope and infinite in detail. In more than 1,350 data-loaded pages it makes available all there is to know about the motion picture to all who wish to know it.

The Almanac contains, among 66 others, the following topical subdivisions:

The Founding of the Screen, by Terry Ramsaye.
Biographies of more than 13,000 film personalities.
Box Office Champions of the Year, with review of each.
Money-making Stars of the Year.
All-time Best Sellers.
Corporate Personnel.
Financial Statements of the Year—summarized.
Product for 1935 and early 1936.
Production Staffs on Both Coasts.
Exchanges and Bookers.
Exhibitor Organizations.
Circuits and Independents.
Stories and Plays Bought for Production.
Company Officers.
The Year in England. A special section devoted to the industry in the United Kingdom.
The Foreign Market, covering all centers of the world. Special articles on Australia, Canada, Argentina, Austria, Brazil, China, Latvia, Bulgaria, France, Germany, Hungary, Japan, Mexico, Spain.
Theatre Equipment Organizations
Supply Dealers.
Pictures for 1935-36.
Screen Organizations.
Digest of Publications.
New York Companies and Addresses.
The License Agreement.
Pertinent Statistics.

Subdivisions range from 6 to 50 pages each and each is broken down into sub-subdivisions pregnant with information pertaining directly to the operation of the industry. Under the general heading of "The Foreign Market," for instance, an American exhibitor may discover with a modicum of perverse satisfaction that in several other countries the tax collector pays his initial attention to the box office, where he takes 40 per cent of the gross, proceeding thence to assessment of the seats, the hours of operation, the length of the various films constituting a program and a number of other neat devices not yet invoked in the United States. Just how exhibitors in certain of those countries manage to buy bread and butter not even the Almanac makes altogether clear.

Under the heading of Pertinent Statistics the Almanac supplies in quick-figure form a mass of vital information well to have at tongue's end when asked questions or invited to address the Kiwanis. Here it is disclosed, for instance, that the weekly Hollywood payroll touches the handsome total of $1,500,000, which is divided among 28,000 persons regularly employed in production, plus 10,000 others, extras and casuals, who work now and then. This tidy little company of payrollers compares with a total of 236,500 employed by the nation's 15,378 operating theatres and with 8,000 engaged in the distribution of product.

Attendance Has Increased

That attendance has increased, as has been no secret within the trade save in the matter of degree, is borne out by the Almanac's statement of the range for the year as from 80,000,000 to 85,000,000 ticket sales weekly. There are 11 seats to a citizen in the country. The United States supplies 65 per cent of the world's films, by volume, and 85 per cent by value.

Whom to call up or write to when something happens, or doesn't, is a monotonously recurrent and irksome question answered for any and all occasions by the various listings of film company executives, officers and personnel. Be he of Hollywood, New York, Shanghai or Amsterdam, the man who can do something about the matter so urgently at hand is named and his address given. Be he company president, exchange manager, director or equipment distributor, he is of record in the Almanac and available for proper purpose.

Player Data Given

In this edition of the Almanac, as in preceding numbers, the section devoted to biographies contains a vast amount of essential and sometimes entertaining information about players whose press agents don't always tell all. It is to be learned from this section of the volume, for instance, that Boris Karloff's real name is the not at all fearsome Charles Edward Pratt and that the Frederich Ernest McIntyre Bickel nobody ever heard of is the Fredric March known to millions. Lyle Talbot was born Lysle Hollywood and Rosita Delmar was Rosita De Los Angeles before both of them changed their names to escape being accused of having changed their names. Marlene Dietrich was Mary Magdalene Von Losch, Ginger Rogers was Virginia Katherine McMath, Ford Sterling was George Stitch, Frank Morgan traded in Wupperman to get that name—the list is interminable.

The average age of feminine players is 29 years and that of the men is 41, with the grand average 34. The geographical center of stellar nativity is Richmond, Va., as to men, and Pottsville, Pa., for women. Women average 5 feet 2½ inches tall and weight 111 pounds. The men are 8 inches taller over all and weigh 169.

Biographies of 13,112 Personalities in the Industry; Special Section Covers British Market Distinct from Foreign

Poignant, hot with fervour of living

And the loom of the great Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, with its array of creative personalities, has brought forth a work of expression embellished with elements of appeal, with mingled charm and thrill, that demonstrate again the motion picture as the dominant art—the best medium of narration, re-creation that has yet evolved.

"The perennial modernity of the love theme, and the curious capacity of the screen to make all that ever was in any yesterday a living event of today and now, has never been more acutely exemplified than in this 'Romeo and Juliet.'

"That relentless hate and feud of Montague against Capulet, and Capulet against Montague, classic of the long ago, is on the screen of 'Romeo and Juliet' a strife of today.

"Yesterday of the centuries ago is, for the hour of the screening, alive, poignant, immediate, hot with the fervour of living and the desperation of dying . . ."
—from Gus McCarthy's Hollywood preview review of Irving Thalberg's "Romeo and Juliet," on page 48.

Committees for Exhibitor Merger

Committees were named in New York Wednesday by Charles L. O'Reilly, head of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, and Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, to work out details for merging the two exhibitor organizations, a formal announcement of which was made at a special meeting which was called at the Hotel Astor on Broadway.

Edward Rugoff is chairman of the T.O.C.C. group, which comprises Irving Lesser, Harry Shiffman, Louis Geller and Charles Steiner. The I.T.O.A. committee is headed by Bernard S. Barr and includes Arthur Rapf, John Benas, Maurice L. Fleischman and Louis Shiffman.

"MOHICANS" AN AMERICAN

JAMES FENIMORE COOPER'S "The Last of the Mohicans," a blend of historical fact and imaginative fiction, has endured as a classic of early America. Entertaining as the novel is in the printed original, it does not lend itself readily to adaptation for screen purposes. As a matter of fact, neither did "The Count of Monte Cristo," which the same organization produced with more than usual success, look any too promising when preliminary work was begun. "The Last of the Mohicans" was produced once before, about fifteen years ago, and it is not recalled that its release worked any great motion picture miracle.

But an inspection of this production reveals many interesting facts. During the many months the story was in preparation, the large group of writers employed by Reliance advised that the job of translating Cooper's narrative to script form would not be simple. They were instructed to make an intensive study of the characters and incidents dealt with and shape them to screen realism in a manner that would accentuate in forceful, convincing fashion all the appeal of danger-menaced love interest, stark melodrama, stirring personal and martial conflict, suspense and action that make up the substance of the original.

The screen currently is glorifying many American characters. The ones heroized in this film, the Indians of New York State, Hurons and Mohicans, French and British colonial soldiers, the men and women who by their courage and sacrifice marked the first frontiers, familiar to all, carry a universal appeal. The story, generally known, needs no detailing. Necessarily condensed, yet embracing all the qualities that have made excellent reading, it is romance drama told against the realism of French-Indian-British warfare. Two white girls are hurled by circumstance into the fury of savage warfare. They are protected by scout Hawkeye and his Indian friends, Chincochook and Uncus, and menaced by the treacherous Magua. One finds death in the wilderness, the other love in the heart of Hawkeye.

The producers have let it be understood that they consider the story a matter of more importance than any cast they could procure to interpret it. Naturally they would have been pleased if they could have had a lot of sure-fire box office stars in it. Yet they went about making their cast selections with the same care that marked the story's preparation. The girls in the story, Alice and Cora, were English. They are being portrayed by two English actresses, Binnie Barnes and Heather Angel, who met with success in British films prior to coming to America. Their father is the English Henry Wilcoxon. Likewise the British colonial, Colonel Munro, is played by an Englishman, Hugh Buckler. The American scout, Hawkeye, is played by a typical American, Randolph Scott. Indians being unavailable, Bruce Cabot, who has demonstrated his ability to handle heavy roles in many past pictures, was selected to be the treacherous, murderous Magua. Robert Barrat is Chincachook and Phillip Reed the heroic Uncas, martyred by Magua's treachery.

There are no smash names in that cast. It is, rather, a group hand picked for fitness in the particular role performed. While all have a certain prestige, it is interesting, in watching them working, to note that all seem to have in mind the fortune that befell Robert Donat, raised to stardom in "The Count of Monte Cristo."

Aimed at being a notable addition to the current crop of outstanding attractions, the competency of the producers, writers, director, George B. Seitz, players and technical crew in accounting for desirable entertaining and commercial screen merchandise is a matter of record. The prestige of James Fenimore Cooper, anniversary of whose death will fall about the time of the picture's release, is also well established. It is upon these that the success or failure of the United Artists production must rest.

TWO AUSTRALIAN CIRCUITS' TICKET SALES IN YEAR 4 TIMES POPULATION

Patrons of General Theatres Corporation and Hoyts Buy 26,152,000 Admissions Despite Increase of Independents

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

Despite an increasing number of radio licenses and independently owned theatres, audited figures show that attendances over the General Theatres Corporation circuit increased in 1935 compared with the corresponding period in the previous year, the combined number of tickets sold being 127,000 greater. Over the Hoyts circuit, attendances improved by 379,812; and the total number of tickets sold by both General Theatres Corporation and Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., reached the total of 26,152,986, or more than four times the total population of Australia.

The statistics in relation to GTC were disclosed in the annual report of Wests, Ltd., which showed that the company made a profit of £3,980 ($19,940), comparing with £3,679 in the preceding year.

Presenting the report to shareholders, the chairman, W. E. Smith, said that perhaps the most important deal consummated in the year was the acquisition, by British Empire Films, Ltd., of the distributing rights for Australasia of the C. M. Woolf franchises.

Many advantages were expected to accrue, he said, from the trip abroad of Stuart F. Doyle, "who was overseas at a very opportune time, for certain very important developments took place shortly after his arrival in London which will have a bearing on the future of our distributing and exhibiting."

Planning New Theatres

Discussing the increased attendances over the GTC and Hoyts circuits, Charles E. Munro, managing director, said that while there was still a long way to go before a return to pre-depression business could be anticipated, the additional opposition which the two circuits faced was far from having a detrimental effect upon the returns of either company; and Hoyts already had completed plans for the erection of several theatres for the purpose of strengthening the circuit still further.

This confident expression from the Hoyts chief will no doubt have its effect on intending investors, who may have been contemplating the operation of theatres in competition to Hoyts. With the unassailable advantage of being able to select from every service except Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Hoyts is no easy victim for independent competitors these days, as many an independent has found out to his cost.

Taxes Parallel Profit

Further interesting figures concerning Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., and tabled in the House of Representatives, show that in the six years ended June 30, 1935, the company returned a net profit of £173,313, yet in that period paid in direct taxation, consisting of federal land, federal income and state land and state income taxes, an amount of £149,196. In addition to this it collected in behalf of the Commonwealth and state governments the sum of £450,000 in entertainment tax, making a total of £599,197. Over the same period the preference shareholders contributed nearly £1,000,000 of capital and received only £96,407 in dividends. The ordinary shareholders received nothing.

The figures were presented in the House as the basis of an argument for a reduction of taxation on leaseholders of theatres, the speaker pointing out that the money spent by leaseholders on improving their properties was not an allowable deduction for taxation purposes by way of depreciation.

Fox Handling Gaumont

The completion of negotiations by which the physical distribution of Gaumont-British will be handled by Fox in Australia for a further term of years puts to an end rumors that have intrigued the industry here for some weeks. Apart from outlining the bare facts, Stanley S. Crick, managing director of Fox in Australia, has no comment to make on the transaction, which, however, washes up the story that Associated Distributors would get the franchise. Associated is the company formed by Stuart F. Doyle to handle the C. M. Woolf product; and it was freely tipped here that if Mr. Doyle succeeded in obtaining the Gaumont-British product, he also would have every chance of landing the Universal output for Australasia, by reason of Mr. Woolf's negotiations with that company.

The release of Gaumont-British in the Commonwealth and New Zealand will be distinct from the release of the Twentieth Century-Fox product in that it will go through the newly formed Dominion Film Distributors, of which it is reported that Stanley Crick will be chairman of directors, Ernest Turnbull managing director, and Alan Williamson, local representative of G-B, a director. Besides handling Gaumont-British and Gainsborough, the company will release Twickenham, British Lion, and probably Fox's British output. Although previously mentioned in the negotiations, Hoyts is not likely to be directly connected with the organization, but because of the Fox influence it will no doubt provide a very valuable releasing channel.

Ernest Turnbull, who has figured so prominently in the deal, and who made a rush trip to London on what proved a successful mission, formerly had charge of the distribution on this market of the British and Dominions Films product.

Extensive Advertisers

Australian city theatres always have been noted for their extensive newspaper advertisements, and taken at large, 65 per cent of a theatre's advertising expenditure goes into this medium. In the past, various attempts have been made to place a limitation on the spaces used; but whereas, around the conference table, competing interests have agreed upon such limitations, it has never been very long before someone or other has broken the pact.

Newspaper rates here in the leading dailies range from 10/- a single column inch to 22/6, and while full pages of 176 inches are not uncommon, half-pages and full three-column advertisements are the routine thing. These large spaces frequently have given rise to charges of extravagance by shareholders and others, but many showmen still maintain that they are necessary and payable investments.

Indeed, when compared with the spaces taken by the leading retail stores, they appear to be decidedly conservative. As an example of this, on a recent Friday evening (the night on which the theatres advertise most heavily) Melbourne's leading metropolitan daily carried two and a half pages of picture and legitimate theatre advertising, representing both Melbourne's city and suburban theatre interests. Yet on the following night, in the same newspaper, Melbourne's biggest retail store took no less than 10 full pages, an investment of £1,144 without the cost of cuts and art work, to advertise its winter sale.

A decision to limit spaces to a maximum of 16 inches over three columns has now been undertaken by General Theatres Corporation, which controls the majority of the leading theatres (and biggest advertisers) in the five Australian capitals. Some of GTC's competitors have agreed to fall in line with the company's policy, but on this occasion GTC is proceeding with the plan irrespective of what the opposition does.

Outlining the arrangement, Charles E. Munro, managing director of both GTC and Hoyts, says that the idea is to spread the expenditure over the season of the picture, rather than throw the bulk of it into preliminary activity, as is now the practice. His comment here is significant, and indicates a gradual or eventual reduction of advertising expenditures if business does not decline as a result of these economies, for he continues: "That, of course, will lead us to a more sane use of the space we buy,

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

$1,500,000 20th CENTURY-FOX NET ESTIMATED FOR QUARTERLY RECORD

Columbia's Net for Quarter Exceeding Total for 1935; RKO's Six Months Better Than All of Last Year

The net profit of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation for the 13 weeks ended June 27, 1936, amounted to approximately $1,500,000 after all charges, but not including any dividends from affiliated companies, according to Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, in the Wall Street Journal this week. This was the most profitable quarter since the present corporation was formed last year and more than 20 per cent better than the first quarter of 1936.

At the same time it was revealed that Columbia Pictures' net earnings for the final quarter of the fiscal year ending in June are running well ahead of the preceding three months and are above 1935. It is predicted that they will run to about $1 a share, which would compare with $177,306, or 45 cents a share in the March quarter and approximately $242,000 in the June quarter of a year ago.

RKO's consolidated net profit for the first six months of 1936 will approximate the company's earnings for the entire year of 1935, when a profit of $695,000 was shown, it was estimated this week.

Twentieth Century-Fox's net profit of $1,500,000 for the second quarter will be equal after preferred dividend requirements for the period to about 80 cents a share on the 1,226,529 shares of common. This compares with $1,239,760 or 60 cents a common share in the previous quarter.

On this estimated basis, net profits for the first 26 weeks of this year will approximate $2,740,000, equal after preferred dividends to $1.40 a common share. This is substantially above results for the 39 weeks ended Sept. 28, 1935 (the first consolidated report after the merger), when the net amounted to $1,996,325, equal after preferred dividends to 38 cents a common share.

$48,000,000 Seen 1936 Gross

Calculated on the improved business to date and indications for the remainder of year, Mr. Schenck estimates that the company will show a gross income from sales and rentals of films and literature of approximately $48,000,000 for 1936. Last year the gross amounted to $42,447,609. The gross for the last week of June was $860,000, well ahead of the like week of 1935.

Mr. Schenck has continued in Hollywood conversations begun last spring in England with Isidore Ostrer, president of Gaumont British Picture Corp., looking toward either sale of Twentieth Century-Fox's 42 per cent interest in Gaumont to the Ostrer interests or the purchase by the American company of the Ostrer 58 per cent interest. Mr. Schenck left Hollywood over the weekend and Mr. Ostrer is leaving this week for New York, where they will join Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox and continue negotiations.

Negotiations started late last year whereby Twentieth Century-Fox would acquire Chase National Bank's 58 per cent interest in National Theatres Corp. are being held in abeyance until settlement of litigation involving Fox West Coast Theatres, a subsidiary of National Theatres. Twentieth Century-Fox now owns the other 42 per cent interest and acquisition of the Chase holding would give the company complete ownership of a profitable theatre chain.

There is a possibility that the litigation will be settled by September and negotiations resumed.

Mr. Schenck said the company has no need of doing any financing at the present time.

RKO Cash Position

In line with the net profit for the first six months of 1936, RKO's cash position as of June 30 is believed to be the best in the company's history. Consolidated cash in May amounted to $6,600,000 and June operations are known to have ended well above those for the same month last year. RKO's June theatre business was unusually good for the month and distribution receipts, in addition, are believed to be ahead of those for June, 1935.

Even with the possibility of certain reserves being set up out of earnings for the first half of this year the six months' net, it is believed, will exceed $600,000. RKO's net profit for the first half of 1935 was $245,000.

The improving financial position of the company is regarded as increasing the likelihood of a plan of reorganization for the company being concluded by next winter, as predicted by Leo Spitz, RKO president, at the company's recent annual sales convention here.

Ambassador Bingham Presents Quigley Award to Armstrong

Robert W. Bingham, United States Ambassador to England, presented to John Armstrong last week at the American Embassy in Grosvenor Gardens, London, the 1935 Quigley Silver Grand Award. Armstrong, now publicity director for Radio Pictures, Ltd., was voted his Award for his campaign on "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" at the Carlton theatre, while serving as advertising director of the Paramount London Theatres.

Others at the ceremony, held on July 10th, were Ralph Hanbury, managing director; G. W. Dawson, secretary; J. J. Kennedy, director, and Jack Griggs, press manager, all of Radio Pictures; M. Neville Kearney, secretary of the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries; T. H. Fliegelstone, president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association; Arthur Taylor, secretary of the London branch, CEA; D. C. Dobie, sales manager of First National, representing D. E. Griffiths, president of the Kinematograph Renters Society; Red Kann, editor of Motion Picture Daily; Bruce Allan and Hope Williams of the London offices of Quigley Publications; and representatives of all trade papers.

Luncheon was held after the presentation at the Park Lane hotel, additional guests being Frank Hill, secretary of the KRS; Simon Rowson, Percy Phillipson, Eddie Klein and Mrs. Armstrong. Westinghouse Sues RCA on Television

Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company has filed suit in the United States district court at Wilmington, Del., against Radio Corporation of America, seeking exclusive rights to television inventions perfected by Vladimir K. Zworykin.

The plaintiff asks the court to direct United States Commissioner of Patents to issue patents on television systems for which Westinghouse has made application. The bill alleges the commissioner had not issued patents to Mr. Zworykin because several inventors had filed applications on the same principles after Mr. Zworykin had applied.

Westinghouse further claims it holds full rights to Mr. Zworykin's inventions and asks that he be declared the original inventor. The court is asked to assign the entire rights to the inventions to Westinghouse and to direct the commissioner to issue the patents.

GAINS CITED IN FIGHT AGAINST CENSORSHIP

Civil Liberties Union Finds Improvement in Fields of Pictures, Stage and Radio

More gains than losses in the fight against legislative and political censorship in the fields of motion pictures, radio and theatres are claimed by the American Civil Liberties Union in a survey of its year's work from July 1935 to June 1936. The censorship activities of the Union are handled by its affiliate, the National Council on Freedom from Censorship.

The most significant victories cited by the report are in the theatre field. They include the decision of the court of appeals in New York State holding that the License Commissioner of New York City cannot revoke a license on his own personal findings of obscenity but must wait for a conviction in the courts; amendment to the Massachusetts theatre law under which no play in Boston will be banned on moral grounds until it has had a hearing before a board of three persons, and effective contesting of censorship threats against "Tobacco Road" in a number of cities. This play was banned outright, the report said, only in Chicago and St. Paul.

The anti-censorship program of the Union includes, as one of its three main points, opposition to any federal censorship of motion pictures and abolition of censorship boards in all states, leaving sole control of motion pictures to public opinion and, in extreme cases, criminal prosecution. Other objectives are greater freedom of the air for radio programs by the setting aside of time for public discussion free of station managers' control and by the requiring of equal facilities for all sides of controversial topics; and a change in post office regulations by requiring trial by jury for excluded matter.

Motion picture censorship cases which arose in several states during the year were reviewed by the survey. In New York the Hungarian film "Marie" was banned by the censors and the distributors' appeal to the state Board of Regents was unsuccessful. In Ohio, a ban on the "Amateur Fire Brigade," a film attacking the New Deal and put out by the Sentinels of the Republic, was modified and the film released when the Ohio League for Constitutional Rights intervened at the suggestion of the American Civil Liberties Union. The suit over the "Youth of Maxim" brought by the Cinema Guild of Detroit when it was banned in that city as "indecent and immoral," is still pending before the state supreme court.

Listed under the heading of censorship by the Union was the refusal of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to produce Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here" and the fact that "several other films were allegedly emasculated or refused production on the ground that they would be offensive either to foreign countries or to powerful home interests."

A state motion picture censorship board bill was enacted in Louisiana as one of the last acts under the late Senator Huey Long, bringing the total number of states having such laws to seven. A censorship bill introduced in New Jersey was defeated and federal censorship proposals were killed in Congress, the Union reported.

In the theatre for 1935-36, the Union noted the censorship in the WPA's "Living Newspaper" of references to the heads of foreign governments which led to the resignation of the New York director, Elmer Rice. "No censorship of domestic issues has been exercised over WPA theatres," the Union declared. Court cases relating to the unsuccessful suit in Boston over "The Children's Hour" in which the Union participated and the fight over "Tobacco Road" in Chicago were reported.

The survey also reported that there were comparatively few instances of "known radio censorship" in the year. The National Broadcasting Company was praised for presenting its "Town Hall of the Air," a program "singularly free from control and thoroughly representative of all political viewpoints."

Officers of the National Council on Freedom from Censorship are Hatcher Hughes, playwright, chairman; Barrett H. Clark, playwright and publisher, Fannie Hurst, author, and Elmer Rice, playwright, vice-chairmen; Harry Elmer Barnes, journalist, treasurer; and Clifton Read, secretary.

G-B-Loew Deal Sessions Delayed

Final conferences on the reported purchase by Loew's-MGM of a 25 per cent interest in Gaumont British Pictures, scheduled for early this week in New York, were delayed when Isidor Ostrer, president of the British company, who has been in Hollywood conferring with Joseph M. Schenck on the deal, stopped over in Chicago on his way east.

Latest reports on the negotiations, which originally had Twentieth Century-Fox augmenting its 48 per cent interest in the company by purchase of part or all of the Ostrer brothers' 51 per cent stock majority, indicated that the deal will be three-cornered, with Loew's acquiring 25 per cent of the Ostrer brothers interest and the Fox company cooperating in the stock transfer. Mr. Schenck has confirmed the fact that a transfer of control in the British company is being discussed but has refused to give details. He conferred with his brother Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., at the latter's home in Great Neck, L. I., over the weekend, while awaiting the arrival of Mr. Ostrer.

When Mr. Ostrer and Mr. Schenck first were reported conferring in Hollywood it was said that Twentieth Century-Fox was prepared to buy out the Ostrer interests for $10,000,000. On this basis it is now inferred that Loew's would have to pay about $5,000,000 for a 25 per cent stake.

While it is rumored that the two American companies plan to pool their resources to operate the English unit, it is understood that when the deal is completed Mr. Ostrer will remain the head of the company, as under British law it is necessary that the controlling interest be held by Englishmen.

Acquisition of Gaumont by the two American comanies would make the combine one of the most powerful in the motion picture world. In addition to the production of pictures they would control 450 theatres throughout the United Kingdom, a vast newsreel organization, and interests in vaudeville, legitimate production, radio broadcasting, the manufacture and distribution of motion picture equipment, professional and amateur, and other endeavors.

The combine also would be the first American unit to engage in television broadcasting, a plan announced some months ago by Gaumont.

Results of negotiations between Mr. Schenck and Mr. Ostrer, if any, have not been presented to the board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox as yet, nor has Nicholas Schenck presented the plan for Loew participation to the board of that company.

Sustains Decision in GTE Court Action

The circuit court of appeals at St. Paul, Minn., this week upheld the right of Judge Albert L. Reeves of the federal district court at Kansas City to decline to assume jurisdiction of the suit of Jacob Smith and other General Theatres Equipment bondholders against the Chase National Bank, Fox Film Corporation, Fox Rocky Mountain, Fox Midland and others.

Shortly before the court approved the sale to National Theatres Corporation of the bankrupt theatre properties of Fox Midland and Fox Rocky Mountain last spring, Mr. Smith, Lee Hamlin and William Snower filed in Judge Reeve's court a suit dependent on the bankruptcy proceedings. They asked that the adjudications of bankruptcy be vacated, charged fraud, and sought a lien on the properties of the bankrupts in favor of themselves as General Theatre Equipment bondholders. Later Ray D. Jones, Anna Kupper and Katherine K. Mosher joined them in the action. Judge Reeves declined to assume jurisdiction in his bankruptcy court, and the bondholders appealed.

However, the appeals court did not pass on the merits of the bondholders' petition. It simply stated that the fraud alleged to have been perpetuated by Chase National on the appellants did not and could not deprive the court of its jurisdiction of these estates or of its right to terminate the bankruptcy proceedings in the regular way if it saw fit.

The opinion left the way open for the bondholders to proceed against Chase National, et al., in some other court when it said the federal district court did not authorize the sale of the assets of the bankrupts free of liens, but authorized only the sale of the interest of the bankrupts in the assets, "which the purchaser takes, subject to any rights, equities, or liens the appellants may have."

C. A. Randolph, one of the attorneys for the bondholders, said that they have not determined their next step.

Meanwhile, it was revealed in Manhattan that General Theatres Equipment, Inc.'s, convertible 6's, 1940, bonds will be stricken from trading on the New York Stock Exchange on August 7. The exchange called the attention to holders of the undeposited debentures to the fact that the company is in equity receivership and therefore only debentures deposited with the reorganization committee will share in the securities allotted under the reorganization plan approved by the Delaware court recently.

PARAMOUNT PLANNING FURTHER SIMPLIFYING

Consolidations of Producing Subsidiary Into Parent Company Reported Contemplated

Paramount Productions, Inc., the producing subsidiary of Paramount Pictures, Inc., will be dissolved and its operations and assets consolidated with the parent company under plans for further simplification of Paramount's corporate structure, it was learned in New York this week.

Adolph Zukor, having been placed in charge of Paramount production, will administer executive authority in that field of the company's operations while continuing as chairman of the board of directors of the parent company. The earlier plan had been to elect Mr. Zukor president of Paramount Productions, Inc.

A possibility exists that other subsidiaries of the company, such as Famous Theatres Corporation and Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation, may also be dissolved and their operations consolidated under the parent company.

In addition to simplification of the Paramount corporate setup, the objective would be to effect appreciable tax economies for the company. The move would be in line with the new Federal tax law which provides for tax-free consolidations of corporate structures.

Warner Brothers availed itself of the new tax law late last week when stockholders of First National Pictures voted to dissolve that Warner subsidiary to gain the benefits of the new tax-free consolidation provisions.

Might Be Added to Board

In the event that other subsidiaries of Paramount are dissolved and their functions consolidated with those of the parent company, it is believed likely that the heads of the subsidiaries, who are already vice-presidents of the parent company, would be elected to that company's board of directors as vacancies appear. Neil F. Agnew, vice-president of Paramount Pictures in charge of distribution, is already a member of the parent company's board. Y. Frank Freeman is vice-president in charge of theatre operations, but is not a member of the parent company's board.

Paramount began simplification of its corporate setup last fall when five subsidiary companies were dissolved and their functions absorbed by the parent company or other subsidiaries. The largest of the subsidiaries dissolved at that time was Paramount International Corporation, which embraced the company's foreign operations. John Hicks, Jr., head of International, was elected a vice-president of the parent company shortly thereafter.

On Tuesday, following a meeting of the company's board of directors, it was announced that the contract between the corporation and Mr. Otterson had been cancelled by the board.

Meanwhile, a committee of three Paramount directors had been appointed to discuss a settlement of John E. Otterson's contract with the company. The move was seen as lessening the likelihood of a legal contest between the company and its former president.

The committee consists of Stanton Griffis, Harry O. King and Harvey D. Gibson. A first meeting is reported to have been held already with Louis Frohlich, of Schwartz and Frohlich, Mr. Otterson's attorneys. Nothing decisive in connection with a settlement or the abandonment of efforts to settle has developed as yet, it was stated authoritatively. Mr. Otterson on Wednesday vacated his office in the Paramount Building, which he had continued to occupy, obviously to fulfill his contract, awaiting the move by Paramount.

Kennedy Action Delayed

Joseph P. Kennedy has requested the board of directors to distribute copies of his reports to all security holders of the company "in order to correct an impression" that recommendations contained in the reports "may be the basis of Paramount policies." Paramount officials stated there were no secrets attached to the report and that it can be seen by stockholders at the company offices. Within Paramount, however, it was indicated that the amount of Mr. Kennedy's compensation was $50,000, plus $5,000 for expenses. Other payments for the survey were $10,000 to James A. Fayne, $2,000 to J. R. Sheehan, $3,500 to P. Scollard, $1,500 to J. E. Ford, $1,500 to Lucius P. Ordway, $2,000 to Isidor J. Kresel and $3,500 to Arthur Poole.

Russell Holman has been appointed head of all production activities of the company in the east, under Mr. Zukor, including the Paramount News and short subjects departments.

The Sabath Congressional Committee is continuing its observation of Paramount developments and does not expect to complete its current work in connection with the company for another week or 10 days, Murray W. Garsson, director of investigation for the committee, revealed this week.

Court Schedules Hearing On Goelet Theatre

A hearing was scheduled in the New York supreme court on Friday in a suit instituted by Robert W. Goelet to compel License Commissioner Paul Moss of New York City to permit the erection of a theatre building at 53rd Street near Park Avenue.

COURT REFUSES TO BAR USE OF ZIEGFELD NAME

Justice Patterson of the supreme court at White Plains, N. Y., Tuesday refused to grant the application for an injunction on the part of the estate of the late Florenz Ziegfeld to prevent Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer from exhibiting the picture, "The Great Ziegfeld". The estate claimed that the "good will" of the name "Ziegfeld" belonged to the estate and therefore should be paid for if used by others for profit.

The court pointed out that the estate has sold the name "Ziegfeld Follies" to Billie Burke, and that any good will attached to the name went with it. It further pointed out that MGM had spent some $2,600,000 on the film and the granting of the requested injunction would jeopardize this investment.

RCA Consents to NLRB Ballot

Approximately 80 per cent of the factory's employees needed for a "revised production program" have returned to work at the RCA Manufacturing Corporation's plant at Camden, N. J., where motion picture sound recording and reproducing equipment, radio tubes and sets are manufactured, according to E. T. Hamilton, vice-president. This statement came during the third week of the United Electrical and Radio Workers' Union strike.

The company, on Wednesday, agreed to the demands of workers for an election sponsored by the National Labor Relations board to determine the collective bargaining agency of a majority of the employes of the Camden plant provided the strikers renounce their demands for higher pay.

Eight persons were arrested for fresh disorders outside the factory where fighting took place over a five-block front as some employees, leaving work, were bombarded with eggs and paint. Police riot squads had some difficulty restoring order; an order prevented them from using their nightsticks.

Picketing, however, has continued in front of the factory and has even been extended to New York, where strikers and sympathizers were parading this week before the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center.

Delay Akron Buying To Set Dual Policy

Members of the Akron Independent Theatre Owners Association have agreed to delay booking of next season's films for 30 days pending a decision on the double feature policy.

Corporation Taxes Raised

The Senate Finance Committee of the Pennsylvania state legislature has voted an increase of the state 6 per cent levy on the net income of corporations to 8 per cent and an increase in the state one mil tax on personal property to four mils.

W. Virginia Unit Plans Convention

The second annual convention of the Exhibitors and Managers Association of West Virginia has been set for August 12-13 at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs. J. C. Shanklin of Charleston is chairman of the convention arrangements committee.

At the same time it was revealed that plans for expansion of the Independent Theatre Owners, Inc., were advanced at a meeting Tuesday in Philadelphia, when a substantial fund is reported to have been pledged for the work. Conferences have been held between the local unit and R. F. Woodhull, former head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and, according to Charles Segall, president of the Independent Theatre Owners, the negotiations are still under way.

In New York, this week, directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of America held a discussion of the product of all major companies but no action was taken. The regular membership meeting was to be held this Wednesday at the Hotel Astor when the topic was again scheduled to be discussed.

Damage Suits Filed As Result of Strike

As an echo of the motion picture operators' strike in Cincinnati in 1932 which lasted 11 months, damage suits totalling $54,000 have been filed in common pleas court in that city by former officials and members of the old Cincinnati Operators Local 165 against William C. Elliott, then president of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, 18 members and their counsel.

Motion Picture Academy Organizes New Section

A fifth section of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, Technicians branch, has been authorized, to be made up of technicians affiliated with the motion picture supply, service, and development companies in the industry. FILMS STOP MURDERS, SOCIOLOGIST CLAIMS

America would have fewer murders if more people attended the motion picture theatre. That observation was made in New York this week by Dr. Harold D. Meyer, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina and regional representative of the Community Organization for Leisure.

Dr. Meyer said he based his statement on the results of visits he made to 41 capital offense prisoners in the "death rows" of three Southern penitentiaries.

"I asked each of the prisoners the question: 'Are you a movie fan?'

"Only two of the prisoners said they could qualify as fans, while the other 39 said they seldom if ever went to a movie."

Former Film Star Drowning Victim

James Murray, motion picture actor who rose to success from a job as an extra and disappeared from Hollywood after a brief career, was drowned Friday night off a North River pier in New York City. Identification was made this week by his mother, Mrs. Christopher J. Murray.

The actor, once a theatre doorman in New York, achieved success after he was picked for stardom by King Vidor in "The Crowd" in 1928. He then played in "Rose Marie" and "The Big City" but in 1930 he disappeared from the studios. Little was heard of him until this year when he attempted a comeback on the vaudeville stage. Last March he played at Loew's State in New York during a "Spring Festival."

Walter Hampden Signs For Film Appearance

Walter Hampden, veteran stage star who has steadfastly refused proposals to appear on the screen, has signed a flexible contract with Maxson F. Judell under which Mr. Judell will either produce features starring Mr. Hampden or contract him to other producers. His first production may be "Cyrano de Bergerac" in which the actor has achieved repeated successes over a period of years.

Twelve Features Included In Hoffberg Schedule

Twelve feature pictures of the exploitation variety, plus 24 short subjects and six foreign language films are included in the 1936-37 schedule for release by J. H. Hoffberg.

Named to Film Council

Ethel W. Tileston, vice-president of the New Haven Council of Theatre Patrons, has been invited to serve as a member of the Board of Directors of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Council of New York.

51 STORIES BOUGHT; STUDIOS ROUND OUT PROGRAMS

Only Five Plays Purchased in Month, Half the Total of Each of Two Previous Months

Story buying activity of the Hollywood producers shows a sharp letdown during the past few weeks, particularly during the month of June. Only 51 purchases were made to round out the production schedules of this year and to lay the groundwork for pictures promised early next year. The months of April and May saw some 327 manuscripts acquired by the various studios, the largest period of buying in some time, so it may be assumed that the drop in purchases was caused by complete, or nearly complete, programs already in prospect for the 1936-37 season.

The stage of Broadway appears to be growing less and less important to Hollywood as a source of story supply, Hollywood having taken only five plays in June, as compared to the 10 in May and 12 in April, and none of the five is a current Manhattan success.

The June purchases numbered 25 originals, 21 books, one cartoon strip and one radio script, as compared with 86 originals and 74 books the previous month. Ten plays also were purchased in May, as compared to the five of last month.

Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer participated more heavily in acquiring new properties for screen vehicles than any of the other companies, each making eight purchases. Paramount, following the heavy pace it set the last two months, is right up with the leaders with a total of seven new acquisitions. Columbia and Radio follow and then come Warner, United Artists, First National, Universal, Selznick-International, Imperial Distributing Corporation and I. E. Chadwick.

Titles of the 51 original stories, magazine yarns, books and plays bought by Hollywood producers for their committments of this season or for release during 1936-37, together with all available filming credits, are as follows:

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, novel by Mark Twain, purchased by David O. Selznick of Selznick-International. William H. Wright has been appointed production assistant.

ALL SCARLET, original by Damon Runyon, purchased by Radio. Heather Angel will be featured with direction by William Sistrom. Cortland Fitzimmons is writing the screen play.

Orpheum Theatre Company Files Bankruptcy Plea

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed in the federal court of New York by the Orpheum Theatre Company, which at one time operated the St. Louis, Orpheum and Missouri theatres in St. Louis. It was explained that the houses have long since been taken over by landlords and mortgage holders.

RKO guaranteed some of the debts of the company, and they are listed among the claims against RKO, which is now being reorganized under Section 77-B. A referee in bankruptcy will be appointed, and a trustee elected. Six months will be allowed for the filing of claims. The Orpheum company in its petition stated its assets consisted of cash in the Irving Trust Company, accounts receivable from the Grand Opera House Company, the Vandervanter National Bank of St. Louis and Mary Hart Casey. Other assets include real estate and theatre equipment, none of which is in the petitioneers' possession.

$300,000 ROCKEFELLER AID TO THEATRE, RADIO

More than $300,000 was appropriated for the advancement of the theatre, radio and motion pictures during the year 1935 by the Rockefeller Foundation, according to the annual report released this week.

The largest single item was the appropriation of $120,000 for the motion picture department of the Museum of Modern Art.

St. Louis to Have Legion of Decency Board of Review

Establishment in St. Louis of a local motion picture review board for the Legion of Decency has been announced by His Grace, John J. Glennon, Archbishop of St. Louis, following publication of the encyclical letter of Pope Pius XI in which continance and amplification of the Legion's campaign was urged.

The new board is to be incorporated in the diocesan organization and, according to the announcement, will "promote the activities of the Legion and do everything within its power to promote and insist upon decency and morality in motion pictures." The group, which will include laymen, will not attempt to censor pictures first hand, but is to supplement the work of the National Legion of Decency, which issues nationwide lists of classified pictures from its New York City headquarters each week.

One important function of the board is expected to be vigilance against any effort to show scenes or other parts that have been deleted by censors elsewhere. The Archbishop also indicated that the board will give attention to motion picture theatre advertising text and illustrations. Weekly reports are to be made to the national headquarters.

The Legion of Decency activity in St. Louis started on June 3, 1934, when Archbishop Glennon addressed a letter to the pastors of all churches under his jurisdiction. Pledge cards were distributed to a reported 300,000 men, women and children who promised to remain away from motion pictures that "offend decency and Christian morality."

200 Pages of Data in Argentine Year Book

The 1936 edition of the Annuario Cinematografico Argentino has been issued in Buenos Aires by Argos. The book contains nearly 200 pages of data covering distributing companies, films released in the country, native production activity and other trade information.

Fox Theatres Claims Pared By 18 Millions

Claims against Fox Theatres Corporation aggregating approximately $18,750,000 have been disallowed by special master Courtland Palmer following hearings held during the six months ended June 30, according to a receiver's report for the period filed with Federal Judge Martin T. Manton in New York by Milton C. Weisman, receiver for the theatre company.

The special master held hearings on claims totaling $24,285,000 during the half-year period. The largest of the approximately $5,500,000 of claims allowed against the theatre company were those of the Union Guardian Trust Company, $2,532,819, and St. Louis Union Trust Company, $764,845. A new claim for $1,074,028 was filed for rent on the Fox Theatre and Office Building, St. Louis, making a total of $9,711,206 in claims still pending against Fox Theatres Corporation. The company estimates its own claim against William Fox at $17,000,000.

The receiver's report indicates that Fox Theatres neither gained nor lost anything as a result of a recent report made by Referee Sol Stroock after hearings lasting more than a year on the liability involved in defaults on Roxy Theatre stock which had been guaranteed up to $1,000,000 by William Fox. Commenting on the Stroock report, the Fox Theatres' receiver says "the referee found that Fox Theatres was entitled to judgment against William Fox in the sum of $1,000,000, interest and costs, and that William Fox was entitled to a judgment over against Fox Theatres for such sums as he should pay to it pursuant to its judgment. Accordingly, the judgment against Fox Theatres was provisional only and not collectible until William Fox should have paid the company, and then collectible only to the extent of such payments as he might make."

The receiver reports consolidated cash on hand of $767,248 as of June 30, a decrease of about $13,000 in the cash position of the receivership estate since Jan. 1. Receipts during the six-month period amounted to $107,998 and disbursements, $164,792.

Judge Manton approved an extension of the receivership for another six months.

Fight Atlantic City Lease for "Ecstasy"

Atlantic City amusement men are rallying to arms as a result of the leasing of the ballroom of the Municipal Convention Hall to Eureka Pictures for an eight-week summer run of the Czechoslovakian film, "Ecstasy," and exhibitors are considering a protest to Mayor Charles D. White.

The ballroom, seating 5,000, is equipped for film projection, but never has been used. The protesting group declares the lease violates a gentlemen's agreement with the city authorities. They claim there are too many theatres in the city already, but the city is anxious to realize as much income as possible from the $15,000,000 hall.

Production Code Cited as Factor in Films' Social Place

Intelligent interest in the social importance of the motion picture is more in evidence today than ever before and a critical appraisal of the social influence of the film industry, however difficult it may be to formulate, will be a welcome development from the standpoint of the industry itself, F. W. Allport of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said this week in an address before the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

A broader understanding and consequently greater success for the effort that the industry is making to anticipate and meet the obligations imposed by its position in the social order is foreshadowed by this increasing interest, Mr. Allport continued. Pointing out that he was referring to entertainment films, the major part of motion picture output, as opposed to purely educational films, the speaker emphasized that the primary object of such pictures is to divert and amuse rather than to instruct.

The formation of the MPPDA under the presidency of Will H. Hays was reviewed by Mr. Allport in citing the efforts of the industry to meet this social problem. Before explaining the aims of the association he emphasized that its fundamental principle is self-regulation. "It holds that the futility of statutory ethics has been abundantly demonstrated and that self-discipline is the only effective form of social control," he said.

"It was determined at the outset that within the framework of self-regulation a conscious effort would be made at all times to improve the standards of motion picture production, for ethical reasons and as a means of avoiding possible adverse influences on human behavior, which were as difficult to isolate and identify then as now," he continued.

After reviewing the drafting of the Production Code "to insure the uniform reflection of the improvement in motion picture production" and to set forth "specific standards of content and treatment," Mr. Allport declared: "The gradual evolution of a workable Production Code and of a highly effective administrative procedure is reflected today in an uninterrupted flow of entertainment pictures of a higher quality, socially, morally and artistically than at any time in the history of the motion picture industry."

The speaker touched on the varying opinions among scientists of the social effect of motion pictures and related the difficulties attendant upon the obtaining of any satisfactory data on the problem.

"Great headway has already been made toward higher standards of film production and appreciation," the speaker said. "The outlines of the problem are well known and experience has indicated successful and unsuccessful methods of dealing with it. With the help of men and women of broad social vision the industry is moving steadily forward toward better forms of motion picture entertainment."

Dr. A. H. Giannini Assumes United Artists Leadership

TO the presidency and board chairmanship of United Artists corporation seasoned, stocky, staccato Attilio Henry Giannini, M.D., brought on July 10th, when he presided at his first directors' meeting, sixty-two years of experience ripened by close, constant application to banking, motion picture and human values. Born March 2, 1874, at Alviso, Cal, the man elected by Samuel Goldwyn, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Mary Pickford and Murray Silverstone (proxy for Alexander Korda) to direct the affairs of their jointly owned distributing organization was graduated from the University of San Francisco in 1894 and completed his professional education at the University of California two years later.

In 1908 Dr. Giannini became vice-president of the Bank of Italy, founded four years previously by his brother, Amadeo Peter Giannini, a like number of years his senior, and he continued in that post until 1919. In that year he came to New York to assume the presidency and board chairmanship of the East River National Bank, the National Commercial Trust Company and the Bank of America. In 1931 he returned west as chairman of the executive committee of Bank of America, National Association.

He is a director of Selznick International, of Fox West Coast, and a voting trustee of Universal corporation and Columbia Pictures.

CINEMA ATTENDANCE UP IN MEXICO CITY

Stage Theatres, Bull Fights, Trail Screen in Popularity, Official Statistics Reveal

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

The contention of Mexico City exhibitors that it is much easier for a Chinese laundryman to get his name in the Blue Book than for the theatre, bull fighting or any other paid public amusement to topple the popularity of the cinema is proven by the report of the National Statistics Department showing that 1935 was the biggest year in the Mexican capital's film industry. Last year, the cinema was far ahead of any competitor in public favor.

Mexico City cinemas sold 21,861,831 tickets to 29,111 shows given by the 58 houses that functioned all during last year and looked to a rather small percentage of a population of some 1,300,000 for patronage. That was a very good showing in view of the fact that the strike of employees against the eight major American distributors in this field crippled business during the last quarter of 1935. In 1934, 55 cinemas sold 21,138,358 tickets to 22,930 performances; the previous year there was a paid attendance of 18,123,748 at 20,061 shows given by 52 cinemas. Mexico City has 63 cinemas in the running at this writing.

Hopes of those die hards who think that the stage theatre is bound to shove the cinema off the public popularity map in these parts received scant nourishment last year. Only eight stage theatres were functioning in the city in 1935. They gave 3,712 shows (attendances are not reported by the Department, presumably because they were pathetically small). Stage houses in 1935 gave 310 more shows than the 11 that functioned in 1934, but 313 less than the ten that operated in 1933.

Bull fighting, supposed to be this land's greatest amusement, only attracted 555,644 cash customers to 120 fights, somewhat of an improvement over the 393,215 paid admittances to 97 performances in 1934, due in a considerable extent to the upset movie situation last fall, but far behind the business the cinemas did.

Strike Closes Three Theatres

Three large neighborhood houses in Mexico City have been closed by striking employees who are demanding higher wages under the new collective work contracts which afford them numerous concessions and which operators say they cannot grant owing to slow business. Film circles are discounting reports that the strike has spread to other theatres.

The Mexican government likes being a movie producer. Having gotten its program for making tourist-attracting pictures depicting Mexico's scenic beauties, folklore, regional singing, music and dancing and ruins under way, the administration is giving attention to the production of films, many with English version, showing public works that have been accomplished by the Revolutionary governments which have functioned during the past quarter of a century.

The first of the latter series, designed to inform the world of the works of the Revolution, is "Irrigation in Mexico." It cinematographically reports water fertilization works accomplished and in progress. The English version of this picture was exhibited at the convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in Dallas, Tex., and is to be shown at the international meet of lands and irrigation experts Harvard University is to hold in Cambridge, Mass., late this month.

The government has assigned a pilot and a cameraman to make a movie of small irrigation works that are progressing in Michoacan and Jalisco states. These work pictures are being exhibited at people's centers and country fairs throughout Mexico.

Stageshow Revival Urged

Theatres have been encouraged to revive stage shows as a result of the reduction in the gross receipts tax from 13 to eight per cent by the Government. The objective of the cut is to afford jobs for vaudeville and revue players who were thrown out of work when the film houses dropped orchestras and stage shows. Under the terms of the reduction order, theatres not using stage shows will continue to pay the 13 per cent tax, and those dropping them later must resume payment of the higher rate.

The first local exclusive downtown theatre, the Cine Rex, seating 1,500, has been opened. It is operated by a Mexican syndicate. Modernly equipped in every respect, and comparing favorably with the better theatres in the United States, it is attracting many American residents and tourists, directing its atention to a class patronage.

Alaskan Theatres Profit by Distance

Certain factors in Alaska make for greater theatre attendance there than in corresponding centers of population in the states, according to a survey made by the Ross Federal Service, Inc., in connection with the establishment of a theatre checking field force in the territory. The factors include the lack of competition from other sources of entertainment, the relatively poor radio reception and the fact that the element of distance is not prohibitive since the residents are accustomed to driving long distances for supplies.

The survey covers 12 theatres in Douglas, Haines, Petersburg, Sitka, Juneau, Ketchikan, Skagway and Wrangell. Exhibitors are the Gross Circuit, Alaska Empire Theatre Company, B. F. Shearer and James A. Tropea. One of two houses in Haines is maintained by the Chilkoot Barracks of the United States Army.

The two largest theatres, with capacities of 800 and 680, according to the survey, are in Juneau and both are operated by Mr. Shearer, who also owns two houses in Ketchikan and buys product for the single theatre in Wrangell, owned by the Empire company. The Gross circuit operates houses in Douglas, Haines, Petersburg and Sitka, and the theatre in Skagway is owned by Mr. Tropea.

The survey also reports that "Bank Night" is held weekly by the Capitol in Juneau and a "Silver Night" is held twice weekly by the Coliseum in Wrangell.

Jack Warner Confirms Bette Davis Suspension

Suspension of Bette Davis by the Warner studio for refusing to report for work in the picture "God's Country and the Woman," to which she had been assigned, was confirmed this week in a statement by Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production.

"The dispute," said Mr. Warner, "involves the principle of whether or not Bette Davis or any other player can snap their fingers at their moral and legal obligations to the studio to which they are bound by contract.

"Warner Brothers have lived up to the terms of their contract with Bette Davis and we intend to make her live up to her obligation to the studio. It is high time that something was done to make people under contract to the studio realize that a contract is not a mere scrap of paper, to be thrown aside because they happen to make a good picture or two."

Ohio Censors See 390 Reels

Of a total of 390 reels of films reviewed in June, the Ohio censors ordered eliminations in 15. This is the smallest number of reels submitted in a single month this year. For the first six months of 1936 the censors reviewed a total of 3,148 reels and ordered 165 eliminations.

REVENUE INCREASES FOR CENSOR BOARD

An increase of 11 per cent in the receipts of the State Division of Motion Picture Censorship in Virginia for the fiscal year ended June 30 has been announced by Mrs. Elizabeth Churchill Chalkley, director of the division. Receipts totaled $33,051.50. More than 5,000,000 feet of film were examined during the 12 months. Only four or five films were rejected and fewer deletions were made than in previous years.

Cooling Plants Keep New York Theatres Near Normal Gross

Air conditioning plants in leading motion picture theatres of New York proved their box office value last week during the record heat wave which seared the city, according to a survey made by the Motion Picture Daily. While thermometers climbed above the 100-degree mark, the cooling waves of chilled air radiating from the lobbies of the theatres to the sidewalks attracted many pedestrians and were instrumental in holding grosses at or close to normal, according to the check-up.

Over the week-end, business dropped slightly owing to cooler weather and the pull of beaches and resorts but receipts held up well on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the three days which marked the peak of the hot spell.

Other cities in the country were seriously affected by the heat, only outstanding pictures returning respectable figures. A notable exception in most of the cities in the path of the heat wave was "San Francisco."

In New York, Loew executives decided to hold the picture at the Capitol for the fourth week after it recorded $48,000 in its second period. The theatre reported record business Sunday afternoon and Sunday evening and theatre heads attributed part of the success to the cooling plant. Many people, according to the ushers, remained to see the picture for a second and third time and others remained for long periods in the lounges.

Most other large houses in the city reported normal or better than normal business in spite of the heat.

National Decency Legion Reviews 9 New Pictures

Nine new pictures were reviewed and classified in the list for the current week of the National Legion of Decency, with seven classed as unobjectionable for general patronage and two noted as objectionable in part. The new films and their classification follow:

Class A-1, "Unobjectionable for General Patronage": "Border Patrolman," "The Bride Walks Out," "Meet Nero Wolfe," "M'Liss," "Private Secretary," "Three Cheers for Love," "Trailin' West." Class B, "Objectionable in part: "La Porteuse du Pain," "Spendthrift."

DROPPING OF CUBAN CENSOR PLAN SEEN

Abandoning of New York Board Indicated After U. S. Embassy Protest, But Hernandez Differs

While action was awaited on a formal protest filed by the United States Embassy in Havana with the Cuban Government, large distributors this week continued to withhold pictures from the Cuban board of censorship set up in New York City under Roberto Hernandez.

The formal protest, said to be unusual in such matters, declared that establishment of an office in New York for the censoring of American product destined for Cuba would be in violation of the Cuban-American reciprocal trade treaty and would result in discrimination against American films. It was further pointed out that no such censorship has been established by Cuba in any other country.

Reports from Cuba after the protest was filed indicated that the Government of the island will abandon the plan. Senor Hernandez, who announced last week that he would leave for Cuba "within the next day or two," but was still in New York on Tuesday, said that he has received no official word from Carlos Pelaez, Cuban Secretary of the Interior, concerning the possibility of abandoning the plan. He declared last week that he was told by telephone to settle all disputes on his own authority.

The head of the new but as yet inactive board insisted when the announcement was first made that the move was purely "a convenience to American distributors. Executives of distributing companies, however, have observed that if their convenience is the sole issue, they prefer having their films reviewed by the Havana censor board, as has been done in the past.

Sees Dangerous Precedent

Major Frederick L. Herron of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America declared that the American companies are unalterably opposed to the establishment of the board in New York not only because of the $10 per reel fee to be charged for the privilege of having their pictures censored, but because it would initiate a dangerous precedent for other countries. Major Herron also denied that he has refused to confer with Senor Hernandez. The Cuban official had complained last week that the MPPDA executive "refused to see me or discuss the matter at all," and had declared, "I am willing to 'play ball' with him if he will be reasonable, and if he could convince me that Havana is the proper place for the censor board I could stop the whole thing in 24 hours."

Surplus for Propaganda Films

Surplus funds collected by the board in New York, which distributors have estimated would be about $50,000 annually, would be used for production of propaganda films for Cuban consumption, Senor Hernandez later said. He added that he personally would be in charge of the making of the pictures. He denied that establishment of the board was a political "plum," as had been suggested by distributors, and said that the reviewing fee of $10 a reel is not arbitrary, but would be subject to adjustment if the distributors or their representatives could convince him that it is unreasonable.

Asked how much more costly the new arrangement might be for American distributors than the old plan, Senor Hernandez replied that he did not know how much American companies formerly paid members of the Havana censor board. He said he was certain that payments were made to members of the old board, although not required under the law.

Aims to "Clean Out" Old Board

Announcing his scheduled trip to Hanava, Senor Hernandez said that one of the first things he would do on his arrival would be to "clean out" the old Havana censor board. He plans to appoint five women to replace the five men of the board, he said. The Havana board, under the new arrangement, reviews only foreign product.

Senorita Maria Garrido and I. M. Benoliel have been appointed to the New York board and Senor Hernandez said he will ask that Pablo Suarez and Joze Bosch be appointed while he is in Havana.

Meanwhile major distributors are not sending pictures to Cuba because the Government there has refused to license them for exhibition unless they have been approved by the New York board. The supply of American films in Cuba accepted there before establishment of the New York board on July 1st is said to be running low.

Ban on "Pastures" Lifted in Ontario

In deference to the views of Canadian clergymen who had protested the ban on the showing of the Warner picture version of Marc Connelly's fable, "The Green Pastures," in the Province of Ontario, Prime Minister Mitchell Hepburn this week lifted the proscription against its public showing. In removing the ban the Premier said:

"I have not altered my opinion one iota. I still think the picture is a burlesque of the Scriptures, but in the face of opinions expressed by prominent clergymen I am not going to be arbitrary in the matter and pit my judgment against theirs. I am prepared to let the public judge whether my views or theirs were right."

Louisiana Measures Killed

The majority of legislation threatening theatres and films in Louisiana is automatically dead as the legislature adjourned this week. Among other bills left unapproved are the chain theatre tax, definition of Bank Night as a lottery, anti-standing room and seat sale measures. The censorship bill is expected to remain inoperative.

NEW CONTRACT PLAN ADOPTED FOR SPAIN

Three Leading Exhibitors Commend MGM Plan to Protect First-Run Release Dates

by HARRY CHAPIN PLUMMER
in Barcelona

Anticipating the revision of distributor contracts that must result from the agreement to be concluded between the Cámara Cinematográfica Española and the Asociación de Empresarios de Espectáculos Públicos de Catalunya, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Iberica has incorporated a "release date clause" in its 1936-37 contracts. Corollary to the new clause is a second which stipulates that any reduction in admission price automatically will nullify the privileges and advantages accorded by the first clause which has a special applicability to cinemas in communities having no newspapers and the residents of which are readers of the major metropolitan dailies, such as "La Vanguardia," "La Humanitat" or "El Diluvio," of this city, or "El Heraldo de Madrid," "El Sol" or "A.B.C.," of the national capital.

The new contract has a particular value for both distributor and exhibitor, in that five prints each of a picture featured in Barcelona or Madrid may be simultaneously released — one for the "primer estreno" (first showing) and the other four for towns outside the metropolitan area of each major city but within the circulation reach of the large daily newspapers of both, which have carried the heavily expensive advertising and publicity incidental to the first showing within the city.

Two leading exhibitors of Barcelona and one operating two first-class cinemas in important agricultural and industrial centers near this city imparted to MOTION PICTURE HERALD their opinions as to the outstanding phases of the latest departure in contracts.

"While this clause tends to put the booking in the hands of the distributors," said Don Bartolomé Lafarga Carbonell, proprietor of the big Kursaal Cine, in the heart of Barcelona's fashionable Gracia section, "I believe in other respects it will prove to be helpful to us, for it is my understanding that the Metro people have undertaken to include the clause in all their contracts in this city and region. Naturally I could not accept the same clause from all distributors, as it would bring about many simultaneous bookings on the same date, but as I consider Metro to be the basic product in our operation here, I have accepted it."

Finds Provision a Protection

E. Marcé, who heads the Cines Goya and Iris Park, both centrally located in Barcelona, declared: "I am fully in accord with the Metro effort to standardize bookings and to maintain admission price levels. Indeed, I regard the new contract as a definite protection against houses subsequent to mine in picture runs.

"I find it neither inconvenient nor inconsistent with my business policies to have my theatres at Badalona and Mataró included in the Metro automatic booking plan," said Joaquín Nicolau, proprietor of the Cine Zorilla, of Badalona, and the Cinema Moderno, of Mataró, "for I realize that the revenue from a picture is in direct relation to its release. This is due to the fact that in the provincial areas outside of Barcelona the press of the metropolis is the only means of sustaining the interest of patrons in a given picture. Therefore, the contract which enables me to show a picture right after its primer estreno in the capital (of Catalunya) affords me a distinct advantage. Naturally, I hope, and I have the fullest confidence, that Metro will not abuse the controlling element this clause allows them. Only by the allotment of the best dates will the clause work to my advantage and continue to do so through seasons to come."

Text of Binding Clause

The binding clause covering release dates, as translated from the original Spanish, reads as follows:

"Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Iberica will specify the date of each picture covered by this contract, the exhibitor binding himself to accept such specification. If, for any reason, the cinema fails to project the picture upon the date specified, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Iberica will be at liberty to allot the picture on the specified or the following dates to those houses to which protection or rotation of subsequent exhibition has been accorded; but it is mutually understood that this does not relieve the exhibitor of cinema . . . of the liability of payment for such retarded picture showing on the date specified by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Iberica.

"Considering that the nearer a date of release is to the release of a picture in Barcelona the greater will be the box-office results, and, on the other hand, in order to avoid the difficulties arising from the availability of prints, the contracting parties mutually agree that the booking of the pictures specified in this contract be made at a rate of—pictures per—counting from the date of —.

"Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Iberica reserves to itself the absolute right to specify the titles and the dates, with the necessary preliminary advice covering release dates in Barcelona, the said provincial cinemas being obliged to accept such titles and dates without whatsoever reservation or limitation."

The new contract form is unique in motion picture annals in Spain and is regarded as establishing new standards of protection for the individual cinema nearest to the first showing of a feature.

Committee Named

Enrique Sáenz, president of the Asociación de Empresarios de Espactáculos Públicos de Catalunya, announced that organization's committee to work out with the Cámara Cinematográfica Española the terms of the new pact between the two bodies. The member exhibitors and their theatres are: D. Manual Masmitjá, Cine Angora de Calella; D. Fernando Pascual, Metropol de Barcelona; D. Modesto Castañé, Astoria, Avenida, Salon Victoria de Barcelona, and D. José Montolí, Casino Alianza, Provensals of Barcelona.

Señor Sáenz is chairman.

Censors Move to Barcelona

Mutua, the organization of distributors in Spain has succeeded in obtaining a Government decree restoring the film censorship center to Barcelona. As a result of the move, distributors in the country are expected to realize substantial savings.

The Government arbitration board, acting in the mercantile strike, has denied the demand of theatre operators that they be relieved of all other work, but has granted them a 10 per cent wage increase. Film interests will appeal the grant, it is understood, when the increase is officially decreed. The appeal is expected to postpone a settlement by six months.

The National Cinematographic Week Committee has awarded first prize to Cifesa, for its production, "Morena Clara."

Columbia has contracted for distribution of the product of Actualities of France, which is maintaining a sound truck in Barcelona and will film at least 25 per cent of its newsreel material in Spain.

MGM bookings for the new season in Spain and Portugal are so nearly complete that the company has abandoned its scheduled sales convention.

Sound in Portugal

Statistics just compiled at Lisbon of motion picture theatres and their projection and sound equipment throughout the Republic of Portugal indicate that of a total of 42 first, second and third-run houses in Lisbon, the capital, and in Oporto, the second center in population, ten have American apparatus. Of 135 theatres elsewhere in the country, seventeen have equipment of United States patent or importation from that country.

Sound equipments installed and classified by trademarks in all Portuguese cinemas are as follows:

Western Electric	5
R.C.A.	22
Klang-Film	26
Zeiss-Ikon	3
Zeiss-Marconi	5
Phillips	25
Bauer	34

Universal	1
Gaumont	3
Ferm-Ton	1
Pratofone	2
Audak	8
De Bry	2
Royal Zenit	1
Selecton	4
Survox	1
Supra Ton-film	1

Out of the 26 Klang-Film equipments installed, only one is of the Europa type, en Figueira da Foz, the other ones being of the smaller type. The RCA equipments are all of the original type, none being of the last High Fidelity type. The three Zeiss Ikon equipments, however, are the latest models.

The Pratofone, Selectone and Audak equipments are of national manufacturing and are built with piece parts of different makes.

34 from "U," 38 Columbias

Of a total of 34 features to be released in Spain by Universal the coming season, six will be westerns. Among the features will be "Show Boat," "Sutter's Gold" and "The Invisible Power." At least 12 of the 34 will be dubbed in Spanish.

Columbia will release 38 features the coming season, of which 10 will be westerns. One of the features will be an original Spanish film, "La Familia Dressel," made in Mexico. Seventeen of the features will be dubbed in Spanish. There will be 50 shorts.

Spanish language dubbing of Columbia product is done at La Voz de Espana studios in Barcelona.

Aylesworth "On the Air" For Radio-Screen Understanding

Executive of NBC and RKO Proposes a Working Arrangement to Aid Both Industries

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

A working arrangement between radio and the motion picture to enhance the business of both was proposed this week by Merlin Hall Aylesworth. After studying both mediums for some four years in the dual capacity of executive of National Broadcasting Company and of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, Mr. Aylesworth has concluded that radio is the motion picture's "best friend," and that the motion picture interests at once should recognize radio's potentialities for exploiting their films over the air to America's 125,000,000 inhabitants. That realization is dawning, he observed.

Mr. Aylesworth envisioned the following benefits for both industries by such an understanding:

Radio would gain a more friendly entry to the motion picture's great source of talent and would gain the aid and advice of the motion picture's greater technical experience, which would be invaluable in rounding that corner to commercial television.

The motion picture would be given a medium for publicizing its motion pictures far greater than any existing exploitation channel.

Mr. Aylesworth called on Will H. Hays and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and on representatives of the organized exhibition industry, to sit in friendly round table discussion with the broadcasters to effect a tangible plan for bringing together America's two leading entertainment instruments.

Cooperation on Television Urged

Serving the Radio Corporation of America for ten years as an executive and policy-moulder of National Broadcasting, and for four years, first as president and now as board chairman, of Radio-Keith-Orpheum motion picture companies, in which RCA has has an important interest, Mr. Aylesworth has been preaching all the while the advisability of a communion of spirit of these arts. He declared frankly and with a vigor foreign to his usual placidness that he now was willing to stake his reputation on both the practicability and the advisability of creating a working arrangement between the two.

Mr. Aylesworth urged, too, that the motion picture cooperate now with television broadcasters and experimenters, lending talent and technical resources, so that when commercial television arrives, the motion picture's relation to the new medium will enable it so to guide and shape television's policies and destinies that eventually television will work for the screen, and not on its own and in competition to it.

He fancied a great television art covering the whole country with trailers advertising forthcoming motion pictures, if the motion picture has the "in."

> "Television cannot be stopped, no more than we can stop progress. The motion picture stands today in regard to television in much the same position as the ice manufacturers who fought automatic refrigeration and the railroads who opposed interstate bus invasion. Both would now be in enviable positions if they had had the foresight to aid and encourage and cooperate with the new developments in their fields."—M. H. AYLESWORTH.

"Television cannot be stopped," Mr. Aylesworth said, "no more than we can stop progress. The motion picture stands today in regard to television in much the same position as the ice manufacturers who fought automatic refrigeration and the railroads who opposed interstate bus invasion. Both would now be in enviable positions if they had had the foresight to aid and encourage and cooperate with the new developments in their fields.

"Television, however, is not for sale. The motion picture can neither buy television nor control it corporately. But they can cooperate."

Says Radio Helps Films

"The radio today is definitely not competition to the motion picture," Mr. Aylesworth declared flatly, "but rather is helping to build box office grosses even now."

Radio's invasion of the Hollywood talent field is, in Mr. Aylesworth's opinion, a natural development.

Films, he charged, have taken radio's important talent, so radio has been forced to move to Hollywood to be adjacent to the supply. "That is why the National Broadcasting Company recently constructed the modern broadcasting building at Hollywood," said Mr. Aylesworth. "The motion picture because of this has a moral obligation to cooperate," he added. Then, too, advertising sponsors are insisting on picking up the great names of the screen for their commercial broadcasts, for the entertainment values which they offer.

For the most part, the appearance of film stars on the air aids their own personal merchandising possibilities, and almost always is a direct "plug" for the box office through the mention by those stars of their current screen appearances or forthcoming film work. Mr. Aylesworth conceded that a few of Hollywood's players are hurt by the air, in the cases of those who lack "personality." "Hollywood's stars should remember that they must have 'personality' for radio work," he said, "and that radio cannot carry them unless they do." This has worried the Hollywood producers and on numerous occasions has caused the studios to effect general bans on broadcasting by their players.

However, the producers now are beginning to realize the importance of the radio connection and are about ready to admit that they cannot control the air appearances, it was pointed out. Aside from any values that the radio performances may have, for either star or for the box office, Mr. Aylesworth said that the stars themselves are eager for the new opportunity. "It appeals to their reputation, if not to their pocket books. They are jealous of each other's radio calls."

One important handicap blamed by Mr. Aylesworth on radio broadcasting by film celebrities is the amount of time taken from regular motion picture work by the preparations made by the stars for their radio appearances. He told of one of the biggest stars in Hollywood refusing to go near her studio for a week because she was rehearsing her part and writing the script for her radio debut.

"Radio today is paying film stars huge sums for their broadcasting appearances. This," Mr. Aylesworth believed, "will be a boon to the studios who heretofore have been confronted with the all too numerous financial demands of stars and featured players who feel that their income is insufficient and who have become dissatisfied generally as a result."

Denies "De-Glamoring" of Stars

Mr. Aylesworth refuted the charges, made principally by exhibitors, that commercial radio broadcasts "de-glamour" Hollywood's glamorous stars. The argument has been made that the motion picture spends millions to build up a personality and radio uses that romantic or glamorous personality to sell tin cans, toilet goods, gasoline, ice, groceries, hair tonics and whatnot.

The NBC-RKO executive explained, first, that public appearances do not necessarily hurt the star, citing the ambition of "every exhibitor in the country" to have stars make personal appearances at their theatres, if they could but afford to book them. "The objections, then, cannot be against the personal appearance."

"Secondly, none of the glamour of the star is lost, because not only is the star not tied in directly with the commercialities of the program, but, and more important, the public already has a definite impression of that star, and they visualize the star on the broadcast in accordance with their impression. That impression is so strong and the visualization so keen that there can be no influence such as that complained of from the mention of the sponsor's product."

On the other hand, Mr. Aylesworth continued, the national advertisers today are spending millions of dollars in direct aid to theatre box offices, not philanthropically, of course, but because they know the values of the stars. "But these advertisers do not complain of the constant reference of the stars to their studio work, to their current productions, to their forthcoming screen appearances, and, too, they are willing to permit the widespread use of music from pictures on their programs, with full credit being given the production."

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Aylesworth added, "the thought has been expressed that maybe the national advertisers should charge the motion pictures for some of the free advertising their pictures and people are now receiving on the sponsored programs at the expense of the advertisers.

"What greater attention can motion picture stars get than a radio build-up for their forthcoming productions?" asked Mr. Aylesworth. Answering the query himself, he said that several feature pictures of his own RKO company have been given stronger box office power by steady radio "plugging." The distributing executives of RKO, like most other executives in motion pictures, have not always agreed with Mr. Aylesworth. They, too, had felt that broadcasts injured box office ratings. But now, he explained, they have tangible proof, from certain pictures, of the benefits that can accrue from a radio-film understanding. "Radio today is RKO's greatest exploitation asset," Mr. Aylesworth declared, adding: "And if I'm wrong I might lose my job." He declared that "the radio can make people want to go to motion pictures."

Defends Free Broadcasts

Mr. Aylesworth deprecated the oft-made complaint that the admittance of the public to free radio broadcasts is unfair competition to the motion picture theatre box office. "The records show that theatre business is on the up, so, obviously, these so-called studio radio broadcasts with invited audiences have not injured the box office." To the contrary, he continued, "We of NBC-RKO recently spent a whole month observing persons coming from NBC's broadcasting studios to determine where they go from there, and in 50 per cent of the cases they walked directly to a motion picture theatre."

"The reasons," he explained, "are that most of the important radio broadcasts are over by 9:00, or 9:30 P. M., and the public attending the broadcasts find themselves downtown and with an entertainment appetite that has not been satisfied by a half-hour broadcast that cost them nothing. We bring them out of their homes."

Mr. Aylesworth arose from his deeply carved desk in RKO's offices at Rockefeller Center, walked meditatively to his window overlooking the International Gardens in full bloom, then abruptly declared that "the motion picture is grossly mistaken when it says that the radio keeps people in their homes, thereby cutting off potential theatre patronage."

"Remember," he advised, "people do not and can not go to the movies seven nights a week. They usually average two attendances weekly. So, the radio on the other five nights constantly hammers home exploitation and publicity aspects of the motion picture, its pictures and personalities, always reminding the public of the motion picture.

> "The motion picture is grossly mistaken when it says that the radio keeps people in their homes, thereby cutting off potential theatre patronage. . . . Except in the summertime, Saturday and Sunday evenings are still the best days for box office grosses. Yet there are more good radio programs broadcast on those evenings than any other night." — M. H. Aylesworth.

"Except in the summertime, Saturday and Sunday evenings are still the best days for box office grosses. Yet there are more good radio programs broadcast on these evenings than any other night. How can you explain that? The argument that radio keeps people away from theatres is pure bunk, and everyone will admit it in another year.

"Radio now gives the music, a synopsis, the cast and other exploitation expressions for and in behalf of a motion picture, and yet some of the boys in the film business are sitting around trying to figure out how they can stop it."

Theatre Slogans for Radio

Mr. Aylesworth returned to his idea of effecting a working understanding between the radio and the screen. He envisioned such a relationship eventually working to the point where a slogan such as "Attend the movies twice a week," will be commonly broadcast, in the manner of Amos 'n' Andy's "See your dentist twice a year," "Brush your teeth twice a day." He said that the Amos 'n' Andy slogans have done more for the toothpaste business and dental professions than any other medium in history.

"'Attend the movies twice a week,'" he continued, "should be the air slogan personifying the radio-film cooperative idea."

"The automobile is the motion picture's greatest competitor, not radio, except that in another year 5,000,000 cars on the road will have radios, and right there the competition of the car will be lessened considerably as the car radios start making the occupants 'movie conscious.'"

Calls Television Five Years Away

"Television still is in the laboratory," Mr. Aylesworth explained. "It will be another five years before it goes into the homes of America on a commercial basis. In advancing my idea for radio-film cooperation, I suggest that the motion picture business now turn their attention to television cooperatively. They could let the experimenters use old films, out of circulation, to televise. Motion pictures will be the first form of entertainment to be televised on any large scale.

"Television will never be a competitor to the regular theatre screen. They will not televise feature pictures produced expressly for the purpose of a single television broadcast because of the enormous sums required for production. Imagine any advertiser spending $500,000 to broadcast a production of 'Little Women'?

"The only way to get one industry to work with another is for both to work together."

In practically all other countries, Mr. Aylesworth continued, there is a definite cleavage between radio and the screen. There is almost no cooperation, each working independently of the other and in direct competition. It is impossible in Europe, for instance, for exhibitors and the film business to get the cooperation from their radio systems that is already being extended films by radio in this country.

"Let there be an understanding between us!"

Ecuador Theatres Reported Thriving

His friends warned him that "movies aren't a gentleman's business," when he entered the field in Ecuador 12 years ago, Jaime Puig Arosemena, representative of Universal, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Warner Brothers in that country, recalled in New York this week.

In contrast with the state of the industry then, Senor Arosemena reported that the theatre business in South America today is in a very healthy condition, being the least affected of any business by economic or political upheavals. The Ecuadorean distributor, who also handles Universal product in Colombia, Venezuela, Curacao, Porto Rico, Santo Domingo and Cuba, is in New York for conferences with N. L. Manheim and other Universal officials on new season contracts.

Admissions in Ecuador range from $1.50 to $2.00, he said. About 90 per cent of the distributor's business done in that country is on percentage with first runs commanding 50 per cent and second runs 40 per cent. Ecuador has 29 theatres.

Utility Sale Seen In Odlum's Trip

Prospects for the sale of the British properties of the Utilities Power and Light Corporation, $405,000,000 utility-holding company, are linked, according to a report in the financial columns of the New York Times, to the imminent departure for England of Floyd B. Odlum, president of the Atlas Corporation. Mr. Odlum recently resigned as a director of Paramount Pictures, Inc.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 32.—(A) Name two types of "ground" and cite examples of each. (B) What action in the cell causes a storage battery to lose voltage in course of discharging?

Answers to Question No. 27

Bluebook School Question No. 27 was: (A) Name the important points with regards to commutator brushes. (B) Does an amplifier act to convert weak currents into strong ones?

Now that a "diploma" is to be issued upon completion of a full course by students, I will be obliged to tighten down some, so be careful. I want those diplomas really to mean something, to have value in the eyes of employers. The following made acceptable replies to Question No. 27:

S. Evans and C. Rau; D. Danielson; B. DeVietti; A. L. Cooper; W. C. Brown; J. R. Prater; W. Limmroth; W. H. Edmonds; H. B. Smith; P. and L. Felt; E. H. Toetde; C. L. Loft; K. and R. Wells; Thos. F. Holt; G. H. Anderson; N. E. Olliver and D. McGee; H W. Morehouse; A. G. Thomas; S. G. Sanders and G. Sargent; P. N. Davis; H. W. Palmer.

The following are representative answers to Section A. Messers Evans and Rau say:

"Important points with regard to commutator brushes are: (1) They must be of sufficient size to carry the current output without overload. (2) They must fit their holders with sufficient snugness to prevent chatter, but not so tightly as to prevent proper movement of the brushes at all times. (3) Face of brush must make proper electrical contact with commutator over its entire surface. (4) They must be kept clean. (5) They must have sufficient tension to make good electrical contact with commutator without excessive friction. (6) Composition should be of type recommended by manufacturer—they must be neither too soft nor too hard. (7) Pig-tail contacts must be kept tight. (8) Position on commutator must be exactly right and yoke locked securely to maintain that position."

B. DeVietti says, "Use best grade of brush available. Commutator brushes may be regarded as a very cheap item for the reason that they need only be replaced at long intervals of time. It therefore is foolish to try to economize by purchasing cheap brushes, which will not only give inefficient service, but also affect the operating efficiency of the machine itself. If no specific type of brush be recommended by the manufacturer, get the best that can be had. Brushes must be of proper type, remembering that different makes of machine require brushes of different qualities. They must be of proper dimensions and current capacity. They must fit in holders, but without binding. Sufficient 'play' must be permitted to insure proper movement of brushes in order to obtain and maintain proper contact with commutator. All electrical contacts must be clean and firm. Face of brush must fit commutator, making firm electrical contact therewith at all points. In sanding-in the brush face for proper fit [or cleaning] it is wise to draw the sandpaper in the direction of rotation only since otherwise slight movement of brush in holder may prevent a perfect contact surface being formed. Brushes must receive periodical inspection and all points checked for proper condition and operation."

(B) J. R. Prater answers, "Strictly speaking, an amplifier does not convert weak currents into strong ones, though that is what it seems to do. Amplifiers do produce a strong current which is practically identical in wave form with the weaker sound current flowing through the input circuit, but the stronger or 'amplified' current is a different one, flowing through a circuit wholly separate from the input circuit. In fact, in large amplifiers there are several such circuits, one for each 'stage' of amplification, each one carrying a separate current which is made to practically duplicate the sound input current [Insofar as has to do with modulations that permit the reproduction of sound.—F. H. R.]. Amplifier tubes operate as valves by means of which a weak current is made to control the flow of a much stronger current [I hesitated over this. Seems to me the better way of expressing the action would be to say it is made to modulate a much stronger current. What do you sound engineers think about it?—F. H. R.], thus in effect producing a new current [It does not 'produce' it. —F. H. R.] of greater strength, but having practically the same fluctuations as has the original, weaker one. In an amplifier the original sound current merely passes through the valve of the first tube [First stage.—F. H. R.] and returns to its source. The amplified duplicate then passes through the valve (tube) of the second stage and returns to its source, and so on through as many successive stages of amplification as may be employed."

W. Limroth says, "An amplifier does not convert a weak current into a strong one. Instead, it employs a weak input current to control or regulate a stronger one having a different source. Thus we see the output current is not the input current made stronger, but an entirely different one flowing in an entirely separate, different circuit. The output current of most amplifiers has almost exactly the input current wave form. The sound current flowing through the input circuit of an amplifier completes its circuit, flowing back to its source, just as does any other normal current. In the course of its path, it flows through a valve (tube) in which it is able to and does exercise a very delicate control over a current having much greater power. In practice, naming the input circuit P, and the stronger current circuit Q, if greater amplification be required, Q can be made to operate another valve, R, which controls another and still more powerful current, and so on, the process being often repeated as many as six or seven times."

ROMEO AND JULIET

MGM-Thalberg production of the Shakespearean drama

previewed in Hollywood
by
GUS McCARTHY

Stark tragedy, stiletto-sharp.
Young love, tender, fierce, all consuming, daring.
Intrigue, glamour, hate and strife.
Beauty, the poesy of old Verona.
All this suffused with the glow of historic tradition and the centuries' acceptance of the mastery of William Shakespeare.

That in sum is the rich, rare stuff of which Irving Thalberg has woven for the screen "Romeo and Juliet."

And the loom of the great Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, with its array of creative personalities, has brought forth a work of expression embellished with elements of appeal, with mingled charm and thrill, that demonstrate again the motion picture as the dominant art—the best medium of narration, re-creation that has yet evolved.

The perennial modernity of the love theme, and the curious capacity of the screen to make all that ever was in any yesterday a living event of today and now, has never been more acutely exemplified than in this "Romeo and Juliet."

That relentless hate and feud of Montague against Capulet, and Capulet against Montague, classic of the long ago, is on the screen of Romeo and Juliet a strife of today.

Yesterday of the centuries ago is, for the hour of the screening, alive, poignant, immediate, hot with the fervour of living and the desperation of dying.

It seems that Mr. Thalberg has met with exceeding skill, and maybe good fortune, the problem of making this classic acceptable, appealing, significant to all manner of the folk who make audiences. It has been so contrived that the production can face the critical attentions of the erudite and still by the untrammeled manner of its telling deliver in full its large dramatic content to those who never heard of Shakespeare and who as often as not internally scorn all that is suspected of art and culture.

To be sure the decidedly contemporary significance of the personages of the extraordinary cast makes an important contribution to the strong elements of mass acceptance that every showman will find in this production.

This vibrant, vital, contemporary quality of the picture makes it an experience of adventure, a story of thrill and suspense no matter how familiar one may be with the faithfully recorded plot of the classic.

The achievement of Mr. Thalberg has been to deliver, enhanced with the emphasis and accent that only the camera can give, the timeless human drama of the piece, those intense interests of life that are born anew when every man is born.

For the common people, of whom the box office and Abraham Lincoln have said there are so many, it has the virtue of being a great motion picture.

Care and thought devoted to the production through long months of preparation and after the shooting started are reflected in every department. The music score by Herbert Stothart is rich, sympathetic and effective. The dialogue, departing only slightly and altogether judiciously from the text of the play, retains in full measure the deft imagery of the playwright. Settings, costumes and photography plainly manifest the time and money expended upon them.

Performances by the principals shoulder each other for mention. Norma Shearer's Juliet is warmly real and Leslie Howard's Romeo compares more than favorably with any of his justifiably famous previous portrayals. John Barrymore's Mercutio amply confirms advance reports of its excellence and Basil Rathbone's proud, ruthless Tybalt is a sound, dramatically powerful characterization. Ralph Forbes, C. Aubrey Smith, Violet Kemble Cooper, Edna May Oliver and Henry Kolker are others who distinguish themselves in the picture.

Among the love sequences five stand out as especially notable. They are the meeting of the ill-starred lovers, the balcony scene by which the play is most widely identified, the marriage chamber sequence, Juliet's soliloquy as she contemplates the death potion, and the memorable denouement in the tomb. Contrasted with these and shrewdly ranged between them are the duels, street clashes and personal conflicts which the production has in common with the most modern screen successes.

From the showmanship angle the picture looms as extraordinary. The title is among the half dozen of all time most widely and favorably known. The cast is laden with names of definitely calculable sales value.

A far reaching advance exploitation campaign, conducted by speakers before clubs and other bodies throughout the field, has put the English speaking world definitely on notice with respect to the magnitude and detail of the production.

By the nature of the work and the tradition it represents, it is reasonable to assume, doors not commonly open to motion picture exploitation will be wide to the exhibitor seeking cooperation.

The picture will support the exhibitor's best promises.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

MANY a motion picture or theatrical press agent in this era and before have repeatedly credited the humorous performances of a picture or client with standing the customers on their heads and laying them in the aisles. Always they spoke in the figurative manner of expression, for not once has any tangible evidence of such an accomplishment ever been presented, that is, until Clyde de Vinna, Hollywood cameraman and accomplished member of the American Society of Cinematographers, came forward this week with the sworn statement that he actually witnessed such an experience.

"We were filming 'Trader Horn' for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Africa, in 1931," relates Mr. de Vinna. "Our laboratory and general field base was in the pleasant community of Nairobi. Some four miles distant, in a clearing adjacent to desirable locations, was our camp. We had portable electrical equipment, projector and screen. In the balmy cool of early evening, the screen would be suspended from nearby trees and we had a perfect air-conditioned projection room.

"In due course, our first rushes came through and all hands gathered about to inspect them. Word of the impending event had spread among the natives and there must have been several hundred of them lurking in the deepening shadows back of us. The screen came to life and we settled back, intently studying our work. As the imaged action became more tense, there came an amused titter from the horde of uninvited guests who were viewing their first movie.

"The murmuring wave of subdued chuckles broke into a roar of uproarious guffaws. The jungle reverberated with these howls of unrestrained merriment. The natives had never seen anything so funny in all their lives. The scene would have gladdened the heart of any comedy director.

"One venturesome G-stringed buck gave vent to his inborn curiosity and stood on his head to see what the pictures looked like upside down. The results apparently more than justified his anticipations, for he screamed peals of laughter that rang out above the others.

"His playmates noted the extra enjoyment that came from his inverted posture and emulated his reverse stance. Their laughter became thunderous. Majestic lions pinned back their ears and sulked deeper into the jungle. Maternal elephants trumpeted their offspring into sheltered retreats.

"We took our attention from the film and gave eye to our volunteer and responsive audience. What we saw must be one of the most amazing sights of record—two or three hundred natives in an African wilderness, standing on their heads and bellowing with glee. When they could stand it no longer, they toppled over and writhed on the ground in merriment holding their convulsing sides, but yowling their joy."

Kelvin Rodgers, a three-and-one-half-year-old Australian lad arrived in New York the other morning from Australia, traveling the 9,000 miles to Temple University Hospital, in Philadelphia, to have a nail removed from his right lung. The kindliness of those sponsoring the surgical expedition is in itself a tale, Sir Charles Conibere, millionaire of Melbourne financing the trip, the American Pioneer Line furnishing transportation, the ship's sailors buying clothes and the YWCA in New York caring for both child and mother while here. What we started out to say, however, is that reporters meeting the boat interviewed the baby and to their question, "What are you going to do in America?" three-year-old Kelvin replied, "I'm gonna see Mae West!"

Harry Richman, whose claim to fame in theatricals is divided among the stage, the night club and motion pictures, is amusing Broadway with the experience of a "spiffed" gentleman on the subway who kept looking at a dignified passenger opposite, and finally lurched over with, "Ooh, you're awful looking. You're ugly. You're the homeliest person I ever saw." The offended passenger ignored his offender, but again the inebriate persisted: "What a face! etc., etc." Finally, unable to stand the humiliation any longer, the passenger yelled: "Go away. Stop bothering me. You are the drunkest man I've ever seen." But that did not discourage the pest. "Year," he growled, "well lemme tell you the difference between you and me. Tomorrow I'll be all right, but you'll still be ugly."

Odd McIntyre is chuckling these days loudly and long over an apartment-hunting expedition on which Harry Silvey accompanied a friend who was seeking a place in which to live in New York's ultra snooty Sixties. The tenant-to-be was asked by the manager of an apartment building if he had children, a piano, radio or victrola. The friend replied in the negative. Then he was asked if he played a musical instrument or owned a dog, cat or parrot. The rentee prospect shook his head, looked about furtively and, with a violin-pluck walk, led his rental interrogator into a far corner and whispered: "But I'm going to be honest with you. My fountain pen scratches."

Ted Cook has been thinking of big ideas all his life, but none of them ever turned out to be really very big. He got it this time though. What he suggests is that the Administration at Washington form a new WPA project to handle the oiling of swivel chairs. Not only will it stimulate the oil industry, for there must be millions and millions of swivel chairs in Washington, but it will also make things more efficient in the motion picture business. For instance, how are the very big department heads going to concentrate on new season's product and sales policies and new rental scales for exhibitors if the lesser employes are always swivel squeaking in their chairs? And everybody probably knows that there is nothing quite so distracting as a swivel chair that squeaks when you lean back in it to put your feet up on the desk. The only thing that has Ted Cook worried about his new and fancy big idea is that the snoring, might be even more distracting than the squeaking which heretofore has drowned out the snoring.

Careless Statement Department:

"Max Baer will have to do heavier training than swinging a baton before I take him seriously."—Clark (Heavy Screen Lover) Gable.

IT SEEMS TO Chester B. Bahn, cinema critic of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald, that Hollywood's most urgent need is a super-suppress agent.

A super-suppress agent, if you please, who will not call it a day with the ruthless use of a blue pencil on the trivia and blurbs representing some of the praise agents' verbal dreams, but who will carry on as a public relations counsellor.

A public relations counsellor, explains Mr. Bahn, is a suave and brainy chap who puts in up to 24 hours a day saying, "No, no, no, you must not do that!" to a client. For example, a public relations counsellor who would recognize in the following Hollywood publicity piece—sent out from Hollywood over the national press wires—a potential resentment in its effect upon the millions of unemployed in these United States:

"Talkietown dogs, jewel-collared, steak-fed, and aired in limousines, now have a vacation resort of their own. There they go to recover from nervous breakdowns and from indigestion brought on by too much caviar and French pastry, fed them by well-meaning but thoughtless guests at cocktail parties.

"There is a Dude Ranch for Dogs. It is operated by Gladys Shipman, blonde niece of Playwright Nell Shipman. She got up a brochure that is as fancy as the pamphlets issued by most hotels, and sent copies to all the stars in Hollywood.

"The literature is embellished with cartoons of dogs fishing, riding horseback, cooking flapjacks, chopping wood, and playing tennis and golf.

"It got results. Pooches owned by Ginger Rogers, Katharine Hepburn, Richard Dix, Harold Lloyd, Clark Gable, Mrs. Thomas Ince, Alice White, Walt Disney, and Louise Fazenda already are vacationing at the dude ranch.

"Scores of other pets have reservation. They will pack their favorite bones and travel to the resort as the summer rolls along, and actors and actresses flit off to Europe and holiday way-points.

"The ranch is in the mountains at Big Bear Lake, 100 miles from Hollywood. A bus fitted up with individual compartments calls for the guests and delivers them back at their homes.

"At Big Bear the dog dudes also have separate quarters.

"Miss Shipman has worked out a social program for her guests. Every day there's a hike through the forest, also rabbit-chasing rodeos. And swimming parties for the ones that like to paddle in the lake."

Among the items listed are: Le plat de Medor, Le Regal de Sweekey, Le Preference du danois and Le Regime Vegetarian des Chien." Drama

Both a character drama and a race track thrill action picture, this is a combination of entertaining elements for the regular everyday theatre goers. Fast moving, its engaging human interest story told against an exciting background, it doesn't provide any exceptional names to sell. On the other hand, entertainment as delivered being the primary requirement, with a sound motivating story embellished by convincing acting. Intelligent direction and worthy production contributing effectively to the film's appeal, it provides much that can be used to stimulate patron attention.

The story is simple. Snapper Sinclair is saved from reform school by Patricia and Cliff Barrington. Given a job in their stables, he shows a great understanding of horses, but when it is discovered that he is the son of an old barred jockey, his life becomes none too pleasant. Overcoming all handicaps he becomes an ace rider, only to be involved in a gambling scandal that leads to his disbarment on American tracks for a year. Going to England, he again becomes a foremost rider. Engaged to ride a favorite in a big race, he learns that his benefactors have lost their fortune and they are depending upon their entry in the race to recoup it for them. Purposely to perpetrates a jam that lets the Barrington horse win. Again barred, Patricia learns how Snapper sacrificed his own career to help her. She engages him to ride for her again in America when his suspension is lifted.

The straight human interest context of the story is logical and believable. Furthering its appeal and value, it is acted in a sincere and convincing fashion as artificial theatrics are eschewed. For the action backgrounds, reproduction of several exciting races give the picture color and excitement for the thrill action fans.

Comedy

A comedy, this production is all fun from first to last. Mixing slapstick fun with character comedy, there's hardly a serious moment in the whole film. Even when a situation approaching the serious appears, it is given a hilarious twist that adds greatly to the laugh provoking story content. Aimed directly at patrons, adults or youngsters, who want to laugh, the show is roisterous and full of excitement in dialogue and action.

Pepper, a sore trial to her befuddled uncle Ben Jolly, is the leader of a gang of street gamins who believe in direct action. Like kids all over, the mischief she leads them into, while bothersome to its victims, is that which every grown-up likes to boast of as part of his early life. When a widow is threatened with eviction, Pepper's mob really swings into action. Bent on raising funds, Pepper invades the exclusive well guarded home of irascible old millionaire Wilkes. A chronic grouch, he'd like to kill the youngster, but she goes to work on him and convinces him that what he needs more than medicine is a day's outing.

Together they set out for Coney Island, and in a series of gag situations Pepper and Wilkes give all the rides, slides and kindred concessions a going over. Forced to wash dishes because Wilkes' wallet has been lifted, they eventually arrive back in town. Meanwhile Uncle Ben is frantic wondering where his wayward ward is. But Wilkes has taken Pepper to his heart. She is the instrument that brings Wilkes and Ben together for the rendition of a burlesque hillbilly jingle. Then to top off the excitement, she busts up fake nobleman von Stofel's plan to wed Wilkes' daughter Muriel as hundreds of her kids swarm through the old man's mansion.

A harum scarum show, geared to a fast and funny pace, it is one of the potentially exceptional appeal to all youngsters. They'll see Jane Withers doing all the things they'd like to do or dream of doing.

Give Me Your Heart

(Warner-Cosmopolitan)

Drama

First, "Give Me Your Heart" is a woman's picture. Realizing the contributions feminine patronage makes to grosses, this is not an item to be considered lightly. Second, it comes in a summer of too few good pictures.

The picture is drama, based on a delicate, intimate, but always human topic. Primarily it is a class feature, almost certain to be of impressive appeal to more serious minded audience contingents. Nevertheless it is eloquent in the quantities that make for general mass understanding and appreciation. Modern in theme and character of presentation, it tells an age old story. It tells it with dignity, sincerity and honesty that automatically precludes possibility of objection even on the part of the most rigid, uncompromising minds. Very real and human, it is tastefully prepared, directed with skillful understanding and acted by the entire cast, but especially by Kay Francis, in an impressive and emotion stirring manner.

Illusion, graphic pantomime, initially establishes the story character and then dialogue, completely eschewing action, carries it through. Out of wedlock a child is born to Belinda Warren. Robert, husband of Rosamond Melford, is the father. Influenced by friend Tubbs, Belinda surrenders the baby to its father's family. She meets, falls in love with and marries Jim Baker. Haunted by a hatred of Rosamond, and a fear that her husband will learn of her sin, her life becomes a seething mental turmoil, threatening to drive her to distraction. Brutally unresponsive to husbandly kindness, convinced that she has been cheated of the right of possession of the man she loves and her child, threatening continually to blast all hopes for happiness for all, Kay Francis gives a gripping portrayal of a woman suffering heartaches and heartbreak.

With her husband, she is brought together by Tubbs with the man she loves and his wife, the woman she hates. She insults her host and guests, only to be intercepted by Rosamond, who takes her to visit the child. Though he is sleeping, the boy is the instrument that works a miracle in Belinda. Begging forgiveness of Rosamond, as she herself forgives Robert, she finds solace from her tragedy in her husband's affections.

Essentially dramatic, with Miss Francis and Brent and Miss Inescort, endowing that quantity with a believable human realism, the picture is not without a full quota of comedy content. That angle is expertly handled by Roland Young and Helen Flint. For the heart throb inspired by the basic drama, there is a balancing bit of comedy, intelligently applied to bring a smile or laugh. Both combine to give the picture a warmth and a distinctive human character that is impressive in its ability to make its auditors believe what they are seeing. Under such circumstances it would not seem illogical for exhibitors playing to audiences who are not averse to seeing a picture that does not dash and flash all over the screen, to recommend "Give Me Your Heart" as a sane attraction for intelligent persons.

Previewed in the Warner Theatre, Beverly Hills. Patronized by persons for the most part in the upper economic, social and mental brackets, the picture was watched attentively. In a house that was crowded to capacity, but few walked out. Applause following the conclusion was not of the hip-hip-hooray fashion; rather, it was not difficult to note that the audience was impressed by the story and the intelligent manner in which it had been prepared, acted and directed.

Comedy Drama

One boast which picture sponsors delight in making is that their attraction "has everything." This one's certainly must have had that phrase in mind and there is ample evidence that they strove strenuously to make good on it. If diversity and variety have anything to do with giving the term structural sense, there's enough of both qualities to provide "everything" for half a dozen shows. Quite a bit of the diversity has definite entertainment and showmanship worth. A lot of it hasn't any at all.

Enumerating some of the things this picture provides, aside from personalities, one can count a comedy romance that has some colorful dabs of London backstage, street, boarding house, machine shop and racetrack atmosphere. Further, there's a hint of intrigue that culminates in what looks like a murder mystery. Then there's the human interest of an innocent wife fleeing England for France fearing that she may be accused of her husband's murder. Comes then a tour of Parisian night clubs and boulevards, where the girl meets a war ace, falls in love, and, still thinking her husband dead, marries. Naturally there's the story of the wife left at home with a father-in-law who tries to be pleasant while friend husband varies his fighting the enemy with romantic philandering. Tying all situations together, the girl finds she's married to two men when her first husband shows up. Then there's the drama of a woman scorned by both husbands that turns into a spy story climaxed by the shooting of husband number two by the same woman who the girl thought had once before made her a widow.

Lastly, the picture turns into a war story in which the first husband takes up the murdered flier's plane to dish out a horrible fiery fate to the spy murderess and then in a spectacular aerial combat with a flock of boche planes add much to the glory of France's favorite ace. Finally husband number one, with the assistance of the girl, places the dead ace's body in the crashed plane to make it look like he died an honorable death instead of innocently trafficking with the enemy and wilfully chiseling on his mate. As France pays homage to its hero, the original husband and wife start out to make over their lives anew.

It all happens when Jean Harlow marries Franchot Tone and then, thinking him dead, marries Cary Grant under the circumstances described. Up to the time the picture brings the trio together, there's pretty much everything; romantic love interest, singing and dancing, comedy and what not. When Harlow understands what a pickle she is in, the show turns to and concentrates on straight drama. In that quality, with all that goes before serving as so much character and situation identification, the show really hits its high spots. So well are the last reels developed, with much to inspire audience attention and interest occurring, that the preveiw audience seemed satisfied to forget all that had preceded.

Detective Mystery

Charlie Chan is a pretty well known screen character. Warner Oland, who portrays him, is equally well known. So are the stories. In this, there is the same Oland, the whimsical, courageous, resourceful Oriental detective. With him, following up on the stock assets, is Keye Luke as son Lee. There anything that smacks of any previous Chan story stops. Like wine and spirits the quality of the Chan attractions appear to improve with age. Not only is this one particularly desirable for the regular Chan fans, but it contains a lot that, if adequately made known to patrons, should intrigue the interest and attention of those who like freshness in screen entertainment.

The smartly contrived, well acted, intelligently directed production is a blending of drama, romance, comedy, mystery, skullduggery and thrill action. The principal locales are aboard a trans-Pacific liner and at the Santa Anita race track. Action, embellished by up-to-date dialogue and novel situations, is equally distributed in both places. Excitement begins with the opening. In Australia, jockey "Tip" Collins throws a race and the favorite loses. With the horse, its owner, Major Kent, boards the boat and immediately becomes the target for threatening letters. After appealing to Chan for help in Honolulu, Kent is mysteriously murdered. Chester has come into ownership of the horse, and as Chan, abetted and hindered in his efforts to make sense of the weird goings-on by son Lee, is baffled temporarily, fire breaks out on board to add to the excitement. At Santa Anita, the dramatic skullduggery, contrasted by a light romance involving Alice Fenton and Bruce Rogers, continues. Action, supported by suspense born of mystery, always cleverly concealed to baffle the imaginations of the amateur sleuths, builds to an excitement-packed climax. The heavies make use of a camera rigged up to shoot a poisoned dart into the horse, hoping thereby to put across a great gambling coup. But the heart of the animal carries him across the finish line a winner, just as Chan and Lee step in to nab the culprits.

The picture provides an established character and established personalities to sell. It also permits one to do quite a bit of talking about romance, drama, mystery, comedy, thrill action and surprise. It is played in a spirited manner. Where the Chan series is appreciated entertainment, there is little doubt as to its entertainment and commercial worth. It should prove more attractive to the regular Chan fans than any of its predecessors. If there are places where Chan is not a welcome visitor, this feature should prove an ideal attraction with which to introduce him.

Previewed at Alexander Theatre, Glendale. The audience quickly was swept into the spirit of the film and watched it with unabated attention. Applauding several times during the running, its enthusiasm at the end was comparable to that commonly accorded many a socalled special or important picture.

The Glory Trail

(Crescent Pictures-Derr)

Dramatic Romance

An action drama, through which runs a unique and interesting romantic story, this picture affords much to engage exhibitor and patron attention. The well prepared story intelligently blends dialogue, action and situations. Though the production has a semi-historical background, it does not hesitate to revert to old standby entertainment principles to embellish the entertainment and commercial worth of its motivation. In always keeping prominent the menace of a renegade white and the danger of Indian raids, the film possesses a vein of suspense that adds considerable to the effect of its straight drama and romantic love interest.

The story is timed to a period directly following the Civil War. Tom Keene is the leader of a band of Southern soldiers that has vowed never to accept the disgrace of surrender. Their intent is to establish a new colony along the Bozeman Trail. First brought into dramatic conflict with Frank Melton, lieutenant in command of a Yankee wagon train, Keene comes into romantic conflict, that has a comedy tinge, with Joan Barclay. Recovering an ammunition wagon stolen by raiding Indians while Melton's troops are off on a wild goose chase inspired by renegade Walter Long, romance grows for Keene and Miss Barclay. A second bit of Indian depredation, inspired by Long, results in Keene being forced to order the execution of his second in command, James Bush. The dramatic quality of this sequence leads to the film's big punch, in which Indians attack a wagon train bringing families and prospective wives of the southerners to the new settlement. Union and Confederate soldiers forget their enmity, and, under Keene's leadership, combine to fight off the marauders. The finale is a mass marriage, following the death of Keene's sister, Ann Hovey, in which Miss Barclay stands by Keene's side to repeat the wedding vows he reads to his followers.

Not a pretentious production, but one that is intelligently made, the picture blends qualities that have proved their entertainment and commercial worth.

Crash Donovan

(Universal)

Drama

While only average in classification as entertainment, this production provides much opportunity for above average exploitation. That possibility is found more in the production features introduced than in personnel or story quality. Essentially the production glorifies state highway motorcycle policemen. Picturing the hazards encountered in their daily routine, the dangers that are theirs and the good that they do, it lends itself readily to tieups with similar departments anywhere as well as contacts with newspapers, auto clubs and safety organizations.

The substantiating story being rather sketchy, the main effort of the production to capture general interest seems to be confined in the thrill action tune to which it spins. Officers Allen and Thomas, watching carnival motorbike rider Crash Donovan go through his routine, suggest that if thrills are what he is looking for, he should join the highway patrol. Crash can't vision anything particularly exciting in the life of a speed cop, but finally consents. The sequences introducing him into the force authentically picture the training methods and are unusually interesting. Once on the job, Crash becomes attracted to Doris, daughter of Captain Tennyson, and the adored of Allen. Romantic conflict which this situation creates turns dramatic when the police go out to break up a gang of smugglers. Action builds to a fast and furious pace as cops and smugglers indulge in wild chases and battles. As Thomas is cracked up, Crash and Allen contrive to crush the mobsters.

Still thinking there is more thrill and excitement in the life of a crash rider, Donovan, who also comes to realize that Doris prefers Allen to himself, resigns from the force to return to the breakneck thrill of carnival riding.

Full of heroic and melodramatic thrill action and excitement, the picture is one quite likely

AUSTRO-GERMAN AGREEMENT IS SHROUDED IN STRICT SECRECY

Believed German Objections to Non-Aryan Technicians Employed Have Been Lifted In Case of Austrian Films

Although elaborate secrecy continues painstakingly maintained as to precise provisions of the agreement resulting from this year's Austro-German film negotiations, import of their privately exercised privileges is beginning to be evident. At the conclusion of the conferences the public was told only that the agreement was to be valid from July 1, 1936, to June 30, 1939, that 14 Austrian films could be imported freely into Germany annually without further conference while import of German films into Austria would be without limitation, and that money transfer between the countries would be regulated by the Vienna National Bank and the Berlin Reichsbank.

Now it is generally believed that, under the agreement, Germany will make certain allowances for limited employment of Non-Aryan assistant cameramen, technicians, musicians, and extras working in such Austrian films as are to be shown in Germany. There are rumors that further facilities may be granted to occasional admission of certain Non-Aryan directors and writers in special productions. The fact that the manuscripts of Austrian films intended for export to Germany must be submitted to German approval remains unchanged.

Professor Lehnich, President of the German Film Chamber, was in Vienna in April for settlement of the affair, but surprisingly the agreement has not been ratified yet. Negotiations on Austria's behalf were led by Dr. Lanske, who is at present travelling in the United States for the purposes of study.

The Press Bureau of the Austrian Government issued special prohibitions for newspapers against mention of anything about the whole matter of Austro-German film relations.

To Teach by Film

Up to date only five per cent of the Austrian schools have applied the film to teaching purposes. They use only teaching films on standard stock, the number of which is very limited. As only a few schools have their own projector and booth, the classes are forced to attend the films in halls outside the schools, or in picture theatres.

Now the Austrian Ministry of Education has decided to introduce systematically the teaching film in all elementary, secondary and high schools. To this end an official "Center for the Teaching Film" ("Haupstelle für den Unterrichts-film") will be established. Only 16-mm films will be used, and the existing types of sound projectors will be examined to ascertain those suitable for schools. (Even now troubles are arising, due to the fact that the sound track of Continental 16-mm films is on the opposite side to that of American and English ones.) Probably the schools will be equipped only with sound projectors, although a great many of the films will be silent ones. The "Center" will work out a production scheme, but it is possible that also existing inland and foreign teaching films will be taken over as far as they fit the curriculum of Austrian schools. The Ministry will fix the details during the coming months and hopes that the school will be able to use films in the Autumn. The scheme is to be financed by a subscription of about 2 schillings (40 cents) a year to be paid by the pupils.

"Modern Times" opened in Vienna with a gala performance on March 30th. It promises to be a great success in Austria. Censorship in Vienna ordered 3 cuts: the famous scene with the red flag, the killing of a workman and a further scene showing police methods; altogether about 460 feet. The picture was not permitted shown to juveniles under 16 years. It has its first run in the "Apollo," seating 1,440, Vienna's most representative picture theatre, which has screened only Austrian and German films in this season. "Modern Times" was to stay there 3 weeks and be followed by "Top Hat."

"Stranger than fiction" is the fact that a sales manager of United Artists touring the Austrian province found an exhibitor in a little place who did not even know who Chaplin is. In former years he did not see films, and when "City Lights" was shown, five years ago, he was not yet an exhibitor.

Ministry Makes Concession

In February the Austrian Ministry of Commerce demanded of the distributors either to have the titling of foreign talking films done in Austrian laboratories or to pay the full contingent fee of 3,600 schillings ($680) for each film instead of the reduced fee of 1,200 or 1,800 schillings for such foreign talking films as are released only in one or two prints. This demand would have hit, above all, some American firms which get their titled prints from their headquarters abroad.

Now the Ministry has conceded that every distributing firm only needs to have every fifth imported foreign talking film titled in Austria. Unfortunately this rather favorable agreement is not a final one, and may be altered by the Ministry at any time. The obligation to title in Austria all foreign films or even a considerable part of them would raise the expense and possibly prevent the import of less profitable American films.

For the first time in Vienna a "Hollywood Opening Night" took place when MGM started its "Broadway Melody of 1936." A jazz orchestra played in the lobby of the Opernkino, and the public was treated to champagne at a bar. Almost all of Vienna's prominent film and stage people were present. Some of them were put on the air for forty minutes, so that the picture got publicity all over Austria and the neighboring territories. During the broadcasting silent cartoons were screened in the dimly lit house. "Broadway Melody" was very much applauded by the animated audience. This midnight "Gala Première" proved an excellent piece of showmanship, and was something quite new for Vienna.

"Top Hat," too, advertised itself in big style in opening at the Apollo, where it succeeded the first-run of "Modern Times." When the audience entered the theatre they were dazzled by numerous spotlights from the stage from where cameramen were shooting the house. After the performance the public was retained to be shown their own picture and were much pleased.

"Singing Youth"

"Singende Jugende" (Singing Youth), a picture with the famous "Sängerknaben" (singing boys) choir, Vienna—recently returned from a tour around the world—was released here. The story tells of a little boy, Toni, who runs away from his cruel stepfather and gets picked up by a street-singer. He discovers Toni's beautiful voice, and finally succeeds in getting Toni a place in the choir of the "Sängerknaben." Here Toni gets closely attached to Sister Maria, who is in charge of the 80 boys. When Sister Maria is unjustly accused of having embezzled a large sum of money, he gallantly confesses to be the malefactor, as a result of which he is expelled from the group of the "Sängerknaben."

The rather artificial story shows the life of the "Sängerknaben" at their gorgeous Vienna place and at their rural possession in the Alps. It is true that the film shows mostly superficial scenes of their lives, whereas we get hardly a glimpse of their musical education and serious work. We could also stand a little more of their singing, which really is their outstanding point. These weaknesses, however, are compensated by the convincing play of the boys—especially of Toni and tiny Hans—and by the beautiful background of Alpine scenery.

CITY WOULD LIMIT NUMBER OF THEATRES

An ordinance limiting the number of theatres in the city to one for each 5,000 population has been passed by the City Council of Oconto, Wis. The law, if upheld as constitutional, will limit the number of theatres in Oconto to exactly one.

The Princess, operated by A. L. Merritt, is the only house in the city. The council's action, it is believed, will halt plans announced by Oconto Operating Company to construct another theatre. The concern is reported affiliated with circuit interests.

Western

This is a well balanced western with plenty of action, swiftly paced and likably performed by Hoot Gibson. A smilingly, engaging personality, Gibson dominates throughout and it is to him most of the credit is due for the production's better-than-average rating. While a few sequences stretch the imagination, these do not detract from the picture as a whole. It is fare for both the inveterate and casual western audience.

A love theme is interluded, also a little jealousy menace to pep things up a bit. The supporting cast is fair, suitable enough for the picture's needs. Included are Ruth Mix, Buzz Barton, June Gale, Stanley Blystone and Roger Williams.

Gibson, a former United States marshal, now retired, is persuaded to accept a special deputy badge to aid the sheriff in eliminating cattle rustling in a county of Texas. Masquerading as the Morning Glory Kid, a notorious bandit, Gibson arrives on the scene in time to prevent a kidnaping of Miss Gale by the outlaw gang. Preceding the girl to her ranch, Gibson finds her father dead. Comes a second attempt to kidnap the girl, this time successful. Finding the outlaw gang's hideout, Gibson asks for a job and is accepted. He makes plans to escape with the girl, his identity is discovered and they have to run for it. Gibson and the girl take refuge in an old ice house. The outlaws try to smoke them out but Gibson, by a trick captures the outlaws' leader. In a fist fight Gibson wins, as the sheriff and posse arrive.

Very Funny

A very funny comedy, this Charley Chase production has as its theme Bank Night. Chase, his wife and their little daughter attend the theatre. The little girl offers to pick the winning number. When she picks Chase's number the audience shows its displeasure. When she tries again and picks her mother's number the audience roars. But when on the third try Chase's daughter picks her own number, the audience follows the Chase family home, seemingly bent on a lynching party. Chase holds a special Bank Night but gets himself in deeper when his boss wins the money. Running time, 20 minutes.

Historic

The restoration of Williamsburg, Va., to the grandeur it knew in Colonial days is here depicted in No. 24 of the "Going Places" series. Since 1927 the city has been in the process of restoration through the interest taken in the proceedings by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Up to the present time 67 Colonial buildings have been restored, 91 have been rebuilt, 459 modern buildings have been torn down and 33 shops and stores have been erected to provide a suitable business district. The college of William and Mary, second oldest in America, located in Williamsburg is also a subject of the camera's lens. Running time, 10 minutes.

Whale Ho

(Vitaphone)

Interesting

A very interesting study of whale fishing and the men who risk their lives to catch them is presented here. The whale boat sights two whales and is after them. After several unsuccessful attempts, the boat pulls close and the harpoon gun is fired. A direct hit, but the boat is endangered and the line is cut. The second effort is more successful; after a hard battle the whale is overpowered and towed to shore, where it is cut into strips and the oil extracted. Running time, 11 minutes.

This average Oswald cartoon concerns a prize fight between the rabbit and Punchy, the pig. Oswald trains for the fight on jazz furnished by three monkeys. On the night of the fight Oswald buzzes about Punchy so fast the pig becomes dizzy but Oswald is made cocky by the acclaim of the crowd and the pig gets in some telling blows. The three monkeys play some jazz, Oswald is revived and beats Punchy. Running time, 7 minutes.

Mrs. Fox Refuses To Open Books for Bankruptcy Trial

Mrs. William Fox will flatly refuse to open the books of her All-Continent Corporation to trustees and creditors in the bankruptcy proceedings of her husband, William Fox, now taking place in Atlantic City, N. J., according to Walter Hanstein, one of the spokesmen for the battery of creditor attorneys. The understanding has been that if Mrs. Fox permitted the inspection of her books the hearing would have been postponed for at least a month, but with her refusal they will continue.

That the situation this week after sessions that came close to hilarity as creditors' lawyers, trying to trace the dispersing of more than $20,000,000 which Mr. Fox had in 1930, followed the course of a borrowed million " 'round and 'round."

Herbert Leitsteen, Fox family bookkeeper since 1909, was on the witness stand before Federal Referee Robert E. Steedle.

Mr. Hanstein, spokesman for the attorneys, asked him to tell how All-Continent was formed. Mr. Leitsteen related that 69,400 shares of preferred and 1,000 shares of common were issued to Mr. Fox, "for which he paid $6,100,000 cash and turned over brokerage accounts for $841,844.61."

"Mr. Fox," he said, "gave us a $100,000 check; then another for $1,000,000."

"What did you do with that million?" he was asked.

"We bought stock."

"From whom?"

"From Loeb, Alsberg on the same day."

"And Loeb, Alsberg thus got back $990,000 of that $1,000,000 loan?"

"Yes."

The following day, Mr. Leitsteen said, Loeb, Alsberg loaned another million which Mr. Fox again paid to All-Continent, which again used it to buy Mr. Fox's stocks through Loeb, Alsberg, the money finally being "credited on Mr. Fox's loan."

Mr. Leitsteen said this process went on until the total was around $6,000,000, and that "all this money was used to buy stock from Mr. Fox, and when it was over Mr. Fox had his money back. He started with stock and finished with All-Continent stock." He insisted that this all came out of the $15,000,000 Mr. Fox had received on April 7, 1930, and that, "as I understand it, this was done to establish a stock loss and create a trust for his wife and children."

Referring to All-Continent, which is listed as a major creditor of Mr. Fox, but which Mr. Hanstein declares is the "alter ego" of Mr. Fox, Referee Steedle remarked that "the All-Continent books are to a certain extent the crux of the case, if there is a case.

Murry C. Becker, Mr. Fox's counsel, objected, and maintained that the Fox books and records will suffice to show all the transactions disposing of "more than $20,000,000."

Meanwhile, an order has been filed in federal court in New York in which the Capitol Company, which holds a judgment for $297,000 against Mr. Fox, is restrained from any further proceedings on its claim against Mr. Fox for a period of 12 months from the date of adjudication of Mr. Fox in bankruptcy.

Touring the studios with a visitor from the midwest, the gentleman made a remark that led to some interesting discoveries. Watching Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll making a scene in "General Died at Dawn," he said that he never realized it took so many people to make a picture. Although Mr. Cooper and Miss Carroll are the only persons who will be seen in the sequence, 22 persons were actively engaged on the set. They were the director and his two assistants, the head camera man and his helper, two sound men, seven electricians, two prop men, four grips and the script girl.

Following up the lead, further investigation revealed that in addition to the score or more who will be given screen credit, more than 800 persons were directly engaged in making the production, not counting production executives or members of the publicity department who were at one time or another associated with the film. Some of the interesting facts uncovered were that seven girls were engaged in research aiding the writers and adapters of the Charles G. Booth original story. Fourteen architects prepared plans and blueprints for the sets and Chinese junks that are important features in the story. More than 200 carpenters, painters, metal workers, sculptors, electricians and laborers were engaged in building the sets.

Without exception, every department in the studio participated in making the picture. The machine shop developed a new type of generator hood that eliminates sound interference. The wardrobe department designed and made scores of Chinese costumes complete from wigs to sandals. The property department gathered over 4,000 separate items. In the auditing department were 14 employees engaged in checking details. It was learned that already 80,000 feet of film had been shot. Invoices already totalled more than 6,000 separate items with another 2,500 expected before completion of the production. Twenty-six hundred checks had been issued for salaries and wages.

Twenty-one players will receive screen credit. For each principal who will be seen in the picture, there is a ratio of approximately 40 to one behind the camera.

Air Publicity

If radio broadcasters must have motion picture material to satisfy their listeners, say the thoughtful business men of the production colony, let them have the right kind. Hearing these words and finding them good, producers have gone seriously into the question of how much and what kind of motion picture material is good for radio listeners and, at the same time, for the box office. Already available, from all studios and on practically all product, are 15-minute transcriptions, some of them scenes from pictures, others interviews with players, what not, suitable for morning programs.

Reports from the exhibition field thus far indicate that this type of advance exploitation is meeting with substantial response when coupled with the usual formal advertising via standard media. In addition to the direct ticket sales value, of course, the discs serve a regulatory function of substantial if indirect consequence. They keep incompetent cinema commentators from cluttering the air with erroneous and ill considered chatter and, by the terms of their availability, they confine the broadcasting of screen material within the non-box office hours.

As yet the transcriptions have attained no established form or plan. Producers are feeling their way and watching results. All the old trailer problems—how much plot to expose, how much sales effort to exert, whether to spread or concentrate the buckshot—remain to be answered for the new medium. Satisfaction with progress made to date is general.

Daniel Thomas O'Shea, former assistant secretary and resident legal counsel for RKO Radio, has resigned his post to take a position as assistant to David O. Selznick. . . . Watterson Rothacker has said, "So far as I am concerned, there is not a word of truth to the report that I plan to join John E. Otterson and Winfield Sheehan in a new producing organization."

Production

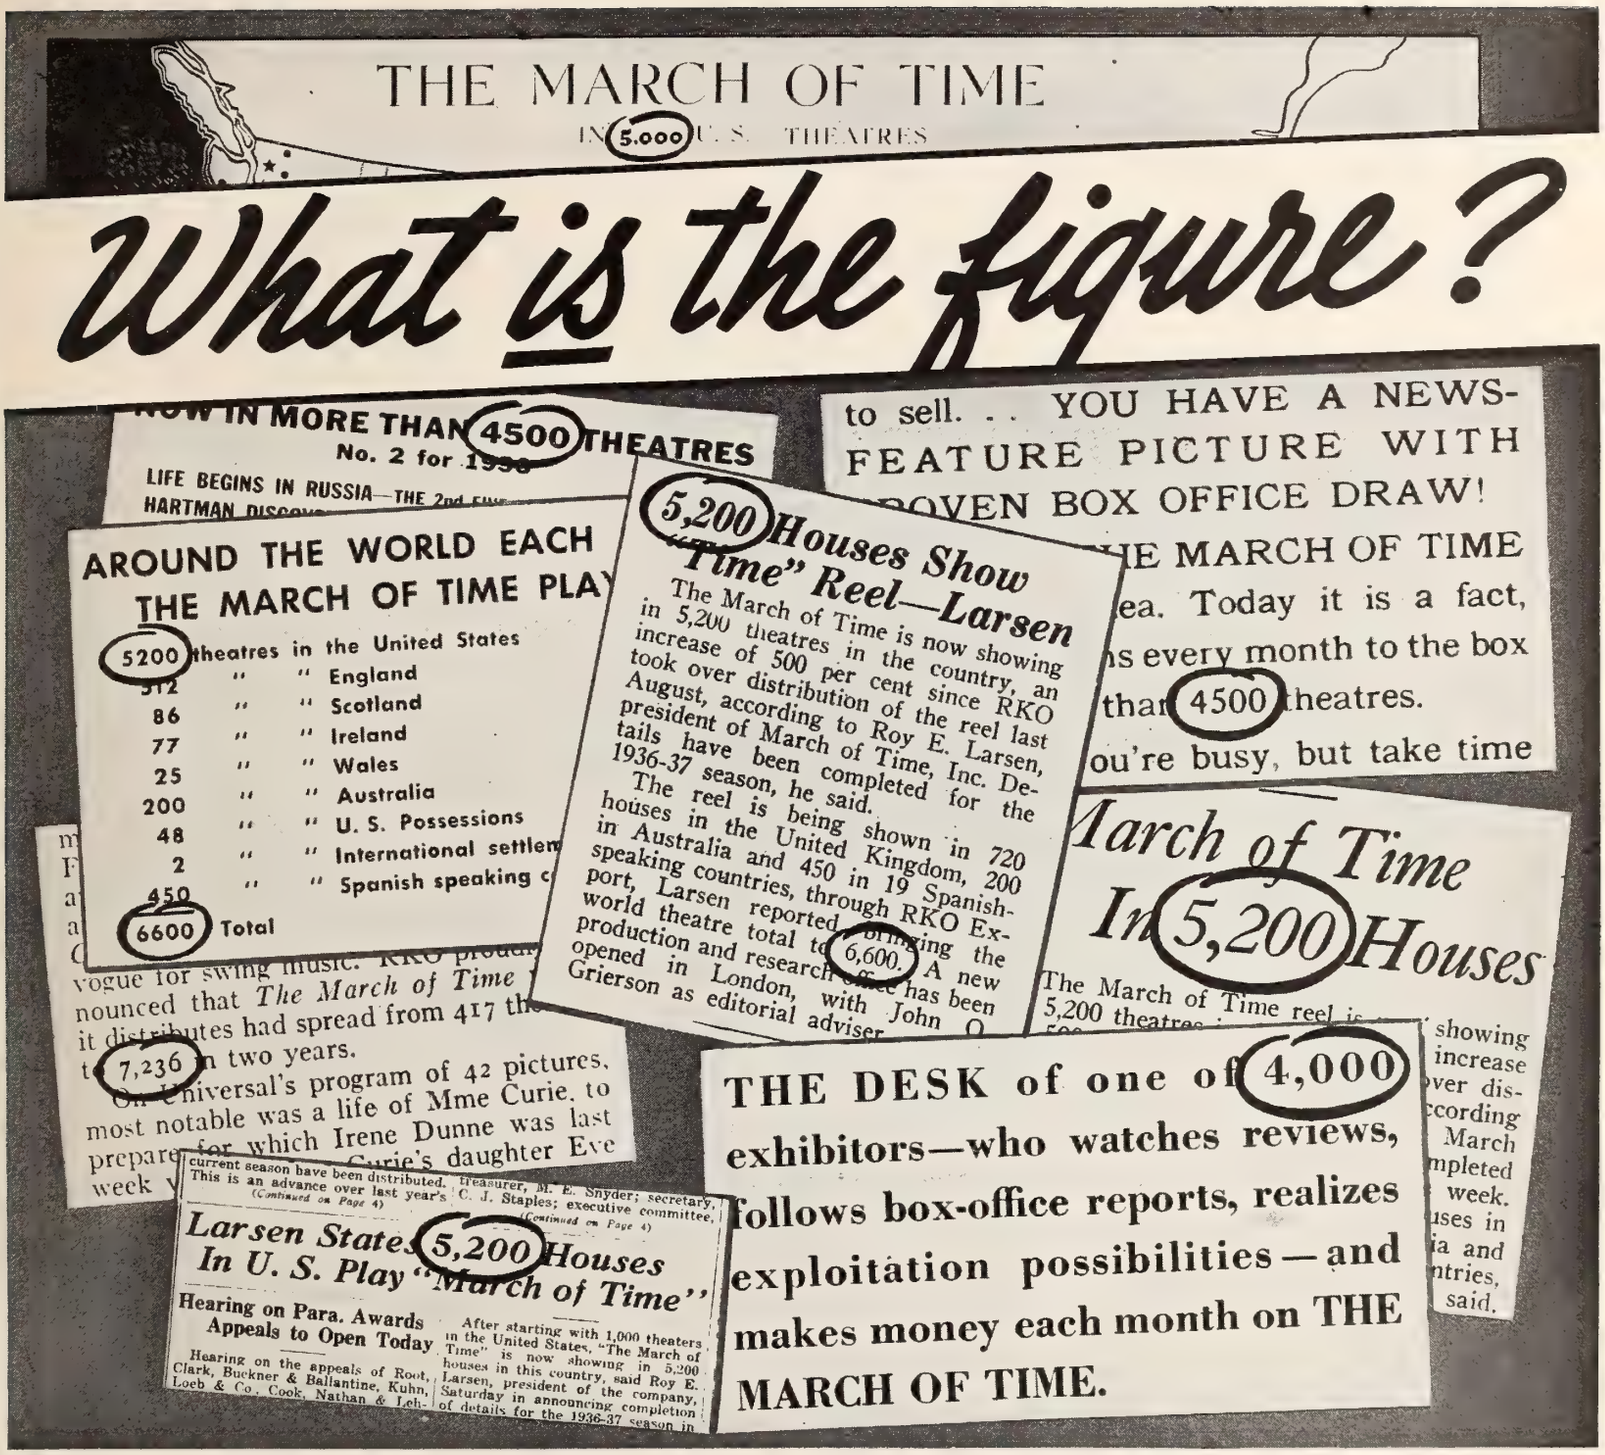
Following the July 4th siesta, Hollywood's production mill whirled at a dizzy pace. Eleven pictures were started. Fifteen were finished. Included in the completed product are several films that have been long in work. Also there are some brought in by directors well under schedule of days allotted. Even though an unusually large number of features came off the programs, starting of eleven elevated the production roster to approximately fifty pictures actually in work. An extraordinary number for this season of the year, it is definite indication of the intensity expected to mark production during the coming weeks.

MGM started three pictures. The most important, undoubtedly, is "Born To Dance." It stars Eleanor Powell and James Stewart. The supporting cast lists Una Merkel, Sid Silvers, Frances Langford, Buddy Ebsen, Frank Morgan, Virginia Bruce and Juanita Quigley. Many additions will be made. Roy Del Ruth is directing. In "The Longest Night," previously announced as "Whispering Windows," Robert Young, Florence Rice, Stuart Irwin, Julie Hayden, Leslie Fenton, Janet Beecher and Ted Healy will be seen. Errol Taggart is directing. "Chained Lighting" is also in work. Edmund Lowe, Betty Furness, Stuart Irwin and Ed Brophy are the principals, with Edwin L. Marin directing.

Three pictures started, likewise, at Warners. "Let's Pretend," which Ray Enright is directing, will present James Melton, Patricia Ellis, Zasu Pitts, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Marie Wilson and Hobart Cavanaugh. The cast for "God's Country and The Woman" includes George Brent, Barton MacLane, Robert Barratt, Minerva Urecal and Allan Hale. William Keighley is directing. In the third picture, "The Case of The Caretaker's Cat," are listed Ricardo Cortez, Jane Bryan, Warren Hull, June Travis, Nedda Harrigan, Craig Reynolds, Daisy DeVoe, Garry Owen and Carlyle Moore, Jr. William McGann replaced Alan Crosland, seriously injured in an auto accident, as director.

Futter Productions started "Pony Express." Hoot Gibson, Rex Lease, Marion Shilling and Nina Gilbert are featured. Harry Frazer is directing.

Radio's single starting feature, "The Plough And the Stars," went into work earmarked as an important feature for full release. Under John Ford's direction the following cast will be seen: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster, J. M. Kerrigan, Brandon Hurst, Mary Gordon, Barry Fitzgerald, Dennis O'Dea, Bonita Granville, Una O'Connor, Moroni Olsen, Erin O'Brien-Moore and Maxine Jennings.



At Paramount, "Girl Of The Jungle" was started. Ray Milland, Dorothy Lamour and Guy Standing are featured. William Thiele is directing.

"Thank You, Jeeves" was started at Twentieth-Century-Fox. Arthur Treacher is featured in the title role. The support includes David Nevin, Virginia Field, Lester Matthews, Willie Best and Colin Tapley. Arthur Collins is directing.

Last of the starting group is "Divided," an Invincible production. Reginald Denny, Inez Courtney, Jack LaRue and Evelyn Brent are the principals. Phil Rosen will direct.

Of the fifteen pictures completed, Paramount is credited with four. "Hollywood Boulevard" will present John Halliday, Marsha Hunt, Robert Cummings, C. Henry Gordon, Frieda Inescort, Esther Ralston, Esther Dale, Betty Compson, Maurice Costello, Bryant Washburn, Roy d'Arcy, Francis X. Bushman,

THE MARCH OF TIME welcomes the seeming confusion of reports continually quoting new "highs" for the number of theatres showing the subject regularly each month. The variance of figures in advertisements, publicity stories, sales manuals and promotion material comes not from a lack of accuracy but from the sheer inability of the printing press to keep pace with exhibitor recognition and RKO sales reports. On July 10th, at 3 p. m., there were 6203 theatres in the U. S. showing THE MARCH OF TIME, 727 in the United Kingdom, 310 in Australia, 498 in Spanish-speaking countries and 51 in other parts of the world —a world total of 7789. By the time you read this advertisement even this total will have been topped.

Comedy

Many phases of this production indicate more than usual entertainment and showmanship interest. The story on which it is based is a product of the fertile humorous mind of P. G. Wodehouse, who in addition to his several earlier screen contributions is the author of "Thank You, Jeeves," now in production at 20th Century-Fox, also the widely read "Very Good, Jeeves," "Bill, the Conqueror" and "The Little Warrior," in addition to numerous short stories that have made his name exceedingly familiar. While not a special, indication of the importance the sponsors attach to it is seen in the selection of the maker of "Ziegfeld," Robert Z. Leonard, as director.

The production returns its leading man, Robert Montgomery, to the type of happy-go-lucky man-about-town role in which he has scored his most notable screen success. It supports him with an exceptional cast, which includes Madge Evans as the girl to whom Montgomery loses his heart and gets into so much trouble when he starts a comic strip lampooning the odd characters in her family. Four noted comedy performers follow: Robert Benchley, whose short, "How to Sleep," as well as his work in "China Seas," is still vividly remembered; Frank Morgan, maker of individual hits in many pictures; Billie Burke, in a characteristic role, and Eric Blore, the butler in "Top Hat," again buttling in his own fashion. Ralph Forbes is the "other man" menace to Montgomery's romantic adventures, and in lesser, but still important parts, will be seen Cora Witherspoon, Tommy Bupp, Aileen Pringle and Grant Mitchell.

The story is all comedy. As Piccadilly Jim, Montgomery is famous as a London cartoonist. He meets Miss Evans, but loses her. Unknowingly he also meets her family, one of whom his father, Morgan, is wooing. They give him the idea for a comic strip. As the Richwitches, he makes Miss Evans' relatives famous, but when she gets wise to the fact that he is the perpetrator of the scandalous limnings, the stage is set for situations that develop hectic comedy romance.

"Craig's Wife"

(Columbia)

Comedy

The story told in this production concerns a woman who fell in love with her home more than she did with her husband. It tells of a woman who tried to conceive and create the most perfect home in the world. However, instead of realizing her ideal she succeeded only in inciting the fury of her servants, the ridicule and hatred of her neighbors, and, most of all, almost suffered the loss of her husband's love. In the end, however, when all situations are adjusted, she emerges as a heroic, if somewhat serio-tragic, figure. Entertainment and commercial possibilities of the situations concocted are evident. They become more poignant when the cast, particularly the woman who is featured, are considered.

The production is based upon a play by George Kelly that enjoyed considerable success in its stage presentations. The screen play is by Mary McCall, Jr., remembered for her adaptation of "I Found Stella Parish" and the more recent "Snowed Under," also for her participation in preparation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," produced by Warner. Direction is by Dorothy Arzner, Hollywood's only woman director, maker of such pictures as "Nana" and "Christopher Strong."

Rosalind Russell, recently seen in "Under Two Flags" and "Trouble for Two," appears in the title role. John Boles, popular in many Fox and 20th Century-Fox pictures, is her husband. The supporting cast, in which practically all who appear are principals, is composed almost entirely of wellknown screen names. It includes Billie Burke, Dorothy Wilson, Nydia Westmas, Thomas Mitchell, Robert Allen, Raymond Walbush, Kathleen Burke, Alma Kruger and Jessie Busley.

A human, natural story, treated from a comedy premise, but nevertheless poignantly dealing in facts of direct appeal to every woman who either is or hopes to be a wife, the production appears to have a commercial quality potentially paralleling its promise of novel and intriguing entertainment.

My American Wife

(Paramount)

Comedy Romance

This promises to be a different kind of western story as it is a different romantic dramatic one. Its hero is the reverse of the customary similar character. He is an aristocratic foreigner, weighted down by titles and family prestige, who marries an American girl. There's nothing rare in that, but plenty rare and also potentially valuable as novel entertainment and showmanship follows thereafter. The titled foreigner wants to be a regular he-man, rooting, tooting, shooting cowboy. He has a tough time, all of which seems to be of the character that will make desirable entertainment, in convincing himself, his hard boiled, flee-bitten old cow country father-in-law and the boys around town that he's built of the proper stuff. He has a tougher time with his exclusive finishing school bred wife and her socially climbing mother. Even the wild horse he attempts to ride and finally does conquer has to be shown. In the end, he convinces all, saves his wife's fortune, makes a real pal of the oldtimer, puts the skids under a couple of smart crooks, and proves to one and all that he is the stuff out of which the new wild west has been built.

Based on an original by Elmer Davis, the screen play is by Virginia Van Upp, lately credited with participation in the preparation of "Poppy" and "Too Many Parents." Direction is by Harold Young, maker of "The Scarlet Pimpernel" in England and more recently "Without Regret" and "Woman Trap" in this country.

Francis Lederer, now in "One Rainy Afternoon," is starred with Ann Sothern. Fred Stone is her wild and wooley grandfather and Billie Burke is the girl's fluttering mother. This group, with Grant Mitchell constituting the principals, the supporting roster lists Ernest Cossart, Hal K. Dawson, Adrian Morris, Helene Millard, Dora Clement and Montague Shaw.

Yellowstone

(Universal)

Mystery Drama

Though the story told in this production is a romance tinged mystery drama of more than ordinary interest, it seems that the locale in which the action takes place should prove to be the most attractive exploitation feature. While it promises to provide audiences and showmen with an acceptable bit of theatrical entertainment, the essential bit of novelty in the film is its background. In that, the picture's auditors will be taken on a complete tour of the famous Yellowstone National Park. Not only will the familiar points of scenic interest be shown, but many spots not usually visited by the tourists will be opened up to inspection for the first time. As the picture was made in cooperation with the U. S. National Park Service, it promises to be a thing of photographic and scenic brilliance, radically differing from anything current on the screen that has the great outdoors or nature as its setting.

The story, which has a dramatic Yellowstone Park mystery legend for its inspiration, is an original by Arthur Phillips, adapted by Renaud Hoffman with screen play by Jefferson Parker. Arthur Lubin is the director. The photography, to which special attention was paid both in an advance expedition and during the time the regular company was on the ground, is by Milton Krasner.

While most of the cast is composed of familiar screen names, the two leads are comparatively new to the screen. Henry Hunter, previously seen in "Parole," is the hero and Judith Barrett, a grownup child player, remembered for her part as Richard Dix's daughter in "Cimarron," is the heroine. Both players have had extensive stage training in metropolitan centers. Actually the most important player in the film is Ralph Morgan, about whom the theatric story really centers. While this trio is featured, Andy Devine, carrying the comedy relief with Raymond Hatton, and Alan Hale, Rollo Lloyd, Paul Harvey and Paul Fix have important roles.

The Holy Lie

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Drama

For showmanship purposes, the title of this production has more significance than appears on the surface. Designed to be of ready appeal to younger audience contingents, but not without elements that are of interest to general patronage, it is the story of the deception which three girls, sisters, practiced upon their mother to convince her that her favorite daughter as well as all the rest of the brood were meeting with great success in the show world. Built upon the funny gag-situation premise, the story essentially is a combination of comedy, music, drama and pathos, all of which are embellished by a gay romantic love interest contrast. Gay in character, it features younger players almost exclusively with a sprinkling of more mature performers, one of whom, Jane Darwell, if everything develops in the engaging manner in which the story now

Albert Conti, Herbert Rawlinson and Purnell Pratt. Robert Florey directed the cast of "Lady Be Careful" features Lew Ayres and Mary Carlisle supported by Larry Crabbe, Benny Baker, Grant Withers, Jack Chapin, Josephine McKim, Wilma Francis, Nick Lukats, Purnell Pratt, Terry Ray, Louise Stanley, Irene Bennett, Henry Arthur, John Morley and Wesley Barry. J. T. Reed directed. In "Johnny Gets His Gun" Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke, David Holt, Andy Clyde, Purnell Pratt, Onslow Stevens, Chick Chandler, Rollo Lloyd, Burt Hanlon, Paul Fix, Noel Madison, Jack Mulhall, Russell Hicks, Pat O'Malley and Ann Evers will be seen directed by Stuart Heisler. The fourth picture, "I'd Give My Life," a Richard Rowland production, will present Guy Standing, Frances Drake, Tom Brown, Janet Beecher, Robert Gleckler, Helen Lowell, Paul Hurst, Charles Wilson, Charles Richman, Tom Jackson, Charles Judells, Robert Elliot and James Eagles. Edwin L. Marin directed.

Three pictures were completed by Warners. Among them is "The Charge Of The Light Brigade." Suggested by Tennyson's poem of soldierly valor, it presents a lengthy and impressive cast which includes Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Patric Knowles, Donald Crisp, C. Henry Gordon, Scotty Beckett, Princess Baigum, J. Carroll Naish, Nigel Bruce, Spring Byinton, E. E. Clive, Lumsden Hare, G. P. Huntley, Jr., David Niven, Robert Barrat, Colin Genny, George Hegas and Henry Stephenson. Michael Curtiz directed.

"Polo Joe," last of the pictures which Joe E. Brown will make for Warners, also was completed. In addition to the star, Carol Hughes, Richard "Skeets" Galagher, Gaby Fay, Joseph King, Olive Tell, David Newell, Gordon Elliott and Milton Kibbee will be seen. Direction was by William McGann. The third feature, "Three In Eden," brought in by director Frank McDonald considerably under schedule, will present Margaret Lindsay, Ian Hunter, Donald Woods, Paul Graetz, Tetsu Komai, Miki Morita, George Regas, E. E. Clive and Gordon Hart.

Twentieth Century-Fox finished two pictures. The cast for "The Holy Lie" includes Claire Trevor, Jane Darwell, Arline Judge, Evelyn Venable, J. Edward Bromberg, Alan Dinehart, Dean Jagger, Joyce Compton, Susan Fleming, Frank Reicher, Chick Chandler and Astrid Alwyn. Lewis Seiler directed. Long in production, "Ramona," a Sol Wurtzell feature, also was completed. Starring Loretta Young and Don Ameche, it further presents Kent Taylor, Pauline Frederick, Jane Darwell, Victor Kilian, Katherine DeMille, Paul Stanton, Russell Simpson, John Carradine, J. Carroll Naish, Fritz Leiber, Claire DuBrey and William Benedict. Henry King directed.

Two pictures also came off the line at Columbia. In "The Fighter," which Gordon Wiles directed, James Dunn, June Clayworth, George McKay, Thurston Hall, Gene Morgan, Sara Edwards, Ed LeSaint and Paul Guilfoyl will be seen. "They Met In A Taxi," previously titled "The Gay Bride," also was finished. Directed by Alfred E. Green, it presents Chester Morris, Fay Wray, Lionell Stander, Raymond Walburn, Henry Mollison, Kenneth Harlan, Ward Bond and Frank Melton.

"The Garden Of Allah," Selznick International, which, like "Ramona" and "Light Brigade," was long in production, was finished this week. The principals are Marlene Deitrich, Charles Boyer, Tilly Losch, C. Aubrey Smith, Basil Rathbone, Joseph Schildkraut, Henry Kleinbach, John Carradine, Robert Fraser and David Scott. Richard Boleslawski directed.

At Universal "Postal Inspector" was finished. The cast lists Ricardo Cortez, Patricia Ellis, Bela Lugosi, Michael Loring, David Oliver, Wallis Clark, Guy Usher, Arthur Loft, William Hall, Hattie McDaniel, Marla Shelton, Robert Davis, Henry Hunter, Billy Burrud and Harry Beresford. Otto Brower directed.

MGM completed "His Brothers' Wife." Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck are starred. Support includes Jean Hersholt, Edgar Edwards, Joseph Calleia, John Eldredge, Samuel Hinds, Pedro de Cordoba and Leonard Mudie. W. S. Van Dyke directed.

Rounding out the fifteen completed pictures is Radio's "Second Wife." In it Walter Abel, Gertrude Michael, Eric Rhodes, Lee Van Atta, Emma Dunn, Ann Shoemaker and Maxine Jennings will be seen. Edward Killy directed.

As is usual in any week during which a holiday falls, the first week of July saw a noticeable slump in production. Only five pictures started. A like number finished.

Two pictures went into work at Radio. In "Don't Turn 'Em Loose" Bruce Cabot, James Gleason, Betty Grable, Louise Latimer, Lewis Stone, Harry Jans, Fern Emmett, Arthur Hoyt and Maxine Jennings will be seen. Ben Stoloff is directing. "Portrait Of A Rebel" features Katherine Hepburn with Herbert Marshall and Doris Dudley. Mark Sandrich is the director.

Paramount also started two pictures. "Murder With Pictures" has Lew Ayers, Gail Patrick and Paul Kelly in the principal roles supported by Joyce Compton, Onslow Stevens, Benny Baker, Ernest Cossart and Joseph Sawyer. Charles Barton is directing. Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland again are teamed in "Wives Never Know," which also includes Adolphe Menjou, Claude Gillingwater, Fay Holden, Louise Beavers, Constance Bergen, Don Rowan, Norma Lee and Porter Hall in the cast. Elliott Nugent directs.

At Universal "Ace Drummond" went before the cameras. Codirected by Cliff Smith and Forde Beebe, the cast includes John King, Jean Rogers, Guy Bates Post, William Hall, Diana Gibson, Russell Wade, Jackie Morrow, House Peters, Noah Beery, Jr. and Lon Chaney, Jr.

Paramount completed "A Son Comes Home." Mary Boland, Donald Woods, Julie Hayden and Wallace Ford are featured, supported by Anthony Nace, Roger Imhoff, Gertrude Hoffman, Herbert Rawlinson and Tom Kennedy. E. A. Dupont directed the picture.

A Radio "Mummy's Boys" was finished. Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey are starred, with Barbara Pepper, Moroni Olsen, Frank M. Thomas, Willie Best and Francis McDonald listed in support. Fred Guiol directed.

Two pictures were finished at Warners. The cast of "Stage Struck" is headed by Dick Powell and Joan Blondell. A lengthy supporting roster includes Jeanne Madden, Warren William, Frank McHugh, Craig Reynolds, Carol Hughes, Spring Byington, Johnnie Arthur, Thomas Pogue, Lulu McConnell, Hobart Cavanaugh, Val Stanton, Ernie Stanton, Andrew Tombes, Libby Taylor and Alice Cassidy. Busby Berkely directed. In "Way For A Pirate" Guy Gibbee, Sybil Jason, May Robson, Jane Bryan, Fred Lawrence, Maude All, Dick Purcell, Granville Bates, Mary Treen and Vic Potel will be seen, directed by Nick Grinde. is being produced, promises to emerge as the real star of a commercial value much more definite than her name currently represents.

The story is an original screen play by Frances Hyland and Saul Elkins, directed by Lewis Seiler, recently credited with the handling of "The First Baby," "Here Comes Trouble" and "Paddy O'Day."

Music and lyrics are by Karin Michaelis and Harry Akst, in collaboration with Sidney Claire.

Jane Darwell is the mother of the Lind family. Claire Trevor, Arline Judge and Evalyn Venable are the three children who aspire in vain to stage fame, but are determined that their lack of success shall never be known to their mother. Additionally the cast includes J. Edward Bromberg, remembered for his performance in "The Crime of Doctor Forbes," Astrid Allwyn, Alan Dinehart, now in "Charlie Chan at the Race Track"; Dean Jagger, Joyce Compton, Adrienne Marden, Susan Fleming, Chick Chandler, Frank Reicher and Dickie Walters.

It may be noted that in line with the producing company's intent to make the film of more than ordinary attractiveness to younger adult theatregoers, the cast is preponderantly youthful.

Adventure in Manhattan

(Columbia)

Comedy Romance

Having in mind the popularity that has accrued to Jean Arthur as the result of her appearances in "Ex Mrs. Bradford" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," Columbia, undoubtedly wisely, decided to cast her in another of those comic and not to be taken seriously dramatic tinged romances made up of ingredients potentially box office in character. Additionally the producers elected to feature her with Joel McCrea, who in his series of pictures made for Goldwyn has elevated his entertainment and commercial worth. Additionally the supporting cast was chosen with a particular eye towards its box office value.

The story told in the picture is modern and quite novel, although it follows a theme and indulges in situations that have demonstrated their entertainment appeal. Told against the topical background of newspaper work, it concerns itself with a young author, McCrea, who seems to have the uncanny ability accurately to prophesy crimes. His reporter brothers decide to gang up on him and they elect Jean Arthur as the personable young woman who shall convince the too clever amateur criminologist that there are facts of life, particularly feminine, about which he knows little. Actual crimes interlude to complicate the hoax, the result being that the leads embroil themselves in much journalistic and romantic adventure, zestful in character, that promises to be highly comic in character.

The story upon which the production is based is an original by May Edington, with screen play by Sidney Buchman, Harry Sauber and Jack Kirkland. Direction is by Edward Ludwig.

Four Warner Theatres Close

Four Warner theatres in the Pittsburgh area have been closed for the summer, it was announced this week. The houses are the Columbia, Warren; Columbia, Erie; Prince, Ambridge, and Liberty, Donora.

Paramount Announces Foreign Promotions

The following promotions in the French territory have been announced by the foreign department of Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Maurice Poirier, branch manager at Paris, advanced to general sales manager of France, Belgium and northern Africa; Robert Lenglet, branch manager at Marseilles, advanced to branch manager at Paris; Edmond Langneau, from branch manager at Strasbourg to the same post at Bordeaux; Nicolas Francais, salesman at Strasbourg, advanced to branch manager there, and Bruno Legrand, advanced from special representative to sales supervisor at the Paris Exchange.

Danville Opening Success

Most of the leading citizens of Danville, Pa., shared in the opening last weekend of the new Comerford house there. A community dinner at noon had I. E. Wolf, president of the Chamber of Commerce, as toastmaster, and Reed McCarty, editor of the Morning News, as principal speaker, with Frank C. Walker and M. E. Comerford as guests. A parade and daylight fireworks preceded the formal opening. George A. Nevin is managing the house.

Barusch Seeks Office

Walter Barusch, advertising and publicity man and a San Francisco representative of Motion Picture Herald, is a candidate for the California State Assembly from San Mateo County. Mr. Barusch ran for the same office two years ago, receiving 2,000 votes and running second in a field of four candidates.

"Bride" Title Is Changed

Chester Morris and Fay Wray's new vehicle, which went into production as "There Goes the Bride," will be released under the title "They Met in a Taxi," according to an announcement made this week by Columbia Pictures.

RKO Signs Ermolieff

Joseph N. Ermolieff, European producer of "Michael Strogoff," has been signed by RKO Radio as technical adviser for an English version of the picture to be produced by Pandro S. Berman.

"Adverse" Opening Set

"Anthony Adverse" will have its world premier at the Geary Theatre in San Francisco on July 27th. The New York opening of the picture will probably be early next month.

Alexander Series Begun

Ross Alexander, who is to be featured by First National in a series of three pictures, will be seen first in "Over the Wall" instead of "The Go-Getter," as previously announced.

Polly Rowles Gets Screen Test

Mary Elizabeth (Polly) Rowles, Pittsburgh amateur actress, will go to Hollywood for a screen test with Universal Pictures.

Fox Signs Gordon, Revel

Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, songwriting team, have signed a one-year contract with Twentieth Century-Fox.

"Romeo and Juliet" To Play Road Bookings

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is completing arrangements for the booking of "Romeo and Juliet" in roadshow engagements for next fall and winter. It is reported that the film is to be booked through United Booking Offices to play 25 Shubert and Erlanger houses beginning Sept. 6 at $2 top.

Ohio Censors See 390 Reels

Of a total of 390 reels of film reviewed in June, the Ohio censors ordered eliminations in 15. This is the smallest number of reels submitted in a single month this year. For the first six months of 1936 the censors reviewed a total of 3,148 reels and ordered 165 eliminations.

Republic Sales Gain 100 Per Cent, Says Millstein

Republic Pictures' sales are up more than 100 per cent as compared to this time last year, J. J. Millstein, general sales manager said this week. A number of important circuit deals have been closed, including Loew's.

Edward M. Schnitzer, eastern division sales manager, is touring Albany, Buffalo and Detroit on a trip which will keep him away from the home office until late next week.

L. E. Kalker, head of Republic for the United Kingdom, has been named Continental sales manager effective August 1 by Mr. Millstein to succeed H. Satori, who resigned.

KILLING THE GOOSE WITH RADIO SHOWS

To the Editor of the Herald:

Check! . . ."Them's my sentiments exactly!". . . to the page advertisement appearing on page 49 of June 5th issue of the Motion Picture Herald.

I do not know who stepped forward with this splendid idea of presenting, in such forceful manner, the exact state of affairs regarding all the free radio shows that are costing we exhibitors, but I offer my heartiest congratulations to them and I am looking forward to next week's issue regarding same.

Personally, I think it high time that a great deal of "soap-suds" be raised in order to show those stars, made by the screen, the folly of their radio broadcasts, as they are not only detrimental to our business, by offering free competition, but it will eventually be their own downfall if we do not have their full cooperation in drawing patrons in the theatres, which is their so-called "bread and butter," and it depends upon their ability to draw at the box-office that made them stars.

Common sense will show that keeping patrons away from the theatres by free-radio broadcasts given by screen-stars is similar to "killing the goose that lays the golden egg."—Raleigh W. Sharrock, Palace Theatre, Morrilton, Ark.

"I ALWAYS SEND PROTEST"

To the Editor of the Herald:

For many years a reader and lately a subscriber of the Motion Picture Herald, I wish to inform you that I shall not renew my subscription next year if you keep on printing such articles on French business as the one edited in your issue of May 23rd.

The man to be blamed for giving such wrong information is probably your Paris correspondent, who seems to be much more interested in politics than in moving pictures.

I have spent one-half of my time in France and the other half in the U. S. A., and I pretend to know both countries pretty well. Every time I notice in a French paper an article written by its American correspondent and liable to give the French reader a wrong impression of America, I always send a protest to the editor. Thus I feel obliged to act the same way with you. So may I inform you that:

The actual French government is not a Socialist but a Popular Front form of government; to take one for another would be the same as to put in the same basket Tammany Hall and New Deal advocates.

There has always been, even under Nationalistic governments, newsreel propaganda in France.

M. Autre's words, "First it (the Socialist cabinet) must gain the confidence of the nation, and that will not be easy," show too well that he is politically too much one-sided. He may not like Socialism, and it is his own right to write it, but not in an article the purpose of which is only to send to America information about the French movie market.

I should also like to call M. Autre's attention to the fact that both M. Malvy and M. Petsche, whom he said "may both participate in the Socialist government," are not in any friendly terms with the Popular Front, and that the new cabinet does not include any secretary for radio and cinema, socialist or no socialist, though your correspondent told you it was "reported so." M. Autre should learn that a good newspaper man does not use such formulas as "it is reported that." What your readers want is valuable and true information, not "reports" or "gossips."

My main idea in writing this letter is to give you some information, and I should like you to take it as a token of the consideration in which I hold the Motion Picture Herald. But, whatever you think of it, I do not want it to be the origin of any argument between M. Autre and myself. I have never met your correspondent and do not wish to.—Charles Farchy, 1 rue Parquet, Paris, France.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Subscriber Farchy appears to have read too little of or too much into the article referred to, which the turn of events has proved an especially competent and lucid exposition of a particularly complex state of affairs. His solicitude for Correspondent Autre's reportorial technique and the integrity of this publication's news columns is no less accurately evaluated on both sides of the Atlantic.—T. R.

Protective Group For Roxy Theatre

A protective committee for holders of the first mortgage bonds of Roxy Theatres Corporation has been formed with Chester H. Tipton, president of C. H. Tipton Securities Corporation, as chairman. Roxy Theatres Corporation went into receivership in May, 1932 and in June, 1934, petition was filed under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act in the United States district court.

The committee proposes, according to the announcement, to bring about the adoption of a "sound and fair plan" of reorganization which will permit current earnings of the Roxy theatre to be used for payment of interest on the first mortgage bonds. These bonds total $3,598,208.

Chance Game Suits Up in Three States

Activities along the chance game front were practically at a standstill this week, with action taking place in only three states. At Tampa, Fla., attorneys for theatre interests filed demurrers in the circuit court on Bank Night suits. At St. Joseph, Mo., suit was filed for non-payment of chance game insurance and in Kentucky chance games were alleged to be lotteries.

Attorneys for the Tampa theatre have filed demurrers in the circuit court at Tampa on the two pending Bank Night suits there. In each suit the plaintiff claimed damages because the theatre allegedly refused to pay the prize money. In the demurrers the attorneys declare the plaintiffs have no right to go to court to collect the prizes, as they paid nothing for their chance to win. The first suit was filed by Mrs. Hazel Greene, the second by W. A. Rice, who, he charged, had been refused a prize of $1,550 because he had taken three minutes to answer to his name, while the time limit was a minute less.

Dorothy Wyatt has filed suit in the circuit court of St. Joseph, Mo., against Abe Slusky and Louis Slusky, alleging that the two declined to pay her $300 on a Bank Night "insurance policy."

Boyd Theatres, Inc., a Cincinnati corporation composed of Abe Libson, Maurice White and others, operating the Paramount, at Ashland, Ky., has been named defendant in a civil suit filed in the Ashland circuit court by E. P. Harris, commonwealth attorney, asking discontinuance of Bank Night, Sweepstakes and similar forms of "lottery." The suit cites three alleged offenses and seeks to recover the maximum fine of $5,000 for each offense.

Wurtzel Rushes Program To Finish in January

With two pictures, "Pepper" and "Charlie Chan at the Racetrack," already completed, Sol M. Wurtzel will finish his entire 1936-37 program for Twentieth Century-Fox by the end of next January. Mr. Wurtzel plans to start three pictures monthly until January. Currently he has "Ramona," "The Holy Lie" and "Across the Aisle" in work. Next month he will start "Thank You, Jeeves," "See America First," and a Jane Withers picture yet untitled.

The Wurtzel unit will move from Western Avenue to Movietone City about September 15.

Stockholders Take Theatre

The Penn, Loew house in Pittsburgh, has been acquired by the Penn Federal Corporation, a group composed of preferred stockholders who took charge of the theatre two years ago but permitted the Loew circuit to operate it. Inability to negotiate favorably with tenants in the theatre building was given as the reason for the change.

Vancouver Plant To Reopen

Revival of Central Films, Ltd., producing pictures at Vancouver, B.C., for release by Columbia under the British quota regulations has been announced. Two pictures are scheduled, the first of which will be "Vengeance of the Forest."

MEIGHAN DEATH TAKES STAR OF SILENT SCREEN

Started in Stock, Entered Pictures 20 Years Ago; Popularity Declined with Sound

The death of Thomas Meighan last week at his home, Grenwolde, in the fashionable Kings Point section of Great Neck, Long Island, removed an outstanding star of the years of the silent screen. He had been ill for two years and was 57 years old.

Mr. Meighan was stricken with pneumonia in Hollywood in January, 1935, and the illness left a bronchial tube obstruction, for the removal of which he underwent an operation a year ago at Doctors' hospital, in New York. He became ill again last month and appeared to be recovering, but a relapse followed. The Reverend Ronald MacDonald, of St. Aloysius Roman Catholic Church, Great Neck, administered the last rites of the church to him, and Wednesday night the actor passed away quietly after two hours of coma.

With Mr. Meighan when he died were his wife, Mrs. Frances Ring Meighan, sister of Blanche Ring; a brother, James E. Meighan; a sister, Miss May Meighan, and Mrs. Leon Errol, wife of the comedian, Surviving also are two other brothers, John A. Meighan, of Pittsburgh, and William J. Meighan of Hagerstown, Md., and a sister, Mrs. M. C. Schneider, of Pittsburgh.

2,000 at Requiem High Mass

Funeral services for the star were held last Saturday morning in St. Patrick's Cathedral in Manhattan, with 2,000 attending the celebration of a requiem high mass by the Reverend John F. White, treasurer of the Catholic Actors' Guild and pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception at Stapleton, Staten Island. He was assisted by the Reverend Matthew Golden, deacon, and the Reverend Charles O'Connor Sloane, sub-deacon. Also on the altar were the Reverend Timothy Shannley and the Reverend Edward Leonard. There was no eulogy.

Honorary pallbearers at the service, most of whom were members of the Lambs, of which Mr. Meighan served two terms as Shepherd, the first motion picture actor to be so honored, were H. H. Buxbaum, John C. Jenks, Robert L. Hague, A. O. Brown, Major Edward Bowes, Billy DeBeck, Nicholas M. Schenck, Gene Buck, Fred Zimmerman, Jr., David Warfield, Joe Connolly, Ed Wynn, Charles Winninger, Frank Crumit, the present Shepherd of the Lambs, and Lewis E. Lawes, Warden of Sing Sing Prison.

Ushers were Oscar Shaw, Earl Benham, Donald Brian, Kenneth Loane, John W. Alicoate, Thomas L. Martin and Arthur M. Nunn.

Burial was in Calvary Cemetery, Queens, Long Island.

The rise of Thomas Meighan in motion pictures was not meteoric, for his climb from the ranks of stock company actors to the crest of Hollywood's fame took 15 years. But, when he finally reached the top he was accepted as the most popular motion picture actor in America. He was Paramount's outstanding male star for years, his pictures drawing so steadily that Adolph Zukor regarded him as a good luck symbol.

Mr. Meighan's first appearance as an actor was in Pittsburgh, his birthplace, where Henrietta Crosman engaged him as an extra in "Mistress Nell." Then he played three seasons with David Warfield, and appeared at the Manhattan theatre, New York, as Colonel Gorda in "Her Majesty, the Queen of Nordenmark" in 1900; appeared in the all-star cast of "The Two Orphans"; played Billy Bolton in "The College Widow" both here and in London in 1908; and starred as Robert Wallace in "Broadway Jones" in 1914.

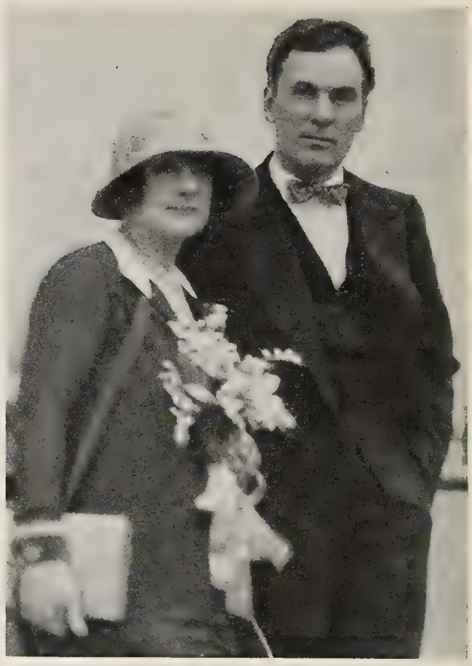
Entered Pictures 20 Years Ago

It was in 1916 that he entered pictures. He obtained his first part opposite Laura Hope Crews in "The Fighting Hope." Subsequently he appeared with Billie Burke, Norma Talmadge, Mary Pickford, Elsie Ferguson, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Blanche Sweet, Edna Goodrich and Charlotte Walker. Among the pictures he made were "Male and Female," "Our Leading Citizen," "The Prince Chap," "Why Change Your Wife," "The Bachelor Daddy," "Coming Through," "Manslaughter," "Old Home Week," "The Man Who Found Himself," "The Racket," "M'Liss," "Out of a Clear Sky," and many others. His greatest success was in "The Miracle Man," with Betty Compson.

Mr. Meighan was the only star who consistently refused to go to Hollywood, remembering that production was at one time centered in and around New York. Along with Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix, the Big-Three of Famous Players, he refused to move west when the company shifted its production activities to California. He stayed at the Astoria, L. I., studios.

Many of the younger players and a long list of veterans have recollections of Mr. Meighan's help during his long stardom, for he had great freedom in picking his casts.

The decline of his popularity followed the advent of sound. The new technique disturbed him at first and he preferred to spend more and more of his time at his Great Neck home rather than on the coast after Paramount's Astoria studio closed, about eight years ago. This, in spite of the fact, as associates agreed, that he had an excellent speaking voice.



His last picture was "Peck's Bad Boy" for Sol Lesser.

San Francisco Fire Rules Are Relaxed

Regulations limiting standees in theatres, which have been the source of considerable irritation to exhibitors, have been relaxed in San Francisco by the board of aldermen. The change is due largely to the fact that the police recently began enforcing the old ordinance prohibiting the sale of tickets when any patron is standing. Under the new ordinance theatres will be permitted to allow as many standees as the fire department considers proper in various types of buildings.

The Kansas Senate and House last week voted to confine the special session entirely to the discussion of the social security amendment and this decision removed any fears exhibitors might have had of the passing of theatre tax bills.

The Louisiana state legislature also adjourned last week with many bills, unfavorable to the industry, still in the Ways and Means Committee.

Brooks County, in Georgia, seeking to collect a $25 tax from the Ilex Theatre, lost the decision in a hearing before Judge Thomas in Valdosta. Counsel for the theatre claimed the law under which the country tried to collect the tax was framed before motion pictures were introduced.

Press Service Formed

National Studios Press Service has been organized in New York City by Louis Rosenbluh, former Fox executive. The new unit is designed to serve all of the major companies and independents, concentrating its activities on the arrival and departure of film stars.

MARCH OF TIME CRITICIZES OTHER REELS, CITES $1,000,000 GROSS

Scoops Cancel Each Other, with One Newsreel's Baby Parade Equal to Another's Sea-Lions, Says Anniversary Review

The editors of Time Magazine and of the related Fortune Magazine take occasion on the first anniversary of their March of Time newsreel to make some frank assertions regarding the business policy and proceeds of the production, and to toss some equally frank criticism at the old line newsreels, in a lavishly illustrated folio uniquely titled "Four Hours a Year."

The review of their experiences with the production and distribution of the films every month for the first year, and with the experiments which followed the inception of the idea, is labeled in a foreword by the editors as "a chapter in the history of pictorial journalism—in the use of a new language, difficult, as yet unmastered, but incredibly powerful and strangely universal."

In a section of the book called "Price and Prejudice" it is claimed that the March of Time, with an investment of $900,000 in its first year, is now grossing nearly $1,000,000 a year. On an accompanying sketch map of the United States it is shown that on February 1, 1935, the first issue of the newsreel played 417 theatres in 168 cities and that on April 15, 1936, each monthly edition was playing 5,236 theatres in 3,215 cities. Such candid statement of accounts is rarely made by any film company.

In the autumn of 1934, says the review, a number of major distributors were willing to take the March of Time on the basis that a typical short subject costs about $8,000 to make and is intended to gross about $25,000, netting a small profit. The publishers of the reel claimed that a monthly gross of $25,000 was an inadequate sum out of which to publish and distribute a photographic journal such as they planned. A goal of $100,000 gross per issue was set.

This figure, the editors relate, was looked upon as ridiculous by the trade, and the March of Time undertook its own distribution through a minor independent distributor. From the start, its sponsors say, the prices asked were entirely out of line with the ordinary market. It was conceded that these prices were too high to be long tenable, but within a few months public response to the pictures had demonstrated that the reel had box office value.

Large distributors, the review adds, although no longer unconvinced of the possibility of a $100,000 gross, were still shy of the new short because they were afraid its frankness might arouse prejudice in varied audiences.

In June, 1935, Radio-Keith-Orpheum agreed to distribute the product. A gross of $75,000 now is claimed to be a reality. Besides the American distribution the reels play in England, Australia and South America, although world exploitation only recently was launched. There is no French language edition of the March of Time because "Frenchmen, aware of their low boiling point, have imposed upon themselves some of the world's strictest censorship laws with the result that though the headquarters for Europe are in Paris, the film is not yet released for that country."

Tracing the development of the idea for a journalistic motion picture, the editors tell the results of their study of the existing newsreel. They found, according to the story, that first of all little or no money was being made in the newsreel field and there was little competitive effort in their production.

Scoops Cancel Each Other

"Cameramen might risk their necks to get an occasional scoopshot," the story says, "but the scoops cancelled each other, leaving one newsreel's baby parade almost exactly equal to another newsreel's sea-lions.

"Except for Pathe in the early days, no reputation, good or bad, had ever been made in the newsreels. Mr. Hearst had a newsreel, but none of his vigor was reflected in his movie product. The most stultifying self-imposed censorship ever known to journalism blanketed the existing output. For nearly a year, in 1934, there was an unofficial but strikingly thorough ban on Hitler's voice and picture in U. S. theatres. Controlled by the fiction-magnates of Hollywood, the newsreel was required only to sidestep trouble. The result was the newsreel as you knew it.

"It was even worse in 1934 than in earlier years, because the introduction of sound had limited the mobility of the camera, with the result that the only way to portray a U. S. statesman was to back him up against a wall and let him stand there jawing at you for 30 seconds.

"Nevertheless, it was not the dullness of the newsreels which impressed Time: it was, in spite of everything, their excitement, their force. Not in the public's boredom, but in the public's avid appetite for newsreels, Time saw its opportunity. Either the lords of Hollywood had totally underestimated the public's appetite for newsreels, or they felt themselves for various reasons incapable of feeding it. Probably the latter."

The editors, citing their claim that they have put real news in the newsreels, note that during the year there has been a marked increase in the significance and coherence of the traditional newsreel. "The Ethiopian war, for example," they say, "has been admirably portrayed by Fox, Paramount, Hearst Metrotone in sharp contrast to their lame handling of the equally exciting Manchuria and Shanghai crises of 1931-32."

The story explains that the plan for the March of Time grew out of the realization by the publishers of Time of the increased value of news pictures, of their own unusual method of handling such pictures and of the development of candid camera shots. Use of special camera technique in illustrating Fortune, particularly, is given as the seed of the newsreel idea.

In the compilation of statistics for the map the editors unearth the fact, related in a digressing label, that outside of proper names, motion picture theatres in the United States have only about 25 different names. The Strand is the most frequent nomenclature, according to the map. In second place is Palace, followed by the rest of the royal family, Rex, Empress, Imperial and Princess.

"Genius in Hollywood"

Aside from the main subjects covered in the anniversary book, the editors, in a two-page spread, describe Darryl Zanuck, 32, of Twentieth Century-Fox; Walter Wanger, 42, United Artists; David Selznick, 35, United Artists, and Irving Thalberg, 36, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, as "Genius in Hollywood" and quote the four men as giving high praise to the achievements of the March of Time.

The book illustrates its method of production with stills from its sequence on the Tennessee Valley and status of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Subject Cut from March of Time Release on Protest from Consul

The motion picture dramatization of Rafael Trujillo, President of Santo Domingo, has been eliminated from the current release of The March of Time at the Radio City Music Hall in New York after a protest by the local Dominican Consul.

The story pictured Senor Trujillo as "dictator of the tightest little tyranny in the Caribbean" and reenacted one murder alleged to have been instigated by him.

W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall, said only that "we cannot afford to offend any nation friendly to the United States."

March of Time editors declared the film story is a true picture of conditions in Santo Domingo. They said that since the picture was made they have not been able to find any Dominican who could point to an error of fact in the story.

Their facts, they said, were checked by their own investigators, and were fully borne out by reports of press associations, correspondents and by the Foreign Policy Association.

BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Runaway Ship

Catching history on the hop Michael Balcon, director of production for Gaumont-British, has arranged to film the amazing adventures of the trawler The Girl Pat before the whole details of these adventures are known, let alone set down on paper. What is already known is thrilling enough to make Mr. Balcon's quick deal look a very clever one. The Girl Pat, first runaway ship in history, ranged thousands of miles of ocean in face of the sea power of the British Empire before she was finally rounded up, with difficulty, by armed forces. Just why she, or her captain and crew, ran away is still a good deal of a mystery but the flight looks like making good film material. Whether or not the crew are used in their own characters the most important figure in the episode will be duly featured—The Girl Pat herself has been bought by GB.

Most important current studio production by G-B is the Jessie Matthews "Head Over Heels," directed by Sonnie Hale. It went on the floor at Shepherd's Bush with two Americans in important parts. One of them is Whitney Bourne, who played with Claude Rains in "Crime without Passion," and the other Romney Brent, currently playing in the London theatre success, "Three Men on a Horse." Brent already has played in the Arliss picture, "East Meets West," for G-B. Louis Borrell, Dutch actor, recently discovered at the Embassy theatre here, is also in the "Head Over Heels" cast.

Arliss' Next

Scenes for George Arliss' next for G-B, "The Nelson Touch," have been shot both on the Northolt exterior lot, where they have built a big set of an Arabian desert city, and on the Shepherd's Bush floor. Arliss has the dual role of a British foreign minister and his scapegrace brother who causes trouble in the Near East. Dewan Sharar, Hindu playwright, is advising on Eastern settings.

A whole battalion of British infantry was put at the disposal of G-B by the Army Council for first scenes at Southampton for "O.H.M.S.," directed by Raoul Walsh, with Anna Lee in the lead. Also used was the troopship Dilware, and the organization of dock facilities, railway transport and equipment was handled by the Royal Army Service Corps and the Royal Army Ordnance Corps. A few years ago any British producer who set up a camera in a public place was certain of arrest.

At Loch Lomond

Twickenham's "Fall of an Empire" unit left on Monday, July 6th, for a fortnight's location work on and about Loch Lomond, famous Scottish beauty spot. Maurice Elvey, director, and Curt Courant, cameraman, Dolly Haas, Marjorie Mars, Richard Barthelmess and Henry Oscar of the leads are in the party. The big scene to be filmed on the water is one in which Anna, a spy (played by Marjorie Mars), jumps overboard after losing an important dispatch to Gerard (Richard Barthelmess), who dives to the rescue. Interiors of a Swiss cafe, with more atmosphere of espionage and counter-espionage, were the last to be filmed at Twickenham studio.

The production unit getting the race sequence at Epsom Downs for "Wings of the Morning", New World production in color made by Robert T. Kane at Denham Studios in England for release by Twentieth Century-Fox. Starred are Annabella, Leslie Banks, Henry Fonda and John McCormack.

Julius Hagen has signed Flanagan and Allen, famous variety and radio duo, for a feature entitled "Undereath the Arches," after their most famous number. It will be directed for Twickenham at the Hammersmith studios by Albert de Courville, from a script by Allison Booth.

Operetta Starts

Capitol Film Corporation, the Max Schach organization, has started production at Denham on "Land without Music," an adaptation of the Oscar Straus operetta, directed by Walter Forda. Richard Tauber, starring, has opposite him Diana Napier, the English screen actress whom he very recently married. June Clyde and Derrick de Marney also are featured. Said to reproduce an historical episode in Italy, "Land without Music" reads like fantasy, the story being that a reigning Princess (Diana Napier) who outlaws music in her territory and then falls in love with a singer (Tauber). Varied talent put behind the production includes Eric Maschwitz, of the British Broadcasting Company, as additional dialogue writer to the screen story by L. du Garde Peach and Marion Dix, and musical direction by Van Phillips and Boyd Neel. "Costumes by the Marchioness of Queensbury" is another credit line.

Troopship in Studio

Warner Bros.-First National, at Teddington, is giving the British Army more publicity in "Hail and Farewell," a Claude Hulbert and Reginald Purdell comedy vehicle which Ralph Ince began to direct this week. Replicas of the decks of a troopship have filled the whole studio floor for opening scenes and five lifeboats, specially transported from the Thames, are in situ, regulation davits and all complete. Two hundred khaki-clad warriors and a score of Lascar sailors are the crowd background. In the cast are Bruce Lister, Moira Reed, Nicholas Hannen, Joyce Kennedy, Henry Caine, Wally Patch, Roy Russell, Philip Ray and Ivan Sampson.

Items

J. Elder Wills has completed "Sporting Love" for Hammer Productions-British Lion release and started on the direction of the Gitta Alpar "Because of Love.". . . New World's "Wings of the Morning," all-Technicolor for 20th Century-Fox release, has reached modern scenes after 17th Century scenes of gay gipsy revelling in Clontarf castle, Ireland. . . . Jean Gillie has her second role in a Jack Buchanan feature in "This'll Make You Whistle," now in its third week. . . . Marie Tempest, famous British stage comedienne, has her first film role in "Monlight Sonata," Pall Mall production to be made at Denham with the famous violinist Paderewski starring in his own character. Lothar Mendes, who directs, is also managing director of Pall Mall Productions. He made "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" for London and is scheduled to do another picture for them. . . . Sabu, Indian native boy discovered by Robert Flaherty in Mysore for London's "Elephant Boy," has been sightseeing in London. He is likely to be used in other pictures at Denham, probably with Iravatha, elephant star of the film.

Irving Asher, managing director of Warner Bros., has placed under long term contract Bruce Lister, twenty-four years old, six foot, and blue eyed, a British stage and screen player who has a small part in the Teddington "Head Office," and a bigger one in "Hail and Farewell." He has played in the stage "White Cargo" and the screen. "Death at Broadcasting House," among others. . . . The Herbert Wilcox production "Millions," Gordon Harker directed by Leslie Hiscott, has been retitled "the King of Cloves." . . . Dave Bader has signed a sole representation contract with Barry O'Neill. Leo Britt, theatre relations manager to Mr. Bader, set the deal with the New York star. . . .

BRITISH PRODUCERS ARE DIVIDED OVER INCREASED QUOTA DEMANDS

Government Asked to Legislate, Finds Exhibitors and Distributors Solid for Greater Restrictions, Studios at Odds

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The dissent of Associated British Pictures and Gaumont-British from the application for a more stringent Quota, put forward by the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries to the Moyne Committee on the Films Act, was recorded in the official minutes issued by the committee. The fact that the subsequent resignation of ABP from the group is still a matter of comment and surmise in Wardour Street must therefore be ascribed to the resignation itself rather than to its cause. Undoubtedly it came as a surprise to the trade and there is a deal of speculation, nearly a week after the event, as to the effect of John Maxwell's action on other companies.

Obviously expected in some quarters was that G-B would follow ABP's example and officially range itself with the interests in opposition to the Film Group. This step has not been taken and, according to G-B executives who should know, will not be taken. G-B, however, continues to dissent from the Film Group's policy on the Quota. This curious situation is perhaps explained by the fact that G-B has always been a strong supporter of the FBI Group, while ABP resigned on a previous occasion and, after rejoining, was regarded in many quarters as a formal rather than enthusiastic supporter of its policies.

The important thing that emerges is that British producers have failed to establish unanimity in regard to the most vital suggestion put before the Moyne Committee, an advisory body of the Board of Trade, appointed for the specific purpose of making recommendations for future film legislation. The opposing interests of exhibitors, through the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, and of distributors through the Kinematograph Renters Society, will each present a unanimous case, with the common feature of asking a relaxation instead of an intensification of quota requirements.

In attempting to estimate the relative weight which will be attached to these cases by the committee, there are factors which must be borne in mind. It is certain that attempts will be made to discount the opposition of ABP and G-B on the ground that these companies have theatre interests of greater importance to them than their studio holdings. This is, at the best, a half truth. It is less true of G-B than of ABP. Whereas ABP deliberately has kept its production on a modest scale, G-B has greatly increased production both in footage and scale and, as the only British production organization to establish a direct selling branch in America, it is obvious that it cannot be written off as a theatre company making films as a sideline. In any classification on an accepted trade basis they must be accounted major producers, in a market in which less than five companies at present can be strictly so described.

Strengthens KRS Case

There is also the question whether the theatre interests of G-B and ABP should not give greater rather than less weight to their opposition to an increased quota. It is assurable that the producer who has to handle the quota at the box office as well as at the studio at least is nearer to a dispassionate viewpoint than one whose interest in the matter begins and ends with footage and floor space.

Another result of the split in the Film Group must be to give greatly increased importance to the case presented to the committee by the Kinematograph Renters Society. John Maxwell was one of the KRS spokesmen and, it is understood, emphasized his company's opposition to the suggestions of the Film Group. G-B is also a member of the KRS and in agreement with its policy. If any all-British distributors went on record as dissenting from the majority policy the fact has not leaked out. The KRS, as is known, wants a drastic revision of the whole footage basis of the quota. Making an application for a definite reduction in percentage and a permanent differentiation in scale in favor of the theatre owner is the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, with a practically hundred per cent representation in that field.

That is the trade line up as it appears with the Moyne Committee practically through with the taking of evidence.

Cooperative Production

Suggestions made during the CEA Conference at Eastbourne that liberal finance would be available to produce 20 British features a year, if exhibitors would guarantee 500 playdates, have been carried a stage further. There, in fact, have been meetings between officers of the CEA and the authors of the plan, who include Capt. A. F. Dixey, associated with an earlier production plan based on the Consolidated studio at Elstree.

Envisaged is a company on lines similar to the original First National Circuit of America, with exhibitors as part owners of the producing and distributing organization and contracting to take the product.

Skeptics already are pointing out that, apart from the difficulties inherent in cooperative ventures in this industry, the Films Act offers a serious obstacle in that its Booking Restrictions section prohibits the booking of any film until it has been trade shown.

DENHAM PRODUCTION STALLED BY STRIKE

Six productions in work at the Denham Studios in London were held up by the walkout last weekend of 1,200 men in protest against the employment of two non-union painters. Negotiations to settle the strike were underway this week.

Edward Finney at Grand National; Adams at Republic

Edward Finney has resigned his post as advertising and publicity director of Republic Pictures and has joined Grand National Films, Inc., in the same capacity. The appointment was made by Carl Leserman, vice-president and general sales manager.

Mr. Finney has been in the industry more than 15 years, having been with United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and is a past president of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

Al Adams, who had been assisting Mr. Finney at Republic, has been promoted to take over the company's advertising and publicity duties. Prior to his joining Republic several months ago, Mr. Adams was with United Artists for a number of years.

Simultaneously with the announcement of Mr. Finney's joining Grand National came word that the company has signed James Cagney to a long-term contract. The actor recently won an action to have his contract with Warners set aside on the grounds that it had been breached through name billing not in keeping with provisions of the contract. Mr. Cagney will leave New York, where he has been vacationing, shortly for Hollywood, where his first picture for the new company will start next month. No definite vehicle has been chosen as yet and it is reported that the actor has been given the privilege of aiding in the selection of the story.

Mrs. Jacques Martin, 73, Veteran Actress, Dies

Funeral services were held this week under the auspices of the Actors' Fund of America for Mrs. Jacques Martin, veteran character actress, who died last week-end. She was 73 years old. Mrs. Martin had been on the stage since 1885 and achieved her first Broadway role in 1906. From that year until 1929 she starred in many plays including "Daddy Long Legs," "Shirley Kaye," "Shore Leave," "The Bride Retires," and "Tarnish."

Edward Smith Resigns As Boston Manager

Edward A. Smith has resigned as managing director of the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston after three years in that position. The resignation came after the announcement by the Mullin and Pinanski circuit that the theatre will go on a straight picture policy after Sept. 1st.

U.S. FILMS LEAD IN CZECH IMPORTS BUT COMPETITION IS FOUND STRONG

End of First Full Year of Resumption of American Distribution Shows Public Shopping for Its Entertainment

by HARRY KNOPF
in Prague

All distributing offices are busy with preparations for the new season, which will start here between the 15th and 31th of August. The American branches especially are working with full speed. They have completed their first year following the three years of reorganization of this market.

The year has brought the following developments:

The German section of the Czechoslovakian Republic is refusing to play American or any other foreign language pictures, because it prefers the German product.

Excessive exploitation of average films as outstanding product does not pay.

The fact that a picture has been a success in other countries does not insure good box office for it in this territory.

More than 160 American pictures were released in Prague between August, 1935, and July, 1936—more than 14 pictures a month, or a premiere every other day. The public tired of this mass of pictures, some good, some weak. A picture like "Back Street," a success all over, could not run longer than one week. The Charlie Chan series and Shirley Temple pictures were well received, as were "Modern Times" and "Queen Christina," not to forget Mickey Mouse.

MGM spent a large amount in Czecho crowns in exploiting its product, unusual for this country. So did the others.

The approximately 130 American pictures will be shown here in the new season 1936-37. RKO has not been longer represented here for two months and Warner Brothers' deal with the Prague representative, Emil Meissner-Film, is to end soon because the official Film Advisory Board is refusing its affirmation of the prices Warner Brothers is asking, owing to the regulations of the import prices and guarantees under the Import Cartel.

The import figures for the new season appear as follows: Fox, 25; United Artists, 23 features, and 18 Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony shorts; MGM, approximately 25; Paramount, 17; Columbia, 15; Universal, 18.

There is no doubt that MGM led the last season quantitatively and had also a number of very good pictures. 1936-37 will see Twentieth Century-Fox in the foreground as well as United Artists, too, with its Alexander Korda productions. A fine selection of very good features is indicated, with Paramount, Columbia and Universal also participating.

The United States will be the leading import country for the Czechoslovakian market again for 1937. It is certain that we will see many interesting pictures, but also very strong competition. It is not like last year, when theatre owners were paying for pictures whatever was asked because American pictures had been forbidden here for three years. The theatre owners today are carefully selecting product. Besides American films, there are also Austrian, German, English, French, Russian and last, but not least, the Czecho home production, which will be better than last year's.

Warners Dissolve First National For Tax Economy

First National Pictures, Inc., subsidiary of Warner Brothers Pictures, has been dissolved and its assets are to be consolidated within Warners, sole owner of the stock. The dissolution, which took place at a meeting in Wilmington, Del., last week end, is in line with provisions of the new federal tax law which provides for tax-free consolidations and it will result in substantial tax economies in the conduct of the two companies.

First National was founded early in 1917 by the late J. D. Williams and Thomas L. Talley through a coalition of exhibitors throughout the country who planned their own production facilities to avoid increasingly severe distributors' terms. The new organization signed such stars as Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford, the Talmadges and Thomas H. Ince, producer. It expanded rapidly and for many years was a dominant factor in the industry, being ranked, with Famous Players-Lasky and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, as the "Big Three."

It operated the Strand on New York's Broadway and this, together with the large Stanley circuit in Philadelphia, was acquired by Warner when it gained control of First National in 1929.

Warner has maintained First National as an active subsidiary, with its own star list and the brand name preserved on all its releases.

Walter Wanger Addresses S. Rankin Drew Post

Walter Wanger, back from Italy, where he is scheduled to produce from one to three pictures for United Artists, was principal speaker at a luncheon given by the S. Rankin Drew Post of the American Legion at the Astor Hotel, New York, July 10th. Mr. Wanger addressed his fellow members of the post on the subject of living conditions in Italy under Fascist rule, contrasting the present state of the country with that of the war time nation he knew as an aviator guilty, as he phrased it, of smashing five planes. He did not refer to motion pictures in his address.

Stock Units Delayed

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's plans for a stock company to try out new shows have not been completed, it was announced this week.

Canadian Music Deals Forced by ASCAP Move

Commercial users in the Dominion of Canada of the copyrighted music owned by members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers will have to conduct their own individual negotiations with copyright owners for the use of their music as a result of the impending withdrawal of ASCAP from the Canadian Performing Rights Society, it was stated in New York this week at ASCAP headquarters.

The action has a direct effect on all Canadian theatres, broadcasters, orchestras and other public, commercial music users. ASCAP's decision to withdraw from the Canadian society was made some time ago as a result of the enactment in the Dominion of new legislation regulating charges for the commercial use of copyrighted music. It was stated at the society that while negotiations with Canadian authorities looking to a modification of the legislation are still under way they appear to be almost "hopeless" at this time.

The society said that the Canadian situation always had been "unsatisfactory" because royalties from sources within the Dominion were insignificant and that the passage of the new restrictive rate legislation did not make it worthwhile for the society to continue doing business there. Indications are that ASCAP will retire from the Canadian Performing Rights Society as soon as its licenses with that organization expire in the near future. The society, thereafter, will act in Canada only as a "policing" agency for its American members, obtaining data and evidence on the unauthorized performance of any copyrighted music owned by its members and turning over this data to the music owners who may proceed from there as they see fit.

Meanwhile, dividend checks were sent out this week to members of the society from New York headquarters following their authorization by the board of directors, which met last Friday. The amount of the dividends totaled $1,050,000, the largest quarterly payment in the history of the organization. The payment of $950,000 for the first quarter of this year was the largest heretofore.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Park Rapids, Minn.

Dear Herald:

Boy, oh boy! Yesterday we went with Mr. and Mrs. Sherm Fitch and Mr. and Mrs. French over to Leach lake and yanked out a lotta walleyed pike. That is, since there is no one to dispute it or furnish proof to the contrary we will say that we yanked out a lotta of 'em. We might tell you about the size of some of them but then you know walleyes seldom ever get to weigh over 18 pounds, avoirdupois.

We wouldn't want to say that we caught the most of them for fear they might hear of it and that would start an argument, and we don't like arguments. Anyhow we came home to Sherm's lodge with enough fish for the whole neighborhood.

But maybe you don't know who Sherm Fitch and Mr. French are. Sherm is the RKO branch manager at Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and Mr. French is a Government postal inspector at St. Paul, Minnesota, and the two ladies who came with them are their wives, and how those ladies can cook and fish. Oh gosh. Gee whiz.

We left Sioux Falls early in the morning and drove over to Luverne, Minnesota, to see Herman Jochmans, who operates the theatre there, but Herman was still in bed, and not wanting to disturb a man when he was asleep we drove on up to Pipestone to see Lou Feldman, who operates Pipestone's popular theatre, and Lou hadn't got around yet, so we drove down to his house but he was still in bed.

Lou has a dog that seemed to regard us as an ordinary tramp. He showed us what nice white teeth he had but we would have taken his word for it without so much proof. We finally persuaded him to allow us to look Lou's rock garden over with the understanding that we were not to remove any of the rocks, and speaking of rock gardens, we want to give you boys a tip.

If you ever go to Pipestone, you must be sure to call on Lou and have him show you his rock garden, for there is nothing equal to it in Minnesota. Then, besides that, you must be sure to see his theatre and the way he has it decorated. He has added a swell canopy since we were there before.

We stopped at several theatres after we left Pipestone but found that the managers had mostly gone to visit their wife's folks for a holiday. At Montevideo we had the pleasure of meeting our old friend Jack McCarty, who operates the popular theatre of west Minnesota.

Jack was just like he always is, sober and sensible, and our chief regret was that we couldn't stop and visit with him as long as we would have liked to have done, but then maybe some other time. We told Jack to give Mrs. McCarty our kind regards and he said he would do it, and now we are wondering if he did.

The manager of the theatre at Benson had gone fishing and we failed to see him, but who could blame anyone for going fishing? Anyone who won't fish might even throw rocks at your bull dog, who knows?

Glenwood is located on the bank of a beautiful lake and is surrounded by summer cottages occupied by people who come there to escape the warm weather down south. Glenwood has something like four thousand people, when they are all there, and when they are all there business is good at the Glenwood theatre, which is operated by H. J. Longacre. But when it is 30 below we have our doubts about them all being there. We stopped over night at Glenwood to see H. J. and learned that he was at his summer cabin on a lake near Alexandria and was sick with intestinal flu. However, we had a nice visit with his son Harry and wife who operate the theatre when H. J. is away.

The next morning we drove up to Alexandria and met Mr. Jacobs of the State theatre but didn't get to visit with him very long because had more important business with some others. Then we went and saw the Andri theatre, a new one that had recently been built by the Baer Brothers one of whom lives in Bemidji and the other in Minneapolis. The Andri is a beautiful theatre and it no doubt is something for Alexandria to be proud of, in fact it is about as pretty a theatre as we have seen in a long time and it seats something like 950 customers and is well equipped throughout.

We went out to see H. J. and found him in bed, but on the road to recovery, but he said the road was pretty long and rough, and we found Mrs. Longacre acting as his special nurse, and our judgment is that she is some nurse too. You know, Elmer, it is pretty easy to visit too long with a sick man, and we are afraid we did. We found it easy to visit with him but pretty hard to get away. Our hope is that he will soon be up on the job again.

There is just one thing about Minnesota that we don't like: their Gopher football team skins our Cornhuskers about everytime they get at 'em, and there is no doggone sense in them letting 'em do that.

We recently toured Kansas. We went as far west in the state as it seemed advisable to go. When we got to the border of the "dry belt" we were advised not to go any farther because of business conditions. We were told that the wheat in western Kansas was practically gone because of the lack of moisture. From what we have been able to learn, a large portion of the wheat belt of the middle west has practically been burned up, and this makes us wonder whether we will have to eat corn pone instead of biscuits this winter. It won't be necessary for the government to pay the farmers to plow under any wheat to make a scarcity, nature is attending to that job. We also learn that a large proportion of the wheat section of Canada is affected by dry weather. Wheat is just like us Nebraskans, it has to have a drink once in a while.

Tomorrow we are going over to Detroit Lakes to see Andy and Herb Anderson. We understand these boys have built a new and a very beautiful theatre over there. That's just the way it is with these two Anderson boys, they are always doing something big that way, but then Detroit Lakes can stand a nice, new theatre, although she already had a good one. Then we expect to go on into North Dakota to see John Piller of Valley City and some more of the boys, but we are told that North Dakota is even worse off than western Kansas. Well, there's bound to be a letup some time.

"Zombie" Title Revised

The title of "Revolt of the Zombies," over which there has been a court suit resulting in an injunction, has been changed to "Revolt of the Demons" by Academy Pictures.

Branch Office To Open

National Screen Service will establish a branch office in Kansas City to handle shipments of all items the company offers to exhibitors in the western Missouri and Kansas territory. The office will open in August.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

DEADLINE, THE: Buck Jones, Loretta Sayers—Played on hottest Sunday to date. So can't kick on limited business it drew. Running time, 63 minutes. Played July 5-7.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Familly patronage.

HEIR TO TROUBLE: Ken Maynard, Joan Perry—Fair. Normal business. Played June 20.—C. W. Mills Co., Inc., Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MINE WITH THE IRON DOOR, THE: Richard Arlen, Cecelia Parker—Just an average program picture that will get by if your audience is not too discriminating.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MUSIC GOES 'ROUND, THE: Harry Richman, Rochelle Hudson—The audience liked it but I thought the music went 'round a few too many times.—C. McKusick, Assistant Manager, Community Theatre, Guilford, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

PARTY WIRE: Jean Arthur, Victor Jory—Excellent program picture. As good a job of casting as you can find. Played June 24-25.—C. F. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

TWO FISTED LAW: Tim McCoy, John Wayne, Alice Day—Another McCoy reissue that clicked. John Wayne appears enough to rate billing if you are using his pictures. We made our own posters, using stills of McCoy and Wayne, and did excellent business in spite of hot weather. Running time, six reels. Played June 28-30.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

First National

MURDER OF DR. HARRIGAN, THE: Ricardo Cortez, Mary Astor, Kay Linaker—Very good mystery story. For once, Ricardo Cortez does not play the part of the heavy villain and it is rather a welcome change. Running time, 67 minutes. Played June 10-11.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SINGING KID, THE: Al Jolson, Sybil Jason, Allen Jenkins, Edward Everett Horton—If ever an audience got an overdose of a star, this picture has it. It is Jolson all the way. Every gag was fed to him. Every scene had him in. He can't forget his Mammy. How a star can get an idea that he can carry a complete show is beyond me. And that goes for the audience, too. They got each a plenty; some said if they saw him any more that would be too soon. If he had given his cast a little chance and the Yacht Club Boys another number, it would have taken the curse off so much Jolson. As it is I, like another exhibitor's comment, think that he is all washed up.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SNOWED UNDER: George Brent, Genevieve Tobin—It has its moments but there was too much dialogue and not enough action. A rather insipid story revolving around a third act for a play. Not much to the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SNOWED UNDER: George Brent, Genevieve Tobin.—Comedy that pleased. Not much of a story but plenty of laughs and that is what they want. Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 24-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SONG OF THE SADDLE: Dick Foran, Alma Loyd—Very good western featuring the "Singing Cowboy." Plenty of thrills for the action fans. Running time, 56 minutes. Played June 17-18.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Gaumont British

BORN FOR GLORY: Barry Mackay, John Mills—Just fair. Story hard to follow. Sea battle well staged and sound best we have had so far from GB. Running time, 69 minutes. Played June 17-18.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

M. H. Hoffman, Jr.

CLEARING THE RANGE: Hoot Gibson, Sally Eilers—With all the good reissue westerns such as this available, we have enough to pass up the new releases that are average or below par. Running time, 57 minutes. Played June 21-23.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOHEMIAN GIRL, THE: Laurel and Hardy—This was what I call a good musical slapstick comedy. Lots of real slapstick comedy in the good old-fashioned Laurel and Hardy style and several nice songs that we all remember. Good crowd and they all laughed aplenty. That's what we had 'em here for, so we are all satisfied. Running time, eight reels.—C. McKusick, Assistant Manager, Community Theatre, Guilford, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

TOUGH GUY: Jackie Cooper, Joseph Calleia, Rin Tin Tin, Jr.—A red hot melodrama well done. For those who want action and excitement this fills the bill nicely. The work of Rin Tin Tin, Jr., is outstanding. He does everything his Dad did plus. Rin Tin Tin, Jr., may revive the glory of the famous Rin Tin Tin if properly used. Doubled this with "Gentle Julia" and did a good average Sunday-Monday business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

CALL OF THE PRAIRIE: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—We consider this one of the weakest of the Hopalong Cassidy westerns chiefly because of poor direction and acting. However, our patrons seemed to enjoy it and there were no complaints.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

COLLEGIATE: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie—A swell, outstanding picture. Should do business any place and satisfy the most critical. Our business off on account of 110 degrees heat and crops all burned to the ground. Step on the gas, boys, here is a honey. Running time, nine reels. Played June 28-29.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SHIP CAFE: Carl Brisson, Arline Judge—This is a fairly amusing picture that got a fine audience response and did nicely at the box office.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Puritan

BULLDOG COURAGE: Tim McCoy, Lois January—Good western. With this new series and the Columbia reissues we play McCoy about twice a month but the patrons never tire of him. Running time, six reels. Played June 19-20.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Republic

NAVY BORN: William Gargan, Claire Dodd—This picture is a little below the Republic standard chiefly because of too much dialogue and routine situations. Had the story been properly developed it would have made a corking good film but, as it is, it is stilted and not particularly exciting. The audience response was fair.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

OREGON TRAIL: John Wayne, Ann Rutherford—Finest Wayne we have had. Beautiful scenes and nice story. Holiday business 'way off; everyone went out to become hospital customers. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 3-4.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

RED RIVER VALLEY: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—All I can say is that this what they wanted. At any rate, it grossed more money than any of the Big Specials that we have shown in the past 18 months. What more could anyone ask of it? Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 19-20.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNIE OAKLEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—A corking good feature which lost us good money because of high school festivities. Played June 24-25.—C. W. Mills Co., Inc., Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Any feature whose excuse for being made is to find a place to have the stars sing another song or do another dance is almost of necessity built around a more or less unsatisfactory plot, but this has considerable entertainment value and will please the majority and will be received with enthusiasm by dance fans. Running time, 110 minutes. Played July 3-4.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

POWDERSMOKE RANGE: Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson—A western that has all the western stars and the picture is of the best that we have run for some time. Good Friday and Saturday program. Will satisfy most all the customers. Running time, eight reels. Played July 3-4.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D.

SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE: Gene Raymond, Margaret Callahan, Erin O'Brien-Moore—This is an amusing mystery story which can hold its own alone or be the strongest half of a double bill. The audience response was very good.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Supreme

SUNDOWN SAUNDERS: Bob Steele—A fairly entertaining western of the cheaper variety that got by on a double bill. Our patrons had very little to say for or against it.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

COUNTRY DOCTOR, THE: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Slim Summerville—Here's what I call a real show. It has the Dionnes to attract the public and yet it had a strong story that could make you laugh, pull at your heart strings or put you into a dozen other moods. In my humble opinion, Slim Summerville ran away with every scene he meandered into.—C. McKusick, Assistant Manager, Community Theatre, Guilford, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

COUNTRY DOCTOR, THE: Dionne Quintuplets,—Jean Hersholt—Exceptional. Not a complaint from anyone. Favored with delightfully cool weather, the box office receipts were above normal. Played July 1-2.—C. W. Mills, Co., Inc., Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN: Irvin S. Cobb, Rochelle Hudson—Everybody liked this but unfortunately everything closed the 4th so did not have the patronage the picture deserved. This has plenty of human interest and is made to order for the small town. Irvin Cobb is going to be a very popular star. Running time, 84 minutes. Played July 3-5. Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HUMAN CARGO: Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy—A program picture good for any night. Keeps them guessing till the very last end. A story about two newspaper reporters, a girl and a boy, in many entanglements with crooks, but the boy gets his men in time to save the girl. Must say excellent program.

Running time, seven reels. Played June 26-27.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MY MARRIAGE: Clair Trevor, Pauline Frederick, Kent Taylor—This film to our surprise was a box office success and stood up on a three day run. Everyone enjoyed it.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND, THE: Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart—Another horror picture that did not pay expenses. Warner Baxter is wonderful in this one, but it is too brutal. Well produced and historically correct but did not please. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

United Artists

MODERN TIMES: Charlie Chaplin, Paulette Goddard—About as "Modern" as the horse and buggy. This might have been o.k. ten years ago but so far as I know it did not please anyone here. The press sheets said "no one but Charlie Chaplin could have produced such a picture." Well, that is something to be thankful for. The talkies are tops now and Charlie might as well make up his mind to join 'em or get out, at least so far as this theatre is concerned. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 19-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MODERN TIMES: Charlie Chaplin, Paulette Goddard—Hats off to the master. One who has seen practically all the Chaplin pictures, I was naturally anxious to see the latest about which so much has been written. I personally term it a masterpiece. The more I saw the picture the greater my admiration for Chaplin. One cannot grasp it all seeing it once. Some critics said that Chaplin used his old tricks. That may be true to an extent but there was plenty that was new. The feeding machine alone is worth the admission price. The two sequences in the big plant are outstanding triumphs. It is to be regretted that Chaplin is so rarely seen. This is probably his last. We showed this July 3-4. We had a lot of youngsters who had never seen Chaplin. The weather being cool we did nice business with this. This had drawing power for us and everyone seemed to enjoy it immensely.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SANDERS OF THE RIVER: Leslie Banks, Paul Robeson, Nina Mae MacKinney—Held off on booking this as long as possible and then buried it on midweek double show. Mark us up for a big error. For an action house such as ours, it's a natural. Yes, we are going to bring it back. Running time, 93 minutes. Played July 1-2.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

THESE THREE: Joel McCrea, Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Bonita Granville, Marcia Mae Jones—This picture may be a little hard to sell in situations like mine. But make no mistake, it has everything and is unusual in theme. The cast does magnificent work, all of them, Hopkins, Oberon, McCrea and the little hell cat Bonita Granville that does all the dirty work. I think the entire audience would like to have smacked her. That was the kind of role she put over. Not forgetting Marcia Mae Jones, the pitiful little stooge that was the foil for the Granville brat.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THESE THREE: Joel McCrea, Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon—Saw this one out of town and can't forget it. McCrea's acting was outstanding and there is something new, different, refreshing about Miss Hopkins' acting. They are my favorite team from now on.—C. McKusick, Assistant Manager, Community Theatre, Guilford, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

MAN HUNT: Ricardo Cortez, Marguerite Churchill, William Gargan, Charles "Chic" Sales, Maude Eburne—Just a small town story that was liked. Plenty of thrills and laughs, with Chic Sales furnishing most of the laughs, ably assisted by Maude Eburne. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 27-28.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PETRIFIED FOREST THE: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, Charley Grapewin, Humphrey Bogart—This would be a great picture with a happy ending but they do not like a sad picture. Bette Davis and Leslie Howard give excellent performances but the real star of the show is Charley Grapewin. He went over big. They are still asking when I am going to have another picture with him. Humphrey Bogart, as Duke Mantee, is very good. Just another picture that did not click. Running time, 83 minutes. Played June 13-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WIDOW FROM MONTE CARLO, THE: Dolores Del Rio, Warren William—A pleasing pice of fluff. Any picture that takes place at a summer resort with amusement devices seems to find favor. As a whole, a very pleasing hour's diversion. I double billed it with "Barbary Coast." This double bill drew good average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Miscellaneous

SKULL AND CROWN: Rin Tin Tin, Jr.—This action film received a splendid audience response and was a good box office attraction. It is nice entertainment for the not too discriminating type of patron.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

TRAILS OF ADVENTURE: Buffalo Bill, Jr.—Just a cheap clap-clap western that received a poor audience response from the easy-to-please.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

"LIL AINJIL" Krazy Kat Cartoons—Poor cartoon. The one series of Columbia shorts that do not please.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Educational

LIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Song Hit Stories—A dandy one-reeler full of entertainment. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SKI-SCRAPERS: Treasure chest—Good reel of snow skiing in winter. Full of thrills and spills. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALIBI RACKET: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Crime does not pay. So far neither has this series.—Running time, two reels.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

AUDIOSCOPICS: Pete Smith—A novelty reel that caused considerable amusement. Seemed to please. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DIVOT DIGGERS: Our Gang—Not quite up to the Our Gang standard, but plenty funny at that. It pleased. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

FOOTBALL TEAMWORK: MGM Sports Parade—Nice reel. Wish we could get early bookings on seasonal subjects such as this. Imagine football in July. Running time, one reel.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

JONKER DIAMOND: MGM Miniatures—A most interesting single reel. It had everyone heaving a huge sigh of relief when the diamond was successfully cut. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. McKusick, assistant manager, Community Theatre, Guilford, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

NURSE TO YOU: Charley Chase—Good comedy. Chase always pleases here.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

OLD PLANTATION, THE: Harman-Ising—Swell color cartoon. Running time, nine minutes.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

PERFECT TRIBUTE, THE: Chic Sale Special—Played on 4th of July weekend. MGM should keep a few prints of this available for years to come. Can and should be replayed by all exhibitors. Running time, 18 minutes.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Paramount

KING OF THE MARDI GRAS: Popeye the Sailor—Another Popeye that is different from any cartoon on the film market. It simply is a knockout for thrills on a rolling coaster track. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: Very good, all in color and good entertainment. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

MISMANAGED: Radio Musical Comedies—A musical comedy of a good type. Plenty of laughs. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BORRAH MINEVITCH AND HIS HARMONICA RASCALS: Melody Masters—One of the best single—reels I have seen in a long time. And how those boys can play. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. McKusick, assistant manager, Community Theatre, Guilford, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

BLACK NETWORK, THE: Broadway Brevities—Very good musical short with colored stars. Fine singing and dancing. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

I WANNA PLAY HOUSE: Merrie Melodies—Colored cartoon that is very good. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

JOLLY COBURN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Another fine Melody Master. These musical shorts are always good. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

RAMON RAMOS AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Excellent Melody Master. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

STARS CAN'T BE WRONG: Broadway Brevities—Very good two-reel from Vitagraph. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

TIMBER GIANTS: Pepper Pot—Very interesting and instructive short of the giant Redwoods. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE BILLBOARD: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—This series is all good. Running time, one reel each.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE TOPNOTCHES: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—This series is all good. Running time, one reel each.—Glayds E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

LOUIS-SCHMELING FIGHT PICTURES: The best fight picture I have ever seen. That is what I heard many, many people say after they had seen the show. And I agree with them. The photography was excellent. Running time, 30 minutes.—C. McKusick, assistant manager, Community Theatre, Guilford, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

Argentine Production Planned by Paramount

Negotiations for production of Spanish language pictures in Buenos Aires have been concluded by Paramount. The deal was completed by John B. Nathan, Paramount representative, with the Association Industrial Argentina of La Plata, which controls an important circuit in the capital city. The Argentine company's facilities are placed at the disposal of Paramount.

French Pictures Schedule Two

The French Motion Picture Corporation has announced the acquisition of two films for distribution in America. They are "The Yellow Cruise," a documentary of the Ciroen expedition across Central Asia, and "Janosik," produced in Czechoslovakia and based on the struggle for independence of the Czech people in the 18th century.

Indian Banker in New York

S. C. Cambata, financier of Bombay, India, has been visiting Dave Blyth, Warner Brothers manager for India, who is in New York on vacation. Mr. Cambata is constructing a new theatre in Bombay which is scheduled to open about the first of next year.

Greenwald With Warner

Manuel Greenwald has been named manager of the Strand in Pittsburgh by Warner Brothers. The theatre has been closed for several years but will reopen shortly. Mr. Greenwald operated the Art Cinema, foreign film house in Pittsburgh last year and before that was on the exploitation staff of United Artitsts.

Briskin Signs Al Lewis

Al Lewis has been signed to produce by Samuel J. Briskin, vice-president in charge of production at RKO Radio, thus increasing the ranks of new RKO producers to seven. The others are Edward Small, Lew Brown, Sid Rogell, Lou Lusty, Hal Horne and A. J. Balaban.

"Adverse" Opens July 27th

The Warner Brothers production, "Anthony Adverse," will have its premiere on July 27th at the Geary Theatre, San Francisco. The film has been set for an indefinite run on a two-a-day roadshow basis.

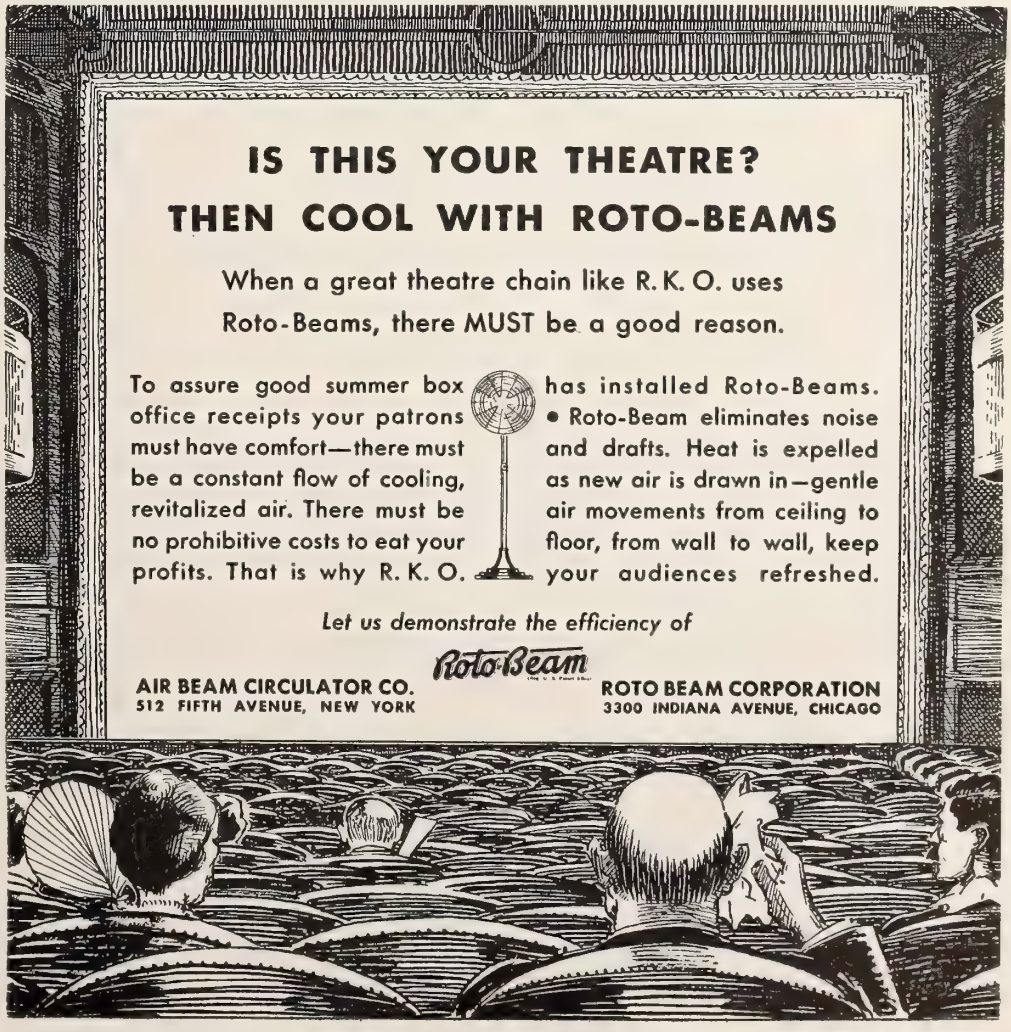
O'Shea Joins Selznick

Daniel T. O'Shea, for four years resident legal counsel at the RKO studios in Hollywood, has resigned his post to become assistant to David O. Selznick, president of Selznick International.

Warner Theatres In St. Louis Taken By Fanchon, Marco

Fanchon & Marco has taken possession of three theatres in St. Louis, Warner Brothers' 42 per cent interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company and a 10-year franchise for Warner product, after more than two months of preparation following the settlement out of court of the Government's civil anti-trust suit against Warner Brothers, Paramount and RKO in New York. With the change in management in the Orpheum, Shubert-Rialto and Hi-Pointe, the three theatres involved in the deal, Warners abandon the Mound City theatre field after several years.

First payment by F. & M. of approximately $4,500 will be made on Sept. 15th. The total payments will amount to $385,000, plus interest, to be paid monthly over a period of 10 years. Robert W. Perkins, general counsel and secretary of Warners, acted for the company and Lambert Walther of St. Louis represented F. & M.



In addition to the 10-year franchise for Warner product, negotiations are now under way for a similar deal for RKO's output and a term arrangement for Paramount's pictures.

Arrangements have been concluded whereby the F. & M. leases on the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres will be extended two years to conform with the expiration date of the film deals, Sept. 1, 1946. Negotiations for the payment of $105,000 in back rentals on the three theatres were completed before the leases were extended. The sum will be paid over a period of years. The deal was made by Harry C. Arthur representing F. & M. and Clarence M. Turley and Joseph H. Grand of the bondholders' committee of Central Properties Corporation and the corporations owning the three theatres.

Central Properties Corporation is the largest creditor of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, which controls 52 per cent of the stock in St. Louis Amusement Company, a circuit of 22 neighborhood houses, of which two are closed. The claim amounts to 80 per cent of the Skouras' outstanding obligations. The Skouras company will be liquidated at a public sale late this month under a federal court order and competitive bidding for the 52 per cent stock of the amusement company is expected. The Central Properties committee will try to buy the stock with its 80 per cent claim and F. & M. also is expected to make an offer.

In the event Central Properties is successful, a management deal with F. & M. for a term of years is expected to be made.

All theatres operated by F. & M. in St. Louis will be under individual corporations. There will be no holding company. With the Missouri, New Grand Central, Shubert-Rialto and St. Louis closed, Harry C. Arthur, vice-president of F. & M., plans to darken the Ambassador for remodeling purposes. Alterations are being made at the closed houses and all are expected to be reopened by Labor Day. The New Grand Central will be called the Guild Cinema and will specialize in foreign and "unusual" pictures.

U.S. Film Showing Set First Time at Salzburg Festivals

by DR. ADOLF NICHTENHAUSER in Vienna

For the first time the motion picture will participate in the Salzburg Festivals this year. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Romeo and Juliet" will have its world première there, and "The Great Ziegfeld" its European première. Each picture will be shown only twice, running in midnight gala performances, to which the lowest admission fee will amount to 20 schilling (about $4). MGM will give these performances and the Festivals publicity throughout the world.

The Festivals at Salzburg (the old Mozart-town) were established by Max Reinhardt 12 years ago. They are held every summer (this year from July 25 till August 31), and are acknowledged as the most prominent periodical institution of musical and stage exhibition, with a selected international public. Their program consists of a large series of concerts and opera performances (especially of Mozart's operas) conducted by celebrated masters, such as Toscanini, Bruno Walter, de Sabata, and sung by singers of international fame. Among the performances of dramas are Goethe's "Faust" and the old play of "Jedermann" ("Everyman"), directed by Reinhardt.

The Festivals are not a private enterprise, but are protected by the Austrian State. Therefore, the permission of the Salzburg Provincial Government had to be obtained in order to show films. It was the idea of Felix Bernstein, MGM's Vienna branch manager, to introduce the motion picture to the Festivals. He led all negotiations, worked out every detail.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

THE EVIDENCE ACCUMULATES

The lasting value of any project depends in the final analysis upon what good it actually accomplishes and what real benefits it bestows. Much has been reported in these pages of progress made with the aid of the Quigley Awards by theatremen voted these honors in the first two years of the Competition. And now with the Awards entering upon the last half of their third year, this is a good spot to pause and consider if the Quigley project continues in 1936 to do what it set out to do originally—bring the efforts of the able theatreman more forcefully to the attention of his superiors; advance the fortunes of the man in the field, break ground for avenues of showmanship hitherto closed.

Through the following recent communications, let readers for themselves judge:

From W. Clyde Smith, to whom warm congratulations are most in order on his elevation from the post of manager of the Paramount Theatre, Hot Springs, Ark. Writes Clyde:

"For your information I have just recently received appointment as City Manager of Malco Theatres in Hot Springs, which includes the Paramount, Central, Spa and Roxy Theatres. I give much of the credit for this promotion to Quigley Awards Honorable Mention and other Round Table Club activities."

And then there is Louie Charninsky, able Round Tabler and consistent contributor who in addition to his duties as skipper of the Capitol, Dallas, Tex., has been designed as manager of the New Rialto Theatre, another interstate Circuit Dallas unit. Writes Louie:

"The promotion I received resulted from the publicity given my campaigns in the Managers' Round Table and the Quigley Awards. I am grateful to you all and Motion Picture Herald."

Presentation of Quigley Plaques by Governors, national legislators, Mayors and other civic heads have from the beginning been a part of the honors gained by theatremen. And with few exceptions, enthusiastic cooperation has been given by the winners' superiors to make possible the participation of Big Names in the Award ceremonies. For this reason is cited the most recent presentation, detailed on a following page, of the Quigley May Silver Plaque to R. V. Waterson, wherein the ceremony was followed by a banquet in Waterson's honor, arranged by his chief, Alex Manta, Illinois-Indiana Theatres Circuit president. Says Waterson:

"The banquet was provided by the boss and it goes without saying the occasion marked the highest point in the writer's brief history in the business of motion picture exhibition."

In Shawnee, Okla., according to publicist D. W. Warner, there has always been a strained relation between the local paper and the Bison Theatre, that is, until Warner began his campaign on "Exclusive Story" for Quigley Awards consideration. A determined attack on the editor finally brought results and the long-sought for newspaper cooperation was obtained. Writes Warner:

"I would like to say here that all the time, effort and money spent on this campaign was more than justified in breaking down the newspaper resistance and opposition that has existed between the newspaper and the theatre. We have the Quigley contest to thank for this."

Thus evidence from the field accumulates to offer definite proof of the strong backing the Quigley Awards continue to give to the theatreman's cause. The high percentage of new names that appear on the honor list each month is further indication that the direct benefits to be obtained from participation in the Competitions is being brought home to an ever-widening circle of theatremen interested in getting ahead.

MUST LEAD TO THE BOXOFFICE

Many's the crime that has been and for that matter is being committed by showmen under the misused label of institutional publicity. Managers backed into a deal or tiein that leaves them holding the bag often alibi the error by charging off losses to institutional or goodwill advertising and hope that the boss leaves it go at that. Any flat statement that this form of advertising is wasteful is of course ridiculous. But unless such tieins lead by one path or another to the boxoffice they rarely are worth the effort put behind them.

One of the most profitable instances of this hookin to the ticket-window and a sterling example of the 100 per cent value of such advertising is Walter Wilson's Rose Growing campaign described in this issue; an idea that not only is bringing Dominion-wide fame to Edmonton, Canada, but also returns the fattest of dividends to the theatre.

Wise showmen will immediately accept Wilson's kind invitation to supply the details of this institutional tiein that builds up grosses all during the year.

THE WATERSON SILVER PLAQUE PRESENTATION AND BANQUET GIVEN IN HONOR OF THE WINNER

Invites Inspection Of Cooling Plant

Keeping in mind that the average theatregoer has no idea of how a theatre cooling system functions, Manager Harold Armistead, Lyric-Avalon, Easley, S. C., runs a trailer as follows: "Would you like to see our 'Weather Factory' in operation? We'd be glad to show you through anytime." Easley reports that many have accepted the invite and have helped spread the word on the theatre's comfort.

To sell the cool idea via lobby display, Easley forwards shot illustrated below of decoration piece. Appropriate copy, such as "Cool as a Mountain Top" is used, with lettering cut out of heavy paper with tissue pasted behind the letters. Flasher button is utilized behind light signs. Stars are silver stick-ons from the corner stationery store. Blue bulbs are planted between sections with blue baby spot overhead.

Display is of wall-board, with background pale blue, the mountains, purple, green and white and trees in black.

Waterson Receives Quigley May Plaque

Theatremen representing Indiana-Illinois Theatres Company gathered recently in Whiting, Ind., and joined with national legislators, local chamber of commerce heads and publishers as guests of Alex Manta, circuit president, at the presentation to Manager R. W. "Watty" Waterson, Hoosier Theatre, Whiting, of the Quigley Silver Plaque for May voted him on his "Klondike Annie" date.

Winner Lauded at Banquet

Further honors were conferred upon the winning theatreman at banquet that followed and presided over by Mr. Manta. Speakers from among those present lauded highly the efforts of Waterson in creating his winning campaign, mention also being made of the excellent cooperation from Bill Loomis and house artist, Norman Johnstone.

Gayety, South Chicago, Ill.; Jack Burhorn, Gayety, South Chicago; S. S. Holland, Elco Theatres, Elkhart, Ind., and Ferdi Nessel, Jefferson, Goshen, Ind.

The Silver plaque for May was Waterson's first winning in the Quigley Awards. His entry was on Paramount's "Klondike Annie," the theatre being a 450-seat house with a subsequent run policy and situated just a short distance from Chicago.

Davis Lobby Display Credits Depinet

Advertising from the producer to the exhibitor, direct and through the trade press, has for some time, as readers know, been utilized by Manager Walt Davis, of the Capitol, Regina, in Saskatchewan, as part of his lobby display. Placed on tables conveniently located, patrons have gotten into the habit of stopping to examine the various broadsides, inserts, etc.

Latest of the Davis activities in this respect is illustrated below—a showing of recent pieces of promotion literature on Radio's product mailed to exhibitors by Ned E. Depinet, RKO Distributing Co., president. On card in rear of table Davis explains to the folks that the literature is advance information of what is coming from that company and extends a bow in the direction of Depinet.

Material shown included message on "Mary of Scotland," the ticket gag individualized letter on "Annie Oakley," and other advertising literature.

LAPINERE, PADGETT WIN IN JUNE; AWARDS ENTER LAST HALF OF 1936

Paris Theatreman Takes Down Quigley June Silver Plaque; Committee Votes the Bronze Plaque to Florida Manager

by A-MIKE VOGEL

AS Quigley Awards finish the sixth month of the hard-fought Competitions for 1936 and with July are set for the last half of this year's struggle for the monthly honors and the Grand Awards, France again comes to the fore with the announcement of the Judging Committee for June that the Silver Plaque has been voted to E. Lapinere, Olympia Theatre, Paris, for his entry on M-G-M's "Night at the Opera."

Just a step behind for second honors, Del Padgett, manager, Capitol Theatre, Clearwater, Fla., is awarded the Bronze Plaque, for his entry on Universal's "Show Boat."

It's a first time for both of these showmen in the Quigley Awards, the two men being new comers to the Competitions. It's also a second-time for their situations in the Plaque listing, the Silver for January of this year having been voted to Rene Lebreton, of the Paramount Theatre, Paris, and the Silver for April, 1934, taken down by Walter Golden, of the Riverside Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla.

Though the winners finished definitely in the clear, they were hard-pressed every inch of the way and the laddie who made it a ding-dong race from the starting bell was none other than that able Round Tabler and previous Grand and monthly Award winner, Bill Hendricks, skipper of the Warner Theatre, Memphis, who sent along a corking campaign on U. A.'s "Things to Come" that almost copped one of the big Prizes. Bill out-distanced the rest of the field to land the only First Mention given in June and he well deserves it.

Seventeen entrants share the 15 Honorable Mentions given this month, the additional honors going to Harry Goldberg, of Philadelphia, and to Perry Spencer, of New York, for their cooperation on campaigns from the Boyd and Paradise theatres, respectively.

New-comers are again to the fore with six of these entrants clicking for the first time. These include Lewis Black, John Judge, Lou Kussner, R. W. Rhodes, Vern Sicotte and Don Williams. Entries and addresses of these theatremen as well as the others honored this month will be found in detail on this page. To them are awarded the Sheepskin Certificates and these duly inscribed go forward shortly.

The Quigley June Runners-Up

First Mention

Bill Hendricks, Manager, Warner, Memphis, Tenn. "Things To Come"

Honorable Mentions

Ray Bell, Publicist, Palace, Washington, D. C. "Under Two Flags"

Lewis Black, Manager, Queen, Wilmington, Del. "And Sudden Death"

Harry Botwick, Manager, M. & P. State, Portland, Me. "And Sudden Death"

Les Bowser, Manager, Harris-Warren, Warren, Pa. "Show Boat"

Jerry DeRosa, Manager, Perry Spencer, Publicist, Loew's Paradise, Bronx, N. Y. "Show Boat"

Douglas George, Manager, Parker Theatre, Darby, Pa. "Pasteur"

Steve Barutio, Manager, Harry Goldberg, Publicist, Warner Boyd, Philadelphia, Pa. "White Angel"

George Irwin, Manager, Lyceum, Duluth, Minn. "Show Boat"

John Judge, Manager, Loew's Lincoln Sq., New York City. "Mr. Deeds"

Lou Kussner, Manager, Apollo, Martinsburg, W. Va. "Mr. Deeds"

Les Pollock, Manager, Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y. "Trouble for Two"

R. W. Rhodes, Manager, New Weller, Zanesville, O. "Hit and Run"

Raleigh Sharrock, Manager, Malco Palace, Morrilton, Ark. "Mr. Deeds"

Vern Sicotte, Manager, Majestic, Grand Rapids, Mich. "Great Ziegfeld"

Don Williams, Manager, Colonial, Brooklyn, N. Y. "Under Two Flags"

The Quigley Awards now round into the back stretch as entries for the seventh month begin to arrive. In but a few months the fast-flying theatremen will be thundering down the home stretch in a great race to decide the winners of the year's Grand honors. Now is the time to bear down.

With the hot weather upon us, the winners for the next two months should most certainly be remembered for their efforts in putting over the campaign to be selected by the Judges. It's a cinch that the man who does not allow the heat to beat him in telling the folks about his shows is going to be considered tops in any man's competitions, and that's a quiet tip to ambitious showmen hoping to win one of the remaining Quigley Plaques and now laying plans to do so.

Theatre Sponsors Annual Rose Show

For top results, nothing put over at the theatre has exceeded the results obtained by Manager Walter Wilson, Capitol, Edmonton, Alberta, Can., from his annual rose show, started five years ago and now grown to be one of the biggest institutional events.

By arrangements with leading seedsmen, rose bushes are available for 40 cents each, but can be secured at this price only by filling out coupon found in special booklet gotten out by Ward and distributed only at the theatre to patrons. Booklet is 12 pages and in addition to all possible information on proper growing of roses, carries art and copy on the Capitol. So far, in 1936, Ward reports over 8,000 books given away.

The drive is a year-round proposition. During the winter time, regular period on theatre's weekly broadcast is allowed for talk on rose culture, how they should be cared for in the cold weather and how to secure the bushes at the low prices.

Wind up each year is a Rose Show staged in the lobby of the theatre and last year over 2,000 entries were reported. One hundred dollars in prizes was donated by merchants and for this year newspaper is giving silver trophy for best rose in the show. Further plugs were given with co-op page containing ads and contest information and there were of course a lot of prominently placed stories. Accompanying photo shows portion of the lobby at one of the shows with Wilson to left, who reports that at show time, held during hottest days of the year, average business is tripled. Wilson writes that interested managers may obtain booklets by writing him at the address above.

Teaser Ads Used By Cook for "Deeds"

Scattered through the classified section, Earl Cook, Warner Theatre, San Pedro, Cal., planted his "Deeds" teaser ads, copy reading "learn about entertainment 'Deeds' offers at Warners. Acquire a 'deed' for any of the properties listed," etc., etc. Serialization was run in paper and traveling billboard was used on street two days ahead.

On all main arteries entering San Pedro, Earl posted directional arrows (see photo), a five-foot illuminated title sign was planted on roof of building rigged on flasher and inserts were put in all packages leaving bakery. Clerks in five and tens wore imprinted colored chest ribbons and cooperating market gave away autographed photos of Cooper and Arthur.

Show Boat Manager Makes Personal for Webster

A happy coincidence for J. H. Webster, Carolina Theatre, Elizabeth City, N. C., was the arrival of one of the original show boats in his city during his engagement of the film bearing the same name. Webster contacted Charlie Hunter, manager of the boat and from whom Edna Ferber had received most of her data in writing the story, for a personal appearance at the theatre.

Heralds were distributed from the theatre and house to house and front of theatre was dressed up with bales of cotton bearing picture copy.

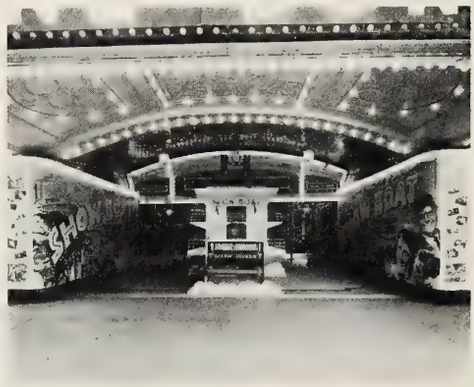
Buy British Products Highlights "Rhodes" Date

Highlight of Ernie Petch's "Rhodes" campaign at the Strand in Brandon, Canada was a "buy British Empire products" contest in cooperation with the Brandon Optimist. Contest was worked as follows: Each merchant took two ads two by five inches in size. In one of each merchant's ad appeared illustration of his product, minus any identifying name. The other ad contained name and telephone of said merchant. It was the task of contestants to link both ads and send completed list to paper. Cash prizes were awarded winners, and an extra five cents an inch was charged to the participating merchants for their ads to cover cost of prize money.

To further aid the campaign, Ernie permitted cooperating merchants a display in his lobby. Stunt was plugged over radio and at each announcement listeners were urged to see the display at the theatre. Paper wrote editorial on the picture and campaign.



Imprinted book marks were used in all libraries, leading diamond merchants featured window displays carrying picture and theatre copy and imprint was placed on restaurant menus about town.

Clean Up Week Planted By Lavoy for "Mr. Deeds"

A "clean up, paint up, fix up week" was sponsored over Station KFJM in Grand Forks, N. D., for Eugene Lavoy's "Mr. Deeds" campaign at the Dakota Theatre with twelve tickets going to persons sending in the twelve best household helps for spring housecleaning. On opening day newsies wearing "Welcome Mr. Deeds" banners sold papers with red overprint on first page.

Directional "Deeds" arrows were spotted about town, transfer company trucks were bannered and music store devoted window to display plugging the tuba. A double truck co-op page was landed, oversized keys with welcome message imprint were planted in hotels and cafes and permission was granted from Mayor to place welcome tack cards on all lamp posts.

Robertson Summons Folk to See "Deeds"

When the new parking regulations went into effect in Athens, Ga., city manager Allan Robertson for the "Deeds" date at the Palace went about town inserting fake police summons under window shields of parked cars ordering them to see the picture.

Through tieup with largest restaurant small cards were distributed away from theatre, copy reading "I am not pixilated, are you? I go to Blank's when I am hungry or thirsty." Seven teaser ads were inserted in papers day ahead, opening day story was run explaining teasers, and spot announcements were landed over radio. Accompanying photo shows how Allan stressed the pixilation angle.

Special Front Built For "Show Boat"

For their "Show Boat" campaign at the Madison Theatre in Peoria, Ill., Manager Merle Eagles aided by publicist Elmer Fitzgibbons rigged up the box-office like a pilot house (see photo). Paddle wheel in front was in continual motion, each paddle carrying name of player or catch phrase on picture. 24 sheets were mounted on both sides of outer lobby with still panels.

Window display was secured in leading store, featuring original gowns worn by Irene Dunne, store supplementing window with full page ad.

St. Louis First-Runs Divided Into Two Distinct Districts

Leading Theatres Are Found in Downtown and Uptown Business Areas

by DAVID F. BARRETT
from St. Louis

Having put in a very pleasant year exploiting pictures in and about St. Louis, your Chairman is more than willing to agree with correspondent Barrett that the Missouri metropolis is indeed a good showtown. What makes it so is set forth in this article which continues the Showman's Travelogue series now current in this department.

—A-MIKE VOGEL

St. Louis, a metropolis that was built without either a boom or a boomerang, was making motion pictures when Hollywood was a vacant lot, and collectively knows more about good motion picture entertainment than any community of a million souls anywhere in the world. Perhaps that sounds like an extravagant statement, but as your good friend Al Smith would say: Let's go to the record. And there you will find that from the pioneer days of "King" Baggot down to "The Great Ziegfeld," the current roadshow sensation, there has always been a St. Louisian at the very top of the production heap. Even the Warner Brothers got their start as film manufacturers right here on the shores of the Father of Waters. Harry Warner so testified under oath in the Federal Court here last October.

Home of the Municipal Opera

It has been said and repeatedly that "St. Louis is a poor show town." But that must be amended slightly. It is a poor show town for poor showmen and poor entertainment. But from the early days back in 1906 when John Kerzin opened his 200-seat World's Dream Theatre at 1314 Market Street up to this very moment, St. Louisians have readily put their cash on the line when really told that the show was good. Prove that—sure. They said "The Great Ziegfeld" in its first week here grossed more real coin of the realm than the same production did in New York City. And further, in its first run, second run and subsequent run houses St. Louis is supporting almost twice as many seats per 1,000 population as such hot show towns as New York, Chicago, et al.

A poor show town! Where in the world can you match the continued success for a period of 16 years through storm and depression the financial showing of the St. Louis Municipal Opera. And they give away 3,000 free seats each and every night of their 12 weeks run. And who can say that the brothers Skouras were not a success? What town can trot out a combination to beat Spyros, Charles and George Skouras and Reeves Espy at their best? They set a pace for real showmanship among motion picture exhibitors that has made it extremely tough for all that have followed them here.

Once more, we must prove our thesis. And can we? Certainly! The Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis is the model for the world. A pioneer in community co-operations for the betterment of an industry that actually saved it from pernicious busybodies in Washington and elsewhere who would have destroyed the body to remove a wart. Thanks to the foresight of Fred Wehrenberg, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, and other officials of that organization, the local motion picture men were quick to realize that the helpful assistance of several hundred thousand women was better than their antagonism. The result was the Family Night that lifted some of the local neighborhood houses out of the red.

St. Louis, the Rome of the West, has been charitable in its views of the motion picture industry. The dominant religion among the white population is Catholic. But there is also a very large percentage of Lutherans, Baptists, Christians, Presbyterians, Methodists and Jews residing here. And in no large community will you find the real understanding and friendliness among the various creeds as here. The Better Films Council is a cross-cut of the broad gauged women of all religions.

St. Louis is situated on the left bank of the Mississippi River, just a few miles below the junction of that mighty stream with the Missouri River. It extends some twenty miles along the river and some ten miles back from the stream. It is the dominant trading center for a billion dollar area that one of the local papers has styled the Forty-ninth State. In the city proper there are almost one million men, women and children and they are surrounded by almost two million others who reside in the nearby towns of St. Louis and St. Charles counties in Missouri and St. Clair, Madison and Monroe counties in Illinois.

Natural Born American Dominates

Founded by the French, St. Louis at various times has been under the rule of three countries—France, Spain and the United States. One of the historic incidents is that we were under three flags the same day—when the concluding steps were taken in connection with the Louisiana Purchase—the world's greatest real estate deal. Originally French, the present population is dominantly native born American—mostly of German, Irish, French, Italian and Scotch-Irish extraction. About 10 per cent of the population in the city proper is negro.

Several great bridges span the Mighty Mississippi River, making St. Louis of easy access to Illinois and other states to the east. Dozens of national highways converge here and the world's famous Shaw's Garden and the matchless St. Louis Zoo attracts millions of visitors annually. The Zoo grounds in Forest Park is the meeting place of America. One day last Summer I counted automobiles from forty states on the roads adjacent to the Zoo. And many of these visitors also find time to visit our motion picture theatres.

Uptown and Downtown First-Runs

St. Louis has the best surface street car system in the country—if not the world. The St. Louis Public Service Company gave the country its first co-ordinated street car and bus service in a large metropolitan area. The town is also served by many service car lines, operated by individuals but banded together in an association that insists upon each member giving the patrons real transportation.

Unlike most large cities, St. Louis has two distinct first run districts. Downtown you will find Loew's, the Ambassador and Orpheum within a few blocks from Seventh to Ninth between Locust Street and Washington Avenue. All are exclusively motion picture houses at present but on occasions the Ambassador uses stage attractions.

On the edge of the downtown district on Market street just east of Sixth street you will find the Grand Opera House that depends mostly on vaudeville to pull in the cash customers, but also showing independent pictures first run. It is closed for the Summer. That's the downtown first run layout. Except the American Theatre at Seventh and Market street is used from time from time to time for road show attractions.

Then you must jump more than a mile westward to the vicinity of Grand and Washington Boulevard where are collected the St. Louis, Grand Central, Guild Cinema, Missouri, Fox, World, Shubert-Rialto and Empress within a baseball toss of each other. The Fox is operating at present as first run house. The Missouri Theatre has reverted to a second run house because of the inability of the Fanchon & Marco interests to obtain an adequate supply of desirable first run pictures. The St. Louis Shubert-Rialto and Grand Central theatres are dark. The World is also dark. The Empress is a second run house operated by the Ansell interests.

Automobile parking is a real problem for the downtown first runs during the day time, but nevertheless the houses get a real play in their matinees. They are conveniently located for the patrons of the bigger department stores and office buildings and the bargain prices that prevail prior to 6 P. M. catch many customers. The Ambassador's price scale is 25, 35 and 50 cents, the Grand Opera House charges 15, 25 and 35 and the Loew's and Orpheum scales are 25, 35 and

55. The American Theatre for "The Great Ziegfeld" charged 55, 84, $1.10 and $1.55.

In the Grand Boulevard sector the Fox is charging 25, 35 and 55, while the Missouri's rates are 25 and 40.

Another distinct feature of St. Louis as a motion picture exhibition center is that the community has a number of outlying sections that are almost first run spots in their own right. The town's 10 second run houses are strategically located to take full advantage of this unusual arrangement. Few towns have separate business and community district such as Grand boulevard and Arsenal street, Grand boulevard and Gravois avenue, the Wellston section on Easton avenue, Grand boulevard and Natural Bridge road, Cherokee street and Iowa avenue, West Florrisant avenue around Warne avenue, and Gravois avenue and Morganford road.

The second run houses will average around $3,000 a week each, while the 80 subsequent run theatres perhaps will take in at least $150,000 per week among them. An indication of the total motion picture theatre receipts here was an estimate that the proposed city tax of one cent on each theatre ticket costing 20 cents or more, which was killed at the last session of the Board of Aldermen would have cost the industry $200,000 annually.

And in passing it must be said that the value of an alert and efficient trade organization for the protection of the motion picture industry has been proven here time and time again. Up to this moment not one really adverse bill has ever passed the local Board of Aldermen and been signed by the Mayor. But hundreds have been thrown into the legislative hopper. A special committee composed of Harold W. "Chick" Evens of Loew's, representing the first runs; Leto Hill, general manager of the St. Louis Amusement Company, acting for the second runs, and Clarence Kaimann, who operates a number of subsequent runs in North St. Louis, has been serving with Fred Wehrenberg, as president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners local organization, to watch legislation. Three proposed bills that met defeat at the last session would have tapped the industry for $350,000 annually if passed.

Company Dominates Second-Runs

In the second run and subsequent run field the St. Louis Amusement Company is the dominant factor with some 20 houses in operation.

This company has also recently let construction contracts for two new houses. One to be at Goodfellow boulevard and West Florissant avenue in the northwestern part of St. Louis and the second on Forsythe boulevard west of Hanley road to Clayton, the county seat of St. Louis County. The St. Louis Amusement Company is controlled by Skouras Brothers Enterprises, a Warner Bros. subsidiary, which at present is in bankruptcy court. Nelson Cunliff, Federal trustee for Skouras Brothers Enterprises, is President of the St. Louis Amusement Company.

Among the first run men "Chick" Evens and Charley Kurtzmann and Harry Greenman of the Ambassador and Fox give as much time to civic affairs as their crowded duties will permit. But as every one knows first run shows are very exacting in their demands on executives and as a result these first run officials have not taken the real active interest in community affairs as have Cunliff, Wehrenberg and Kaimann, for instance.

First-Run Situation Differs

However, there is another angle to the first run situation here that is perhaps different than elsewhere. The companies that actually own the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres are headed by Thomas N. Dysart, who for several years has been the ranking official of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, while Ed Koeln, who was co-trustee for the Fox Theatre property before its reorganization, was for many years City Collector of St. Louis and one of its most popular officials. In the Carondelet section and in the vicinity of Kingshighway and Gravios avenue, where is located the American Exchange National Bank, which he heads as president, there is no one better known or liked than Ed Koeln. And it is interesting to note that he was one of the pioneer motion picture exhibitors of St. Louis. He was in the syndicate that originally constructed the New Grand Central theatre and that owned the First National franchise for this territory. And it is said for him that he was the first exhibitor to successfully co-ordinate motion pictures with flesh and blood actors to produce "talking pictures."

Fred Wehrenberg also occupies a very unique position along Cherokee street. Not even the Skouras boys could wrest his strategic hold on that community from Fred—even though they shot the best men in their organization to compete with him. And in the final results Fred ended up with the Cinderella Theatre, at one time operated by the St. Louis Amusement Company under the Skouras regime. As goes Wehrenberg so goes Cherokee street, it has been said.

Theatremen Rated High

To begin with, I will say that the advertising rates charged by the St. Louis newspapers are somewhat out of line compared to rates exacted from department stores and other advertising. But these high rates are explained by the publishers by the fact that they do give considerable space in their news columns to news articles dealing with the motion picture industry and its people. The three papers regularly use special columns out of Hollywood and from time to time drop in some special story. But in each instance the article in question has real news value to the readers of the papers. Each of the papers has its special motion picture critic and all use slides in the local theatres in a co-operative tieup on advertising.

In the exploitation field the restrictions against a parade downtown and against hanging heralds, etc., on lampposts, handicap the publicity boys somewhat, but there are ways of accomplishing the desired results if you only know how.

Local merchants are also very co-operative when properly approached. Never is an important new house opened here without a special advertising section in one of the local newspapers and various business houses use generous space to pay their compliments to the theatre owners and managers. Likewise, a real tie-up can always be depended upon to get window space in some of the department stores or specialty houses. A striking example of this co-operation was the recent advertising carried by one of our largest department stores for various articles of wearing apparel, etc., used by Shirley Temple as part of the exploitation campaign for the run of "Captain January" at Fanchon & Marco's Fox Theatre.

To sum up, St. Louis is a good town for good pictures and good showmen and we have plenty of both hereabouts. And it is not because I like them. Perhaps all of them do not rate with the Skouras boys, Billy Goldman, Harry Koplar and O. T. Crawford at their best, but on the whole they will compare favorably with motion picture men in other metropolitan areas. Personally I would give all of them a little more leeway to expand their capabilities.

The older generation and the children like the neighborhood houses. There they find no parking problems, can go dressed as they please and get to bed at a reasonable hour. The price scale is 10 to 25 cents. Mama takes in the matinees at the first run in conjunction with some of her shopping tours, but on the whole the first runs, especially those along Grand boulevard, depend almost entirely on the younger men and women and visitors to the city. St. Louis' floating population is not so pronounced as in New York and Chicago, but enough to be considered.

Many Own Homes

Next to Philadelphia there are more homes occupied by owners in St. Louis than any large city in the land. This is an important factor in the patronage of our theatres and explains the pronounced success of such men as Wehrenberg and Clarence Kaimann, and the Ansell boys.

And now to get back to where I began—St. Louis was making motion pictures when Hollywood was a vacant lot. It will jolt some of the big shots out in California to learn that St. Louis produced the first two-reeler, the first three-reeler and the first five-reel feature picture ever produced, and O. T. Crawford was the first man to ever send a motion picture company to location.

The principal competition of the local motion picture houses are the various attractions in the Municipal Auditorium's Opera House and Convention Hall, the Municipal Theatre in Forest Park, the sports attractions at the Arena, including hockey, boxing and wrestling matches; baseball at Sportsmen Park and various soft ball parks in the city and St. Louis County and an occasional dramatic attraction at the American Theatre. The Meramec River and swim pools are real summer competition. But week in and week out St. Louisians reach into their pocketbooks for about a quarter of a million dollars for their picture shows. That means that each man, woman and child sees a picture show on an average of once a week.

Good Evening:

One more reminder of the fact that Bob Taylor's newest picture "Private Number" starts tomorrow at the Fox Theatre. I'm quite positive that there isn't a person in Pomona Valley who won't enjoy this show, since the story is paced as fast as Bob's own meteoric rise in pictures with Loretta Young adding greatly to the attractiveness of the program. The preview feature should not be overlooked either because it's one of Damon Runyon's rollicking comedies—"The Three Wise Guys" and features Robert Young, Betty Furness and Raymond Walburn. So don't miss this program.

Bob Cannom.

Chatter style of newspaper advertising as utilized by Manager Bob Cannom of the Pomono Theatre, Pomono, Cal. The "good evening" head is used regularly by Cannom in these one-column displays which have built up quite a bit of reader interest.

Good Evening:

Just received a booking confirmation on Bob Taylor's latest picture, "Private Numbers." It seems funny to watch Bob on the screen since during most of his College career in Pomona he was a regular member of our audience, particularly on Saturday nights. But even though the jump was a long one, he seems to have landed on both feet. Loretta Young is costarred with Bob in "Private Numbers" and advance notices give it plenty of good reviews so I know you'll enjoy seeing it when we play it at the Fox.

Gag Street Bally Used By Rowberry for "Ray"

For his street bally on "Invisible Ray," John Rowberry, Hunter Theatre, Elko, Nev., purchased a regular cooking pot and attached a galvanized stove pipe to it, imprinted it and slipped it over his "stooge's" head. Man wore oversize white gloves, paraded streets and stopped to peer into shop windows. Prior to stage showing, all lights were turned out in house, green foots turned on and man would appear on stage and in trembling voice say "I'm coming here on Thursday."

On "Robin Hood of El Dorado" entire staff wore Mexican hats, window cards were spotted in ace stores about town and due to large Mexican and Spanish population in Elko, ads were run in those languages.

How They Treated "Milky Way" Abroad

In Glasgow, Scotland, C. Young at the Paramount Theatre staged a competition which was run in conjunction with the Glasgow Evening News, for which a radio firm donated two of their sets for the best reviews turned in on the picture. Contest was held during entire run of film and paper gave it plenty of space.

Arrangements were made for milk company to banner all their trucks, tieup was made with department store which displayed five-foot cutouts of Lloyd and Helen Mack and a 15-foot banner was planted at football club ground.

At Newcastle, England

G. G. Sadler for his date at the Paramount Theatre there tied up newspapers, which were induced to advance date of Tyneside Milk Week to coincide with week of showing. Procession of 80 bannered milk wagons, carts, etc., headed by lorry bearing 48 cutout heads of Lloyd covered city. Milk bottle discs were used by all local milk distributors and milk posters occupying commanding sites all over city bore picture copy.

And At Manchester

Where Harry Murray at the local Paramount opened a milk bar in his lobby through aid of cooperating dairy (see photo). Entire staff was dressed as milk maids and men and for further lobby display full size Lloyd cutout was used with glass of milk in extended hand. Front of theatre was decorated with oversized milk bottle cutout on which were posted scene stills.

Murray's "Milky Way" Lobby Bar

Free Permanent Given For "Invisible Ray"

Doubtless figuring that the patrons of the Wicomico Theatre in Salisbury, Md., would have their hair standing on ends after seeing "Invisible Ray," Harry Moller tied up leading beauty parlor, which offered a free permanent to any young lady who would sit alone in the theatre at midnight and witness the picture. Announcements were run that, before entering theatre, the young lady would be subjected to a thorough physical examination, all lights would be turned out in house and after brief prologue she would be taken to "ghostland."

Harry reports that he had 20 applicants, chose the most likely one, and that after due publicity crowds gathered at the theatre to watch the gal enter. Papers grabbed the stunt and played it up much to the satisfaction of the beautician.

"CYRANO DE BERGERAC"

Cyrano won his women by the eloquence of his prose. Alexander Smith wins them by the beauty and luxuriance of its floor-coverings . . . which is why you will find Alexander Smith Carpets in the majority of the country's most successful theatres.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Varia- title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are pro- tions also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after duction numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.

A Reprint from SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW

Product Analysis

MGM Should Maintain Lead

This analysis of MGM 1936-37 product is the second in a series which began last issue with a discussion of the Paramount lineup. The remaining majors and more important independents will follow.

A regular annual feature of Showmen's Trade Review. these analyses are attempts to give our reactions to past performances and future possibilities with a weather eye to the box office. There is only one way to make these analyses mean something. You must compare our reactions with your own box-office statements and arrive at a happy medium. No observer can prophesy for each individual theatre. But we can tell you what's on our mind and how we feel about the various companies under discussion.

IN this analysis you will have to place yourself in one of two positions or classifications. Either you are now a customer of MGM, or not a customer now but expecting to be one next season.

In the first classification we can discuss the current season and how it fared for you and your theatres STR, in the last listing of the Film Derby Chart on May 2nd, gave MGM a rating of 107% on 31 pictures listed up to that date These 31 pictures consisted of 9 "A" pictures, 13 "B," and 9 "C"

Since that date four more pictures have been rated as follows: "Speed"—C; "Three Wise Guys"—C; "Fury"—B; "Trouble for Two"—B Giving them, to date, a grand total of 35 pictures and a rating of 102% They still have enough pictures left on the current season's schedule to make a radical change, up or down, when the Derby Chart is published for the complete season.

Those who played the product most certainly know whether they made money or lost money with it. They also know full well whether they overpaid or underpaid or if they bought the product at fair and reasonable terms to both parties And we assume that if they found the product profitable, they contemplate signing a contract for the next season

For the benefit of those who did not play MGM during 1935-36 but are interested in securing this company's product for 1936-37, we must go into more detail. Which brings us to the "A" pictures of the current season

No theatreman, regardless of whether he played the MGM lineup or not, could possibly be ignorant of the box-office value of such pictures as "Rose Marie," "China Seas," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Night at the Opera," "Tale of Two Cities," "Ah Wilderness," "Small Town Girl," "Petticoat Fever," "Broadway Melody of 1936" No doubt such exhibitors envied the opposition when they were playing them As for the "B" pictures plenty of them were "A" in receipts in many a town throughout the country Without going into further listing of them or the "C" pictures which were spotty here and there, we suggest that you take your copy of STR of May 2nd and glance through them yourself

So much for 1935-36. Let's take a look at 1936-37 because it happens to be the important point of discussion at this moment and, no doubt, of vital importance to thousands of exhibitors who know the necessity of strong backbone product as the basis of their entire picture buy for the season.

We recommend that you secure a copy of "Leo's Candid Camera Book" right away Then lock the door to your office and thumb through it slowly, digesting each little morsel of food for thought presented in its interesting and entertaining pages It will convey far more than any bare analysis could possibly hope to cover and will give you a closer insight into exactly what you can expect from MGM next season.

What's To Come!

Heading the schedule for the new season is "The Great Ziegfeld," and of this picture we don't believe we need to say anything It is one of the highlight pictures of the whole industry and you can take that from the time of its inception. An absolute box-office cleanup if ever there was one "Romeo and Juliet," we pick no bones about It appears from this observer's viewpoint to be a picture designed for the classes and not the masses, but that does not detract one iota from the fact that it's a grand picture and may fool all of us who harbor some fears about its appeal among the masses

"Marie Antoinette," with Shearer and Laughton, ought to measure up to the high standards of box-office appeal demanded today "The Good Earth" features Paul Muni and Luise Rainer and has been so definitely pre-sold that it can certainly be counted upon to deliver high grosses. "Prisoner of Zenda," with William Powell and Myrna Loy, presents these two favorites in a vehicle that has much popular appeal and a story that has been proven in the dim and distant past as money material.

The big following of Eddy and MacDonald will rejoice over the opportunity of seeing these two stars in "Maytime," and ever though it has been years since this story first was presented on the stage, it has been kept alive with constant and regular revivals all over the country Actually rated as the number one musical romance of the stage Marx Brothers will have a new one for 1936-37, and, following their last hit, ought to find the movie public keen to see more of them Garbo fans will be able to get a heavy portion of her and her unique personality in "Camille" With a good supporting cast she might even pick up a few more fans

Another Garbo vehicle is "Beloved," in which she is scheduled to star with Charles Boyer, and here is one fan who thinks they will make a swell combination. "Broadway Melody of 1937," with many of the outstanding stars of the '36 Melody Our prediction is that it will top last year's by several heads and shoulders

"After The Thin Man," with Powell and Loy, ought to find favor with the masses who went for the first one in a big way "Born to Dance" is a starring vehicle for Eleanor Powell and carries about the same cast setup, writers, etc., as "Melody of '37," so we can't make out whether it is the same picture or not

"Kim," starring Freddie Bartholomew, sounds like an ideal picture for this ever-popular youngster A Cole Porter musical, "Easy to Love," with again the same Eleanor Powell and cast as previously announced for her other pictures. Clark Gable is set for "Great Canadian," "No Hero" and "Saratoga," the latter with Crawford Montgomery and Rainer are teamed in one or more

Hal Roach will contribute some features in addition to his short schedule Among the feature-length films will be "Girls Go West" with Patsy Kelly and Lyda Roberti, and we call this shot as being right in the bag. That gal Kelly has no equal for real rowdy fun Laurel and Hardy will head three of which the first two will be "Our Relations" and "You'd Be Surprised"

Backing Them Up!

We have jumped here and there through the book in picking the titles and material discussed above but we again recommend the Candid Camera Book as your best guide in getting the real lowdown on the MGM product

Say what you like about MGM, pro or con, about their sales policies or what have you, yet you cannot take away from them the distinction of being the one company that spends a fortune attracting attention to their outstanding pictures and actually getting patrons to your theatre through the medium of smashing ad campaigns in national fiction magazines, billboards, and other angles all designed to build up interest in the pictures and help you by starting the campaign ball arolling

Smart theatremen gain the greatest amount of good from the MGM sales efforts by tying their own local campaigns to the national campaigns And no small measure of credit goes to Howard Deitz's department for the ultimate box-office success of many of the MGM pictures

This sales effort, made to order for every theatre playing MGM pictures, costs plenty of money and unless the pictures return big grosses and returns to MGM they would be crazy to continue them Their program for this type of activity for 1936-37 is even more elaborate than during the past year or two and ought to account for much of the business that will be attracted to the local theatres throughout the country

Sales Policies!

This subject has, for the past five years, been a tough nut to crack in any kind of a trade-paper discussion and to STR's credit is the fact that we dare to even make mention of it in these analyses. But whether the comment about sales policies has been favorable or unfavorable, MGM has been sport enough to "take it," knowing full well that it is meant in only the most constructive spirit

There were fewer kicks about the company's sales policies last year than ever before, our contact with the field reveals. So we assume that those who bought the product were fairly well satisfied with the deals they made But for 1936-37 you have probably all heard what they are asking

One thing stands out in all of MGM's trading with exhibitors: they are always willing to adjust a bum deal with any theatreman This even goes to their high percentage pictures, or, at least, has in the past; if that high percentage pic failed to deliver proportionate grosses at the b o., it was adjusted so as to cost the exhibitor only a fair price This policy has won for MGM thousands of friends who are sports enough to play ball with a company that has been delivering the type of pictures that they have given you

To boil it all down to a few words of conclusion: the terms are your worry Ours is but to convey our candid opinion about the possibilities of the product, and that opinion is that MGM for 1936-37 ought to be a "must" in any representative theatre. We doubt whether any exhibitor will have cause for complaint about the quality of the pictures delivered.

FIGHT FILM AND THE LAW

THE federal law against interstate traffic in prize fight pictures appears to have been repealed by public sentiment, or what passes for that, but it still stands futilely among the statutes.

If the dignity of the law is to be maintained it would perhaps be reasonable of the national legislature to take steps to acknowledge the decision of the public and write off the decision.

The law now on the books was written against John Arthur Johnson, negro, who ventured to become a champion, and its nullification has just been made conspicuously manifest, after twenty-four years, by the nationwide distribution and acceptance, without legal restraints, of the fall of Joe Louis, negro near-champion, before Max Schmeling. The story seems to be in the nature of a blackout.

If we are to have, and it seems we are, a traffic in fight films, there is no service to the commonweal in driving the interstate movement of the pictures under ground.

IT is to be realized the while that courts have repeatedly held that it is not unlawful to exhibit fight pictures, no matter how transported.

This makes the matter of fight picture exhibition a policy question for each exhibitor, and each theatre. Reports on the Schmeling-Louis picture indicate that they have been helping many a boxoffice.

PRIZE fights and fight films have had some important parts in picture development. James Corbett and Pete Courtenay in six one-minute rounds, fought on a flat car for the Edison Kinetoscope, started it all in 1894. That picture sent Otway and Grey Latham in pursuit of a projector, led to the race for screen presentation of the peep show movies, and brought all manner of consequences, including the formation of the American Biograph Company and the great patents war that raged from 1897 to 1909. The first camera equipped to take really long pictures was Enoch J. Rector's Veriscope, built to record the battle between Gentleman Jim Corbett and Ruby Robert Fitzsimmons in Reno on St. Patrick's Day of 1897. And that was the first picture to roll up a real gross, something close to three quarters of a million, so the story goes. Then the first motion picture to be made under electric lights was the Jeffries-Sharkey fight at Coney Island November 3, 1899, photographed by Mr. William Bitzer of Biograph, with enough arcs to fry the fighters.

FIGHT films of the period, however, as the pictures struggled up through the nickelodeon period, seemed to give the business no kudos or prestige. Prize fighting, cocktails and lotteries were not quite so respectable then.

So it came that the Motion Picture Patents Company, newly formed federation of the masters of the movies, decided to buy, for control rather than for exploitation, the rights to the Johnson-Jeffries fight, scheduled for July 4, 1910, at Reno. A merry recollection comes of the curious session in which the late, august and dignified Mr. George Kleine found he had to negotiate with Mistah Johnson in a backstage crap game in a Philadelphia theatre. Commodore J. Stuart Blackton made the pictures at Reno—and they were preserved from the attentions of the "independents."

JACK JOHNSON, it will be recalled, developed a heavy swagger, opened a Chicago cafe with silver cuspidors and gathered in a white wife. The public indignation came to flower in the Sims Bill, now the federal law against fight films, enacted July 31, 1912. A futile and considerably prosecuted effort was made to "optically import" the Willard-Johnson pictures, made in Havana July 4, 1915, by projecting them from film to film across the Canadian border. It made a story, but the pictures did not reach the American screen. Thereafter for several years assorted endeavours at evasion of the law were made, resulting at last in the rather tasty affair of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures pre-viewed by a select Harding Administration audience at Edward B. McLean's little green house in Washington's "K" street, subsequent general release and an assortment of federal indictments and fines for the picture men concerned.

FOR the last several years there has been a substantially unhampered, unprosecuted, also considerably unmentioned, but decided national and international traffic in American fight pictures. How the lid came off is not of official record.

The fact that the law still stands prevents the business of the fight picture from being precisely a business—which seems to be bad business.

THE Bar Association of Hudson County, in New Jersey, is resolving and deploring against the portrayal of crook lawyers on the screen. At such time as it is discovered that notorious criminals with money are unable to employ imposing attorneys for their defense or at such time as such defenses are conducted by counsel as "an officer of the court" instead of as an enemy of society, the protesting Bar Association will stand in sounder position. That will be quite a while yet.

The WPA Invites Bids

Specifying that "the contractor shall agree to cause to be released and/or distributed one newsreel story on the subject of WPA activities each month during the life of this contract through the medium of a nationally-distributed newsreel," forms inviting bids on a contract to produce films "to consist of subjects and sequences of State and/or city-wide interest, recording the story of Works Progress Administration activities" were dispatched under date of July 17th from the WPA headquarters in Washington, D. C., to a list of producing companies including 4 of the 5 standard commercial newsreels. Bids were returnable July 24th.

Complete text of the specifications, description of product and method of award, is published on page 13.

Diplomats See "Time"

Following the protest against the current issue of the March of Time to Secretary of State Cordell Hull by the Dominican Minister at Washington, a special screening of the disputed sequence was held in a Colonial garden on a private Virginia estate before an audience composed of Washington diplomats. The screening was arranged by Time Magazine's Washington correspondent after the state department had "regretted" the incident to the Dominican government and had refused to suppress it because of the American principle of freedom of the press.

An account of the protest, answer and screening is found on page 26.

Fox Bankruptcy

The William Fox bankruptcy hearings continued this week in Atlantic City and the creditors scored a semblance of a victory in their attempts to examine the books of the All-Continent Corporation when an entire page of one of the corporation's ledgers reached the court as evidence. Mrs. Fox, and her daughter, for whom the corporation was formed six years ago as a trust, has repeatedly refused to allow her books to be opened for examination and creditor attorneys are still trying to get the ledgers into court.

Process Server

Unconscious humor was injected in the $5,000,000 damage suit which Paramount Pictures has brought against Samuel Goldwyn for the loss of the Gary Cooper contract, when Mr. Goldwyn's butler mistook a process server bearing the papers for the suit, for a newly elected member of the board of United Artists. The mistake was short-lived.

Mr. Zukor's reasons for bringing the damage action are related on page 18.

Film Stock Holdings

The Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington this week presented a consolidated report of holdings of officers, directors and principal stockholders of corporations subject to the securities and Exchange Act, in its annual official summary as of Dec. 31, 1935.

Holdings of individuals, with classification of stock, are listed, by company, on page 42.

Alan Crosland Dead

Alan Crosland, noted motion picture director, died this week of injuries he received in an automobile accident in Hollywood on July 10th. The director, who was only 41 years old, had a brilliant career in the motion picture world.

Obituary details are given on page 61.

The Kennedy Report

Released in Wall Street, scene of a backstage battle long pertinent to the affairs of Paramount, text of the Joseph P. Kennedy report on the condition of that company, together with recommendations and suggestions for the improvement thereof, became public property last week. Denied to stockholders at their annual meeting and closely shielded since submitted to the board of directors on June 12th, the report coincides substantially with forecasts of its contents given currency in informed quarters.

A summary of the Kennedy findings and text of the report are published on page 44.

Strike Concluded

Striking workers at the Camden plant of the Radio Corporation of America went back to work on Wednesday after members of the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America voted unanimously to accept an agreement worked out by officials of the company and the union. The agreement provides for an election to be held under the auspices of the National Labor Relations Board.

The report of the settlement is on page 28.

Expensive Visitors

Cost to studios of entertaining visitors, always an item as summer vacationists descend on the production colony armed with letters of introduction from exhibitors, newspaper critics and people who know people who know people, touched a new high this year with one studio charging off to entertainment of a convention party loss of time and labor equaling $10,000.

More about this on page 41.

In the British Studios

Gaumont-British is well along on its increased schedule of product for American and British release, with five pictures in work at Shepherd's Bush. At London Films, the signing of Walter Reisch to write and direct a special feature for Vivian Leigh, West End actress signed by Alexander Korda, was a development of the week.

Other news of British production centers appears on page 36.

Will Day Passes

Will Day, managing director of Will Day, Ltd., an accessory company, and known for many years as the unofficial historian of the motion picture industry in England, died this week at his home in London after a short illness. He was 63 years old.

For a sketch of Mr. Day's career, see page 42.

Internationalization

The alliance of the Schenck brothers, Nicholas and Joseph, with Gaumont British through a stock deal to be made by reorganization of the holding company which controls GB, is regarded as a spectacular development of the trend toward internationalism in the industry. Under terms of the deal, announced by Isadore Ostrer, president of Gaumont British, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Metro will buy half of the Fox company's 49 per cent interest in the Metropolis and Bradford Trust. After the sale the holdings of the three parties will be equalized so that none will have control and sufficient stock sold to the public in Great Britain to insure that a majority interest is held in that country. Possible results of the alliance are far-reaching.

Details of the announcement are told on page 23.

Showmen's Delight

Motion Pictures of the Louis-Schmeling prize fight brought joy to the hearts of exhibitors in the New York area a recent survey shows, but they also brought a measure of grief to those who failed to book them before the event took place because of fear that the film would be a washout. The unexpected victory for the German fighter more than doubled the value of the picture the morning after the Yankee Stadium debacle.

Why the films are expected to bring a record gross when all the results are in is told on page 61.

Ascendency

American motion pictures are in comfortable ascendency in Holland, where domestic production movement failed through failure to avail itself of expert technical services and sustained the displeasure of the public. No quotas are imposed upon imports and an admission tax is the only substantial burden borne by the box office.

Hammond Successor

The New York Herald-Tribune has appointed Richard Watts, Jr., to the post of drama critic, succeeding the late Percy Hammond, who died in April of this year. Mr. Watts has served the Herald-Tribune as motion picture critic for the past eight years and will be succeeded in that position by Howard Barnes, identified with the drama department during the same period.

Religion in Films

Philadelphia clergymen headed by the Rev. Dr. David Carl Colony of the Episcopal Church are utilizing the radio to promote interest in a proposed drive to stimulate interest in religion via a motion picture campaign. The clergymen are the same who not long ago conducted an unsuccessful fight against Sunday showings in Pennsylvania. Dr. Colony, in his radio broadcasts, deduces moral lessons from current pictures and points his reasoning with references to Biblical texts.

The clergyman's methods are reviewed on page 30.

Trade Practice Plans

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will make a final effort next month to obtain distributor action on the organization's 10-point trade practice program when Ed Kuykendall, president, arrives in New York, August 10. The failure of individual companies to take the initiative in granting outright any of the major concessions sought by the organization is held to be the principal reason for the lack of action on the program up to now.

Detailed discussion of the organization's plans is to be found on page 61.

British Overbuilding

With powers to "act immediately in any direction they think fit," a committee of British exhibitors is undertaking a solution of the problem of overbuilding as a result of action at the Conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association.

This and other development on the British scene, including the crystallizing of plans for the visit of a party of exhibitors to New York and Hollywood, are reviewed in the article on page 35.

Tube Ruling Delayed

Decision in Federal court has been reserved on an application for an injunction by the Union Radio Tube Company seeking to restrain the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company from canceling a license agreement under which Union manufactures radio tubes.

The suit is explained on page 26.

Production

Studios maintained during the week the increased tempo of production gained a fortnight ago and a net of fifty pictures were in work as the week closed.

Titles of pictures started and finished, together with names of players and directors of each, are reported by Gus McCarthy on page 41.

Nazi Edict Applied

Direct application of Nazi Germany's emphatic regulations pertaining to films "detrimental to German prestige" was made to the American production, "I Was a Captive of Nazi Germany," in Hollywood while the picture was being made, according to Producer Alfred T. Mannon. German Consul Georg Gyssling notified members of the cast, through the mails, Mr. Mannon says, of the German law governing pictures of the specified character and players appearing therein and indicated to them what might be possible consequences of continuing in the production, whereupon some of the players withdrew and others continued under promise that their names would not be included in the billing.

Provisions of the decree and the warning issued to Miss Steele are reported on page 15.

Pictorial Preview

Produced in part on the biggest set erected in Hollywood since Breezy Eason reproduced the Coliseum for the chariot race sequence in "Ben Hur," the Warner production of "The Charge of the Light Brigade" has attracted wide attention and is the subject of enthusiastic comment as the shooting progresses. Olivia de Havilland and Errol Flynn are starred and Michael Curtiz directs.

A pictorial preview of the picture by Gus McCarthy is presented on pages 16-17.

Anti-Trust Action

Answers denying alleged anti-trust violations in the distribution of motion pictures in the state of New Jersey were filed this week by 27 companies and officials in the federal court at Newark as a result of a $1,060,000 damage suit and equity action brought by the Ledirk Amusement Company and the Strand Operating company of the Oranges.

For details of the action and the denials of the defendants, see the story found on page 28.

Hungary Edict

Because of the new edict of the Hungarian government prohibiting the showing of two feature pictures on one program, the importation of American short product into that country is expected to show a considerable increase next year, according to Endre Hevesi, MOTION PICTURE HERALD correspondent in Budapest.

A general discussion of the industry in that country is found on page 48.

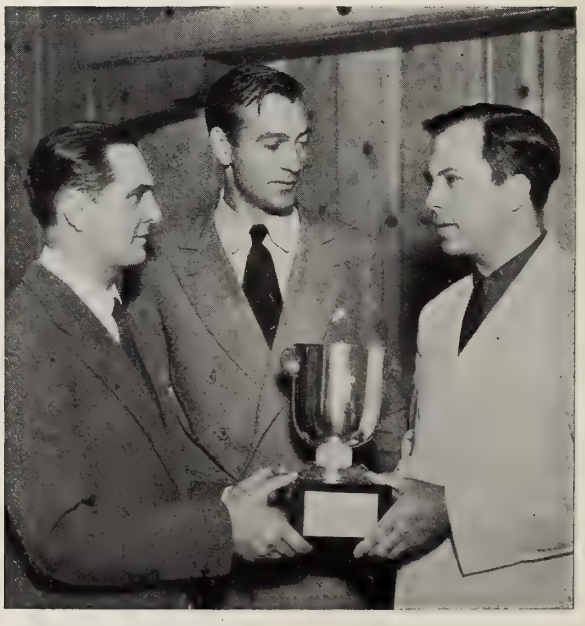
YOU TOO, GUY. The little lady learning about small fish and big stories is Shirley Anne Kibbee, daughter of Guy Kibbee, admittedly the ablest angler on the West Coast, who manages to get away now and then from work on the Warner feature, "Way for a Pirate."



QUORUM. Fred Stone, Louise Latimer and Owen Davis, Jr., stars of RKO-Radio's "Grand Jury," sit in judgment on the work as it goes along with Director Albert Rogell in charge of the production.

ELECTED. B. E. Norrish, managing director of Associated Screen News, Montreal, was recently elected president of the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries.

GUESTS OF U. Universal studio executives were hosts to managers of the Cathart, Inc., theatres, called together by Mike Marco and Division Manager Milton Arthur in Hollywood. Fred S. Meyer, assistant general manager of the studio, is seen at left, standing. Mr. Arthur is fourth from the left.

PRESENTATION. Italian Consul Ernesto Arrighi gives King Vidor, in Gary Cooper's dressing room, the trophy awarded by the Italian government for his direction of "The Wedding Night," Goldwyn.

DEBUT. Marion Talley, opera star, who will make her screen debut in the Republic musical production, "Follow Your Heart," poses in a studio automobile.

VACATION BOUND. Irving Berlin and Mrs. Berlin, the former Ellen Mackay, photographed as they embarked on the Queen Mary for a vacation abroad following completion of music and story for the Twentieth Century-Fox production, "On the Avenue."

BEST SELLER. James Hilton, author of the best seller, "The Lost Horizon," in production for Columbia under Frank Capra's direction, pauses in New York en route from Hollywood to England.

OPENING DAY. Midway through the first screening of Warners' "The Green Pastures" at the Radio City Music Hall, New York, standees lined the 50th street sidewalk from a boxoffice offering standing room only for sale. Boxoffice receipts for the first four days were reported as $56,000.

FOURSOME. Ned E. Depinet, H. Pimstein, A. Murphy and Major L. E. Thompson made up one of 50 foursomes competing in the annual RKO tourney at Westchester Country Club, Tuesday.

HONESTLY. June Travis has been trying to get away from the First National unit producing "The Bengal Killer" so she can go to the beach and try out her rubberized silk bathing suit. Honestly.

ENGAGED. The happy couple embarking on the Normandie for Europe are Bert Wheeler, who recently completed "Mumsy's Boy" for RKO-Radio, and Sally Haines, whose engagement has been announced.

REHEARSAL. A musical contingent mutually engaged in the production of "Postal Inspector" for Universal go over their stuff. Patricia Ellis, who plays the lead opposite Ricardo Cortez, sings "Let's Have Bluebirds" for the approval of Charles Previn, at the piano, while Composers Irving Actman and Frank Loesser listen.

WPA SETS OUT TO BUY WAY TO THEATRE PUBLIC

Producer Shall Agree to Cause To Be Distributed One Newsreel Story a Month Through a Nationally Released Newsreel

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER

The Works Progress Administration of the U. S. A. has set out to buy its way to the theatre public.

The project, with its invitation to sell film to the government, is addressed at makers of pictures, not the operators of theatres and owners of screens.

Specifying that "the contractor shall agree to cause to be released and/or distributed one newsreel story on the subject of WPA activities each month during the life of this contract through the medium of a nationally-distributed newsreel," printed forms inviting standard commercial newsreel companies to submit bids on a contract for production of films "recording the story of Works Progress Administration activities" were dispatched to these concerns from Washington headquarters of the WPA under date of July 17. Forms were designated as returnable at 11 o'clock A.M., July 24, to Chief Clerk Harry L. Kinnear at the WPA offices, 1734 New York Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C., "to be publicly opened".

The following concerns, all of New York except as otherwise indicated, were listed by the WPA headquarters staff on request of MOTION PICTURE HERALD as those circularized:

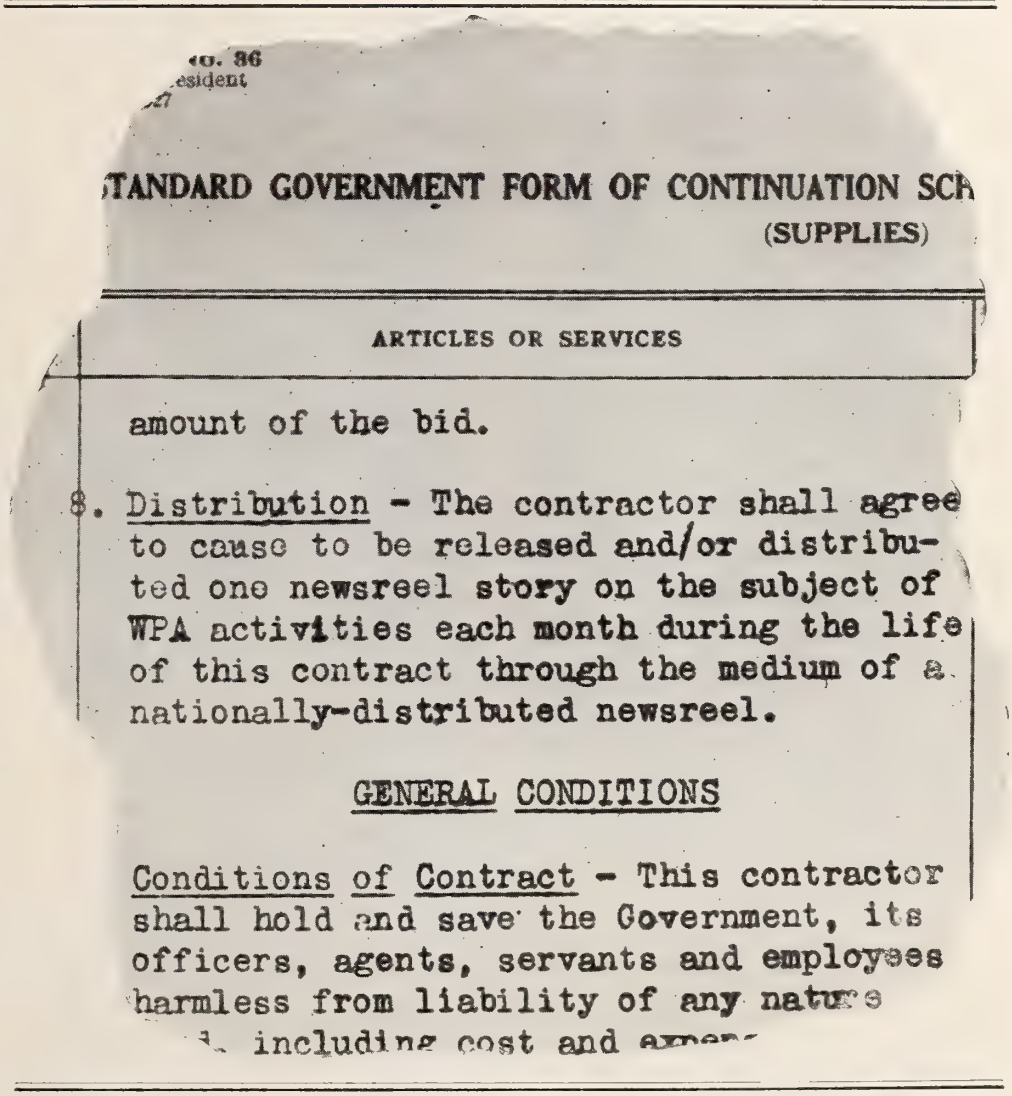
Inquiry as to why Universal Newsreel was not included on the list elicited the explanation that it "must have been an oversight," to which was added the information that "since the WPA is required only to invite three bidders, any greater number of names is merely to secure additional competition." Charles E. Ford, managing director of Universal Newsreel, confirmed on Tuesday the discovery that his company had not been invited to bid on the contract.



It will be recalled that Universal Newsreel expressed itself emphatically as "utterly independent" and warned exhibitors, "Don't let your screen be used for propaganda by anyone or any interest," in an advertisement addressed to the trade early this Spring.

Dispatch of the forms inviting bids on an "unknown quantity" of films followed quickly upon release in Washington last week of the news, reported in last week's issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, that WPA plans contemplated production of 30 films at an estimated cost of $6,000 each. Forms received by the newsreel companies contain the statement that "as the quantity of films is not known, one film will be used as a basis for the period." "One film" is described as a "unit or reel of 600 feet." "The period" is defined as "from the date of acceptance until June 30, 1937."

Item 8 of the specifications, quoted in full above, appears under the heading of "Distribution" on the eighth of 13 pages of general and technical description of the product. It was a somewhat less definite but similar provision in the text of invitations extended newsreel companies under date of March 17th to bid on a contract to produce films for the Federal Housing Administration that gave rise to trade apprehension as to the trend of New Deal agency plans and policies with relation to use of the screen for the dissemination of information.

Investigation Demanded

When, in April, first intimation was made of the WPA's intention to produce films on contract, Republican Representative Bertrand H. Snell denounced the project as "bold and flagrant diversion of relief funds to campaign purposes." Quick to echo his opinion, Pennsylvania' Senator Davis introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of WPA activities. To these and other protests and criticisms WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins replied that the War Department had compiled a motion picture record of the world war and that this and other precedents amply justified his organization in making a film record of its operations.

Representative Snell's charge of "diversion" was predicated on the text of the legislation granting funds to the WPA for the purpose of providing productive employment to the unemployed and upon the claim that this purpose would not be served in the case of films produced on contract by commercial companies employing their own staffs for the work. Administrator Hopkins did not reply directly to assertions of this kind, and no further announcements relating to contract production of WPA films were immediately forthcoming.

Authority to expend WPA funds for the production of films on contract by commercial companies derives, as disclosed on page 13 of the July 18 issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, from the executive order by which President Roosevelt created the Works Progress Administration. This order authorizes the WPA Administrator to "formulate and, with the approval of the President, to require uniform periodic reports on all projects; and, where any avoidable delay occurs, forthwith to recommend to the President appropriate measures for eliminating such delay."

Cameramen Employed

It was upon this authority that Sydney H. MacKean, former employee of various commercial newsreels, had been assigned to establish a Motion Picture Record Division of the WPA in June, 1935, and to employ cameramen and other assistance in the production of films depicting the work of the agency. Also recounted in last week's issue were the events and circumstances culminating in the then comptroller general John R. McCarl's refusal to approve vouchers covering approximately $90,000 of expense incurred by the Motion Picture Record Division until he had received a copy of the following letter addressed to WPA Administrator Hopkins by President Roosevelt under date of February 6, 1936:

"This will confirm verbal authority given you in July, 1935, relative to Executive Order 7034, paragraph 1, section C-a, to formulate the permanent record of periodic progress by means of motion picture recordation.

"The above instruction was given to you by virtue of and pursuant to the authority vested in me under the Emergency Relief Act of 1935, approved April 8, 1935 (Public Resolution No. 11, Seventy-fourth Congress)."

Terms of the WPA requirements pertaining to the films for the production of which newsreel companies were invited to bid this week are flexible in many respects, inelastic in others.

It is stipulated that "the finished production is to be of such high entertainment standard as to be acceptable for exhibition in any commercial motion picture theatre within the United States."

It is stipulated that the films are "to consist of subjects and sequences of State and or city-wide interest."

Subject material included in a "Tentative Draft of Working Script for Motion Picture Record" ranges from the fighting of forest fires to the conducting of sewing projects.

No maximum or minimum number of films is stipulated.

The WPA "will furnish a liaison man in each state to make all necessary arrangements regarding scenes to be recorded, approvals and other similar matters."

The company contracting to produce the films is required to "furnish a qualified script writer, film editor, camera crew, technicians, director, actors and actresses, the use of studios, lighting equipment, a competent production and idea man in Washington during the life of the contract" and related personnel, properties and services.

The WPA "will furnish automotive transportation during the production of any record or information unit or reel at the call of the contractor for his employees within any state or area to be covered" and "the selection of music to be used in each record and information reel shall be made by the contractor and approved by the Works Progress Administration."

Item 3 of the forms supplied to invited bidders is captioned "Method of Award" and contains, among others, the following statements:

"The Government reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids or any part or parts thereof and to award the contract or any parts thereof to other than the lowest bidder as the interest of the Government may require."

"All other factors being equal, the award will be made to the bidder who is better able to aid in distribution, both theatrical and non-theatrical. The decision of the contracting officer shall be final."

No reference is made to the 16 mm. prints commonly used for non-theatrical purposes in the paragraph headed "description," which reads: "One negative and positive of Dupont or Eastman stock or equivalent to be 35 mm. complete with sound print, cans, reels and labels, either RCA Photophone system, Western Electric system or equal, of 600 feet in length." Under the heading of "General Conditions," the statement is made parenthetically that "the RCA has offered to waive all charges for royalty on Government films where no charge is to be made against the exhibitor for showing."

UNIVERSAL NEWSREEL STRESSED INDEPENDENCE

Complete text of a page advertisement placed in the Motion Picture Daily of May 21 by Universal Newsreel, the only standard newsreel company not invited to bid on the WPA picture project, follows:

"From now on the newsreel you show should be independent.

"The Universal Newsreel is utterly independent of everything except your audience.

"It has no candidate for political preference.

"It does not care a rap about wets or drys.

"It is not currying favor with peace advocates or war seekers.

"From now on until election time (and forever after) it is smart for you to watch your newsreel — and watch your step.

"Don't let your screen be used for propaganda by anyone or any interest.

"Run the newsreel which entertains, thrills, and furnishes laughs.

"Run the newsreel which is edited by newspaper men who are cool and independent as a hog on ice.

"Don't let your own political leanings influence your show. Most of all, don't sponsor any newsreel which has any axe to grind.

"The Universal Newsreel is happy and free. It is the best newsreel in the world.

"Universal Newsreel."

TEXT OF WPA CONTRACT

Herewith is the text of the Short Form Contract of Invitation, Bid and Acceptance, issued by the Works Progress Administration at Washington to the newsreel companies, under date of July 17, 1936, for production of WPA films.

(1) Films—One negative and one positive, each complete in accordance with specifications and conditions in attached pages to consist of subjects and sequences of State and/or city-wide interest, recording the story of Works Progress Administration activities. This contract shall be in effect from the date of acceptance until June 30, 1937. As the quantity of films is not known one film will be used as a basis for the period.

GENERAL SPECIFICATIONS

1. Description—One negative and positive of Dupont or Eastman stock or equivalent to be 35 mm. complete with sound print, cans, reels and labels, either RCA Photophone system, Western Electric system or equal, of 600 feet in length (25% variance payment adjusted accordingly), containing subjects of the character set out under topical outline (see paragraph 2) and similar to the picture titled "Making a Better Indiana" (which may be viewed upon request at the Washington Auditorium, Washington, D. C.), which represents the general plan to be followed in each of these record and information units or reels, but which shall not be regarded as a criterion of quality. The finished production is to be of such

NEW GERMAN FILM EDICT APPLIED TO AMERICAN PICTURE AT SOURCE

German Consul Cites Law to Author - Star of "I Was a Captive of Nazi Germany" While Film Is In Making

Nazi Germany's blunt edict pertaining to films "detrimental to German prestige" and players appearing in them is being applied directly to American product at the source by German Consul Georg Gyssling in Los Angeles.

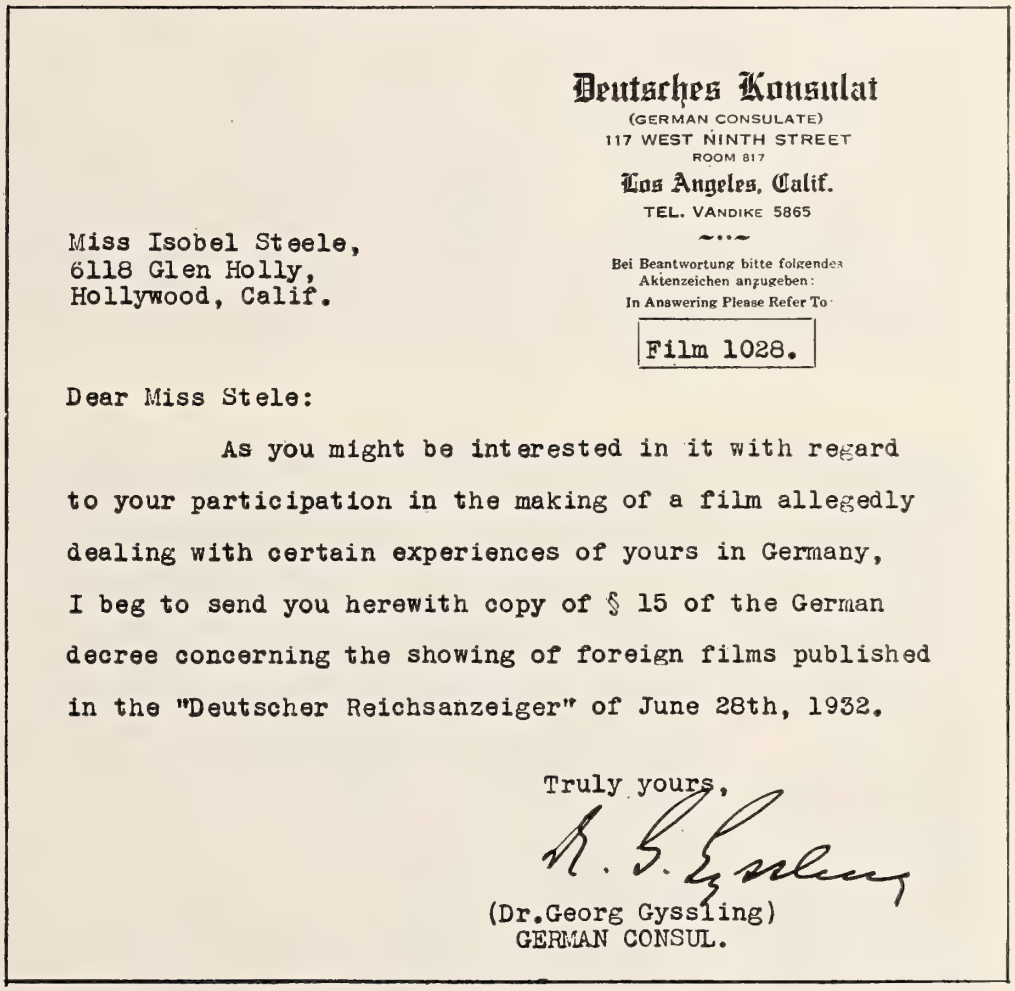
First to charge the German representative with attempted interference in production and distribution of American films is Alfred T. Mannon, producer for Malvina Pictures Corporation of "I Was a Captive of Nazi Germany," featuring the author, Isobel Lillian Steele, whose experiences in Germany in 1934 the picture purports to depict.

According to Mr. Mannon, Dr. Gyssling addressed to Miss Steele and other members of his cast, during the production of the picture, a letter on the stationery of the German Consulate directing attention to the text of the Nazi edict, quoted on a sheet accompanying the letter, as follows:

"The allocation of permits may be refused for films, the producers of which, in spite of warning issued by the competent German authorities, continue to distribute on the world market films, the tendency or effect of which is detrimental to German prestige. . . .

"The same applies to films in which appear film workers who have previously participated in the making of films which have the tendency or effect to be detrimental to the German prestige."

Cast Members Summoned



Additionally, says Mr. Mannon, Dr. Gyssling summoned other members of the cast, chosen for their Teutonic nationality and many of them German citizens, to the Consulate and there personally informed them of possible consequences of participating in the production. Some of the players, he says, quit the cast following these conversations, while others continued under promise that their names would not be used in the billing. Only the name of Miss Steele is to appear.

As production of the picture continued, the producer asserts, the German Consul addressed a letter to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association asking that body to intervene to prevent its completion. When nothing came of this, the picture was completed in March of this year and submitted to the Coast office of the organization for assignment of a Production Code certificate. New York representatives of Malvina Pictures said this week that approval has been given and a certificate is forthcoming. The New York office of the MPPDA affirmed that the picture has been submitted and "is in process of being considered."

Nevertheless, the production has been scheduled for a New York opening at the Globe theatre on August 1st and to be distributed on a roadshow basis throughout the country. The Globe, formerly devoted to stage purposes, has been operated as a motion picture theatre for the past five years.

Plans for a similar opening in Chicago, for which no theatre had been contracted, were complicated this week by refusal of the Chicago censor board to issue a permit for its exhibition. The reason given for withholding permission to show the film in what the wartime Mayor (Big Bill the Builder) Thompson described as "the sixth German city" was that the picture might cause resident Germans to start a demonstration against the showing of the film. A representative of Malvina is to go to Chicago in an effort to secure passage of the production.

Producer Mannon, one-time president and treasurer of Republic Studios, Inc., subsequently supervisor of production for Van Beuren corporation and, later, producer of several features for independent distribution, asserts that the story of the picture is not fiction but consists of an accurate presentation of Miss Steele's arrest, incarceration and subsequent deportation by Nazi authorities in the period between August and December, 1924. A reproduction of the letter submitted as received by Miss Steele is published herewith.

Condition Grave Abroad

Meanwhile, reports through the United States Department of Commerce indicate approach of a crisis in the position of distributing companies handling American motion pictures in Germany through exercise of the Nazi Government's unlimited power to accept or reject motion pictures of all kinds.

The reports to the Department of Commerce from its Berlin offices say that the American motion picture interests, chief of which are the distributing subsidiaries of Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox, are meeting with increasing difficulties.

There is reason to believe, according to the report, that some of the large first-run cinemas will be forced to close before the summer is over because of a shortage of films, that leading motion picture theatres in Berlin are showing films which are not up to their standard. Other houses are reviving films of earlier dates. The repetition of German films has not been favorably received by the public, it is said, and the theatres need foreign, particularly American, films.

The principal obstacle hampering operations of American film interests in Germany has been the refusal of the Propaganda Ministry to allow importation of particular pictures, chiefly on the grounds that the cast is unsatisfactory or the story is unsuitable. The latest decree gives the censors an even wider field for exercise of prohibitions.

FILM "CHARGE OF LIGHT

ALFRED TENNYSON'S noble verses have kept ever green in mortal memory the heroic charge of the Light Brigade "into the valley of death, into the mouth of hell," and Warners are trying to make their "Charge of the Light Brigade" a screen record of commensurate quality. Big is the word commonly applied to it in the production colony, and a single set, the Chukoti garrison, is the biggest built in Hollywood since Brezzy Eason, called upon by Director Michael Curtis to erect it, fabricated the reproduction of the Coliseum for "Ben Hur."

The story is of two Englishmen, brothers and soldiers in love with the same girl, and of a border chieftain who, first betraying the British, fled to the Crimea, joined the Russian forces and caused to be issued the order which sent "the noble six hundred" charging into death and glory. Colorful, rich in action, backgrounded and animated at once by romance and martial conflict, the entertainment potentialities of the production loom promisefully in prospect.

The time of the picture is 1850. The story traverses India from the northern border to Calcutta, into Arabia and the Crimea. Battles between Lancers and border tribesmen are frequent and dramatic. The Cawnpore massacre (shown at lower right) is among the incidents leading up to the final fatal charge (glimpsed above). Because there are so many battles, sieges and other actionful sequences, Director Curtis is keying in contrasting simplicity the love scenes (left) which carry on the romantic phase of the drama.

Choice of Olivia de Havilland and Errol Flynn for the leading roles is, of course, in direct recognition of their work in "Captain Blood." To Patrick Knowles, English actor prominent in "Give Me Your Heart," was assigned the role of the other brother. C. Henry Gordon is the villainous Surat Khan. Others in the cast are Donald Crisp, J. Carroll Naish, Nigel Bruce, Spring Byington, E. E. Clive, Lumsden Hare, David Niven, Robert Barrat, Colin Kenny, and Henry Stephenson, players of definitely demonstrated suitability for the roles assigned them.

Decision to produce the picture traces to Michael Jacoby, one time reviewer-reporter, who convinced Jack Warner and Hal Wallis of its desirability and was given the assistance of Rowland Leigh and Sam Bischoff in preparing it for the screen. Almost a year was spent in preparation, with research and authentification carried on at length and in painstaking detail. When production was started plans were made, properly, to emphasize especially the charge sequence from which the picture, like the poem, takes its name. It was for this that Mr. Eason, whose handling of the chariot race in "Ben Hur" and the stampede in "The Last Frontier," is among the unforgettable items of Hollywood history, was called in. Eye witnesses to this episode have described it as among the most exciting ever filmed.

Other sets and scenes are scaled in appropriate dimension. Surat Khan's palace and the ballroom in Calcutta are rich in splendor of setting. The massacre sequence has magnitude, melodrama and action. Off-setting these and other vigorous appeals to interest are the relatively calm and contrastingly effective sequences in which the love story is told.

It is to be conceded, of course, that magnitude in itself is no guarantee of box office success. That has been demonstrated too many times for comfort in any quarter. But when Warner Brothers are the people who are going in for magnitude Hollywood is not accustomed to wagging heads in that knowing, dubious manner, because the succession of Warner experiments in magnitude have had a way of turning out well and there is no very evident reason for thinking their string of successes is likely to be broken at this time. Maybe that, more than the attributes and size and scope of the picture itself, accounts for the rising enthusiasm for "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

PARAMOUNT SUES SAM GOLDWYN FOR LOSS OF COOPER CONTRACT

Adolph Zukor Asks $5,000,000 Damages for Paramount, Charging "Interference by Goldwyn and Goldwyn Co."

The doorbell rang Monday in the recesses of the Samuel Goldwyn mansion on its high knoll that overlooks the surrounding territory in Hollywood. The proper, English-trained butler hastened to answer. At the portal the servant found a well groomed man, the cut of whose clothes, the luster of well-polished boots and, in fact, whose appearance as a whole was that of a well turned out gentleman. So effective was the caller's appearance that the butler immediately surmised the gentleman must be one of the new members of the United Artists board of directors he had heard the master and mistress speak of while dining.

He allowed the gentleman to enter, took his hat, and when he was asked to inform Mr. Goldwyn he had a caller, the well-trained man sought out Mrs. Goldwyn since he knew his master already had retired to his rooms and by now was in his bed. From the confines of the lavishly furnished living room, where all of Mr. Goldwyn's motion pictures are privately shown to audiences of friends before they are previewed, came the gracious Mrs. Goldwyn to welcome the new "member of the board of United Artists."

Great was her surprise, however, when the well-groomed young man turned out to be not of United Artists, but a representative of Paramount Pictures, Inc.—or rather a process server bringing the papers of Adolph Zukor summoning Mr. Goldwyn to court to answer charges of luring Gary Cooper from Mr. Zukor's company and to show why he should not pay some $5,000,000 for so doing.

From his bed upstairs Mr. Goldwyn refused to stir, suggested that the caller be put in telephonic communication with Abe Lehr, his personal executive assistant.

Mr. Lehr finally convinced the young man he could deliver his papers to him instead of to Mr. Goldwyn and after receiving authorization to do this from the federal court clerk, the visitor retrieved his hat from the ready hand of the butler and left.

The action of Mr. Zukor against Mr. Goldwyn was not wholly unanticipated, however. The suit was prepared by W. K. Tuller, Pierce Works and Jackson W. Chase of the law firm of Omelveny, Tuller and Myers and handed to the clerk of the United States district court at Los Angeles at 9:15 Monday morning.

The lengthy complaint, setting forth Paramount's list of grievances, asked $4,000,000 damages for the loss of Mr. Cooper by the company, and $1,000,000 punitive costs from Mr. Goldwyn.

Mr. Goldwyn said he would not reply until he had seen the complaint.

Mr. Cooper declined to make a statement, but his manager, Jack Moss, said:

"Well, we're signed with Sam Goldwyn, all right. But as for trouble between the two studios, I don't know anything about it. It was just one of those things that sent us to Goldwyn instead of staying with Paramount."

Mr. Zukor, however, accused Mr. Goldwyn of a "breach of morals and ethics," as well as violation of the law.

"In the 25 years I have been in motion pictures I have never permitted our executives to interfere with the negotiations between a star of another company and that company for continued services of the star. This has always been and always will be a matter of principle with our organization," Mr. Zukor said.

He added that Paramount began negotiations with Mr. Cooper for a new contract in October, 1935, 14 months before the expiration of his present ticket. An agreement was reached in January, he said. But at the same time, said the complainant, and without the knowledge of Paramount, "interference by Goldwyn and the Goldwyn company" prevented the signing of the contract. The complaint further asserted that Mr. Cooper was persuaded to sign up with Mr. Goldwyn "by means of false and fraudulent representations and statements."

Say First Chance from Goldwyn

Hollywood, however, was inclined to believe that sentiment played quite an important part in the star's alignment with the Goldwyn forces instead of continuing with Paramount. His friends claimed that he got his first chance through Mr. Goldwyn 10 years ago last month. Arriving in Los Angeles from his native Helena, Mont., the actor vainly hunted a job as a newspaper cartoonist and eventually landed in Hollywood as a cowboy extra in "The Winning of Barbara Worth," which starred Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky.

Mr. Goldwyn was said to have picked the actor out of the crowd. He gave him the second lead in the film, and saw him go on from there to become one of the most important players in the industry.

Mr. Cooper's intimates said the actor had long hoped for an opportunity to go back to Mr. Goldwyn. Paramount, however, has had him under contract since 1926.

Salary, it is understood, did not influence the player in making the change from Paramount to Goldwyn. He is reported to have been receiving "more than $100,000 a picture."

Following the filing of the suit, Mr. Zukor issued a statement, which read in part:

"When Gary Cooper came to Hollywood he was an inexperienced player in whom Paramount saw possibilities. He was a likeable, personable young man and it was our company which decided to take a chance on him as star material.

"At great expense, the company, through these efforts, has developed Mr. Cooper into one of the most important and highly paid actors in motion pictures.

"Under Paramount's guidance Mr. Cooper has come to the screen in such outstanding successes as 'Lives of a Bengal Lancer,' 'Morocco,' 'The Virginian,' 'Farewell to Arms,' 'Desire,' 'Design for Living' and many others.

Cites Current Films

"At present Mr. Cooper has just completed 'The General Died at Dawn,' a picture which executive previews have proven will be the one in which he has given his best performance to date. And again, under Paramount's direction, he is ready to start in a picture which is expected to equal or surpass his past screen triumphs—Cecil B. DeMille's 'The Plainsman.'

"In October, 1935, Paramount entered into negotiations with Mr. Cooper for a new contract to be for a period of four years, following completion of his present contract which expires December 4, 1936.

"Compensation to be paid him was agreed upon by Paramount and Mr. Cooper in January, 1936. Both were ready, willing and able to execute the contract.

"Our complaint alleges that at this time interference by Goldwyn and the Goldwyn company thwarted and prevented the signing of this contract.

"In the making of motion pictures, every producer realizes that any star has the right—as does a man or woman in any other profession—to better himself.

"But in the 25 years I have been in motion pictures I have never permitted our executives to interfere with the negotiations between a star of another company and that company, for the continued services of the star. That has always been and always will be a matter of principle with our organization.

"Our attorneys, after careful study, have advised us that such conduct as that alleged in our complaint, is not only a breach of good morals and ethics, but is a violation of law and gives us a legal right of action against Goldwyn and the Goldwyn company for all actual damages suffered and also for punitive damages where such wrong-doing was willful and malicious.

"Under the circumstances, we will fight for the rights of our company."

TRAFFIC VIOLATORS ARE FORCED TO VIEW FILM

Police Judge Twain Michaelsen of San Francisco passed novel sentences this week on traffic violators brought up before him. All those who pleaded guilty, or were found so, of violating traffic ordinances were sentenced, instead of the usual monetary fines or prison sentences, to sit through a screening of Paramount's "And Sudden Death," at the Fox Theatre and to further prove they had seen the picture.

SCHENCKS BRIDGE ATLANTIC BY GAUMONT-BRITISH DEAL

MGM, 20th Century-Fox and GB Reach Agreement in Principle, Speeding the Movement for Internationalizing of Industry

M-G-M, 20th Century-Fox and Gaumont-British have joined corporate hands across the sea.

This most spectacular manifestation of the long, tediously developing, process of internationalization of the motion picture industry, on its way since the beginnings in 1896, interrupted by the inhibitive influences of the World War, to America's great advantage, delayed again by the revolutionary invasion of sound and language, "broke in the news" with official word this week.

The historic occasion was Monday, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, with the press summoned to hear, in the Joseph M. Schenck suite, Number 31, in the tower of the Sherry Netherlands, looking down where the tides of Manhattan split around the greenswards of Central Park.

The official statement was the minimum that could be said of the new interlocking arrangements and cross ownerships. Somewhere in the undiscussed distance were and are considerations of British Empire controls and restrictions, quotas, television, and even more vague matters of the tomorrows.

This week's outward expressions and concerns have been about this particular triangular arrangement. Parallels and sequels, presently to find expression in other alignments, similarly addressed at seats in a "world court of the cinema," are in the making.

Cable dispatches from Bruce Allan of the London Bureau of MOTION PICTURE HERALD on Wednesday indicated that the tidings from New York had created a flurry of excitement and questionings in Wardour street, the center of British Empire film arfairs. There was talk of Governmental inquiry, interference, prohibitions and the like.

Interestingly enough, no little of the excitement and questionings was recorded by The Daily Film Renter, trade publication usual described as "close to GB" and said to be decidedly "an Ostrer paper."

In New York, however, it was observed that the negotiations were consummated here and the official announcements issued by the parties to the deal in person, including Isadore Ostrer.

It was also to be observed that all parties to the negotiations, including Mr. Ostrer, might well be expected to have weighed, anticipated and planned to meet any Governmental inquiry or proposal of action.

Analysis of the ultimate results of the deal in terms of ownership, graphically presented on page twenty-seven, would indicate a decided showing of a preponderating British ownership, implying for Britain at least a diagrammatic control.

The story came from three men on a divan, in that suite 31. They were Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox, and Isadore Ostrer, president of Gaumont-British—with Joseph M. Schenck, still with the laurels of the Fox-20th Century merger upon him, in the middle and chief spokesman.

The onslaught of invited foreign correspondents and other press representatives, to a total of thirty-odd in number, were counted in and checked off against a list of publications, with an attendance of 99 per cent, or thereabouts. The checking was by exceedingly quiet male secretaries. There were no press agents, none.

The affair was exceedingly official. The three chieftains were to do the talking, all of it. Through the open door of an adjacent room an uncleared table indicated that they had just completed luncheon. Mr. Ostrer was dapperly natty in the English manner with a most perky kerchief in breast pocket, but his starched and attached collar was escaping with a suggestion of weather. The Brothers Schenck were in most American business garb, and Joseph's haircomb suggested he had been emphatically shaking his head about something.

Most motion picture functions, more especially those that have to do with pieces in the papers, are lubricated by attentive butlers with tray in hand. This one was dry, but interesting. It was unhollywood.

Joseph Schenck standing in the middle of the deep oriental roomwide rug, with the Chinoisierie and teak tables all about, handed brief typewritten statements to the gentlemen of the press and introduced his brother, "whom you all know," and Mr.

London Finds "Alarming" Note In News of Gaumont Merger

by BRUCE ALLAN

London Bureau of MOTION PICTURE HERALD

It's Wednesday in London and Wardour Street is mulling the press reports of the Gaumont British - Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer - Twentieth Century-Fox alliance, from New York, in considerable excitement.

No statement of official nature has been issued on this side, yet, but there is much of unofficial discussion.

The Daily Film Renter runs scare headings suggesting serious sequels in Parliament on the big deal. An editorial asserts uneasiness in official circles. This paper is close to GB, a fact which in the circumstances is giving rise to some curiously diverse speculations as to the significance of its presentations and position.

London's discussions, to be sure, are based on cable reports and versions of the statements given out in New York.

It is certain that increased pressure will be brought on the Moyne Committee by British interests to strengthen the Act. Fear of American influence by the committee shown in the minutes of the evidence is significant.

An important executive's view on the distributing problem is that the Gaumont selling organization must be scrapped to leave Gaumont British films free for Fox and Metro product quota cover.

It is estimated that the scrapping of the Gaumont organization in the United States will mean an annual saving of $500,000 to $750,000. Abandonment of quickie production by Metro and Fox will save between $200,000 and $300,000 for each company yearly, therefore the new merger can start with an approximate annual cash saving of between a million and a million and a half dollars.

It is noted that the switch of Gaumont productions to the new company would have a perceptible effect on the statistical results of the Films Acts, representing a definite reduction in the number of quota films available to exhibitors, although the loss may be more apparent than real due to the poor quality of the majority of Fox and Metro quota films. The merger may also offer a newsreel problem, Gaumont having its own highly successful reel and Fox its Movietone News, controlled by a separate company in which the Harmsworth family with important associations in the Daily Mail newspaper group are interested.

On Monday J. R. Remer, M.P., will ask in the House of Commons if the president of the Board of Trade "will take steps to see that this important company does not pass into foreign control."

COMPANIES' HOLDINGS EQUALIZED

Ostrer. The gentlemen of the press took one glance at the formal "hand-out" and proceeded to fire from the hip, a score and a half of men with a hundred questions at once.

Mr. Ostrer, surveying the melee, suggested that the spokesmen sit down together and organize the answers. An hour later Nicholas M. Schenck left for another appointment, summarizing for Metro in his opinion that the arrangement was for that concern "good business." For another hour his brother and Mr. Ostrer met the questioners.

They explained that details of the plan are by no means complete; that television or pressure from the British Government or the desire by the American companies to control the British unit, did not enter into the negotiations; and that the present proposal is only an "agreement in principle," the result of a "meeting of minds." Mr. Ostrer gave illuminating explanation of the corporate convolutions involved in the procedure but seemed annoyed at times when reporters, who have difficulty in budgeting cigaret money, were slow in following the transactions and in determining the interests to be benefited.

Primary facts of the agreement are two. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, of which Nicholas M. Schenck is president, will buy half of the 49 per cent interest held by Twentieth Century-Fox in the Metropolis & Bradford Trust, British company which holds 57 per cent of the voting stock of the Gaumont-British companies. All stock not held by Fox in the trust company is owned by the Ostrer brothers.

Secondly, a new company will be formed to take over the Metropolis and Bradford holdings and a substantial block, "more than half," of the new company's stock will be sold to the British public so that definite control will remain British. At the same time the holdings of the Ostrer brothers, Fox and Metro in the new company will be equalized so that none will have a controlling voice in the affairs of the company and hence in Gaumont-British.

Effects of the agreement when put in operation would be, they said, a working alliance between the three companies. Gaumont production was to be increased, perhaps doubled, according to Mr. Ostrer, the distribution and sales forces of the three companies would be "absorbed" in the United States and in England, the American companies would abandon present or planned production units in England, and the technical departments of Fox and Metro would be placed at the disposal of the GB production department.

In the light of recent discussions of the quota situation in England and the reported efforts of the English Government to limit exhibition in that country to English-made pictures, the "agreement in principle," is especially significant.

During the questioning which followed the handing out of the statements Joseph Schenck explained, with a happy smile, that under the new arrangement the two American companies will not have to make any quota pictures and that distribution in England will be handled as one unit. Mr. Ostrer joined him in pointing out that quota pictures up to now have been of obviously poor quality. The new set-up will change this, they declared. The British executive proudly emphasized that "all Gaumont British pictures are of fine quality."

The quota problem was mentioned by Joseph P. Kennedy in his recent report to the Paramount board in which he said, after pointing that foreign quotas constitute a serious threat to the industry: "If the current move to limit the exhibition of films in England largely to English-made films is carried out, not only will it be imitated in other countries, but, in some instances, it might make all the difference between profitable and unprofitable operations for American units.

"Some American companies, notably Twentieth Century-Fox, have been keenly aware of this danger and have made recent affiliations abroad to offset the consequences of an embargo. . . . Recent events seem to foreshadow a determination on the part of British authorities to take important action. Obviously the British Government is planning real regulation of the industry, but the thought is also suggested that this information may be sought as a basis for decision as to the measure of aid the government may give the British film producers. English insurance companies, banks and investment trusts are now large holders of securities in British film concerns and the known tendency of Great Britain to subsidize its industries gives color to the fear that when the new quota is announced it will reveal further difficulties for American made films."

MIAMI FILM RULING HELD DISCRIMINATORY

Ernest Morrison, general manager of Paramount Enterprises, Inc., and Mitchell Wolfson of Wometco Theaters, both of Miami, Fla., told the city commission this week that Miami's charter section prohibiting the showing of pictures of contests between negroes and white persons "is discriminatory now where it was not at the time it was adopted." They pointed out that the pictures of the Max Schmeling-Joe Louis fight were shown in cities surrounding Miami and accounts of the battle were broadcast to Miami.

The appearance of Mr. Morrison and Mr. Wolfson before the commission was brought about by the banning of the fight pictures in Miami recently.

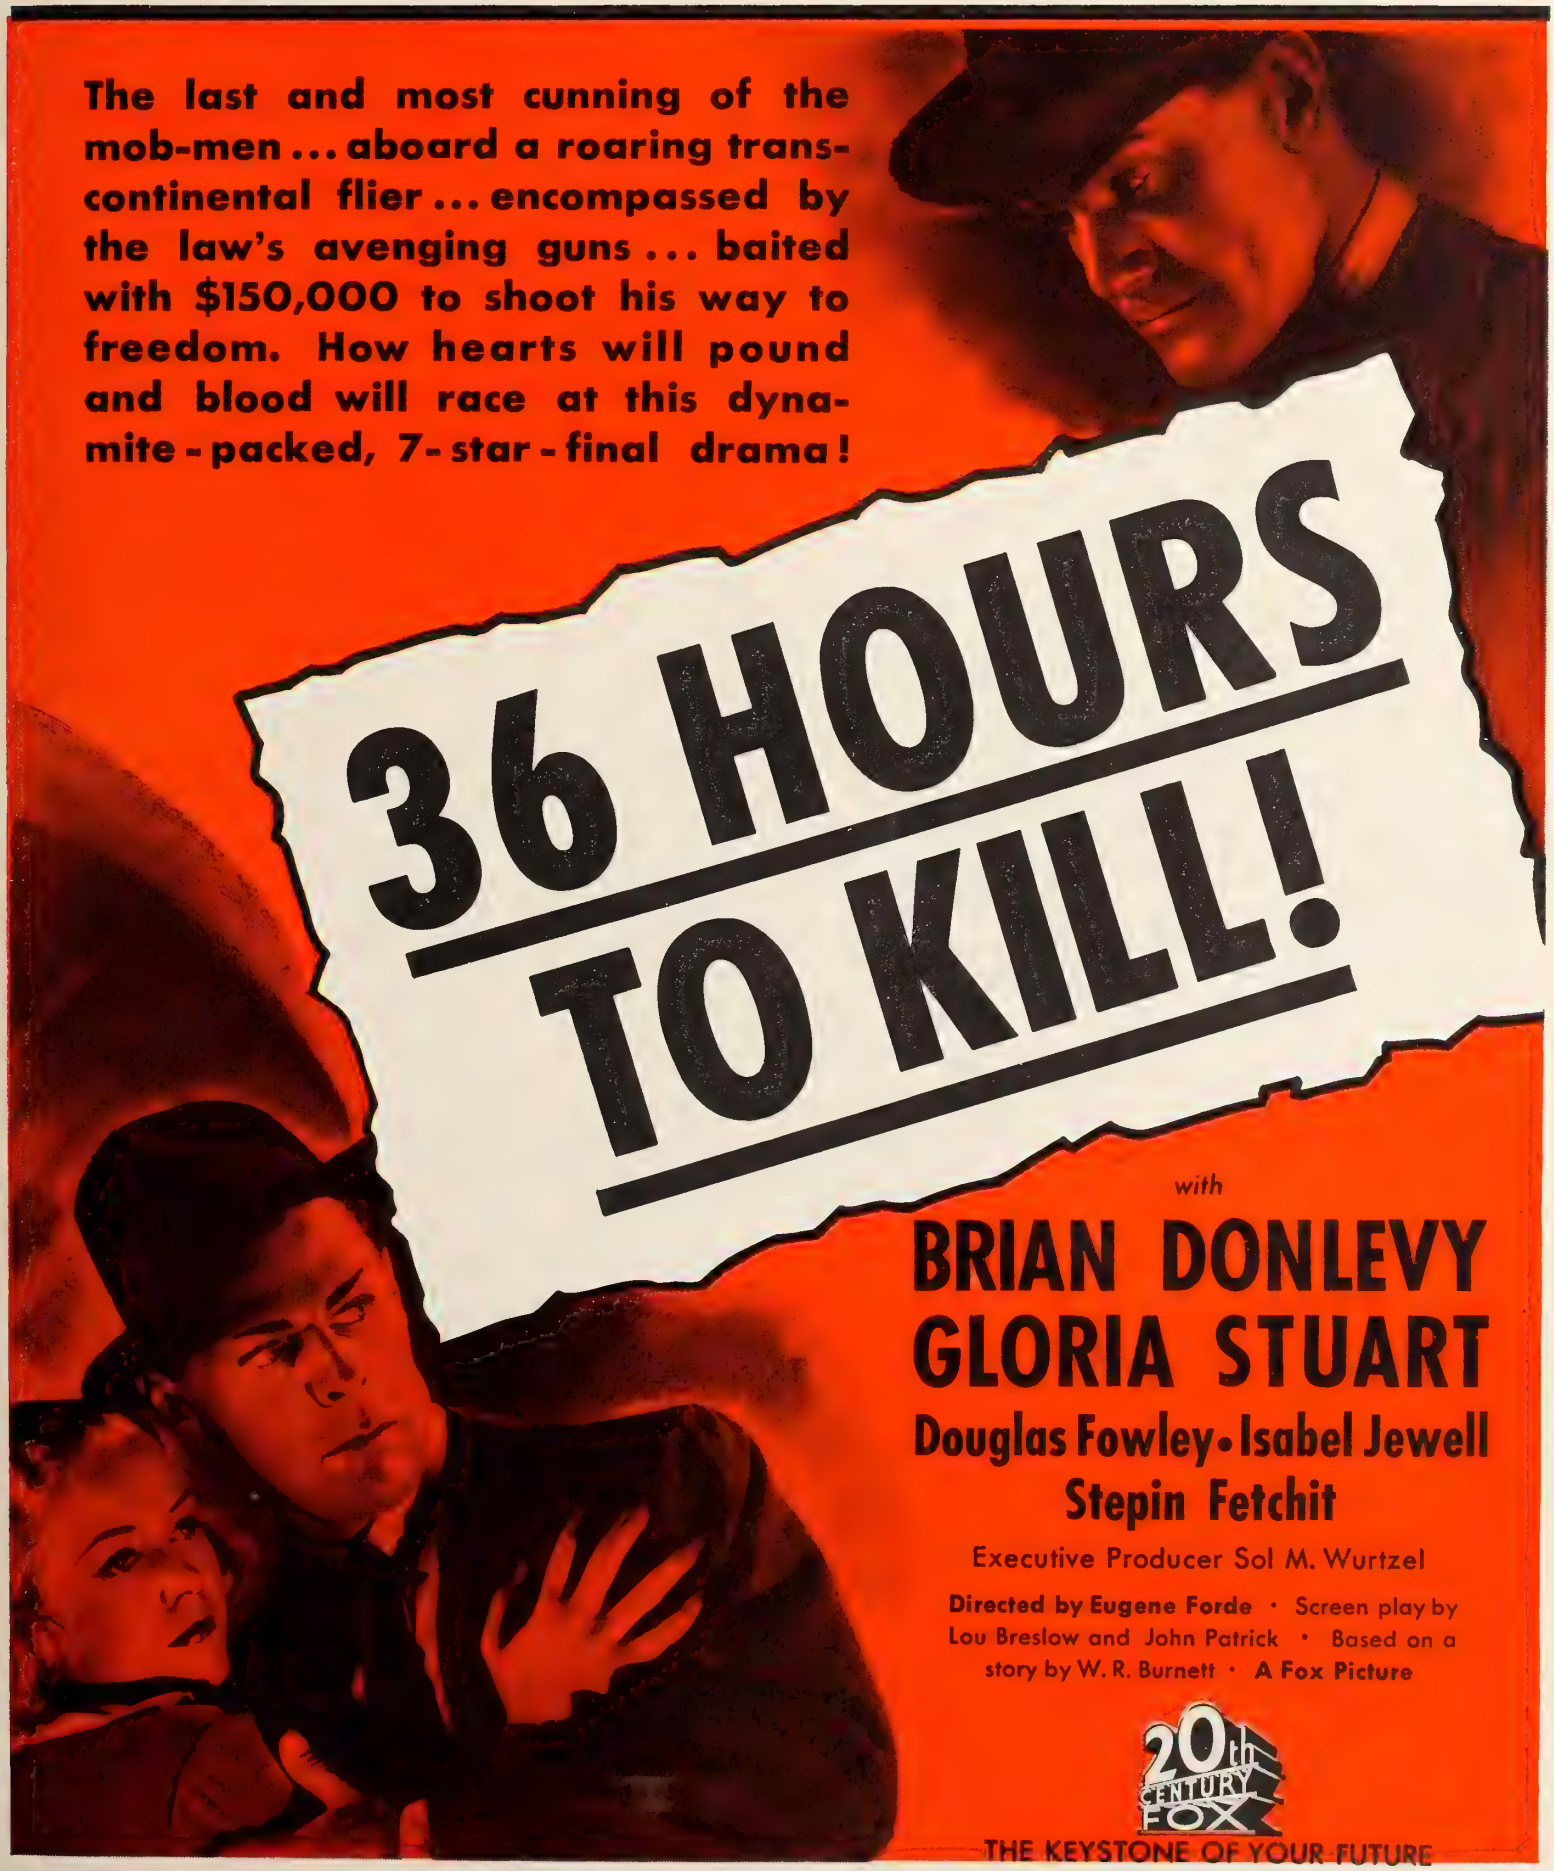
Capitalization To Be Decided

In discussing the financial structure which will be erected under the proposed arrangement Mr. Ostrer and the Schenck brothers emphasized the point that with half of the stock in the new holding company owned by the public, the three contracting parties, even together, will not have control. Although Mr. Ostrer remarked that, naturally, he and his brothers are part of the British public, he and Joseph Schenck stressed the fact that the three parties have agreed, again "in principle," that none of the stock to be sold to the public will be bought by any of them.

The purpose of turning control of the company over to the public, according to Mr. Ostrer and Joseph Schenck, is that none of the three parties wanted control and thought it not "healthy" for them to hold it even jointly. The holding company's capitalization, number of shares, par value and other corporate details have not been worked out and will not be until after legal agreements are drawn and presented to the boards of the various companies. All three men said they expect this phase to be completed in three weeks.

Ostrer To Be Chairman

The statement declared that no change in management is contemplated but questioning on this point revealed that Mr. Ostrer will become chairman of the board of Gaumont-British, that the post of president which he now holds will be abolished and that his brother, Mark, who is now chairman and managing director, will continue in the last named position. Joseph Schenck said that this move is to be made at his request and his brother's because they both wanted Mr. Ostrer to take a more active part in the affairs of the company under the new alignment.



Details of the transfer to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of half of the Twentieth Century-Fox interest appeared to be the simplest phase of the proposal. Neither of the Schenck brothers would give any hint of the price to be paid. Nicholas Schenck denied that Metro will have to make any financing arrangements to pay for the stock and said, "When the time comes it will be paid from the treasury." Asked what the holdings brought when William Fox bought them during his whirlwind expansion program in 1929, Joseph Schenck answered, "About $18,000,000." He was corrected by Mr. Ostrer, who said that the figure was approximately $16,000,000. The three smiled at the suggestion that anything like this amount would figure in the transfer of half of the stock.

After the first rush of questioning the reporters discovered that the third point on the typed statement was "that Gaumont-British shall have the benefit of distribution of their pictures in the United States and the world through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation on specially favorable terms, thus greatly reducing the cost of distribution in

DIPLOMATS VIEW "TIME" REEL AS HULL ANSWERS DOMINICANS

Virginia Garden Is Gathering Place of Diplomatic Audience to See Sequence Concerning the Dominican President

Cooling drinks and "warm" pictures were served together to Washington's diplomatic corps in the Colonial gardens of the estate of Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell at Alexandria, Va., Friday night following an expression of regret by Cordell Hull, secretary of state, to the Dominican Minister over the sequence in the current March of Time release, to which the Dominican Government had taken exception. The sequence had been deleted from the showing last week at the Music Hall in Radio City.

Secretary Hull had informed Minister Pastoriza that there was nothing he could do to punish the offenders or prevent a further occurrence of such an incident in his note to the Dominican Ministry, which had charged that the film was "devoted exclusively to attacking the personality of President Trujillo Molina in a disrespectful and unjust manner and to giving a completely false impression of the Dominican nation and the political situation prevailing therein."

Deprecating the exhibition of any film which causes offense to any foreign government, Secretary Hull pointed out that "such actions sometimes occur, however, for the reason that in this country, unlike many other countries, freedom of speech and of the press is deeply imbedded in our tradition; is cherished by every citizen as part of the national heritage, and is guaranteed under our Constitution."

Following the secretary's reply to the Dominican government and through the efforts of Harold Horan, Washington correspondent of Time Magazine, some 200 members of the diplomatic corps assembled in reply to telegraphic invitation on the estate of Mr. Powell, formerly associated with the Van Sweringens of railroad note and now in a public relations capacity with a Virginia utility company, to see the disputed reel along with other films provided for the occasion.

Taken Out of District of Columbia

It had been thought advisable to take the showing into Virginia out of the District of Columbia to relieve State Department officials of any responsibility which might be placed upon them had the film been exhibited to the diplomatic group within the confines of the national capital.

Among the guests were Ambassador Patterson of Cuba, Minister Finot of Bolivia, Ambassador Aranha of Brazil, and members of the secretariats and staffs of the embassies and legations of Chile, Italy, the Netherlands, Germany, Greece and Spain; Mme. Sacasa, wife of the recently deposed president of Nicaraugua; John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America; William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to Russia, and officials of various government departments as well as society leaders.

Following the picture a buffet supper was served, the principal subject of discussion was the Trujillo sequence. Several commented that there were many other "interesting" incidents in the career of the man who rules what the picture calls "the tightest little dictatorship in the Caribbean," that might have been included in the film.

No statement on the deletion from the release was issued by the March of Time offices in New York. It was reported that the Music Hall in Radio City, under the control of the Rockefellers, who have considerable oil markets in the Dominican Republic, was the only theatre which had eliminated the Trujillo sequence.

Secretary Hull's Note

The Dominican Government also, apparently, decided to let the matter rest the while, as it ponders the full portent of the note from Secretary Hull, which follows:

July 15, 1936.

"The Honorable Senor don Andres Pastoriza, Minister of the Dominican Republic.

"Sir:

"I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your recent note by which you state that a film of 'The March of Time' is now being exhibited 'devoted exclusively to attacking the personality of President Trujillo Molina in a disrespectful and unjust manner and to giving a completely false impression of the Dominican nation and the political situation prevailing therein.' You express your profound displeasure over the 'improper manner in which certain American journalists, in a strange alliance with Dominican revolutionaries residing here, are devoting themselves to the task of defaming with impunity a friendly ruler and a country which has always striven to maintain relations of sincere cordiality with the United States and to perform, despite business depressions and unjustifiable hostilities, the duties of friendship imposed by the actualities of geographic vicinity and the spirit of true internationalism.'

"In conclusion you state that 'it is the wish of this legation that the Department of State, basing itself so much on your cordial formulas and spirit of conciliation, can find a way to keep the attacks from being repeated which are being made systematically and in a community of petty interests against President Trujillo and the Dominican people.'

"There is no one more than I who deprecates the publication of any article or the exhibition of any film which causes offense to any foreign government. It is the policy of this government to strengthen friendly ties between this and other countries and to that end this government is conducting its foreign relations on a basis of complete respect for the rights and sensibilities of other nations.

"My government, therefore, deplores any action of private citizens that are in discord with this policy and that cause offense to the peoples of other countries. Such actions sometimes occur, however, for the reason that in this country, unlike many other countries, freedom of speech and of the press is deeply imbedded in our tradition; is cherished by every citizen as part of the national heritage, and is guaranteed under our Constitution.

"Although appreciating your desire to prevent any occurrences which might reflect upon your country's name. I am sure you understand that for the reasons just explained, this government is not in a position to prevent the matters complained of by you. I can only repeat that I shall deeply regret any such occurrences that might reflect upon the cordial ties of friendship that unite the people of our two countries, particularly since it is likely that representatives of the republics of this hemisphere will soon be meeting in a common effort to promote the maintenance of peace and of friendly relations on this hemisphere.

"Accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

"CORDELL HULL."

WHITE-COLLAR WPA AIDES GET HOLIDAY

Orders authorizing vacations with pay for several thousand Works Progress Administration employees were issued this week in Washington by Aubrey Williams, deputy administrator. The order applied to WPA supervisory and white-collar employees who previously had been barred from vacations because they are paid from the same pay roll as the rank and file relief workers.

Theatre units are included in the order and vacations will be granted to administrative and supervisory employees of Federal Project 1, which includes the writing, theatre, art and music units.

SCHENCKS—OSTRER DEAL AT A GLANCE

HOW THE VARIOUS HOLDINGS IN GAUMONT-BRITISH COMPARE UNDER THE NEW PLAN

The two segments at the right represent the public's participation in the new plan for Gaumont-British structure under the agreement-in-principle of Nicholas M. Schenck of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Joseph M. Schenck of 20th Century-Fox, and Isadore Ostrer. The segment farthest to the right is the public's 43 per cent in Gaumont-British. The segment second from the right is the public's holding in the new company to be formed to supplant Metropolis and Bradford Trust, agreement having been made that none of this stock be held by Fox, MGM or the Ostrers.

(In New York it was indicated on Wednesday that the final phase of the program in contemplation would find the Ostrer interests ultimately retired from an ownership position—the American companies retaining only about 25%, and 65% reposing with the British investing public.)

LARGER PRODUCTION OUTLAY SEEN

the United States and the world and increasing efficiency and the gross income."

The negotiators insisted that the machinery under which these aims will be effected has not been "thought out." They said that the Gaumont-British distribution and sales force in the United States will be "absorbed" by the Metro and Fox organizations and GB product distributed through its new American allies. In other world markets the distribution of product of the two American companies and GB will be handled together or separately as requirements or good policy dictate.

A particular source of satisfaction to Joseph Schenck seemed to be the expectation that both Fox and Metro will drop their present production units in England as soon as present work is cleared. He said that in all about eight pictures are in production.

Mr. Ostrer pointed out that the aggregate amount to be spent on production in England when the plan goes into operation will be greater than the total now spent by the three companies but the economies to be effected will more than compensate for the greater expense. The increased cost will follow chiefly from the fact that GB production is to be increased from the present total of 24 features a year to more than 40. All of these productions, he emphasized, will be feature productions and even though they will be used as quota cover for American films they will be expensively made for normal earning power.

Asked directly what benefits the Ostrer brothers will gain by relinquishing their present controlling interest in Metropolis and Bradford and reducing their shares to equal the holdings of Metro and Fox, Joseph Schenck said, "They are not giving up something for nothing." Mr. Ostrer interjected, "It will be relinquished because Gaumont will be benefited enormously by the deal."

The statement concluded that "in the opinion of the parties to the negotiation, the mutual benefits that should result from this consortium of interests can hardly be overestimated."

Although a controlling interest in the Baird Television Company is one of the assets of Gaumont-British which will be made available to their American confreres under the terms of the proposal, that factor did not enter into the preliminary discussions, all three men insisted. Mr. Ostrer digressed to say that official government broadcasting of television programs will start from Alexandria Palace, London, on October 1st and that GB will sell the receiving sets.

To a question on the part that A. C. Blumenthal, reported to have been an agent for all three parties, played in the deal, Joseph Schenck declared that he and Mr. Ostrer had first discussed the possibility of such an agreement in June, 1935, and that the entrance of Metro was one feature of the plan even then. He added that Mr. Blumenthal "injected himself" into the deal and, "if he did anything worthy of compensation, he will get it."

Mr. Schenck also declared that the agreement was made only after conferences with Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox.

J. Robert Rubin, general counsel for Metro, arrived in England this week and Richard Dwight of Hughes, Schurman & Dwight, attorneys for Fox, will sail this weekend to complete the negotiations in England. Mr. Ostrer and Beddington Behrens, stock broker, were scheduled to sail on Thursday on the Ile de France to participate in the final negotiations.

Decision Reserved In Radio Tube Suit

Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey reserved decision Monday in New York on an application for an injunction by the National Union Radio Tube Company seeking to restrain the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company from canceling a license agreement under which the plaintiff manufactures millions of tubes a year.

The tube company declared that the defendants had threatened to abrogate the contract because it had failed to pay $50,000 royalties under patent licenses held by the electrical companies. Benjamin A. Javits, counsel for the National Union company, argued that his client's claims against the defendants exceeded the sum of the royalties and accused RCA of price-fixing and of giving preferential treatment to other licensees.

Opposing the suit, John T. Cahill, of counsel for RCA, described the plaintiff's charges as "vicious and astounding." He told the court that RCA had generously helped the tube company through its financial difficulty by loans and otherwise, and declared that the filing of the injunction action comes a month before a considerable debt of the National Union to RCA becomes due. He also questioned the plaintiff's good faith.

REVOLT IN SPAIN CLOSES THEATRES

The motion picture industry in Spain came to a dead stop this week as rebellion flared, endangering life and property.

Theatres and distributing organizations were closed by government order as a precautionary measure while suppression of the revolt was undertaken.

Order was reported as being restored on Wednesday.

Reply Filed in N. J. Anti-Trust Action

Answers denying alleged anti-trust violations in the distribution of films in New Jersey were filed in the federal court at Newark this week by 27 motion picture companies and four officials, as the result of a $1,060,000 damage suit and an equity action instituted by independent New Jersey operators.

The action was started in April, 1935, by the Ledirk Amusement Company, which operates the Palace at Orange, and the Strand Operating Company, which formerly operated the Strand at East Orange.

Direct answers denying the charges have been filed by Stanley Company of America, Warner Brothers, the Circuit Management Corporation, Warner Bros. Theatres, Inc., and Donald Jacocks.

Other defendants, not only denying the allegations of the two complainants, but questioning the court's jurisdiction as well, include Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., First National Pictures, Inc., First National Productions, Inc., Vitagraph, Inc., Vitaphone Corporation, Vitaphone Distributing Corporation, First National Pictures Distributing Corporation, Stanley-Fabian Corporation, Harry M. Warner, Albert Warner and Joseph Bernhard.

The charges were also denied and the court's jurisdiction questioned by four other groups of defendants known as the Fox, United Artists, Paramount and RKO groups.

The plaintiffs in the equity suit seek an injunction to prevent alleged distribution of feature pictures to only those houses controlled by the motion picture interests and to obtain for independent houses the right to compete on an equal basis for purchase or rent of the pictures.

Merritt Lane and Louis Nizer represent the defendants, while Israel Greene is the attorney for the plaintiffs.

British Screen Writers Organize

Organized by Kilham Roberts, the British Screen Writers' Association has been formed under the wing of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights and Musicians, for the special purpose of presenting a case to the Moyne Committee on the Films Act. Recommendations from the FBI Film Group, including the abolition of the existing Films Act clause stipulating a British scenario writer, will be contested by the new association.

Epidemic Hits Grosses

Theatre owners of the Tennessee Valley and sections of northern Alabama are reported to be feeling the effects of the infantile paralysis epidemic now prevailing there. Swimming pools, motion picture houses, schools, churches and public gathering places are closed indefinitely in Decatur, Athens and Hartselle.

Agreement Settles RCA Plant Strike

The strike at the Camden, N. J., plant of the Radio Corporation of America was concluded on Wednesday when members of the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America voted unanimously to accept an agreement worked out by officials of the company and of the union.

The settlement provides for an election under the auspices of the National Labor Relations Board to determine the question of majority representation as between Local 103 of the United, the Employees Committee Union and "any other employee organization in the Camden plant."

Following announcement of the settlement strike activities were to cease immediately, the striking employees were to be re-employed as rapidly as work for them becomes available, without discrimination.

The strike, which had lasted four weeks, was arbitrated by Major General Hugh S. Johnson, special labor relations representative, and David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation, both of whom acted for the company. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, was chief spokesman for the strikers.

Court cases growing out of the strike were also settled on Wednesday when a common pleas court judge dismissed 55 complaints against strikers for lack of evidence and held 37 for the grand jury on charges of "engaging to riot."

Stephen Roberts, Director, Dies

Stephen Roberts, motion picture director, died in his sleep last Friday from a chronic heart ailment. He was 41. A native of Summersville, West Virginia, Mr. Roberts studied at Ohio State University, was an aviator during the World War and first came to Hollywood as a stunt pilot. He was an assistant director for a year with William S. Hart and Thomas H. Ince.

Among the motion pictures he directed were: "Sky Bride," "Lady and Gent," "If I Had a Million," "Night of June 13," "Little Orphan Annie," "Story of Temple Drake," "One Sunday Afternoon," "The Trumpet Blows," "Star of Midnight," "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," "The Lady Consents" and "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford."

Streimer Named Special UA Sales Representative

Moe Streimer, for many years manager of the United Artists exchange in New York, has been appointed special representative out of the home office in New York, it was announced Tuesday by George J. Schaefer, vice-president in charge of sales for the company.

The branch managership of the New York exchange has been taken over by Charles Rosenzweig, who recently joined the staff of United Artists. Mr. Rosenzweig has been a prominent figure in the sales division of the motion picture industry for 18 years, and has held many important posts.

E. J. Sparks Voices Pride In Padgett's Award Honors

Not the least of the accomplishments of the Quigley Awards is the invariable recognition given the winners by their superiors. The following from E. J. Sparks, of Sparks Theatres, is an acknowledgement of this department's wire on Del Padgett's success in winning the Quigley June Bronze plaque for his campaign on "Showboat", at the Capitol Theatre, Clearwater, Fla.:

I acknowledge receipt of your telegram of the tenth reading:

"Del Padgett Capitol Theatre Clearwater Florida wins Quigley June Bronze Plaque on quote Show Boat unquote Congratulations"

This has been forwarded to me to Asheville, where I am spending a few days. I am indeed very happy at the information given in your telegram.

Mr. Padgett is one of our young managers, but is a very live-wire fellow, and is plenty competent.

I know it not only means a great deal to him to receive this honor, but it likewise makes the officials of our circuit very proud to know that one of our men won the Quigley June bronze plaque. This adds very greatly to the happiness of my vacation, and I assure you of my deep appreciation for the information given.

Mr. Padgett is the second entrant in the Quigley Awards from Florida to win a plaque, the first going to Walter Golden, of the Riverside Theatre, Jacksonville, in April, 1934, for his campaign on "Nana". Mr. Padgett's victory is his first in the competitions and also the first from among the showmen in the Sparks theatres.

Radio Broadcasts Trace Films to Scriptures

Philadelphia Clergyman's Air Reviews of Current Pictures Quote Biblical Text

by MORRIS O. ORODENKER in Philadelphia

Philadelphia radio audiences are witnessing the unusual spectacle of a clergyman utilizing motion pictures to stimulate an interest in religion. The significance of the situation carries an added import when one recalls the concerted drive on the part of the clergy in their unsuccessful fight against Sunday showings in Pennsylvania.

The central figure in this seemingly paradoxical situation is the Rev. Dr. David Carl Colony of the Episcopal Church.

Dr. Colony uses his radio series to propound a theory of his own that 80 per cent of all motion pictures teach a definite moral lesson, either by intent or by chance. On each broadcast he reviews a current film, points out the moral lesson it contains, and traces his reasoning directly to a Biblical text.

For the last three months Dr. Colony has been airing his series, called "Sermons on the Movies," over WFIL, Philadelphia, on a five-minute daily schedule. Dr. Colony believes that through these broadcasts he will arouse in the masses a thirst for more knowledge of the Scriptures.

Based on Long Study

Revolutionary as his theories may appear, they are, says Dr. Colony, based on sound thinking and years of painstaking research. Religion, the clergyman believes, must move forward to keep faith with its divine trust.

Pointing out that the church is beneficial only to those sympathetic with religion, Dr. Colony said:

"We must reach those outside the Church. Religion must be brought to the people; they must be attracted. We must go out in the highways and bring them in.

"One of the most heavily traveled of human avenues is the field of entertainment. Research has shown me that 80,000,000 people weekly go to the movies. They go primarily for entertainment, and to escape from life's harsh realities. However, it is possible for entertainment to be both instructive and inspiring. Observation has proved to me that, in most cases, the plot of a cinema clearly illustrates a text of the Bible. More so, in many cases, without the slightest stretch of the imagination, it would seem that a Biblical text had inspired the film; that its decorative scenes had been built upon a framework of Holy Writ.

"It is my intention, then, through the medium of my broadcast column, to impress the movie fans with the moral and religious implications in the current films. This with the hope that having seen a sermon preached upon the screen, the people will be inspired to a greater curiosity; that they will go in search of the God from whom all wisdom and inspiration flow, and that, having found him, they will remain to worship."

Response Is Favorable

Stimulating interest in religion with his film sermons, Dr. Colony already has amassed a tremendous listening audience. Of the several thousand letters received, only 30 have taken the clergymen to task for his liberal and progressive viewpoints. All the others have been loud in their praise of what most of them termed "sound modern day religious thought." And many of the letters of commendation were written by ministers, representing every creed.

These "Sermons on the Movies" have been indorsed by the WFIL Religious Advisory Council, a group of Philadelphia clergymen representative of the various denominations. Headed by Dr. James A. MacCallum, pastor of the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, the board governs all of the station's religious activities. Despite the unqualified approval voiced by this body, both Dr. Colony and the officials of the radio station anticipated no little criticism for the campaign. However, with the importance of the goal in view, all parties concerned are confident that the end justifies the means.

Exemplary of the method employed by Dr. Colony in his sermonettes, from "The Life of Louis Pasteur" he traced the theme to a text from the gospel of St. Matthew: "Even the Son of Man came not to be administered unto but to minister."

He knows that church attendance is falling off in the United States. Likewise, he knows that film attendance is increasing. Two and two make four, he reasons. Give the people what they want. Teach them religion with movies. Arouse their curiosity. Awaken in them a desire for the Word. Then maybe they will go to church. Having entered, they may remain. That is Dr. Colony's philosophy when, in simple and direct logic, he points out sermons taught in the current screen.

In addition to his daily broadcasts, Dr. Colony plans to present a 15-minute radio dramatization in which a current film will serve as the subject matter. Another proposed feature will be a "Mother's Corner," in which Dr. Colony will volunteer to answer all questions pertaining to juvenile psychology in its relation to the screen. Although his present broadcasts are confined to radio audiences in the Philadelphia areas, it is understood that his "Sermons on the Movies" soon will attain national proportions with a view toward reaching all the 80,000,000 film patrons in the United States.

Well known throughout the East as an educator and writer, Dr. Colony was for 10 years associated with the faculties of Haverford School and Episcopal Academy, near Philadelphia. He was formerly assistant rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Rosemont, Pa., relinquishing this post three years ago to devote his time to writing and study. For many years he has been a regular contributor to Harper's, Scribner's, Reader's Digest and other magazines.

More and more, Dr. Colony finds, the current releases from the Hollywood lots yield themselves to the treatment he gives them. From "Green Pastures" he derived material for four sermons, tracing the theme each time to a different Biblical text.

Dr. Colony is of the opinion that motion pictures are definitely on the upswing from the moral point of view. "At their present rate of progress," he continued, "there is no question that motion pictures can be made and will be made the leading agency in disseminating religious and moral instruction; both through educational pictures like 'The Life of Louis Pasteur' and 'The White Angel,' and through inspirational pictures like 'Green Pastures.' As a minister of religion, I see in the movies a greater opportunity for the advancement of religion than I do in any other single agency, except the sacraments of the Church itself."

FLORIDA SUPREME COURT SEES FILM EVIDENCE

The Florida supreme court at Tallahassee saw its first motion pictures this week when attorneys for two insurance companies were granted the privilege by the court to exhibit films as a part of their argument. Attaches said it was the first time in the history of the court that projection machines were set up in the courtroom.

The insurance lawyers sought by their picture to help prove John J. McCaskill of Marianna was not entitled to disability benefits under four policies. Views of Mr. McCaskill, which attorneys said were taken from a hotel window with a telephoto lens showed him as he walked about the business district of Marianna. Counsel for Mr. McCaskill protested at one point, claiming the film was being run too fast, and the justices entered into a discussion of amateur photography.

Washington Closings Light

With 475 theatres in the Washington territory, which includes the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, there are less than a dozen houses dark, according to Harry Brown, Grand National branch manager, who has been in New York conferring with Carl Leserman.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS' COMMITTEE TO HANDLE OVERBUILDING ISSUE

Special Group Empowered to Act at Once in "Any Direction They Think Fit" and Report to the General Council

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association has taken a further definite step to meet the danger of "redundancy," or overbuilding, which was a leading subject of discussion at the recent Summer Conference of the association at Eastbourne.

Following on a paper on the subject by Ken A. Nyman, chairman of the London & Home Counties branch of the C. E. A., the conference decided unanimously that a special committee should be set up, to collect data and consider ways and means of dealing with the problem. At the council meeting the General Purposes Committee suggested names for such a committee, which would be asked to examine the problem and report to the council. This proposal was criticized by Major A. O. Ellis, one of those nominated, who thought the committee should be given powers without reference to the council. He was supported by C. A. Mathes, a past president, and eventually a resolution was passed that the committee should "be empowered to act immediately in any direction they think fit," and that a report on the results of investigation and of any action taken should be made to the council meeting in September or earlier. The committee consists of the officers of the association and Messrs. E. J. Hinge, Major A. O. Ellis, J. Pollard, J. Welsh, E. Trounson, Ken A. Nyman, H. Shanly, E. W. P. Peall and A. Mose.

Undoubtedly the extension to a committee of such unusual powers is evidence of the alarm felt by all classes of exhibitors in regard to the overbuilding danger, of which several lurid instances were given to the Council. Mr. Pollard quoted a situation in which a theatre costing £7,000 ($35,000) had been erected, followed by another costing £17,000 ($85,000) and by the grant of a license for a third, of super capacity, although neither of the existing halls could gross £90 ($450) a week. Of another area, it was declared that it had been necessary to oppose four applications for new licenses in twelve months.

Embodied in the Nyman paper at Eastbourne was the suggestion that overbuilding could be fought by three methods: an appeal for Government protection; action in combination with distributors in a Joint Tribunal to pass on all new plans; or local opposition before licensing authorities. In regard to the first it may be significant that the association already has submitted further evidence to the Advisory Committee on the Films Act, supplementing its previous statement opposing, chiefly, an increase in the quota.

Still further application to the Board of Trade, asking protection against American investments in British theatres was a suggestion heard at Eastbourne. The atmosphere of the current agitation against overbuilding has not been sensed unless it is understood that, in the view of the British exhibitor, the chief responsibility for the evil lies at the door of a British circuit closely associated with an American distributing company. Since the committee was appointed the news has been published of a further extension of American financial control of British theatre. If the CEA decides that the real remedy for its troubles, including rentals as well as redundancy, is to be found in legislation it is perhaps significant that it is already in contact with official departments believed to be receptive to the theory of protecting British industries against "alien" control.

Also to be considered is the fact that the CEA undoubtedly feels itself on its toes in regard to its most spectacular current controversy with the Kinematograph Renters Society, on the society's compilation of a "black list," socalled, of exhibitors to be refused flat rate bookings. "If," says the official council report, "the KRS does not abandon its policy, your Legal Committee . . . asks for authority . . . to put the counteraction which the General Council has contemplated into immediate action." The KRS is given five days to withdraw the policy to which objection is taken.

See Rights Invaded

It is generally understood that, in fact, the KRS already has decided to withdraw the circular which caused all the trouble. Some distributors are understood to regard as an invasion of their individual trading rights the suggestion that percentage terms should be made compulsory in the case of theatres in solus or otherwise favorable situations. The interesting question as to just what "counter-action" would be taken by exhibitors is therefore unlikely to be determined. Hinted was a joint boycott of a single distributor, with similar action regarding other companies in due time.

Joint Trade Publicity

Another matter raised at Eastbourne, the inauguration of a joint advertising campaign by the industry, also was carried a stage further by the council. Simon Rowson, author of the original paper, and also of a more detailed plan circulated to delegates, was present by invitation and once again quoted American precedents in favor of "community" advertising. Incidentally, he said that the American exhibitors' lower rental rates were "largely a reflex of the fact that they earn more money." His suggestion now took the form of a fund to which exhibitors and distributors should contribute on a 50-50 basis, and the council instructed the officers to confer with other sections of the industry to see if a definite plan could be constructed on some such basis.

British Trip is Shaping

The program for the visit to New York and Hollywood of the party of British exhibitors organized by Arthur Taylor, secretary of the London and Home Counties Branch of the CEA, gradually is taking a definite form. Several further social functions have been arranged, including a cocktail party, through the courtesy of Mr. Percy Phillipson, at the British Club on July 27th, Mr. Drew being the host.

In addition to the already announced reception by Quigley Publications and Mr. W. G. Van Schmus at Radio City Music Hall on July 28th, the party will be entertained in New York on the return journey by Bill Brenner of National Screen Service. Mr. Brenner will meet the party on its arrival in New York and invite them to a luncheon or dinner on August 18th.

Also waiting the arrival of the Queen Mary on July 27th will be Dan Hickson of General Service Studios, George Pratt, vice-president of Electrical Research Products and Jeffrey Bernerd of Gaumont-British Corporation.

A cable has been received from Will H. Hays promising the official cooperation of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, during the party's Hollywood visit and Col. John A. Cooper, president of the MPDA of Canada, has confirmed plans to meet them at Niagara Falls on August 16th and conduct a motor trip to Toronto.

Will Remake "Dreaming Lips"

Max Schach is to produce an English version of "Dreaming Lips," the German film in which Elisabeth Bergner made her reputation. It will be directed by her husband, Dr. Paul Czinner, at Denham studios as a Trafalgar production for United Artists world release.

CHANCE GAME TRICK CAUGHT BY MANAGER

Two youths are in jail in St. Joseph, Mo., this week because a get-rich-quick plan designed to operate at the expense of theatres using Bank Night went haywire.

The scheme of Jack and James Stuart, Cincinnati brothers, was to attend Bank Night drawings with a duplicate set of tickets printed by themselves. Another person would be hired to volunteer to draw the stubs, the winner being one furnished by the schemers.

A theatre manager became suspicious when a defect in ticket perforation was detected, however, and the Stuarts confessed when questioned and confronted with the evidence. The plan worked well in Salt Lake City and Lexington, said the boys.

G-B Work Advanced

With five productions active at Shepherd's Bush, on the Northolt exterior lot, or on location, Gaumont-British is well advanced with the increased schedule of pictures announced for American as well as for British release. The current features are "The Nelson Touch," "Head Over Heels," "Sabotage," "O. H. M. S.," and "The Great Barrier," which is on location in Canada, while "The Northing Tramp" has been completed on the dot on an eight weeks shooting schedule. Interesting in this film is the fact that a series of American exterior sets were erected at Northolt, the last a reconstruction of a railway station on the U. S.-Canadian border. Constance Cummings and Hugh Sinclair were the leads in this episode. Albert de Courville directed from an Edgar Wallace story.

The Jessie Matthews vehicle, "Head Over Heels," is now well under way at Shepherd's Bush, first backgrounds being those of a Montmartre cafe. "Bob," the British Rin-Tin-Tin, is making his thirty-third screen appearance. In the cast proper are Louis Borrell, Robert Flemyng, Whitney Bourne and Romney Brent.

Latest news of the Arliss picture, "The Nelson Touch," is the selection of Rene Ray for the important part of secretary to Arliss in the political potentate half of his dual role. Miss Ray made a hit as the servant girl in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" for G-B and had Hollywood offers which she rejected for stage parts—latest of them in Priestley's "Bees on the Boat Deck." Arliss himself is pretty busy with dual appearance scenes, the political magnate in altercation with his ne'er-do-well brother. The cast includes Romilly Lunge, John Ford, Allan Jeayes, Reginald Tate, Bernard Merefield, John Turnbull and Jessie Winter.

Alfred Hitchcock's "Sabotage" is half finished. Sylvia Sydney, John Loder, Oscar Homolka, Desmond Tester, Joyce Barbour and S. J. Warmington are the chief names.

For the British army film "O. H. M. S.," three thousand regular troops are being used in scenes shot on the War Office area of Salisbury Plain. The production schedule calls for the introduction of every wing of the new mechanized army. Anna Lee is the star.

London Signs Reisch

London Films has signed Walter Reisch, who recently completed the ballet picture "Silhouettes" in Vienna, to write and direct at Denham a special feature for Vivian Leigh, West End actress recently put under long-term contract by Alexander Korda. Reisch's story will be titled "Triangle," and will be the first of a Leigh series. Screen tests made of this young artiste make her look a big find, according to London Films.

Reisch, 14 years ago an assistant director to Korda on silent films in Vienna, made his reputation as author of "Maskerade" and "Unfinished Symphony," and wrote and directed the Paula Wessely "Episode."

BRUCE LISTER
young film artist under contract to Warner - First National in England, is now appearing in "Hail and Farewell" at the Teddington studios.

British Lion has started at Beaconsfield the first of the starring vehicles scheduled for Renee Houston, variety celebrity. Entitled "Fine Feathers," it was especially written by Michael Barringer and is a comedy with Renee as a be-spectacled young woman who interrupts a secret conclave of European statesmen in a remote English country house. Opposite her is Donald Stewart, who came from the States and played a small part in "Soft Lights and Sweet Music" for BL, making a hit. Also cast are Francis L. Sullivan, Jack Hobbs, Carl Lacey, Mary Sheridan and Henry Victor. Leslie Hiscott is directing.

Arthur Maude is producing a series of features for Morgan Productions, releasing through National Provincial Film Distributors, at the Rock Studios, Elstree. The first on the list, "Live Again," went on the floor July 9th, with Bessie Love and Noah Beery co-starred and John Garrick in the juvenile lead. George Windeatt is writing special music.

For the James FitzPatrick production of "David Livingstone" for MGM release they staged the big scene of the meeting of Livingstone and Stanley in an exterior reconstruction at Sound City, Shepperton, based on contemporary newspaper sketches and drawings by a member of Stanley's party. About an acre was covered by an African village set matching up to exteriors shot on the spot last year; a hundred natives were used. In the studio is a reconstruction of the Scottish village church in which Livingstone worshipped. FitzPatrick is directing, with Hone Glendinning at the camera

Hymn Is Title

Using the hymn title "Abide with Me" John Baxter is making a feature for U. K. Films, Associated Producers and Distributors release, with an unusual type of hero, a clergyman forced out of his church by gossip, who mixes with down and outs in London slums; life below the poverty line is illustrated, among other episodes, by authentic reconstructions of London police court procedure. A new leading lady, 18-year-old Pamela Randall, is supported by Cathleen Nesbit, Eric Portman and the veteran Bransby Williams, playing two parts.

R. B. Wainwright's production at Sound City, "The Secret of Stamboul," Andrew Marton directing, is a story of New Turkey threatened by a plot to restore the old regime. A unit just has returned from Constantinople and from shots obtained there a roof-top set has been constructed in which, against a background of minarets and spires, Frank Vosper, Valeria Hobson and James Mason have played a scene in which the forbidden fez and yashmak are worn.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, of the Harriman Harrimans, is being joshed in New York smart society circles about her frank admiration for Eddie Dowling, the Broadway song-and-dance man and President Roosevelt's glad-hander in theatricals. Mr. Dowling and several others were invited to a small dancing party at Governor Earle's place in Philadelphia. Mrs. Harriman spent the whole evening with Eddie Dowling. They danced most of the time.

"He's marvelous," she told the Governor —"so bright, such a keen mind. It's amazing for a politician."

"What!" exclaimed someone. "A politician?"

"Yes. But, of course, I can see why he was made a leader."

"A what?"

"A leader. He'll do a lot for Tammany."

"Who do you think he is?" Mrs. Borden Harriman was asked.

"Why, James J. Dooling, of course, the Tammany leader."

Eddie probably could forgive Mrs. Harriman for confusing him with Mr. Dooling, but we doubt if he ever will forgive the lady for aligning him—a Rooseveltian of the deepest order and ardor—with the very anti-Rooseveltian Tammany Hall of New York.

Broadway's James Barton asked Patsy Lee Parsons, RKO's new child star, how old she was, to which little Patsy replied: "My psychological age is nine. My moral age is eight. There's a "ham" actor on Broadway, so Whitney Bolton reports, "who has been trying for four years to get a screen test. Finally, he wore one of the companies down and they arranged for a test last week. He was told to prepare for the scene from "Page Miss Glory" in which the boys toss playing cards at an upturned hat. Promptly, on the second, he arrived on the set. But there were no playing cards.

"I assumed," admonished the test director, "that you would bring your own cards."

"Sir," answered the ham, drawing himself up haughtily, "I am an actor, not a property man!"

His four years of effort ended there.

The latest Samuel Goldwyn story comes from Hollywood via Leonard Lyons and concerns the Hollywood studio executive who attended the preview of Goldwyn's newest picture. "I'm disappointed in it, Sam," the executive informed Mr. Goldwyn.

"You're disappointed!" shouted back Goldwyn. "Who are you to be disappointed with?"

Motion picture theatre owners are not alone in complaints about poor attendance. The Wichita, Kansas, police department showed "Once Upon a Time," safety film. Everyone in town was invited to attend—free of charge.

Harry Van Doren, of the Wichita police department, and the projectionist hired for the occasion were the sole patrons.

THE gates of "heaven" have been closed and locked. Celestial pastures are no longer green. The angels' wings have been folded away in mothballs, and the heavenly clouds have been dismantled and junked. Sound Stage Number 8 at the Warner Brothers studios at Burbank, in California, has returned to its natural state. Even the odor of the fish fry is gone.

"De Lawd," minus his white whiskers and his grey wig, has left Hollywood, to travel incognito in a flivver across the United States toward New York. "Moses," having led his people out of the "wilderness," has returned to Harlem to resume his career there. "Noah," who survived the best flood Hollywood rainmakers have devised in decades, has gone into vaudeville. "Cain" is gone, too, and so are "Eve" and "Adam," "Hosea," and "Aaron," each to resume a career elsewhere—or, more, accurately, to look for a job.

The "Angel Gabriel," whose oddly-curled trumpet is stored in the studio property rooms, is likewise back in Harlem, shuffling his long feet in the rehearsals of "red hot" swing dances for a sepia revue. The "Archangel of Heaven" has gone back to his regular job—portering on the Santa Fe Railroad. The celestial fish-fry cook is again a beauty parlor operator. "Heaven" is just a pleasant memory now to that gal. Other "angels" are floating again up and down Central Avenue in Los Angeles, and the cherubs, too, have gone back home.

And so ends Hollywood's Heaven, as produced by the brothers Warner for their "Green Pastures," now ready for public viewing. A large number of Hollywoodites are happy about the end, too, for many a home out there was butlerless and chauffeurless during the filming.

Producer Marc Connelly's "heaven" is no ordinary heaven, no city with gold-paved streets and pearl-tipped towers. It is, instead, a typical southern picnic ground, with wide stretches of green fields, running brooks, moss-hung trees and fleecy clouds, substantial enough for "angels" to ride upon. Tons of earth were poured over the re-inforced studio stage floors for Mr. Connelly's "heaven." Huge trees were planted and festooned with moss. Half an acre of studio lawn was denuded of sod for transplanting on the set. A running brook, boasting of real catfish, was provided. Warners "moved heaven and earth" to please Mr. Connelly.

Two hundred Negroes spent six weeks in that "heaven," singing spirituals, catching live catfish, riding clouds and having a helluva good time in general. The "fish fry" was real, the "clouds" rode comfortably, and free five-cent cigars were handed out with abandon.

The wings and the clouds were the toughest problem, next to restraining the sepians from craps shooting and gum chewing while they were walking around heaven.

All the "angels" wore terry-cloth robes, dyed a pale yellow. Their wings varied in size according to the age and importance of the "angel." A fourth-rate "angel" had only little bits of ostrich plumes sprouting from their shoulder blades. Grown up second-class "angels" had stylized wings manufactured from layers of cloth, cut feather-fashion, and mounted on heavy cardboard. "Gabriel's" wings were the biggest and best, he being the head man.

The clouds were hung by wire from rollers on tracks high in the rafters of the stage, and were built of wood and steel. After numerous trials with various materials, crepe hair, usually reserved for the chin-whiskers of actors, was fixed as the best material to give the fleecy cloud effect. All is now gone to the junk pile or to the moth-balled closets of the property warehouse.

The editors of Time Magazine have published a book in which they tell how their March of Time newsreel, now on its first anniversary, is established in the world, how it began and how it grew in its first year. It is a chapter in the history of pictorial journalism, and a highly dramatic chapter at that. "The greatest newspicture of all time," is nominated by the editors in the nature of a still that was snapped on the deck of the sinking S.S. Vestris by a Swedish pantryman, who caught the fear and panic of both crew and passengers and standing helpless among them is a cabin steward who, with both arms broken, clasped his hands and prayed for his life until finally he was carried to a lifeboat.

Of several hundred thousands of still pictures which they have seen, the editors of Time and the related Fortune magazine have published a few thousands. Out of those few thousands grew a sense of pictorial journalism in the minds of the editors. Out of that sense grew the March of Time. Following that admission, the new March of Time history-book presents some random shots, including the only pictures ever made of the United States Supreme Court judges sitting in session; Jugoslavia's King Alexander lying dying in a pool of blood in the automobile in which he was shot by an assassin while visiting Marseilles; pictures of a victim of a lynching party, strung, naked, high from a tree branch, and also of a "candid caesarean" operation. There are first-hand shots, too, of a Mexican priest slumping dead to the ground from the bullets of a firing squad, and of a nudist wedding, showing the preacher, bride, groom and attendants in the "all-together."

Time does march on! Candidly so.

The exhibition of the Catholic world press was recently inaugurated in Rome, in the City of the Vatican. The opening of the exhibition coincided with another important event, the 75th anniversary of the foremost Catholic newspaper, the Osservatore Romano. Still another Roman event occurred at the same time, the release there of Metro-Goldwyn's "Mutiny on the Bounty." Then Pope Pius XI visited the exhibition. A "still" picture was taken of His Holiness, flanked by his Cardinals and aides, and from the copy which we have in hand we find that the Pope is standing, smilingly, not in front of any of the many displays and posters exhibited on behalf of the Catholic world press and the Osservatore Romano's diamond anniversary, but plump in front of a large poster advertising Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Mutiny on the Bounty," flanked on each side by six large heads of Leo the Lion.

Lou Sobol moralizes on the fact that, less than one year ago, when two boys on Broadway wrote a smash song-hit which swept the world with its silly lyrics and rhythm, the sophisticated New Yorker weekly magazine assigned a writer to prepare a life-story. The appointment was made for noon. The reporter waited three hours and finally departed. The songsters' press agent collapsed when he saw such a beautiful publicity break walk through the door and tried to arrange another appointment, only to be coldly informed by the tunesmiths that they were getting all the news and magazine breaks they needed!

Now "The Music Goes 'Round and Around" is as dead as last month's newsreel, and Broadway has even forgotten the names of the authors.

U. S. FILMS DOMINATE INDUSTRY IN HOLLAND

No Quota Restrictions Are Being Imposed; Admission Tax Only Box Office Burden

by PH. DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

Until now the Dutch government has not made any obstacle against importing foreign film productions into Holland. Although such is the case with a great deal of other "merchandise," no laws have been made to moderate the current of foreign pictures in Holland, and American, as well as German, English, French, Austrian and other companies are releasing their productions every season without meeting with any obstacle from the part of the government. Only for publicity material, as stills, posters, mats, printed matter, etc., certain restrictions have been made.

It goes without saying that the foreign companies did their utmost in order to reach the first place and a free competition was the result of it. Undoubtedly it was the American industry that succeeded in reaching the first place in this competition, for some years already. This has been due to several facts. Of course, the American companies took care of an extended publicity campaign in order to make the U. S. product among more popular Dutch patronage, but the principal cause for the victory of America must be found in the fact that Germany saw its influence decreasing steadily, qualitatively as well as quantitatively.

America has made substantial use of the decrease of German pictures, and the French and English industries, too, made progress in releasing their productions in Holland. The French industry has become more popular. Its influence has been stimulated by the tremendous success of "La Maternelle" (already some years ago), and by the Harry Baur pictures.

The most popular actors and actresses in Holland are undoubtedly the American players. Stars such as Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich, Joan Crawford, Charles Laughton, Dick Powell, Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Ruby Keeler, Charlie Chaplin, Laurel and Hardy always meet with a fair patronage.

Know English Language

The fact that the Dutch public often can follow the English dialogue of American pictures, helped of course by the superimposing of Dutch titles in the American copy, has proved to be very important in the development of American pictures in Holland. As the Dutch public generally much better understands a German dialogue, the victory of American pictures over the German productions, therefore was still more significant. Of the German productions only one proved to be a big hit, "Mazurka," from Willi Forst's direction, starring Pola Negri.

Holland is a country with about 7,500,000 inhabitants. It has four important towns: Amsterdam, with 800,000 inhabitants; Rotterdam, with about 600,000; the Hague, with 480,000, and Utrecht, with 161,000 inhabitants. The foundation of concerns and trusts marked its influence on the Dutch motion picture trade. Holland counts about 325 cinemas. Nearly all theatres are sound-theatres, giving one performance in the afternoon and two in the evening in the most important towns.

Domestic Industry Founded

The progress of American pictures seemed to decline two years ago by the fact that domestic production began to develop. Following the example of other countries, in Holland, too, a motion picture industry was founded, and the country now has two studios, one at "Filmstad," Wassenaar (near the Hague), and another at Duivendrecht, suburb of Amsterdam, named "Cinetone."

Hereunder follows a review of the number of features and shorts released in Holland by foreign countries in 1935, with comparative information during 1934, the 1934 total being the second given for each country in each case:

Censorship in Holland depends upon the government. In 1935, 16 features and 10 shorts have been disapproved, the same numbers as in 1934. Among the 16 features 10 were American, 4 French, 1 English and 1 Tsjecho-Slowakian productions.

Taxes are raised on the entrance fees of the cinemas, in each municipality. These taxes are very high; at Amsterdam, for instance, 20 per cent is due. The Dutch Motion Picture Federation often tried to diminish this high percentage, but until now in vain. This federation has much power in Holland, and is a combination of Dutch cinema owners and the booking offices. All internal differences between its members are solved by it, and problems of general kind are studied by the federation.

Next to the board of theatre owners a department exists taking to heart the interests of the booking offices. During the last years the Dutch theatre owners have been inclined to "close" the Dutch trade, viz., to prevent foundation of other cinemas that would enlarge the competition. The Dutch Federation therefore passed a measure resulting in a ruling that no new cinemas may be founded without special permission of the federation. Out of this point of view the Dutch motion picture trade established a condition in which free competition is impossible. Some American companies have made objections against said disposition.

In spite of the fact that the best pictures from foreign industries are released on the Dutch market, the general situation in Holland steadily becomes less favorable. Purchasing power of the Dutch public decreased considerably and the economical crisis heavily marked its influence. Entrance fees of the cinemas went down in the big towns as well as in the country, and the future has a somber aspect.

400 Expected at Southeast Session

An attendance of 400 exhibitors is expected at the annual convention and frolic of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association to be held August 2nd, 3rd and 4th at Jacksonville, Fla. Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Edward Levy, national legal counsel, and O. C. Lem, southern director of the M.P.T.O.A., have been invited to attend. Exchange officers, salesmen and supply dealers also are expected

The tentative program includes only one business session, to be held on the opening night, followed by a buffet supper at the Hotel Mayflower. Golf, a beach party, a shore dinner at Jacksonville Beach, a dance and a banquet are scheduled for the succeeding days.

Milton C. Moore, of the Riverside Theatre, Jacksonville, is general chairman.

Youthful Players Receive First Roles

Judy Garland and Edna May Durbin, 13-year-old Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer players who have been attending training sessions for the past year under Dave Gould, dance director, and Oliver Hinsdell, dramatic coach, this week received their first film assignments with parts in "Every Sunday," short feature which Felix Feist, Jr., is directing.

Hamlin Improves

Tom Hamlin, editor and publisher of Film Curb, who is seriously ill at the Post Graduate Hospital, in New York, was reported Tuesday as "very slightly improved."

MARY: "You forget I'm your queen!"
. . . BOTHWELL: "I remember you're a woman, and I love you!"

"Sign it!" they thundered . . . Written in the blood of a friend and the tears of a queen . . . the confession of a woman who loved more deeply than she feared.

Auditorium Rebellion

Exactly who runs the show—audience, house manager or preview producer—was decided emphatically at a suburban Los Angeles theatre one night recently. Advertising an MGM preview, the manager of the Alexander theatre, Glensdale, announced that "The Princess Comes Across" would also be shown and its companion piece on the double bill eliminated.

When studio officials arrived on the scene, bringing "Suzy" with them, they demanded that "The Princess" not be shown and that the second feature be substituted.

The reason for this was and is that preview producers are adverse to showing a picture which, in type of personalities, character of story or production detail, is in any way similar to the regular attraction.

When the house, packed with people lured by the appeal of "The Princess" and an MGM preview, went dark, the secondary feature went on the screen. Immediately the house echoed to a turbulent storm of hissing, booing, foot stamping and catcalls, mingled with the demand that "The Princess," which was advertised, be shown. A reel or so was run off to the tune of wild excitement and, realizing that the situation was becoming menacing, the house manager took the stage and tried to explain to the audience why the announced attraction was not being run.

Despite his earnest pleas, the man was howled down and, as he sought the sanctuary of the wings, the secondary feature continued from the point where it had been interrupted. More hectic excitement, threatening the necessity of putting in a riot call, ensued. Eventually the will of the people prevailed. Projectors were threaded with "The Princess" and, right in the middle of one of the most interesting sequences in the secondary picture, the Carol Lombard-Fred MacMurray film hit the screen to be clamorously welcomed by a triumphant audience.

Annual Headache

Once more the problem of what to do about visitors is bringing that wild look into producers' eyes. Frantic production heads are muttering, "Whither are we drifting?" as daily new legions are added to the invading legions.

Most studios start the season resolutely enough. Out goes a ukase that only those having legitimate business on the sets will be admitted. But along about the middle of June something happens to the brave intentions. Smiles, once happy and enthusiastic, become pained and stretched. Directors stamp angrily into front offices and demand closed sets. Stars begin to talk menacingly of nervous breakdowns. Production managers bend alarmed glances upon soaring production cost sheets. One studio estimates that the visit to the lot by delegates to a recent fraternal convention cost $10,000 in cold cash. Ten thousand dollars spent in the pursuit of good will is a lot of money, opine the auditors, when reports of the day's disrupted work begin to roll in.

Average visitors have little idea of what a trip to the studio costs. In the first place, a rather well paid man from the publicity department must drop his routine tasks and devote himself to a sightseeing routine.

The visitors depart happily. They've been thrilled beyond measure. They're so profuse in their thanks that it's embarrassing. They've been as quiet as mice, except for the time poor Uncle Milt tripped over a cable, and little Stanley demanded a nickel in the midst of a tense sequence, and they haven't made a sound except for the time Aunt Lulu sneezed. They leave thinking Hollywood is a grand place and all the studios are "so cordial." Studio officials extend one final strained grin and write off another $500 or more of loss in time alone, with no estimate of the cost of frazzled nerves.

No other business in the world places itself so much at the mercy of the ultimate consumer.

Production

Nine pictures were placed before the cameras during the week ending July 17th and seven others were completed, leaving a net 50 features in work. Several of the new films and at least one of those completed are of the kind called, for want of a more definite term, important.

Two pictures were started at the Warner studio. Of particular interest is "Golddiggers of 1937," Dick Powell and Joan Blondell are the leading players. The supporting cast includes Victor Moore, Glenda Farrell, Spring Byington, Rosaline Marquis, Irene Ware, William B. Davidson, Lee Dixon, Osgood Perkins, Ann Sheridan and Hobart Cavanaugh, with many more to be added. Lloyd Bacon is directing. In the second feature, "Green Light," Errol Flynn, Anita Louise and Cedric Hardwicke are the principals. Frank Borzage is the director.

Columbia also started two productions, "Pennies From Heaven," being produced by Emmanuel Cohen with Norman McLeod directing, stars Bing Crosby with Madge Evans, Edith Fellows, Donald Meek, John Gallaudet, Charles Wilson, Howard Hickman, Tom Dugan and Harry Tyler. In "The Man Who Lived Twice," Ralph Bellamy, Marian Marsh, Isabel Jewell, Ward Bond and Willard Robertson will be seen. Harry Lachman directs.

The third studio to be credited with two pictures started during the week is Twentieth Century-Fox. Directly under its own auspices, "Ladies in Love" went on the stages. Four feminine players, Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett, Loretta Young and Simone Simon are featured, supported by Don Ameche, Brian Donlevy, Tyrone Power, Jr., and Virginia Field. E. H. Griffith is directing. "King of the Royal Mounted," a Principal production which Twentieth Century-Fox will release, will present Robert Kent, Rosalind Keith, Alan Dinehart.

Under Edward Sutherland's direction, Paramount started "Champagne Waltz." The cast includes Gladys Swarthout, Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Beloz and Yolanda, Fritz Leiber.

Universal started "Casey of the Coast Guard," being produced by Trem Carr. John Wayne and Nan Grey are teamed in the leads with Fuzzy Knight, William Bakewell, Russell Hicks, Harry Worth, Lotis Long, George Irving and Ethan Laidlaw listed in the cast. Frank Strayer is directing.

Continuing its regular weekly schedule, Republic started "Oh, Susannah." It will present Gene Autry, Kay Hughes, Smiley Burnette, Clara Kimball Young, Earle Hodgins, Boothe Howard, Donald Kibbee and Snowflack. Joseph Kane is directing.

Outstanding among the completed pictures is Paramount's "The General Died at Dawn." A dramatic romance told against the background of revolutionary China, it stars Gary Cooper with Madeline Carroll. Other players are William Frawley, Dudley Digges, Akim Tamiroff, Porter Hall, J. M. Kerigan, Philip Ahn, Lee Tung Foo, Willie Fung, Leonid Kinskey, Val Duran, Irene Bennet, John O'Hara, Del Henderson and Spencer Charters. Lewis Milestone directed.

Republic checked in with an important film as "Follow Your Heart" finished. Marion Talley and Michael Bartlett are featured, supported by Nigel Bruce, Luis Alberni, Henrietta Crossman, Vivienne Osborne, Walter Catlett, Eunice Healy, Ben Blue, Mickey Rentschler, John Eldredge, Margaret Irving, Si Jenks, Josephine Whittell and Clarance Muse. The Hall Johnson Choir also will be heard in the picture. Aubrey Scotto directed.

Two pictures were finished at Twentieth Century-Fox. In "Sing, Baby, Sing," which Sidney Lanfield directed, Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou, Ted Healy, Gregory Ratoff, the Ritz Brothers, Michael Whelan, Dixie Dunbar, Tony Martin, Paul Stanton and Douglas Fowley will be seen. The second completed picture, "39 Hours to Kill," will present Brian Donlevy, Gloria Stuart, Douglas Fowley, Isabel Jewell, Julius Tannen, Warren Hymer, Stepin Fetchit, Romaine Callender, James Burke and Jonathan Hale. Eugene Forde directed.

Radio finished "Grand Jury." Fred Stone, Louise Latimer, Owen Davis, Jr., Frank M. Thomas, Harry Jans, Russell Hicks, Guinn Williams, Charles Wilson, Billy Gilbert, Harry Beresford, William Davidson and Margarett Armstrong are in the cast. Al Rogell directed.

Universal finished "Yellowstone." It will present Henry Hunter, Judith Barrett, Ralph Morgan, Alan Hale, Andy Devine, Monroe Owsley, Paul Fix, Rollo Lloyd, Paul Harvey, Raymond Hatton and Russell Wade. Arthur Lubin directed.

Last of the finished pictures," Pony Express," produced by Walter Futter, features Hoot Gibson, Marian Shilling, Rex Lease and Nina Gilbert. Harry Frazer directed.

Will Day, British Screen Historian, Dies in London

Will Day, managing director of Will Day, Ltd., an accessory company, and known for years as the unofficial historian of the motion picture industry in England, died at his home in London late last week. He was taken ill suddenly at his office last Monday. He was 63 years old.

Mr. Day was born in 1873, and was taught the use of the magic lantern at the age of nine. He later became a showman and first presented animated pictures in 1898. He founded various accessory companies, forming Will Day, Ltd., in 1913. He was a Fellow of the Royal Photographic Society and the Royal Society of Arts. He was president of the Kinema Veterans in 1929-30, and a vice-president of the Magicians' Club. He was the first patentee, with J. C. Baird, of television. Mr. Day owner a notable collection of historical film apparatus, which is housed in the London Science Museum.

Exploitation Unit Formed

In line with the special handling being given Warner Brothers' "The Green Pastures," in key city spots, Clarence Jacobsen and William Schneider, formerly of the publicity staff of the stage play, and Ned Holmes, are working on the exploitation campaign for the film in Buffalo, Indianapolis and Boston.

"Lonesome Pine" in Contest

Walter Wanger's all-color production, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," has been selected by Paramount as its entry in the International Motion Picture Exhibition to be held in Venice, Italy, next month.

Three in Eden

(Warner)

Dramatic Romance

This production is adapted from a novel by Somerset Maugham. The screen play is by Robert Andrews and William Jacobs. Frank McDonald is directing. The cast features Margaret Lindsay, Humphrey Bogart, Donald Woods, Paul Graetz and E. E. Clive.

The locale is a South Sea island, hideaway for fugitives from justice and the site of a small pearl fishing industry. Miss Lindsay and Bogard, both of whom are on the island for reasons best known to themselves and which they keep secret, are no sooner married than the story turns strictly dramatic. Two men, Donald Woods and Paul Graetz, are rescued from a sinking yacht. Clive, an alcoholic-conscious doctor, immediately becomes suspicious that both rescued men, particularly Woods, are agents of the law. Convinced that Wood's purpose is to arrest Miss Lindsay and take her away, Clive, after packing sailor Graetz away on another island, plans to get rid of Woods by taking him to still another isle where striking pearl divers are causing trouble. The dramatic highlight of the following episodes involves Bogart's rescue from the clutches of an octopus by Woods, the outcome being Wood's decision to report to his office that he could not find Miss Lindsay and had killed Bogart.

Though many additional persons appear in the story in character and atmospheric roles, the only other players of any familiarity are Tetsu Komai, Miki Morita, George Regas and Gordon Hart.

While the prestige of the principal players has undoubted box office value, it seems that the fact that the story is by Maugham, remembered for his screen contributions which include "Of Human Bondage," "The Right to Live" and "Painted Veil," is an asset of considerable exploitation value.

The General Died at Dawn

(Paramount)

Drama

This is undoubtedly the most important production Paramount has undertaken in months. Certainly it is one of the biggest and one upon which large sums of money and great effort in preparation and production have been spent. Not in a long time has the studio called upon so many resources to make a picture.

The story is thrill action dramatic romance. It spins to the tune of wild adventure, seething turmoil, desperate conspiracy, appealing love interest and whimsical humor. A headline hunting War Lord dreams of conquoring all China. He needs arms and ammunition for his rebel army. Powerful forces upholding law and order, realizing the menace of the War Lord's depredations, raise a vast sum to purchase arms with which to combat him. They hire a sentimental American adventurer to buy them. The War Lord learns of the plan. He sets out to frustrate it, to get the money and equipment for himself. Into the turmoil of this situation, a torrent of action, intrigue and deviltry, is hurled the American who is to be the instrument to end a reign of terror. A girl whom he loves is forced to ally herself with his enemies, to lead him into danger, to menace his life, though she herself would die for him and his ideal. A colorful vivid story, it seems to be of the same dramatic, romantic and eruptive quality as China itself is today.

The production is based on a story by Charles Booth which has attained considerable popular circulation. The screen play is by Clifford Odets, a newer playwright who has zoomed to high popularity. His plays "Waiting for Lefty" and "Till the Day I Die" are well-known. His more recent efforts are "Awake And Sing" and "Paradise Lost." The musical score accompanying the theme was prepared by Boris Morros. Adaptability of the director chosen to handle this type of screen material, Lewis Milestone, is demonstrated by the skill with which he made "All Quiet on the Western Front."

While the story promises to be entertainment of a different and unusual character and considerable showmanship exploitation significance is attached thereto, probably one of its most important commercial qualities is the selection of the leading player. That will present Gary Cooper, and it is interesting in this connection to note that practically all Cooper's pictures of the past several years have been Box Office Champions. With him, participating in all the romantic love interest and a key figure in most of the drama, is Madeleine Carroll, British actress seen in "39 Steps" and in "The Case Against Mrs. Ames." Principal supporting charactors are Akim Tamiroff as the war lord; Dudley Digges, a friend of the patriots seeking to defeat Tamiroff; William Frawley, an unscrupulous gun runner; Porter Hall, Miss Carroll's father but a renegade and principal menace in the story, and J. M. Kerrigan, a sinister character, nobody's friend and everybody's enemy. Few of the incidental character and atmospheric players, including Orientals, have any marquee prestige, yet they are necessary adjuncts to various phases of the drama, romance and action.

36 Hours to Kill

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Drama

In relation to the story told, the title of this production is far from explanatory. America's foremost public enemy is enjoying the safety of an idyllic hideout in suburban Los Angeles. With a couple of his pals he learns from newspaper reports that a lottery ticket he holds is the winner of a $150,000 prize. Unaware of it, he is surrounded by G-men awaiting opportunity to grab him. With his minions he sets out for Kansas City to claim his winnings. Thereupon the production settles down to a gangster-G-man picture, alive with thrill action, contrasted by intriguing romance involving a government operator and a feminine newspaper reporter and comedy that features two of the screen's funniest characters.

The production, at first titled "Across the Aisle," is based upon W. R. Burnett's gangster-government published story. The virile character of Burnett's writings is attested by such screen attractions as "Little Caesar," one of the first gangsters, "Scarface," "Dark Hazard" and "Dr. Socrates." The screen play is by Lou Breslow and John Patrick. The director, Eugene Forde, numbers among his dramatic action pictures "Mystery Woman," "Charlie Chan in London" and more recently "The Great Hotel Murder."

The cast undoubtedly was selected with a particular view to having the featured players appear in typical roles. The gangster is Douglas Fowley, who in several recent pictures has demonstrated his ability as a menace. His confreres are Isabel Jewell and Warren Hymer. Brian Donlevy, usually a heavy, is the G-man, and the girl with whom he shares the story's romantic contrast is Gloria Stuart. The next most important principal is Julius Tannen and in support the picture presents Stepin Fetchit in a characteristic dumb comedy role as a Pullman porter, Romaine Callender, James Burke and Jonathan Hale.

Action in the picture takes place in Los Angeles, the Kansas City railroad station and in a Midwest gangster hideout.

Follow Your Heart

(Republic)

Musical Romance

More than ordinary importance attaches to this production. Not only is it one of the most costly features undertaken by this company, but it also marks the screen debut of Marion Talley, opera singer. The character of the story is quite topical to the player's personal career. It deals with a talented singer who refuses to consider a stage career as she is content to play marriage with a home town business man. But a stranded operatic company arrives. Included in it are the girl's aunt and uncle, both of whom endeavor to pursuade the songstress to join the troupe. She is adamant in her decision until the company's star-director sets her heart aflutter and when he stages a performance on the lawn of her home, she is tricked into assuming the prima donna role. A hit, she forgets her old dislike for the stage and signs a contract to star for the company and another one that leads to marriage to its director.

The feature is being given elaborate production. Though there are several operatic numbers, topical songs which will be featured were written by Victor Schertzinger and musical settings were arranged by Hugo Riesenfeld. Atmospheric choral dances were devised by Larry Ceballos. The story is based on an idea supplied by Dana Burnett from which the screen play was evolved by Lester Cole, Nathaniel West and Samuel Ornitz. Aubrey Scotto is the director.

As Miss Talley is starred, Michael Barrett, remembered for his appearance with Grace Moore, is the singing director. Nigel Bruce is Miss Talley's father and Luis Alberni and Margaret Irving are the girl's aunt and uncle. John Eldredge is the first love. Others composing the exceptional cast are Henrietta Crosman, Vivienne Osborne, Walter Catlett, Eunice Healy, Ben Blue, Si Jenks, Josephine Whittell and Clarence Muse. Featured in the musical content of the story is the Hall Johnson Choir, heard in "The Green Pastures."

WALL STREET GETS FIRST VIEW OF KENNEDY REPORT

Text Denied Stockholders Is Made Public; Substantiates Forecasts; Advises Company to Concentrate on Product

The bitter, stubbornly contested battle of Wall Street long waged in the background of the Paramount situation resulted last weekend in publication by the Wall Street Journal of the preliminary and final reports on the condition of the company made to the board of directors by Joseph P. Kennedy on June 12th.

Coinciding substantially with forecasts of their contents which had gained currency in informed quarters, the Kennedy reports recommend concentration of company control in the hands of experienced motion picture showmen and set forth the opinion that ultimate restoration of the corporation to a profitable operating status comparable to its own condition in past years and that of certain competitors today must depend on the production and distribution of good motion pictures.

Release of the text of the report, minus certain portions withheld from press and stockholders alike as relevant to operating details of a competitive nature, followed repeated refusals on the part of Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, to make the document available. Stockholders attending the annual meeting on June 16th were told, after repeated demands for information regarding its contents, that a summary of its recommendations would be made available to individual stockholders on application. Various individuals subsequently making such application were unsuccessful in their quests.

Suggestions Acted Upon

Meanwhile certain suggestions contained in Mr. Kennedy's report were being acted upon. Barney Balaban was elected to the presidency of the company succeeding John E. Otterson. Floyd B. Odlum of Atlas corporation resigned from the board of directors. Adolph Zukor established permanent residence in Hollywood in order to devote his whole time to production, singled out by Mr. Kennedy as the department most acutely in need of experienced management. E. V. Richards, veteran exhibitor and head of Saenger Amusement company, Paramount affiliate in New Orleans, was added to the board of directors.

Although not specifically called for in the Kennedy recommendations, each of these steps was in direct alignment with suggestions offered in the report for which Paramount paid a total of $80,000 to Mr. Kennedy and the men who assisted him in his investigation. They are Arthur B. Poole, former treasurer of Pathe, Clinton J. Scollard, former Pathe executive vice-president, John J. Ford, general manager of the Maine and New Hampshire circuit, James A. Fayne and Joseph R. Sheehan, associated with Mr. Kennedy in his chairmanship of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Lucius P. Ordway, investment banker, and Isidore J. Kresel, financial attorney.

"Drastic and courageous revision of management is called for," says Mr. Kennedy in his report, which declares that "with quality business men at the helm and on the directorate for a year, starting with $20,000,000 cash and no current obligations pressing, the company is at a crisis." He adds the conclusion, "It would seem that Paramount's present problems cannot be solved by merely condemning the practices of the picture industry and calling in big names."

Solution In Hollywood

Bearing on the relative importance of home office and studio activity, the report reads, "The fact is that Paramount's problem must be solved outside of New York. That is where the overcosts arise—that is whence big money pictures must come. Other companies derive profits consistently from production and therefore the task is not insuperable, even if the trick is not easy.

"Thalbergs and Zanucks cannot be bought or manufactured. Such artists are born few and far between. If lucky, Paramount may discover a sure fire money making producer, but while waiting for such a miracle, some ordinary methods of improving conditions may be profitably considered."

Summary of Report

The Kennedy report is summarized as follows:

(a) Major failures in recent studio operations are: (1) Loss on 1935-36 feature pictures; (2) Lack of progress on the 1936-37 feature pictures program.

(b) Causes of these failures are: (1) Adding to the original 1935-36 studio production program without due consideration of the result. (2) Large expenditures on stories, scenarios and artists' salaries subsequently written off. (3) Extravagance in completing acceptable scenarios. (4) Failure to prepare scripts, final cost estimates and shooting schedules on time. (5) Failure to keep shooting schedules; extravagance in "takes." (6) Excessive charge for combined New York production department and New York administrative expense. (7) Excessive total studio overhead expense. (8) Unfortunate experiences with producers and directors. (9) Ineptitude in dealing with stars and production problems. (10) Defects in organization. (11) Influence of board of directors on studio operation.

(c) Other studio items calling for comment: (1) "Back Lot" and accounting departments are functioning well. (2) General studio reputation and artists' contract list have strength. (3) There is no trend toward improvement of the conditions noted under "B" above. (4) Forward commitments on personnel.

(d) Conclusion: Drastic and courageous revision of management is called for.

PAY CUT TALK "PIOUS GESTURE": KENNEDY

Competition among producers for the services of stellar players is called uncontrollable by Joseph P. Kennedy in his Paramount report. He says:

"It is unfortunate that the 'talent' of the industry is organized and in consequence the actors and producers, writers, et al, are strengthened in their salary grabbing methods. Meanwhile, disunion, distrust and competition pervades management. As long as there is intense and uncontrollable competition among the executives of various companies for the services of the 'artists' of the industry, so long will all talk of lower salary scales remain mere pious gestures."

Excessive Executive Expense Scored; Theatre Branch Is Declared Sound; Comparison With Other Companies Drawn

Cites Earnings

The report is quoted:

"The Paramount's earnings statement for the first quarter of 1936 furnishes a convenient starting point of discussions since it is comparable with the statements of the other major units.

"It shows a nominal 'bookkeeping' profit figure. Earnings of approximately $781,000 are shown before interest and administrative charges, plus a small contingency reserve. After such charges, which are necessary charges against income, a deficit of $81,078 results, which deficit is avoided in the final showing by transferring to profit and loss surplus account $800,000 out of a special inventory reserve of $2,500,000 appropriated by the directors as of December 28, 1935. This transfer, minus the $81,000 deficit above referred to, makes possible the addition to profit and loss of $718,000, the amount actually reported as net income.

"Incidentally, it is interesting to note that this operating deficit resulted in spite of the fact that the theatres division earned, after interest, taxes, depreciation and subsidiary dividend charges, a net profit of $1,073,000.

"Charges Eat Into Capital"

"The showing makes inevitable the conclusion that Paramount's management which took over the affairs of the reorganized company less than a year ago has never succeeded in getting started during a period when other companies have made ample profits. In consequence, the rigid charges incident to a large scale business operation, threaten to eat into Paramount's capital before earning power can be re-established.

"Fortunately the record shows that we can count upon prosperity in our industry whenever there is prosperity in general business. The fortunes of the film business have varied in the same degree and direction as the fortunes of general business.

"The highest average weekly attendance in the moving picture theatres of the country was 110,000,000 reached during the fourth quarter of 1929, with receipts estimated at about $21,000,000.

"Motion picture attendance fell off steadily

POINTS WAY TO SAVINGS AT STUDIOS

from late 1929 until the fourth quarter of 1933 from 110,000,000 weekly average to 60,000,000, with receipts declining from approximately $21,000,000 to $11,000,000.

"Thus, while general business was declining 44% during the depression, gross business of the moving picture industry, as measured by attendance at theatres, declined 45%, and receipts fell off 47½%. Similarly, as to recovery; general business is up 58% from the low, and movie attendance is up over 51%, although receipts, due to lower admission prices, have been limited in recovery to 40%.

"Altering operating conditions is suggested with a view to bettering the ratio of operating expenses to gross receipts as a necessary precedent to increased future profits. Certainly there is ample room for improvement because results could hardly be worse, and experimenting cannot do much harm. Meanwhile, the fact that less than half the expenses of the Picture Industry is represented by 'fixed' items, leaves a long list of items in which some real reductions seem possible.

Company Dollar Analyzed

"It is estimated that 18¾ cents of every dollar spent is for rent and like charges; another 28 cents for repairs, lighting maintenance, etc. The remaining 63 cents is used in actual cost of film production and distribution. Salaries of actors, directors and cameramen constitute 40% of production cost. Studio overhead is the next largest item, averaging 20% to 35% of production expense. Cost of distribution is relatively small and offers little chance of savings.

"Salaries and studio overhead, then, offer the only real hope of savings on picture costs and while everyone begins by saying these cannot be cut, the chief reason usually given is that actors will not stand for cuts and that the industry is being strangled by the death hand clutch which the actors' agents have upon the producer. This matter, however, is also one affecting every unit alike and is not the particular problem of any one unit. But when every allowance for agents is made, it still remains true that 19 cents out of every dollar of expense now goes to executives for salaries—to people not directly engaged in the actual work of production and distribution, a factor which brings studio overhead to an actual 35%-45% instead of the theoretical 35% claimed.

"It is doubtful if executives can justify their salaries but it is certain that the salaries paid to actors are paid to compensate for peculiar talents which cannot be recruited at will or pleasure. Furthermore such salaries are not 'permanent' as the indirect labor costs of executives are, and they bear at least some relation to box-office receipts. The value of executive efforts cannot be easily appraised. Therefore, the suggestion is here made that Paramount give some thought to adopting the salary-bonus basis of compensation so happily employed in the motor industry; nominal fixed salaries to executives plus bonus payments when and if net earnings exceed certain agreed upon totals.

"Distrust Pervades Managements"

"It is unfortunate that the 'talent' of the industry is organized and in consequence the actors and producers, writers, et al., are strengthened in their salary grabbing methods. Meanwhile, disunion, distrust and competition pervades managements. As long as there is intense and uncontrollable competition among the executives of various companies for the services of the 'artists' of the industry, so long will all talk of lower salary scales remain mere pious gestures.

"There is no settled, dependable practice concerning film production costs and budgetary intentions to the contrary, probably never can be. Ever since the picture, 'Four Horsemen,' booked over $4,000,000, producers have justified growing costs of making pictures by trying for another 'Horsemen.' Usually, and almost inevitably, they are doomed to failure, but every once in a while a company picture 'rings the bell' with a 'House of Rothschild' or 'The Great Ziegfeld,' the pace of spending becomes furious and all budgets are disregarded. Recently Paramount's president returned from Hollywood with the announcement that thereafter all productions would have to be confined to budgetary estimates of around $500,000, and immediately impartial critics of the industry say maybe that is why the 'Ziegfeld' film which cost MGM $1,800,000, is packing houses at top prices while Paramount cannot earn its expenses. And MGM indicates $2,100,000 for 'Romeo,' and $3,000,000 for 'Good Earth'!

"Big Job Is Yardstick"

"No matter that 95% of all pictures will fall far short of the total predicted by the ruthless spending producer, the fact that the ace producers of the industry spend from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 on a big job is the yardstick for every small producer in the industry, most of whom never have, and probably never can produce a box office hit, regardless of expenditures. It is of no avail as argument that you can count upon the fingers the pictures costing over $1,250,000 that have made big money. Deferred hope makes the unsuccessful producer persist in his efforts for 'just one big hit,' but it makes the expense account look sick.

"This is the real danger to the industry.

"You are reminded by defenders of extravagance that Columbia Pictures Corp. was 'made' for all time through the good fortune of one picture 'It Happened One Night.' The fact that the very next year the same company repeated with another prize picture, 'One Night of Love,' suggests that its success was not just due to luck and a big expense. Twentieth Century Films owes its good start to Zanuck's luck with 'Rothschild,' and Warner Bros. were helped greatly by the lucky break of '42nd Street' making $1,500,000 for them just at the right moment.

"And the fact that any company at any time is apt to 'strike gold' in a picture lends some support to this argument.

"Indeed, where business methods have been most rigorously adopted the best results have not necessarily followed. Take, for instance, the policy of amortization. For years auditors and accountants imbued with instructions from business men and bankers upon the directorates of picture companies have struggled with the problem of standardized and business-like write-off policies and a settled practice has been evolved.

"Charge-Off Policy Conservative"

"Paramount's practice for instance in charging off picture costs—amortizing 82% in 20 weeks — has been commendably conservative, but it has not created profits. Thus far at least, settled amortization practices have resulted in little else than equitable distribution of costs over a period of time. Frankly, something more than business-like bookkeeping methods is needed to create profits and that 'something' is positively and definitely good pictures.

"Another serious threat to the industry should be pointed out before considering Paramount's particular problem—foreign quotas. Estimates of receipts from exhibitions abroad run as high as 30% of all film rentals. If the current move to limit exhibition of films in England, largely to English made films is carried out, not only will be imitated in other countries, but in some instances, it might make all the difference between profitable and unprofitable operations for American units.

"Some American companies, notably 20th Century-Fox, have been keenly aware of the danger and have made recent affiliations abroad to offset the consequences of an embargo. Paramount is thus faced with the necessity of further investment abroad as an additional operating expense, and a further threat to income.

"We think the danger is real. There is good opinion in London that the quota figure may be set as high as 35%. Recent events seem to foreshadow a determination on the part of British authorities to take important action.

"British Planning Regulation"

"Obviously the British Government is planning real regulation of the industry, but the thought is also suggested that this information may be sought as a basis for decision as to the measure of aid the government may give the British film producers. English insurance companies, banks and investment trusts are now large holders of securities in British film concerns and the known tendency of Great Britain to subsidize its industries gives color to the fear that when the new quota is announced, it will reveal further difficulties for American made films."

Mr. Kennedy also points out that of the total overhead expense at the studio last year about 40% represented provision for losses in respect of stories purchased and scenarios written and later abandoned, and in respect of artists' salaries for idle time and excessive time spent on pictures.

It is not easy to appraise the 1936 situation as to these reserves, partly because the auditors have not finished examining the first quarter's provision for losses and partly because the amounts reserved cannot directly be matched against write-offs for a short period. However, up to the present time it does not appear likely that the write-offs for the full year 1936 can be kept within the total charged to the operations for such losses in 1935.

Discussing sound equipment contracts, the report says:

"Paramount has a contract with Electrical Research Products whereby Paramount is licensed to record sound pictures under patents owned by Electrical Research Products, for a period ending December 31, 1944, in return for which Paramount pays specified fees. Paramount guarantees that the fees so paid will

REPORT BREAKS DOWN THE FILM DOLLAR

The Joseph P. Kennedy report on the condition of Paramount Pictures corporation breaks down the motion picture dollar in the following language:

"It is estimated that 18¾ cents of every dollar spent is for rent and like charges; another 28 cents for repairs, lighting, maintenance, etc. The remaining 63 cents is used in actual cost of film production and distribution. Salaries of actors, directors and cameramen constitute 40 per cent of production cost. Studio overhead is the next largest item, averaging 20 per cent to 35 per cent of production expense. Cost of distribution is relatively small and offers little chance of savings."

ASKS STUDY OF BOOKING

amount to a minimum of $100,000 per year. It is estimated that for the 1936-37 program of pictures, Paramount will pay license fees aggregating $730,453.

Suggests Rate Reduction

"RCA Photophone on February 15, 1936, announced revised rates which are much lower than the rates Paramount is now paying Electrical Research Products. Applying the revised RCA rates to Paramount's 1936-37 program, the total license fees would amount to $366,862, or a saving of $363,591. We suggest that a vigorous effort be made to get Electrical Research Products to reduce their rates to conform with the reduced rates published by RCA.

"So far this year the theatres as a whole are showing a very healthy improvement, although the foreign theatres are showing a loss, which loss although not directly a part of the Theatre Department, is being directly charged against their operations.

"With a good improvement at the studio, insofar as pictures are concerned (box office values) and a reduction of management expenses, the theatres should show a net profit of between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 annually."

Recommends Industry Man

In closing, the report says:

"Because there appears to be an irreconcilable conflict between certain of your directors which has resulted disastrously to the morale and efficiency of the entire organization, I recommend that steps be taken immediately to have those responsible for this irreconcilable conflict terminate their positions on the Board.

"I recommend that you elect for President, succeeding its present incumbent, a man of outstanding reputation from the industry, 'a picture man.' I recommend that you appoint a chief of production with headquarters on the West Coast and that you permit him to run production without interference from the New York office, except the natural supervision of the president with whom he should be in sympathy."

Additional Disclosures

Early this week additional disclosures of the report's contents brought out that Mr. Kennedy had expressed the opinion that "while the principle of decentralized theatre operation may be good and the results generally satisfactory, it is quite evident that there is a very weak link in the setup in so far as the buying and booking of pictures is concerned.

"The New York office has no control over the buying or booking of pictures wherever management contracts are concerned. We feel that the problem of strengthening this weak link could be met to some extent by appointing a committee to classify the company's theatres for buying and booking. However, because of the intricacies of local conditions involved we feel that nobody outside of the committee such as recommended can satisfactorily suggest working methods for it."

Nevertheless, the report recommends that "under no circumstances should any attempts be made at this time to change or modify the theatre management contracts in any way unless the request should originate with the manager," and the theatre report concludes with the observation that "with a good improvement at the studios in so far as pictures are concerned and a reduction of management expenses, the theatres should show a net profit of between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 annually."

"We are faced with the fact," Mr. Kennedy says in his report, "that the organization which you directors depend upon to make profits for your company is wholly without confidence in you. I have not succeeded in my attempt to find men of outstanding rank in the industry to recommend to you for executive positions with Paramount. Such men are urgently needed. Unfortunately, those whom I should recommend to you are not interested in considering positions with Paramount while directors believed throughout the industry and throughout your organization to be responsible for dissension and division in management policies continue as members of the board."

The report concludes:

"It may take a year or more to overcome existing difficulties, but I feel that there is enough prestige still clinging to the Paramount name to restore it to leadership in the industry. It would be little short of criminal if, on the threshold of a period of prosperity for the industry, this opportunity to eliminate waste and substitute profits were to be passed by without action. It might subsequently be difficult to explain such inaction to litigious stockholders or to inquiring Congressional committees."

Court Permits Use Of Ledger Page At Fox Trial

An entire page of an All-Continental Corporation ledger devoted to all accounts of Mrs. Belle Schwartz was admitted in evidence in Atlantic City last Thursday in the bankruptcy hearing of her father, William Fox. Creditors' attorneys considered this important in their task of tracing All-Continental transactions by extraction of scattered items.

Mrs. Fox and her two daughters for whom Mr. Fox created and financed the corporation six years ago as a trust, have refused to allow inspection of its books while creditors are fighting to establish the contention that All-Continental is not a separate organization, but really a disguised Fox asset.

Federal Referee Robert E. Steedle ruled that "if ever a page in a third party's books were admissible in evidence, this is. The first six items are cash that came out of the Fox safe deposit box. The first item is admittedly a payment on his obligation. The last six items admittedly now refer to a Fox transaction and admittedly the status of those items was changed after the filing in bankruptcy."

The last sentence referred to an admission by Herbert Leitsteen, Fox family bookkeeper, under questioning of David Katz of New York, that "at the time I had the wrong information. Now since June 29, 1936, I have the right information. This was in connection with numerous changes and later notations found in the books. Many pages were found Thursday on which the name "Belle" or the initial of "B. F." were written over an erasure. Mr. Katz tried in vain to make Mr. Leitsteen concede that the name originally erased after each of these items was "William Fox" or "W. F."

Increase of U. S. Short Product Seen in Hungary

by ENDRE HEVESI
in Budapest

The new season in Hungary is expected to be characterized by a considerable increase in the number of short subjects American distributors will send here. The increase is due to the recent edict of the Hungarian Government prohibiting the showing of two features on any one program.

Releasing plans of several of the major American companies for next season include the following totals: Paramount, 50 features and 40 shorts; M-G-M, 25 features; Warners, six features and 40 shorts; Twentieth Century-Fox, 24 features and 18 shorts; Universal, 10 features. During the past season Paramount released 20 features, while Warners released 10 last year. However, Warners short subject output last year totaled 25, compared with 40 planned next season.

The end of June virtually ends the film season in this city. Budapest represents the only screen public of any consequence in Hungary. During the warm summer months theatres make no attempt to show the better product, exhibiting only the weaker features.

Trends of Favor

Indicating to some extent the types of film, and those players preferred by the Hungarian public are the results of some of the leading American films during the past season at the box-office.

Among Paramount films, "Desire" and "The Last Outpost" were the most successful. "The Devil Is a Woman" started successfully but could not be properly exploited because of the intervention of the Spanish Government. "The Milky Way," Harold Lloyd comedy, was not received favorably here.

M-G-M's "Anna Karenina," "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Broadway Melody of 1936" met with pronounced favor, while "David Copperfield" and "Naughty Marietta" were received indifferently. Eleanor Powell sprang into immediate popularity. The lack of success of "David Copperfield" and of "Naughty Marietta" could not be attributed to the stars, since both Freddie Bartholomew and Jeanette MacDonald are very well liked by the Hungarian public.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Captain Blood" were the Warner films which ran high at the box-office, while "Gold Diggers of 1935" fell down.

Other Popular Films

Shirley Temple was the outstanding Twentieth Century-Fox favorite, her films, "Curly Top" and "Bright Eyes" being the two most successful films of the company.

The popularity of Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire, especially the latter, was demonstrated in the box office results achieved by "Gay Divorcee" and "Roberta." "Becky Sharp" and "Last Days of Pompeii" met with a reception indicating that costume pictures are not appreciated by the public here.

Columbia's "Love Me Forever" did well. Universal had success with "Magnificent Obsession" and "Storm Over the Andes," but the biographical films, "Diamond Jim" and "Sutter's Gold" were poorly received.

high entertainment standard as to be acceptable for exhibition in any commercial motion picture theatre within the United States.

2. Outline

TENTATIVE DRAFT OF WORKING SCRIPT FOR MOTION PICTURE RECORD

The purpose of each WPA Information Service Motion Picture Record is to present to the citizens of a particular State, or area, information about the operations of WPA in that state, or area.

Certain major activities must be included in each unit or reel. The specific examples of those activities will be selected in accordance with the best possibilities in each state.

The subjects that must be included are the following:

(a) Public health.
(b) Accomplishment.
(c) The emergency education program, particularly as it is reflected in improvement of educational possibilities and better health for children. In most cases this can best be worked out through nursery schools and visiting nurses.
(d) Public Safety.
(e) Farm-to-Market roads.

Not mandatory but still important projects to be treated are:

(a) Flood prevention.
(b) Public buildings.
(c) Parks and playgrounds.
(d) Airports and other transportation facilities.
(e) Sewing projects.
(f) Street and sidewalk improvement.
(g) Institutional improvement, such as: Hospitals, infirmaries, school buildings, colleges, libraries, auditoriums, community centers, corrective institutions, armories and arsenals.
(h) Soil erosion, land reclamation, and drainage.
(i) Game and fish conservation.
(j) Scientific activity (where it can be made dramatic).
(k) Improvement of historical buildings, shrines, and places.

TYPICAL SAMPLE
SUGGESTED OUTLINE FOR MICHIGAN

For a unit or reel 600 feet to 900 feet long, four to six major sequences, and from 15 to 25 single shots are required.

MAJOR SEQUENCES

(a) Forest Fires.—WPA workers cutting fire lanes in the vicinity of Clare and also cleaning brush from existing fire lanes. Take forest fire shots from film library to dramatize this sequence.

(b) Public Health.—Whooping cough immunitization project in Grand Rapids—"Trapping the Whooping Cough Germ."

(c) Unusual Women's Work Project.—Finnish Women in Keewenaw County—Show mother of four on dole, children hungry; she is assigned to a WPA job as a weaver, at a security wage, children happy; she resumed her craftsmanship, enabling her to sell the products of her loom and become self-supporting.

(d) Farm-to-Market Roads.—Use a farmer's truck loaded with perishables, such as strawberries, in the vicinity of Saginaw. Truck becomes stuck in the mud, his crop spoils. Then show an "after" picture of an improved road over which the truck runs to market, enabling the farmer to obtain the highest price for his produce. Also, show scenes of the infant oil industry around Clare. They should show an oil truck stuck in the mud and then the same truck on an improved road.

(e) Public Safety.—Twenty-four State police posts and two radio stations—at Paw Paw and Houghton, costing $500,000—are being built by the WPA. Suggested dramatization: Radio station broadcasts signals about gang of robbers to a police boat on the lake, to a police plane in the air, and to a police car on the road. The main chase to be in boats on the lake. Location to be decided.

(f) WPA nursery schools in rural districts. Location to be decided. School lunches, visiting nurses, and distribution of text books cleaned and rebound in WPA projects. Also, shots of gymnasium constructed by WPA workers.

(End of Sequences)

SINGLE SHOTS

(a) Iron Mountain Sewer Project:
(b) Lansing Biological Laboratory.—Under construction—scientific.
(c) Keewenaw County.—Brockway Mountain Drive and rustic gold clubhouse—scenic.
(d) Ottawa Indian Village at Manistee and NYA project for restoring old Ft. Holmes built by the British in 1812, on Mackinac Island—historical.
(e) Reducing traffic accidents:
1—$1,000,000 traffic survey of main highways by WPA—State Highway Department.
2—$300,000 rural traffic survey by WPA—State Police—NYA in towns under 18,000 population. This latter project also provides for the building up of a driver's record for each driver.
(f) Sewing Projects.—Flint or Grand Rapids.
(g) Sponsor Endorsements.—Idea to be worked out.
(h) Airports.—A map showing lighted and unlighted air fields available in 1932 in Michigan, following by another map showing air fields and landing fields available in July, 1936, as a result of work by the CWA, FERA and WPA. Also shots of Bishop Airport at Flint, built wholly by Work Program, and/or Kent County Airport at Grand Rapids, the Detroit Municipal Airport.
(i) Twenty-eight (28) Community Colleges; Rural Areas.—Education.
(j) City Hall at Albion—Built under the Works Program.
(k) WPA Symphony Orchestra—Open Air Concerts—Detroit or Grand Rapids.—A map or chart, or the announcer to say that free concerts were attended by 9,000 people in six cities during one week in March.
(l) Samuel Chaswan, nationally known sculptor, designing a life-size statue for the Institute or Art.
(m) Murals in Children's Library.—Highland Park or Dearborn.
(n) Braille Library.—Lansing.
(o) Oil aggregate Road Program in Jackson.—City Streets (example of $5,000,000 oil aggregate program being carried out in Michigan on Streets and Roads).
(p) Shoreline Highway near Alpena.—Blasting road out of cliff along shore of Lake Huron—scenic.
(q) New school building completed under FERA at Barridon at cost of $115,000.
(r) Recreation.—Grandnephew of Sitting Bull is Recreation Director in Barroga County—he has feathers, tomahawk, war paint and a horse.
(s) University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.—Therapeutic pool for infantile paralysis treatment completed under WPA.
(t) Detroit Zoo.—Improvements to animal cages and animal pictures.
(u) Wolf Lake Fish Hatchery near Kalamazoo.—The largest fish hatchery in the world.
(v) Infirmary at Stanwood.—$200,000 hospital built under CWA and FERA.
(w) Hamtramck High School Stadium—being built by WPA.

3. Technical Requirements.—This contractor shall supply record and information units or reels of professional quality, containing suitable introductory background, music, titles, fades, cuts, pans, art work and up to 200 feet of animation, maps or charts. (Bidders must furnish with their bids evidence of their ability to supply animation maps and charts, sound recording and other photographic or sound effects generally and normally a part of professional productions.)

4. The Contractor Shall Furnish a qualified script writer, film editor, camera crew, technicians, director, actors and actresses, the use of studios, lighting equipment, a competent production and idea man in Washington during the life of the contract, sound equipment in the field whenever necessary, and branch office facilities or contact points at convenient locations throughout the territory to be served for the adequate support and servicing of the units or reels in production, and in localities where the contractor has facilities for storage and inspection for film, he shall furnish such services without additional cost to the Works Progress Administration.

5. Transportation.—The Works Progress Administration will furnish automotive transportation during production of any record or information unit or reel at the call of the contractor for his employees within any state or area to be covered on any picture being made under this contract.

necessary arrangements regarding scenes to be recorded, approvals and other similar matters.

7. Bid Bonds.—The bidder shall submit, together with his bid, a bid bond or certified check made payable to the Treasurer of the United States, for 25% of the amount of the bid.

8. Distribution.—The contractor shall agree to cause to be released and/or distributed one newsreel story on the subject of WPA activities each month during the life of this contract through the medium of a nationally-distributed newsreel.

GENERAL CONDITIONS

1. Conditions of Contract.—This contractor shall hold and save the Government, its officers, agents, servants and employees, harmless from liability of any nature or kind, including cost and expenses, for or on account of any patented or unpatented invention, article, or appliance manufactured or used in the performance of this contract, including their use by the Government. (Note: The RCA has offered to waive all charge for royalty on Government films where no charge is to be made against the exhibitor for showing.)

This contractor shall submit to the Works Progress Administration within one week of the award of the contract, a sample scenario for approval. No production shall be started without formal approval of the working script or scenario by the Works Progress Administration.

After each information unit or reel is edited and before the sound is added, the contractor shall submit a positive print of edited film to the Works Progress Administration for approval. The right is reserved to reject any or all scenes which are imperfect, the decision in any case to rest with the Works Progress Administration. Sound is to be added only after formal approval in writing of the silent print. Before final acceptance of completed film, formal written approval shall be obtained of the sound tracks.

The selection of music to be used in each record and information reel shall be made by the contractor and approved by the Works Progress Administration.

All films, negative and positive, when accepted as completed and approved by the Works Progress Administration, shall become property of the United States Government.

The conditions contained in the U. S. Standard Form No. 33 together with other conditions set forth herein shall govern this contract. A performance bond or certified check in favor of the Treasurer of the United States in the amount of 25% of the contract will be required.

2. Competency of Contractor.—Attention of bidders is expressly called to the fact that proposals will be considered only from individuals, firms or corporations regularly engaged in the respective businesses covered by these specifications and possessed of satisfactory financial standing and with the equipment and organization sufficient to insure satisfactory execution and completion of the contract and who have established a satisfactory record for the past three years for completion of contracts of similar character and extent. It is further to be understood that any contractor whose product is included under a subcontract, shall meet all the foregoing and further shall have a plant properly equipped for the completion of the respective films included in the bid. Nothing in this Article, however, is to be construed as preventing a duly authorized dealer or agent of a properly qualified manufacturer or manufacturers from bidding on this contract.

The term "equipment and organization" as used above, shall be construed to mean a fully equipped and well established plant including first class facilities and personnel.

In addition, this contractor must supply evidence that he owns an adequate film library.

3. Method of Award.—The award of the contract or contracts will be made with consideration to the following:

The ability of the bidder to furnish films; the cost; and responsibility of bidders; all as may be determined by the contracting officer. It is the intention to make the award in such manner as to be in the best interest of the Government.

The Government reserves (a) the right to accept or reject any or all bids or any part or parts thereof and to award the contract or any parts thereof to other than the lowest bidder as the interest of the Government may require; (b) the right to judge as to the competency of bidders as defined above, and (c) all other rights ordinarily reserved by the Government. The fact that specifications have been furnished to attending bidders will not limit the Government's right to judge as to their competency after bids have been received.

All other factors being equal, the award will be made to the bidder who is better able to aid in distribution, both theatrical and non-theatrical. The decision of the contracting officer shall be final.

4. Delivery.—Delivery shall be F.O.B. contractor's laboratory, for shipment at the direction of the Works Progress Administration on Government Bill of Lading.

5. Specifications and Conditions.—The specifications, including the general conditions, will be made a part of the contract.

WPA SETS OBJECTIVE IN A WORKING SCRIPT exhibition in ture theater within the United States.

TENATIVE DRAFT
of
WORKING SCRIPT FOR MOTION PICTURE RECORD

The purpose of each WPA Information Service Motion Picture Record is to present to the citizens of a particular State, or area, information about the operations of WPA in that state, or area.

Certain major activities must be included in each unit or reel. The specific examples of those activities will be selected in accordance with the best possibilities in each state.

ubjects that must be included are

Reproduced from the contract offered to newsreels and others by the Works Progress Administration.

The general conditions and the specifications accompanying same are intended to provide for a finished piece of work.

This contractor shall furnish all things requisite and necessary for the proper and entire finishing of this work, notwithstanding each and every item necessary may not be particularly shown or described excepting as referred to in paragraph 5 concerning automotive transportation to be furnished by the Works Progress Administration and/or the Works Progress Administration liaison man as described in paragraph 6, that the films as a unit or reel may be delivered in a perfect and complete condition. Details shall take precedence over general specifications and conditions. Should any discrepancy or ambiguity be found in the specifications or conditions the same shall be reported to the Chief Clerk of the Works Progress Administration at once. No claim for work under this contract will be allowed unless the work in question has been ordered in writing on a Works Progress Administration purchase order signed by the Chief Clerk.

6. Definitions.—Throughout this document the following terms shall be construed as here defined.

The word "CHIEF CLERK" refers to the Chief Clerk of the Works Progress Administration, or in his absence to the duly authorized Acting Chief Clerk.

The words "THIS CONTRACTOR" refer to the individual, firm, or corporation contracting to do the work herein specified, or any portion thereof.

7. Alterations to Specifications or Conditions.—This Contractor shall make no alterations in the specifications or conditions. Should any error, inconsistency or omission occur in them he shall not take advantage thereof, but shall refer it to the Chief Clerk for correction.

8. Protection and Transportation.—All articles shall be properly wound on reels and packed in cans, and every precaution shall be taken to insure safe delivery. All state laws regarding the shipment of films shall be complied with in the packing. Anything found damaged from insufficient protection or otherwise shall be replaced or repaired at this Contractor's expense.

9. Labels.—Each can is to be properly marked to identify the reels or units contained therein.

10. Equivalents.—Whenever or wherever an article or any class or materials is specified by name of any particular patentee, manufacturer or dealer, it shall be taken as intending to mean and specify the articles or materials described or any other equal thereto in quality, finish and durability, and equally as serviceable for the purpose for which it is or they are intended, as may be judged and determined by the Works Progress Administration, which decision shall be final and binding on both parties to this contract. Wherever patented appliances or materials or their equals are specified, the particular make intended to be used in the performance of this contract must be specifically stated under the items affected.

11. Subcontractor.—No part of this work shall be sublet by the successful bidder to other parties, except on the written consent of the Works Progress Administration and when any such work is sublet, the Works Progress Administration shall receive notification of, and give approval of same in writing before such contract shall become binding.

12. General Guaranty.—Everything done in the fulfillment of this contract must be done without additional expense to the Government. The opinion of the Contracting Officer as to the liability of this Contractor under this contract or as the satisfactory fulfillment or compensation for the nonfulfillment thereof shall be final.

13. Labor Conditions.—This Contractor shall pay prevailing wages to employees used in the execution of this contract. This Contractor shall provide Workmen's Compensation to all employees in any production manufactured under this contract.

All conditions as outlined heretofore are to become part of this contract.

Art Development Of Pictures Urged

A plea for the encouragement of potentialities of the motion picture, "the newest, most fluid of all the arts," so that it may take its proper place with literature, music and the drama, was made by Alexander Markey, executive producer of the Motion Picture Foundation of America, in an address before the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

Mr. Markey reviewed the development of the motion picture from its inception "only yesterday" and pointed out some of the industry's short-comings of today, chief of which he labeled the double feature bill. To eliminate these and to raise the motion picture to the niche in the world of art for which he emphasized it is fitted by its universal appeal to the emotions of man, he proposed the establishment of an independent organization to produce "experimental motion pictures under the guidance of outstanding film experts of the industry."

The proposal urged major producers to finance the experiment along lines similar to efforts made in the steel, automotive and electrical industries. By means of the product the public's response to films in general could be gauged.

RETURN TO DOUBLE BILLS IN CHICAGO AWAITED ON NEW SEASON'S OPENING

Balaban & Katz Called Certain to Start Dual Featuring in Fall; Independents Are Expected to Follow Suit

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

That Chicago theatres will go to double features this fall, as soon as the new season's product is available, is the consensus of Film Row, though exchange managers are very reticent about it all.

This attitude is based upon the feeling B. & K. has toward the policy. The major circuit is understood to be definitely in favor of the dual plan and certain to start it this fall. Had it been possible for the B. & K. circuit to play dual bills this summer, without exposing itself to suits from the independent exhibitors, it probably would have done so. At present no double feature clause is expected to be put in the contracts for next season's pictures, thus doing away with the legal entanglements that would have arisen had the present pacts been violated.

Without the double feature clause in the contracts any theatre manager may play duals if he so desires. This makes it possible for certain independent houses which at times have played double features to play them whenever they wish next year. If a few of these houses start, it probably will mean that all Chicago theatres will take up the practice. Assuredly this will happen if B & K does it.

Of the larger groups of theatres B. & K. is the only one that wants the double feature plan. They concede it is perhaps not so good from the showmanship standpoint, but feel that it attracts the heaviest business and, after all, they say, it is the box office receipts that rule the business.

So far little if any selling has been done in the city this summer among the independent theatremen. Local exchanges for the most part have been ordered to hold off city sales until fall. One large independent group has been trying to get several of the major companies to make deals, but so far has met with emphatic statements that no sales are being made at this time.

Deals for new product are being made by distributors with B & K however, and it is understood that Warner, MGM, Paramount and Fox have agreed on terms and contracts will be signed soon. The Universal deal is expected to be closed this week with the arrival here of James C. Grainger, general sales manager.

In all deals made to date, it is understood, but unconfirmed, that B & K is being granted the long sought extra week's protection between "C" week and the first week of release. Independent theatre men who are opposed to this arrangement may put up a fight but such action cannot be taken until the new pictures are released under the new plan.

The local operators' union is awaiting the ruling of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees which will come from the office of George Browne, regarding the local situation on 2,000-foot reels.

Whether any difficulties will come up is as yet unknown. Present rulings are not favorable to the 2,000-foot reel but it is expected they will be changed to conform to the necessary specifications.

Many cuts were made in the film before it was sanctioned for showing. Censor board officials were undecided about the film for 18 months.

Warner Brothers is planning to make the cuts desired by the local censor board on "Anthony Adverse" so that it can be shown without the "pink ticket" which will be handed it when a permit is asked if it is shown in its present form.

Ben Katz, manager of the Warner theatre in Racine, has resigned and Harry MacDonald of the Paramount in Hammond takes his place. Don Malloy takes MacDonald's place at Hammond and Vance Schwartz goes into Malloy's job as manager of the Orpheum. Schwartz, was formerly manager of the State theatre in Racine, which has been closed for the summer.

Barney Barnard, in charge of city sales for Paramount, is vacationing in northern Minnesota. He took along wagonloads of fishing tackle and hopes to bring back several fifty-pound muskelounge, or at least a few perch.

At the end of ten weeks Milo Comer of the Grove theatre, Bill O'Connell of the Oakland and Stan Lambert of the Shore are the leaders in James Coston's baseball business drive. These Warner managers have seven more weeks to go before the winners will be announced.

William G. Eckhardt, assistant director for Twentieth Century-Fox studios, is in Chicago for a two weeks' vacation. He drove here from Hollywood accompanied by his wife and daughter and will spend his holiday with his father, Clyde W. Eckhardt, head of the local Twentieth Century-Fox exchange.

Eckhardt's latest picture assignment was as assistant to James Tinley on "See America First."

Maurice Tombragel, Chicago writer, has gone to the Coast as one of the new scenario writers for Universal Pictures.

George Givot, "Grik Hembassador of Good Weel," now packing them in at the College Inn in Chicago, says he has turned down several Hollywood offers of parts in which he would be featured as a Greek or Russian. He plans to produce a play in Chicago in which he is cast as an American attorney trying to defend a woman on trial for murder. Incidentally, he is planning to attend John Marshall law school during the run of the play.

Joe Lewis, the comic, who opened last week at the Chez Paree night club in Chicago, is in for several weeks only, as he is scheduled to appear in a new Twentieth Century-Fox picture.

Dave Davidson of National Screen Service was in town from New York to visit his folks.

Essaness' Crown theatre, on Chicago's Northwest side goes into a new advance showing picture policy this week. Pictures at this house will be shown in "C" prerelease week.

Comedian Joe E. Brown made a personal appearance last week at the premiere of Warners's "Earthworm Tractors" at the Madison theatre in Peoria, Ill.

Warner took a party of newspaper people from Chicago down to Peoria for the premiere. The comedian was driven into Peoria from the Sante Fe station at Chillicothe with an escort of thirty cars and fifty policemen. Despite a temperature of over 100 degrees, a huge crowd lined the streets outside the Great States Madison theatre while the picture was being shown inside. Brown had to come out in front of the house and make a speech to assemblage.

For the world premiere, the house was scaled at $1.50 for the main floor and mezzanine and $1.00 for upper balcony. It was a complete sell-out. The exploitation job was done by Sam Clarke of Warner, E. G. Fitzgibbons, Great States publicity man, Leonard Worley, city manager, and Tom Ronan, district manager.

Louis Armstrong, Negro band leader and cornet king, now appearing at the Oriental theatre, has been signed for Columbia's "Pennies from Heaven," which will star Bing Crosby. Armstrong will have his first speaking part in this picture and will report at the Hollywood studios on August 4th.

MPTOA Seeking Quick Action on Trade Practices

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will make a final effort in August to obtain distributor action on the organization's 10-point trade practice program, it was learned in New York this week.

Unwilling to see the self-regulation program killed by distributor inertia, plans are now being arranged for further conferences with sales managers of national distribution companies and indications are that if favorable action on the program does not result the M.P.T.O.A. may go directly to the company heads in a final move to obtain the adoption of all or a major part of its 10-point program. In line with these developments, Ed Kuykendall, M. P. T. O. A. president, is expected in Manhattan August 10, following the convention of the Southeastern Theatre Owners at Jacksonville, Fla., August 2-4, which he will attend.

The failure of individual companies to take the initiative in granting outright any of the major concessions sought by the organization is held by spokesmen for the exhibitors to be the principal reason for the lack of action on the program. They believe that if a single company took the lead in definitely committing itself on each phase of the program others would be quick to follow.

The lack of distributor action up to this point, however, is not regarded as being fatal to the exhibitors' program despite the fact that the new season deals are being closed under contracts which incorporate none of the concessions sought by the M. P. T.O.A.

Spokesmen for the organization point out that the cancellation and score charge concessions which have been asked can be either written into the contracts at a later date or appended by them by riders. Distributor approval of the local conciliation boards through which the M.P.T.O.A. hopes the balance of its program could be affected can be given independently of the contract, it is pointed out.

Government Asks Data on Business

Lengthy questionnaires have been sent to all major distributors and circuits by the Department of Justice, seeking detailed information regarding various properties held by the theatre interests and product deals made by the film companies, it was learned this week.

The questionnaires are signed by Assistant Attorney General Dickinson but there is no "must" order attached to them, the Government stating in an accompanying letter that it would appreciate the answers to the questions without giving its purpose in asking them. Among some of the questions asked are the relation between the distributor and its circuit or other circuits, film deals made and being made, the exact location of theatres, seating capacity, interested partners and definition of run.

FIGHT FILM REPORTED BIGGER THAN THE BOUT

Exhibitors Who Booked Picture Before Louis-Schmeling Bout Reap Richest Harvest of All

The Max Schmeling-Joe Louis fight picture ranks with exhibitors as something a trifle more colossal than the Yankee Stadium event itself, according to Sherwin Kane in an article in last Monday's issue of the Motion Picture Daily.

Most gleeful of the exhibitors, the story points out, are those who bought the picture prior to the fight when it was a long chance that the fight itself, much less the pictures, would be worth seeing. The film, he continues turned June and part of July into January for every house which played it and even for those which were so unfortunate as not to have booked it before the results were known.

One New York exhibitor, for instance, could have had the picture for his neighborhood circuit at $1,600 if he had signed on the day of the fight. He couldn't see the price, so he paid $3,600 instead, the following morning. The experience was duplicated all over the city.

Outdraws Features

Circuit bookers credit the picture with being a greater draw than any film released during the first two weeks following the fight. It came to wilting box-offices everywhere it played with a message of cheer emphatic enough to change the color of operating statements of even large circuits for the first six months of the current year.

The cost of the film to a first-run neighborhood house which had booked it in advance averaged about $500 for a one-week run, with about twice that figure being asked after the bout. All deals were set for a flat rental with the owners of the picture participating in gross receipts over a certain figure only in a few Broadway houses. The average grosses for the week in such houses were up $1,500 to $3,500 while the picture played. It had second week hold-overs in numerous metropolitan and up-state houses.

Rights Bought for $25,000

Jack Dietz bought the film rights from Mike Jacobs, fight promoter, for an estimated $25,000. Four regular cameras and one slow motion camera were used. In addition, there were the expenses of technicians, electricians, prints and distribution. It is estimated that 800 prints may have been made in the three laboratories which were utilized, at a cost of about $40 a print, or $32,000 for that item alone. The total overhead may have run about $90,000. The average fight picture returns to its owner a gross of $150,000 to $200,000. This one is expected to double the higher figure, due to the fact that so many exhibitors "laid off" until after the fight, by which time the rentals had been doubled.

Schmeling himself bought the exclusive rights to the picture for Germany at a reported $60,000 in American dollars.

The fact that the fight was a sensational upset with international interest attached was not the only explanation of its unusual drawing record. Cameramen and technicians collaborated to make it an exciting and dramatic 31 minutes of screen fare. Only one mishap occurred to detract from its maximum pictorial possibilities. The slow motion camera, which had caught Louis being knocked down in the fourth round, jammed while the twelfth round was under way, causing the picture its loss of slow motion shots of the knockout which followed shortly thereafter.

Alan Crosland, Noted Director, Dies on Coast

Alan Crosland, 41, noted motion picture director, died last Thursday night in Hollywood of injuries he received in an automobile accident on July 10. Mr. Crosland had been connected with the motion picture industry since 1912 when he left the reportorial staff of the New York Evening World to become associated with the old Edison Company.

Born in New York City, August 10, 1894, Mr. Crosland, himself an actor for three years, directed most of the Hollywood stars of the past and present generation and had many a notable success to his credit. Following his association with the Edison Company he worked for Selznick, Cosmopolitan, United Artists and Warner Brothers. At the time of his death Mr. Crosland was directing "The Case of the Caretaker's Cat" for Warner Brothers.

Among the pictures he directed were "General Crack," "Scarlet Lady," "Beloved Rogue," "Viennese Night," "Midnight Alibi," "Massacre," "Jazz Singer," "On With the Show," "Glorious Betsy," "The Great Impersonation," "The White Cockatoo" and "King Solomon of Broadway."

Mr. Crosland suffered his fatal injuries when his automobile apparently struck an obstacle near an excavation on Sunset Boulevard, in Hollywood, and overturned. The director was alone in his car when the accident happened. Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at Pierce Brothers Mortuary. Burial followed in Hollywood Cemetery.

Philippine Producers To Export Feature

"Hagase Tu Voluntad" ("Obey That Impulse"), produced with an all-Filipino cast and by a native director, will be distributed in South and Central America and in Spain, according to a report from Trade Commissioner J. B. Richards in Manila. Tagalog films have been exhibited in Hawaii but this is the first time that a feature picture has been exported from the Philippines for world distribution, according to the report.

MARY OF SCOTLAND

(RKO Radio Production)

Drama and Romance

It was a land and time for tragedy, the dour Scotland of the day when Mary Stuart returned in 1561.

Greystone castles frowned down, their dark corridors reeking with intrigue, clanking with the stride of men at arms and echoing by night with whispers.

North and south the clans were fighting as the warring, scheming lords sought to tear the nation apart. And below the border was Elizabeth, redheaded virgin queen of England, jealous, fearful, ruthless, greedy of power.

Into that Scotland came Mary Stuart—to be the martyred Mary Queen of Scots of history, song and story—bringing beauty, femininity, daring and romance.

It is that Mary Stuart, Queen of Romance, who comes across the screen and this page now, in the person of Miss Katharine Hepburn in the title role of "Mary of Scotland," as vivid as a gypsy's scarf dropped in the heather.

When Mary Stuart went to the block her troubles had but begun. Partisan historians have worked their will with her annals. Tradition and rumor and the gossip of backstairs and drawing room have been at work nearly four centuries. Then not so long ago Maxwell Anderson did a play for the stage about her, and took up where the historians left off, and now Hollywood has been at the matter with the screen play from Mr. Anderson's stage play, this time by Dudley Nichols, and subsequent attentions by John Ford, director, and Pandro S. Berman, producer, all for RKO.

No matter what has happened to Mary Queen of Scots in the process—and the liberties are no more considerable perhaps than the screen generally has been taking with biography of late—the motion picture audience is to have a rare, poignant Hepburn, in a setting of thrill, adventure, suspense—and debacle.

The picture is dominantly Hepburn.

One comes away from it remembering her vivid Mary Stuart and little else.

And that, however, is not to be construed as adverse to the very considerable and capable supporting cast. It is, by the Hepburn dominance, made entirely into support. Maybe Mary Stuart was like that. The stories say she was.

The billing co-stars Fredric March, in the role of Bothwell, suitor, defender and, lastly, husband of Mary. He is brave in kilts. And up and down the long array of players are several who have known the fame of the marquee lights, and some the triumphs of the screen before the movies ventured to have marquees.

Striking impression of directorial discretion and control pervades the piece.

Mr. Ford had rampant, desperate, knife-fighting melodrama to make. His materials were love and hate and bloody plot, daggers in the dark and poisoned purpose. But ever, it seems, he had them in control, painting them on the screen with restraint and within the limits of the dramatic effect. The melodrama of Mary of Scotland is queenly melodrama.

The picture is rich with settings, pretentious even for these abundant days in Hollywood. There is much of music, the pipers and marching men, with occasional interludes of happy relief that the grim tale may be the grimmer as Fate and Elizabeth close in upon Mary of Scotland. Extraordinary opportunities for sequences of sadism, which all so often have figured in kindred historic material, have been passed with commendable judgment. The bitter, bitter story is told without tortures, and it gains in the artful simplicity of its telling. Nothing and no one comes between the audience and Miss Hepburn's Mary of Scotland. It is as boxoffice as The Hepburn.

The religious phases of the story, while handled for the screen probably as lightly as history permits, will be nothing for the showman to present with emphasis. It is to be observed that the RKO press book limits its attentions to the role of John Knox, preacher, to a one column cut.

The story is Hepburn.

To Mary—With Love

(20th Century - Fox)

Romance Drama

No one should find it necessary to struggle in search of showmanship angles with which to sell this picture. The essentials are all out in the open for anyone to recognize and adapt. The title suggests the play's character, dramatic and not without pleasing comedy contrast romance. In the leading roles two highly popular players, Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, are presented. The two principal supporting players, Claire Trevor and Ian Hunter, are also favorably known. Even those spotted in minor roles are name values of more than ordinary worth. The story, a topical visaged study of the problems of modern life and marital romance, is well conceived. Given production values commensurate with its merit as not too serious entertainment, the picture is one abounding in elements of appeal to feminine patronage. Yet it is of the quality to interest general adult audiences.

Essentially the yarn is a quadrangular romance drama. The locale is New York and time the decade of 1920-30. The spirit of the play preserves the mood and spirit of those years. Jock and Mary are married. A definite bond of friendship and affection exists between them and Bill Hallam. Struggling for business success, Jock forgets Mary, who seeks comfort in the companionship of Bill and relaxation in a mad round of social and sporting diversion. Wise Hallam, seeing the romance going on the rocks, suggests the couple have a child. Death of the baby, a tragedy to Bill, sends him off on a hectic career of money making and reckless diversion with Kitty Brant. Faithfully and patiently, Mary waits for him to come to his senses. Great business success is followed by the market crash, an event which widens the rift between husband and wife. Building to its climax as Mary contemplates divorce, Bill, in a sequence expertly handled by Hunter, forestalls her attempt and by talking good sound common sense into the ears of both shows them the error of their ways and points out the manner in which they can find happiness.

The atmosphere of the show is always humanly real. While the theme is essentially a serious study of a modern problem, yet its delineation is not somber. Many times playing upon the more sentimental emotions, its comedy contrast sparkles with dialogue and action humor which should account for more smiles than tears. An intelligent show, it calls for equally intelligent marketing. The things most

Ticket to Paradise

(Republic)

Comedy

This is an inconspicuous little picture that is productive of quite a bit of fun and excitement. It concerns an amnesia victim and his attempts to recall his identity, all with the help of an attractive girl and her millionaire father. The complications that arise to confront the poor victim and the situations in which he finds himself while suffering from loss of memory are numerous and hilarious, but the fun really begins when the girl and boy start a cross-country tour of exploits aimed at getting pictures in newspapers in the hope of recognition.

Ingenious showmanship is applicable to many sequences and the cast names of Roger Pryor, Wendy Barrie, Claude Gillingwater, Andrew Tombes and Luis Alberni should mean something. Direction is by Aubrey Scotto, known for his comedies.

Terry Dodd, go-getting young financier, is just leaving Chicago for Pittsburgh on a big business deal when he loses his memory following a taxi smashup. Rushing to the first train, he lands in New York with $10,000 in his pocket, but with no idea of who he is or where he is going. The police turn him over to a group of alienists, who name him Jack Doe, make a ridiculous test which indicates he is a taxi driver and put him to work at that, urging him to ask everyone to identify him.

Dodd's first passenger is a wealthy girl, Jane Forbes, and he winds up at a cocktail party at her home. This leads to a job in her father's office, but when Dodd disrupts the routine by sending out inquiries through the business channels to try and discover his identity, he is fired.

By this time, Jane is in love with Dodd, and vice versa, so the two start a ludicrous tour across the country seeking newspaper publicity in the hopes Dodd's picture may be printed and seen by a friend. The tour, interspersed with hilarious situations, finally takes the pair to Chicago, where, following another series of hijinks, it is revealed that Dodd is quite the honest business man and this dissolves Forbes' newly-aroused objections, so that the way is paved for "two tickets to Paradise" for the two lovers, as Miss Barrie puts it.

Early to Bed

(Paramount)

Comedy

This is a straight comedy without the slightest attempt to infuse dramatic or other serious element at any point in its development. The principal roles are enacted by Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland, George Barbier and Lucien Littlefield, who is also credited, in collaboration with Chandler Sprague, with authorship of the story. Their roles are of the kind in which they have been most successful at the box office in the past, and the placarding of their names in billing serves to describe the picture exactly.

Exploitation resting principally upon these names appears to be indicated. Such effort would seem qualified to attract audiences of appropriate entertainment preference. Various stunts suggested by the extremely animated action in the picture harmonize with expectancies born of the cast names and borne out by the picture. Sleepwalking, honeymooning and amateur detecting are the major topical ingredients, all treated lightly and with exclusively comic intent.

The story is of Chester Beatty, middle aged salesman, and his middle aged bride, who go for their honeymoon to a remote lake, site of a hotel and sanitarium, to be near and sell a bill of goods to Horace Stanton, manufacturer. A golf links episode puts the prospect under obligations to the salesman, but the bride's well intentioned efforts to help her husband result in successive placements and cancellations of a large order.

Beatty's habit of walking in his sleep leads him and his bride to believe him inadvertently guilty of a jewel robbery and, later, a murder. A writer of detective stories, guest of the hotel, attempts to solve the successive mysteries. Beatty consults a doctor, who prescribes various unsuccessful means of overcoming his somnambulism. It is through their failure that the mysteries are solved, after which Beatty is employed by Stanton and moves on with his bride to a honeymoon at Niagara Falls.

Reviewed at the Paramount theatre, New York, where a mid-evening weekday audience of capacity proportions laughed so loudly and long at various points in the picture as to drown out portions of ensuing dialogue for a reviewer contributing his share from fourth row center. WEAVER, New York.

White Fang

(20th Century-Fox)

Adventure Romance

Sequel to Jack London's "Call of the Wild," this story of adventure and romance in Alaska, with a motivating dog theme, is unpretentious in plot and setting, but emerges as an entertaining production. Set in the Yukon country during the gold rush days at the turn of the century, the story, primarily, relates the legend of a wolf-dog, a magnificent animal, who befriends a man, later demonstrates fidelity to this same man and is his constant protector.

The title derives its name from the dog, who otherwise is known as Lightning, and who should be a great favorite with the children. It is to them the campaign, it would seem, would be best directed. Not forgetting, of course, the vast public who are readers of the London stories.

Jean Muir and Michael Whalen head a notable cast of character actors. Miss Muir especially gives a very excellent performance with Whalen, a comparative newcomer, showing evidences of future stardom. With them in the picture are Slim Summerville, Charles Winniger, John Carradine, Jane Darwell and Thomas Beck.

In the story, Whalen, on the pleadings of Miss Muir, consents to act as a guide to her brother Beck, in his quest of the family gold mine. Bad weather and lack of food contribute to the downfall of Beck, who kills himself. Whalen staggers on but gives out before he reaches the mine. White Fang watches over him and attracts the attention of a passing sled by his howls.

When Whalen recovers in the small community that adjoins the mine he poses as Beck and ousts Carradine, who has been robbing the mine. He nurses White Fang, who had been shot. Miss Muir arrives on the scene and falls in love with Whalen. Carradine accuses Whalen of the murder of Beck and is about to hang him when Summerville arrives with Beck's dairy which absolves Whalen of the crime.

Comedy with Music

A different Bing Crosby picture, this stacks up as worthy audience entertainment material and, because of character of story and personalities presented, is an exploitation feature of more than usual quality. With music, the film moves to the tune of comedy action. Novel in theme, it moves fast. Diverting from customary production technique, it introduces several specialty features that are hilariously amusing. Considerable worth is added to the show inasmuch as Crosby's part is always comedy. While for necessary contrasting drama purposes some little semblance of seriousness is worked into the yarn, that quality is always secondary to the motivating comedy.

buy a prize steer which he hopes to be the basis of a vast western cattle herd. In the meantime Doris gets into a jam with Ma Holloway, a rugged western cattlewoman, because she has no desire to marry the man picked out for her by Ma. Stowing away aboard a cattle car carrying Jeff, Buck and the bull, Doris first is accepted by Jeff as a trouble fleeing crook. There's a thrill action twist as the bull escapes and is recaptured, the excitement emphasized when a gang of potential kidnapers headed by Big Brain, wise to who Doris is, plot to abduct her. The bull manages to prevent that temporarily, but as the gang follows by auto, its comedy drama again is picked up at the Halloway ranch to effect a romantic, music-embellished finale.

Returning Crosby to comedy seems to have benefited his crooning talents. Several of his songs, particularly "Empty Saddles," are of the popular variety. The idea also makes it possible for Bob Burns and another surprising newcomer, Martha Raye, to contribute much that is amusing. The renewed Crosby, however, seems to be the chief commercial asset. Though recent pictures may have caused his screen prestige to suffer, this one, properly sold, should do much to restore his drawing power. Under the circumstances, the entertainment being of the quality desirable to average theatergoers, it appears to be wise to exert a real attempt to attract large first showing audiences. It may be expected that word-of-mouth advertising will considerably benefit subsequent showings.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Produced by Benjamin Glazer. Directed by Norman Taurog. Assistant director, Joe Youngerman. Original, Mervin J. Houser. Screen play, Walter DeLeon, Francis Martin, John C. Moffitt and Sidney Salkow. Sound, Eugene Merritt and Don Johnson. Film editor, Ellsworth Hoagland. Art directors, Hans Dreier and Robert Usher. Comedy Western

Here's a show that seems to be earmarked for popular success. It appears to have those elements necessary to a surprise feature. The unique story is novelly premised and well developed, the direction sound, the acting spirited. Moving to the pace of intriguing dialogue and brisk action, the hokum flavored show makes smart use of clever conversation and situation gags. All elements are combined for one purpose, that of providing desirable amusement acceptable to specialized as well as general audiences.

The attraction is a new kind of domestic comedy western. Eschewing formula, the odd and pleasing character of the idea is made evident in a prelude episode which, instead of being blood and thunder pioneer-Indian melodrama, turns into civic celebration pageant. Then all previous ideas are reversed. News of granddaughter Mary's marriage to a Count horrifies fleabitten old gun fighter Lafe Cantillon. Gagged by situation and dialogue comedy, Lafe meets the "furriner" and decides he wants no truck with him. But the Count, ambitious to be known as Spike and being adverse to wanting to exist as something to be displayed to envious friends and neighbors, turns he-man cowboy, and wins the respect of Lafe, who thinks the rest of the mob, even Mary, have turned into sissies. At a big reception Count Spike and Lafe, the Count dressed in royal uniform and later accoutered in Rough Rider costume, show up plastered, much to the amazement of Mary, her mother and others of the Cantillon menage. The Count's refusal to play a peacock role brings on a threat of divorce, a situation that is given a further comedy twist when rumor has the Count gadding around with a red headed woman. The woman turns out to be valet Adolph's daughter and when Mary ascertains this she decides to settle down to primitive ranch life with her tractor driving Count.

While the picture affords acceptable names to sell, its principal showmanship quality seems to rest in the novelly amusing character of the story to be sold as entertainment assuring any kind of audience plenty of laughter.

Previewed in the Alexander theatre, Glendale, to an audience that did not hesitate about demonstrating its appreciation. McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Produced by Albert Lewis. Directed by Harold Young. Assistant director, Richard Harlan. Original story, Elmer Davis. Meet Nero Wolfe

(Columbia)

Murder Mystery

Edward Arnold is the rotund, beer guzzling Nero Wolfe of Rex Stout's widely popular mystery novel, "Fer de Lance," which this picture brings to screen without important deviation from text, and Lionel Stander is the brusque, abrupt and intellectually stolid Archie Goodwin who serves the immobile detective as eyes, ears and legs. The roles are congenial to both.

Melodrama and comedy are adroitly balanced under Herbert Biberman's direction and B. P. Schulberg's production is wholly adequate to story requirements as to settings, cast and technical aspects. The necessary taking of life is accomplished without bloodshed and the fatal side of the action is without undue emphasis.

Exploitation of the picture may proceed with confidence that the claims made for first flight detective fiction are borne out by the picture. The name of the principal star might be linked with that of the author and of the book on which the picture is based for informative purposes. A number of others in the cast possess individual followings. Mystery and comedy are the principal thematic ingredients.

The picture opens with the death of a college professor on the golf links, evidently from heart disease, and tightens up when Nero Wolfe, associating this with another apparently unrelated death also imputed to natural causes, declares that both men were murdered and proceeds to unravel the mystery without leaving his home. He conducts his investigations at second hand through the aid of Archie Goodwin, his assistant, who postpones his marriage to Mazie Gray, over her humorous objections, until the case is cleared up. This is done by adroit deduction of a kind and on the basis of fact; and incidents better left to the picture for unveiling.

Reviewed at the Rivoli theatre, New York, as shown at noon on Sunday to a filling auditorium frequently manifesting approval of the comedy sequences by spontaneous laughter. Weaver, New York.

Produced by B. P. Schulberg. Distributed by Columbia. Directed by Herbert Biberman. Assistant director, George Rhein. Story by Rex Stout. Screen play by Howard J. Breen, Bruce Manning and Joseph Anthony. Photographed by Henry Freulich. Edited by Otto Meyer. P. C. A. certificate No. 2212. Release date, August 1. Running time, 72 minutes. General audience classification.

Entertaining

This is an entertaining short on sports peculiar to various countries. Starting with England's Rugby football, the camera transports one to Japan and its wrestlers; Spain with its matadors and bulls; France with its foot-and-fist fighting; the Philippines, where the natives play foot tennis; Canada with its hockey and finally to the United States, where scenes of boxers in the prize-ring are shown. The narration was written by Jack Kofoed and described by Ford Bond. Running time, 10 minutes.

Rio de Janeiro— City of Splendor

(MGM-FitzPatrick)

Excellent

An excellent picturalization in color of one of the most famous cities of South America, Rio de Janeiro. Focal points of the city, the buildings, the boulevards, the parks, the unique sidewalk designs, the beaches and the harbor are all splendidly recorded by the camera's lens. James FitzPatrick, in a running commentary, vividly describes the scenes. Running time, eight minutes.

On The Wrong Trek

(MGM)

Good Comedy

Charley Chase, his wife and his mother-in-law are motoring to California during Chase's vacation. On the road they stop to inspect what they believe is an accident. Instead their car is stolen and their clothes exchanged for others not so good. Continuing in an old broken down car they run out of gas. While trying to drain gasoline out of a stranger's car they push the car over a cliff. Refused admittance into California because of their disreputable car and clothes they return home. When Chase returns to the office he finds a new boss, the stranger whose car he pushed over the cliff. It all adds up to good comedy. Running time, 19 minutes.

"Robin Hood" Scheduled

The first all-color production on the new Republic program will be "Robin Hood," a story based on the life of the famous English outlaw.

An Important Notice

The most eventful year in Frank Capra's career is over. Capra has finished shooting "Lost Horizon"... the picture that has already created more conversation—aroused more interest—than any single production that has ever emerged from Hollywood.

The incredible Shangri-La set—deserted at last by the cast of thousands—gleams brightly in the California sun. In guarded vaults repose thousands upon thousands of feet of the most valuable motion picture film in the world—Capra's photographic interpretation of the brilliant James Hilton novel.

Frank Capra will now begin the titanic task of assembling, cutting, scoring, editing. Watch for further news of DEVIL'S SQUADRON: Richard Dix, Karen Morley—Good picture. Everyone satisfied. Above average business. Very thrilling in spots. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

KING STEPS OUT, THE: Grace Moore, Franchot Tone—Although Grace Moore is not liked here, this picture was liked. This is the best one she has made. The comedy is good. Played June 4-6.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Good. Rather slow getting started, but what a finish. Will please 100 per cent in any audience. Running time, 118 minutes. Played June 24-25.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

First National

BRIDES ARE LIKE THAT: Ross Alexander, Anita Louise—This is just as clever a little comedy as anyone would want to see. Our folks liked Ross Alexander very much. This held up its end of a double bill.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BULLETS OR BALLOTS: Edward G. Robinson, Joan Blondell—We are sure glad to see Edward G. Robinson back again. He is a real he-man and shows his stuff in "Bullets or Ballots." It pleases if it is another gangster picture. Running time, 81 minutes. Played June 28-29.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. General patronage.

CEILING ZERO: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—One of the most dramatic pictures we've had on our screen for a long time. Business was off on account of high school commencement, so can't really estimate its drawing power.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

IN CALIENTE: Dolores Del Rio, Pat O'Brien, Leo Carrillo—Average show. Average attendance. Leo Carrillo good. Good music. Running time, 84 minutes. Played September 26-27.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

SINGING KID, THE: Al Jolson, Beverly Roberts—Just a fair to middling picture. Jolson no draw at the box office. Played June 13.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SINGING KID, THE: Al Jolson, Edward Everett Horton, Sybil Jason—When will this organization realize that Jolson is fast becoming a has-been? Here is a picture allocated to us in the percentage group and we hardly took in expenses. Many people stayed away when they saw that it was Al Jolson. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 28-29.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

IT'S LOVE AGAIN: Jessie Matthews, Robert Young—Jessie Matthews makes Ginger Rogers and Eleanor Powell look like amateurs; she is the only star that can dance, sing and act at the same time. The music was very good, although the story was the same as "Evergreen" and "First A Girl." Played July 5-7.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AH, WILDERNESS!: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore—Pretty good show. Drew quite well. Wally Beery better in other shows. Running time, 98 minutes. Played May 2-3.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

AH, WILDERNESS!: Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery—Very fine acting. Played it during a hot spell to very poor business. Cannot blame the picture altogether.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ANNA KARENINA: Greta Garbo, Fredric March—Good story, and acting pretty good, but Garbo doesn't go well in this town. Let's have more of Fredric March, though. He has some good qualities and he goes here. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 22-23.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

BOHEMIAN GIRL, THE: Laurel and Hardy—If you haven't played this picture and want something to make the gang laugh be sure and play it, as it sure gets the job done. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 16-17.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. General patronage.

BOHEMIAN GIRL, THE: Laurel and Hardy—Good comedy. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936: Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell—Very, very good show and way above average crowd. Eleanor Powell is really good. She beats Ruby Keeler by far. So let's have more of her. Running time, 103 minutes. Played March 7, 8.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

CHINA SEAS: Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery, Clark Gable—Average show and average attendance. Jean Harlow not up to her average but Wally Beery good. Running time, 89 minutes. Played January 11-12.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont.

GARDEN MURDER CASE, THE: Edmund Lowe, Virginia Bruce—Another murder mystery. They're about all the same. Average business. Played June 16.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Clark Gable, Franchot Tone, Charles Laughton—Excellent show and excellent attendance. Gable and Tone both good and Laughton excellent. Laughton makes you hate him in the show, but afterwards you realize that he is a superb actor. Good story also. Running time, 133 minutes. Played April 18-19.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY: Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone—Good picture. Acting well done. But running time too long. Played May 1-2.—Elmer Hughes, Elward Theatre, Mesquite, Nev. General patronage.

PETTICOAT FEVER: Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy—Patrons thought it silly. Story weak, although did above average business. Good drawing title. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 5-6.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

PETTICOAT FEVER: Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy—Silly. Played June 18-19.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

ROBIN HOOD OF EL DORADO, THE: Warner Baxter, Ann Loring—A fair picture. Nothing outstanding, but average entertainment. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 1-2.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Nelson Eddy, Jeannette MacDonald—Excellent picture. MacDonald and Eddy's singing wonderful. Recording No. 1. Running time, 112 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

ROSE MARIE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Another instance where the trailer not only does not sell the picture; it actually helped kill it. We would have been better off if we had never shown this trailer. Business was very average for three days.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—Very good. Played to just average business due to the hot weather. Played June 27.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—Right up our alley. More favorable reports from patrons than on any other picture in five years. Good draw. Wish we had many more like it. Running time, 106 minutes. Played June 21-23.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

SMALL TOWN GIRL: Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor—Picture very well liked. Metro's nationwide advertising on this helped business. Played June 7-9.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

TALE OF TWO CITIES, A: Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allan, Blanche Yurka—Super-excellent show except for Elizabeth Allan. She spoiled the whole picture. It's beyond me how she ever got into movies. Ronald Colman excellent. This whole town has read the book, so they turned out well for it. Madame De Farge good. Running time, 126 minutes. Played May 23-24.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

THREE GODFATHERS: Chester Morris, Irene Hervey—Too much time to cross the desert and the same story has been put into pictures too many times. Some of the customers came out and said: "I thought they were never going to get through the desert." Running time, 82 minutes. Played July 2-3.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. General patronage.

TOUGH GUY: Jackie Cooper, Joseph Calleia—This drew the poorest Saturday business for 1936. I believe the absence of love interest killed it for us, because Friday night was good and Saturday night was just almost nothing.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

UNGUARDED HOUR, THE: Loretta Young, Franchot Tone—I must have had an unguarded hour myself when I dated this for a weekend. Just a punk picture with a swell cast wasted on it. Did no business at all here. Played July 4.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

VOICE OF BUGLE ANN, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan—Good program picture. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

WHIPSAW: Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—This picture is extremely clever and holds interest to the very end, but Metro's trailers simply don't help to sell the picture. The trailer on this is very poor.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WIFE VS. SECRETARY: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Jean Harlow—Swell story and wonderfully acted. These two girls certainly are the tops in anything they attempt. Gable is always good, but seems like there are quite a few people who do not like him. Nevertheless, they come! Running time, 89 minutes. Played July 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WIFE VS. SECRETARY: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy—Started off to good Sunday business, average for Monday and dwindled to very poor on Tuesday. Even with three outstanding stars, folks still want a good meaty story.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Paramount

F MAN: Jack Haley, Adrienne Marden—A very silly offering that is so goofy even the socalled hicks (if there are any) simply won't take this; they get up and leave the theatre like it was on fire.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

FORGOTTEN FACES: Herbert Marshall, Gertrude Michael—A good cast turn in swell and convincing performances, but the picture is so somber and heavy in tone that it is limited in appeal. We starved to death with it. Played July 7-9.—G. E. Lancaster, Jefferson Theatre, Huntington, Ind. General patronage.

KLONDIKE ANNIE: Mae West, Victor McLaglen—Just a fair draw. Seemed to please, but rather disappointing to the West fans. Mae West done in this town. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 3-4.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

PALM SPRINGS: Frances Langford, Smith Ballew—It is hard to believe that this is a Walter Wanger production, for it is so slow moving and has a shopworn plot that fairly squeaks with triteness! On the credit side let it be said that Miss Langford sings whom critics, reviewers, exchanges and major distributors recognize has for fifteen years consistently produced outstanding product, big features, little features, shorts and even super-features, announces for 1936—

"THE LONE PRAIRIE"

Based on a famous American Classic, read by millions, by James Fenimore Cooper, author of "The Last of the Mohicans," "The Deerslayer," etc.

Blazing action against backgrounds of classic and scenic beauty—fast-riding modern production with a vast ready-made audience.

The cast will co-star George Eldredge and Queenie Smith, famous youthful stars of opera, musical comedy and legitimate stage and more recently in pictures and radio, augmented by such stars as Harry Carey, Tom Tyler, Lloyd Hughes and a nationally known band.

There will be five other special outdoor musical attractions, each one with a special cast.

"Roll Along Covered Wagon"
"Whistling Cowboy"
"Land of the Sky Blue Water"
"West of the Great Divide"
"Saddle Your Blues"

They can't miss! They will make you a factor in your field. You'll have something everybody will want — a good show — that grand and glorious feeling.

Well backed by resources and man power—these quality productions will be made and delivered according to schedule. Significant casts—sparkling stories. You know we make real pictures—why not for you?

SIX "CRIME AND COURAGE" SERIES

We will also release six modern manhunt features based on a nationally advertised series of detective stories. These special attractions will also be made this season.

delightfully. Played July 8.—G. E. Lancaster, Huntington Theatre, Huntington, Ind. General patronage.

SKY PARADE: Jimmy Allen, Katharine DeMille—"Sky Parade" did a little extra business on Family Night, but a lot of the customers kicked on it, anyway. Said the story was too weak. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 7-8.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. General patronage.

PRINCESS COMES ACROSS, THE: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Carole Lombard is the tops in this one! Very pleasing summer entertainment that registered with our patrons. Played July 2-4.—G. E. Lancaster, Huntington Theatre, Huntington, Ind. General patronage.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN: Herbert Marshall, Gertrude Michael—Very interesting spy story holding interest to the very end. But why will a beautiful girl make herself unsightly with such a hairdress as Miss Michael used in the opening scenes of this picture? Have noticed lately that many of the stars are doing this. They are hideous, if you ask us! Running time, 72 minutes. Played July 8-9.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TOO MANY PARENTS: Frances Farmer, Colin Tapley—"Too Many Parents" pleased the few who saw it. It's hard to get business on a picture without wellknown stars. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 23-24.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. General patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Fred MacMurray—You exhibitors who have not yet used this grand box office picture should get ready and double the playing time. We played to capacity four nights, opening on Sunday with the largest box office in the history of this little theatre. In view of the fact that this picture has already been shown in all my neighboring towns, it is proven the picture will never be old. It is my opinion it is the best and most successful color picture ever made.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Republic

CAPPY RICKS RETURNS: Robert McWade, Ray Walker, Florine McKinney—Good entertainment and well enjoyed. Running time, 66 minutes. Played July 3-4.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

RKO Radio

DANCING PIRATE: Charles Collins, Steffi Duna—Here is a monotonous mixture of melodrama and music that never seems to click. The story is utterly stupid and thin, and disgusting to the average patron. There is hardly enough material here for a decent short subject. Sold as a special, it is only a poor "weakie." Running time, 81 minutes. Played July 5. —G. E. Lancaster, Huntington Theatre, Huntington, Ind. General patronage.

EX-MRS. BRADFORD, THE: William Powell, Jean Arthur—You have one of the best of the season coming to you, if you have not yet shown this one. When you have two good players like these two coupled up with other excellent players and an interesting story like this one is, then you have a real movie. Extraordinary business two days, Sunday and Monday.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

FARMER IN THE DELL: Fred Stone, Jean Parker —RKO got front page and back page on this Fred Stone, trying to tell 'em the second Will Rogers had arrived, so if you believe it, give this one to your patrons and let them tell you. Front page notices will not make a second Will Rogers out of a comeback like Fred Stone. Fred, you better stick to secondary parts.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Some said better than "Top Hat;" others said not so good. This team have never meant big money to me, and this picture was no exception.— A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

LADY CONSENTS, THE: Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall—Pretty good program picture. Running time, 78 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

MUSS 'EM UP: Preston Foster, Margaret Callahan —"Muss 'Em Up" is the right title for the picture. It was so mussed up one didn't know what it was all about. Running time, 71 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

NITWITS, THE: Wheeler and Woolsey—Terrible show and still worse crowd. Wheeler and Woolsey are getting worse in every show. They've had their day and it's over. Running time, 81½ minutes. Played February 6-7.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

SILLY BILLIES: Wheeler and Woolsey—Just fair. Slightly above average draw. No comments for or against. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 26-27.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Walter Abel, Margot Grahame—This picture had many walkouts. Did not make film rental, although some liked it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SIX MORE SHOWMEN CONTRIBUTE REPORTS

Five showmen joining the ranks of contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week hail from the northwest and the far northwest.

Making his first reports to the department is Elmer Hughes, Elward Theatre, Mesquite, Nevada.

The following exhibitors are returning to the fold after a year's absence:

H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thomson Falls, Montana.

C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas.

G. E. Lancaster, Huntington and Jefferson theatres, Huntington, Indiana.

Wayne T. Jenkins, People's Theatre, Pleasant Hills, Missouri.

Another showman who recently began sending in reports on productions he had played is a British exhibitor. He is Wilfred G. Brown, Regal Theatre, Barrow - in - Furness, Lancashire, England.

Read the reports of these exhibitors as they appear in "What the Picture Did for Me".

Twentieth Century-Fox

CAPTAIN JANUARY: Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee—Did 25 per cent more business than on "Littlest Rebel." Much better picture. Although Shirley is slipping, she still does us nice business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE CIRCUS: Warner Oland, Keye Luke—Very pleasing program picture, equal in value to any of the Chan stories. These seem to hold up very well. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 3-4.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

COUNTRY BEYOND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly—Quite good story of the Northland. Don't get excited over it. Running time, 69 minutes. Played July 2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

COUNTRY BEYOND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly—Well liked and played to good business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 3-4.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

COUNTRY DOCTOR, THE: Jean Hersholt, Dionne Quintuplets—The most pleasing picture of the year. Acting and directing great. Running time, 95 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN: Irvin S. Cobb, Rochelle Hudson—Irvin S. Cobb is okay, but will never be a Will Rogers. Played June 23.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN: Irvin S. Cobb, Rochelle Hudson—Very good. Many favorable compliments on Cobb's acting. Pleased 100 per cent. Played June 19.—Elmer Hughes. Elward Theatre, Mesquite, Nev. General patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Will Rogers, Dorothy Wilson—Wonderful show. Will Rogers best he had ever been in a picture. People liked show well. Drew very well. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 9-11.— H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

MESSAGE TO GARCIA, A: Wallace Beery, Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles—I think it a damn poor special. Wallace Beery did great acting, so did John Boles and Barbara Stanwyck, but it was just not the type of story that pleases small town audiences. Business was very poor. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 3-4.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. General patronage.

MESSAGE TO GARCIA, A: Wallace Beery, John Boles, Barbara Stanwyck—Poor draw. Satisfied those that came. Should have been in low allocation. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 19-20.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

O'MALLEY OF THE MOUNTED: George O'Brien, Irene Ware—Very good action picture which pleased all. Played July 3-4.—Elmer Hughes, Elward Theatre, Mesquite, Nev. General patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin—A fine, entertaining juvenile picture. Jane Withers has a number of admirers to make this above average picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PADDY O'DAY: Jane Withers, Pinky Tomlin—A very pleasing performance, particularly so on the part of Jane Withers. Business was satisfactory. Played June 27.—C. W. Mills Co., Inc., Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Robert Taylor, Loretta Young—In spite of the mystifying title, is more satisfactory at the box office chiefly because of the smash combination that play the leads.—G. E. Lancaster, Huntington Theatre, Huntington, Ind. General patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—This picture is one of the best. The ladies went wild over Taylor. You can't go wrong on this one. Played June 21-23.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN: George O'Brien—Played to above average Saturday's business. O'Brien a big shot with us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

UNDER TWO FLAGS: Ronald Colman, Victor McLaglen, Claudette Colbert, Rosalind Russell—This was not quite as wonderful as Fox thinks it is. The men liked it okay, but did not appeal to the women. Personally, I was bored watching it. Some said it was wonderful, but I guess they must like horses. Played June 27-29.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Me. Town and country patronage.

WAY DOWN EAST: Henry Fonda, Rochelle Hudson—Very good program picture. Running time, 87 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

CALL OF THE WILD, THE: Clark Gable, Loretta Young, Jack Oakie—Excellent show. Very good attendance. This town goes big for this type of show. Let's have more of them! Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 30-December 1.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

LES MISERABLES: Fredric March, Charles Laughton—Good show, but didn't draw as many as expected it to. Was advertised as big show, but didn't go so big here. Played October 26-27.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

Universal

HIS NIGHT OUT: Edward Everett Horton, Irene Hervey—Very good picture that did no business.— Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION: Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor—No doubt one of the best pictures of the year as far as story and acting are concerned. Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor very good in this picture. Running time, 120 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

Warner Brothers

BIG NOISE, THE: Guy Kibbee, Warren Hull—"The Big Noise" made a lot of noise and Bank Night gave good satisfaction. Don't be afraid of this one as it surely makes them laugh if you can get a good crowd. Running time, 58 minutes. Played July 9.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. General patronage.

BROADWAY GONDOLIER: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Very good show. Good crowd. We played this just at the right time—when the whole U. S. was Dick Powell crazy. Running time, 98 minutes. Played December 7-8.—H. O. Ekern, Rex Theatre, Thompson Falls, Mont. Small town patronage.

UNEQUALLED

THE record of Super X is unequalled ... both as to the photographic quality it sends to the screen, and the resulting acceptance it enjoys in the industry. Not only in this country, but abroad as well, it rates as the premier motion picture negative of the day. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

EASTMAN SUPER X

PANCHROMATIC NEGATIVE

COLLEEN: Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Jack Oakie, Dick Powell—This has plenty of star names and by rights should have been a good drawing card, but for some reason or other it seems to miss fire. Average business here. Played June 20.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

COLLEEN: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Jack Oakie, Joan Blondell—A 50-50 proposition. Did not draw and story was very poor. Running time, 89 minutes. Played June 28-30.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

COLLEEN: Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Jack Oakie, Dick Powell—Tiresome. No story to speak of and not a humable tune in it. It was a shame to waste this good cast in such a very poor picture. We didn't gross film rental.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SONS O' GUNS: Joe E. Brown, Joan Blondell—Another Joe E. Brown picture that gave great satisfaction. Running time, 79 minutes. Played June 19-20.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

DR. BLUEBIRD: Color Rhapsodies—We repeated this with a Shirley Temple picture after playing it last winter with another picture. It is certainly one of the best color cartoons produced this year, in our estimation. Running time, eight minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

STAR GAZING: Radio Rogues—An especially good two-reeler that I sent my personal thanks to our Columbia booker for. I wrote asking him to pick out a good comedy for a special date and he sent this, which suited my folks to a "T." Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Educational

BIRD LAND: Paul Terry-Toons—The birds and the worms contrive to make this average entertainment. Running time, six minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE CAPERS: Song and Comedy Hits—Very good singing reel. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

SORORITY BLUES: Song and Comedy Hits—Very interesting "girlie" subject. Maybe that's why we liked it. Anyway, it had youth and lots of pep and believe it thoroughly satisfied.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PIRATE PARTY ON CATALINA ISLE: Musical Revue—These are beautiful subjects and seeing a multitude of prominent stars might be a little help, but we cannot see where the big increase in price is justified. Running time, 20 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WATER SPORTS: MGM Sports Parade—Pretty good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

BILLBOARD FROLICS: Merrie Melodies—One of the better color cartoons. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BLACK NETWORK, THE: Nina Mae McKinney, Nicholas Bros.—Good. Has a finish that will get lots of laughs. Running time, 20 minutes.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

LITTLE JACK LITTLE AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Series—The best in the series. Running time, 10 minutes.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

MISS GLORY: Merrie Melodies—Not very good. Running time, seven minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

RAMON RAMOS AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Series—Poor. Worst one of the Melody Masters Series. Running time, 10 minutes.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

RED NICHOLS AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Series—Good. Moves right along and that's what you need in a band reel. They can leave out the dragging singing for me. Running time, 10 minutes.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

RHYTHMITIS: Hal LeRoy, Toby Wing—Just fair. Running time, 20 minutes.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

STARS CAN'T BE WRONG: Carolyn Marsh, Harris Twins—Just fair. Running time, 20 minutes.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

WILD WINGS: Pepper Pot Series—This one-reel study of wild birds might have been good if we could have understood what the narrator was saying. Running time, one reel.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Paramount

LUCKY STARLETS: Headliner Series—Intimate shots of how the young stars of Hollywood live and learn along with their work are very interesting to the movie public.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR SERIES: Believe these subjects are as popular as any single reel we run, but cannot see where there is any added value in their drawing power. Never hear of anyone coming to see this subject in particular.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

FOOLISH HEARTS: Radio Musical Comedies—Poor. Nothing to this. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR PARADE, No. 3— About the last third of this is devoted to a minstrel show that is very, very good. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BIG TIME VAUDEVILLE SERIES: All good. Add spice to any program. We run them every Sunday we can get them. People ask for them. Running time, 10 minutes.—Wayne T. Jenkins, Peoples Theatre, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Small town patronage.

Joseph Mealey has been appointed branch manager of Atlantic Film Exchange at San Francisco.

Brazilian Develops Stereoscopic Device

Dr. Sebastiao Comparato of Sao Paulo, Brazil, has perfected equipment for stereoscopic projection of motion pictures, according to a report from United States Trade Commissioner J. Winsor Ives at Rio de Janeiro. The first public exhibition of the apparatus is scheduled for an early date in Rio de Janeiro.

The third dimension effect is said to be accomplished through use of a special screen built of copper sheeting mounted on a steel frame. The surface is first coated with a layer of gelatine, then a layer of absorbent fibrous material treated with silver salts is applied. Dr. Comparato explained that the variance in depth of absorption of light rays by the screen gives the effect of depth in the projected image. No modification is said to be required in either the film or the projector.

"World Standard" Picture Released In Australia

The first Australian-made motion picture which included an American star in the cast has been released in Sydney, according to a report to the United States Department of Commerce from its office in that city.

The production, entitled "Thoroughbred," was made by Cinesound Productions, Ltd., in its Sydney studio at a reported cost of $140,000. It is described by the producer as "Australia's first world standard production" and it is understood that efforts will be made to have it exhibited in the United States and throughout the United Kingdom.

Eastman Kodak Has Newspaper Projector

Eastman Kodak Company soon will begin delivery of a film projector claimed to be capable of converting libraries of newspaper files into film collections. The process provides for the photographing of each page of a daily paper on 35 millimeter film. It then can be projected on a small screen. The cans for storage measure 3¾ by 3¾ by 1½ inches. Each container will hold about 850 pages of newspapers on 100 feet of film. The film is of the safety type.

Leah Ray, featured singer with a dance orchestra, has been signed by Twentieth Century-Fox and will begin work at the studio next month.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

NO MORTGAGE NECESSARY

The Quigley Awards have no home.

The Silver and Bronze plaques, the First and Honorable Mentions have been voted to entrants in big city and small town, to theatremen in first- and last-run situations, to de luxe managers and those in modest neighborhood houses. They have gone to those who shoot the advertising bankroll to put over a date and to those who have no other publicity weapons than two-bits in cash and a flock of fingernails.

In the eyes of the judges, all entries start from scratch, and the winners are selected because their campaigns display a superior degree of showmanship, an ingenuity, a forcefulness, a taking advantage of every possible opportunity to bring attention to their attractions, over and above those things done by their fellow-entrants.

In the past months, winners have been listed from cities as large as Toronto, Canada (pop. 631,207), from Memphis, Tenn. (pop. 253,143), from spots as small as Ellsworth, Me. (pop., 3,557), from Clovis, N. Mex. (pop., 8,027). And entries voted top honors have come also from houses of limited capacities.

All of which is set forth in answer to a query from a Canadian theatreman, operating in a small community and playing three changes a week, who requests a Junior Quigley Contest for managers in similar situations to give them "a chance of winning a trophy in keeping with their pocketbooks". Sez he:

"We have often wondered if it could not be worked to an advantage to have a Junior Quigley Contest, giving us small town exhibitors, who have three changes of pictures per week, a chance at winning a trophy in keeping with our pocketbooks. Although we realize that many small town exhibitors are not as aggressive as they might be helpful, there is only a limited field for the amount of business that can be procured in theatre situations. It is possible to do a lot with a small town situation and to put through houses on a profitable basis, as it has been shown repeatedly by new blood that has moved into the theatrical field. We have promoted and realized a good business by co-operative advertising, style-show, theatre parties, merchants' night and street ballyhoos. We would have to put a mortgage on our theatre, to begin to enter the field for the Quigley Award, competing with houses in towns and cities of large populations and greater seating capacities . . . "

No ambitious theatreman need mortgage his theatre nor the smallest part of it to fashion a campaign to earn the votes of the Judging Committees. He may be competing, yes, with houses in cities of large population and greater seating capacities, but not to his disadvantage providing he has the savvy, that certain something that is the talented showman's heritage whether he runs the village "movie" or the world's grandest motion picture de luxe "temple".

From what our correspondent writes, he is not unfamiliar with the profitable usages of cooperative advertising, style shows, street ballyhoos and other exploitation devices upon which he reports fine business forthcoming. There should therefore be no hesitancy on his part to enter the lists against others even from larger spots who are no better equipped mentally to create worthwhile Quigley Award entries.

Showmanship is where you find it.

The sock of the smart campaign is heard as loudly upon the sparsely populated plain as it is in the congested city.

THE LACK OF COLOR

Receipt of tearsheets from Boston on director Frank Lloyd's recent visit in the interests of his new picture, "Maid of Salem," discloses as fancy a job of coverage as these aged orbs have gazed upon in a month of Sundays. Under the guiding hand of Tod Browning, M & P Theatres' publicity head, Mr. Lloyd, was photoed and interviewed in a manner that nostalgically recalls the handling of such visitors in the not too distant past.

The lack of color, general excitement and all-round zowie that was so much a part of theatre publicity is revealed emphatically when one compares the usual newspaper drive of today with such campaigns as the above.

Color in motion pictures should not be confined exclusively to the screen.

Juveniles, if not managers, in the Empire State now have cause for rejoicing in the recent passage in Albany of the Joseph Bill. This "open sesame" allows minors in New York the privilege until now withheld of attending motion picture theatres unaccompanied by adults provided special sections are set aside for the juvenile patrons.

Well and good, but more interesting to harassed managers putting on those Saturday morning kid shows would be another law that would fasten the youngsters to the seats already provided for them.

Limerick's Gag Campaign Sells "Sons O' Guns"

Opening morning of his "Sons o' Guns" date at the Yale Theatre in Cleburne, Texas, George Limerick staged a Joe E. Brown yelling contest, winners rewarded with passes. Another contest was planted in window containing baseballs with ducats to those guessing correct number.

For street gag small envelopes were distributed containing two peanuts, copy reading, "Have a pair of nuts with the compliments of the nuttiest team of all—Joe Brown and Joan Blondell," etc., etc. Another window gag was boy pedaling bike, card announced that he was on his way to see, etc., etc. Two boys, dressed as doctors worked streets carrying stretcher on which dummy was stretched out, banner read "Not dead, just unconscious from laughing." Stunt created plenty of comment.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

COOL SIGN. Each letter measuring four feet in height and studded with green six watt lamps was the way Gil C. Brown, city manager, Irvin Theatre, Bloomington, Ill., sold his cooling plant.

Giant Cigar Sells "Billies" for Cushing

For his "Silly Billies" date at the Dunkin Theatre, Cushing, Okla., C. F. Motley made up a giant cigar (six feet long) and suspended it under the marquee. Cigar was painted and looked like the McCoy, with band and everything. Caricatures of Wheeler and Woolsey hung from each end and copy attached read: "They're at it again, Wheeler and Woolsey, best yet, in Silly Billies—they're wrapped in cellophane." Motley reports the stunt created a lot of comment.

Music Week Celebrated By Dougherty at Tower

To commemorate recently celebrated Music Week, Joe Dougherty, Tower Theatre, Philadelphia, put on a varied musical program at his house under the supervision of Esther Short, director of the school of music bearing her name. Papers ran stories and City Manager Monty Salmon reports the stunt went over very well.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Special Preview Held For Legion Veterans

Manager Harold Kaplan, and Advertising Manager Ev Siebel, Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn., advertised in the paper for French Foreign Legion veterans to witness a special preview of "Under Two Flags." Three vets responded and the Star ran a story of the search and comments of the men on their past experiences and the picture.

First Babies Guests At 'First Baby' Show

It so happened that there was a baby show put on in cooperation with a local Pure Food exhibit in De Soto, Mo., and it also happened that Manager L. V. Collins, of the New De Soto Theatre, in that spot, had "The First Baby" booked in to start the day after the infant contest. To tie in with all the publicity on the food exhibition Collins invited all local mothers with their first babies, two years old or less, to see the show on the house at the matinee. He also offered four one-month passes to the mothers of the winning boy and girl in each of the two classes at the baby show, these prizes given to them from the stage of the theatre.

As a result, much unlooked for publicity was forthcoming. The food show sponsors announced the offer over the p.a. system at the local auditorium and the papers fell in line with a number of stories, page one and otherwise, to build up more interest.

All eligible mothers in De Soto took advantage of the offer, says Collins, and forwards photo, reproduced below, of some of the guests lined up in front of the house. The stunt was further reported to have gathered sufficient word-of-mouth to help the box office the day of the party and during the rest of the engagement.

13 Exploitation Pages In "Pastures" Pressbook

Effective pressbook job on Warner Bros. "Green Pastures" has been turned out by Charley Einfeld's department, with the size of the book larger than the usual and laid out for quick and easy reading. Exploitation is well covered from various angles with 13 pages given over to all manner of ideas and presentations. Among these are sections devoted to the buildup of opening, a score of ballyhood stunts, direct selling ideas, church contact groups, club and civic talks to civic organizations, to schools, etc.

Contests, animated displays, spot radio announcements, half-hour radio show, test ad campaigns and mail sales campaign are also detailed. Newspaper ads run up to full-page streamers, stagger ads and other sizes and publicity includes full-page Sunday feature story.

Little seems to have been left undone to make available sufficient material for most any sized situation and for the most ambitious theatreman.

Fox Midwesterners Raise Funds for Ice

A piece of extra-curricular promotion which won the participants a hand from the public was the children's show conducted in the Fox Midwest theatres in Kansas City, Mo. Held in the morning, with admission a dime, proceeds of the show went to the Salvation Army's "penny ice fund." With this fund, which is backed every summer by the Kansas City Star, the Army sends its truck with ice around the poorer and hotter sections of the city. Children and adults buy the ice for a penny. For most of them, it is the only ice they have from one year's end to the other, and with temperatures daily soaring above 100 in the hot tenement districts the appearance of the Penny Ice truck is little short of a miracle.

Martin Finkelstein, city manager for Fox Midwest, worked the idea out with the Star, and Paramount, M-G-R, Warner Brothers, Universal,, RKO, Fox and Midwest Republic, contributed film for the shows, which were selected for a young audience. Paper cooperated with news items and a large art layout of scenes from the pictures the day the show was held.

Electric Company Aids Nutter on "Times"

For "Modern Times" at the Opera House in Millinocket, Maine, Al Nutter tied up the local electric company which netted him a window display with large card, copy reading "In modern times, smart people cook with electricity."

Another window display planted by Al was use of an oversized pair of shoes with copy on picture and profuse use of stills and playdates.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Hewitt's Teaser Stickers

Joe Hewitt, Lincoln Theatre, Robinson, Ill., used a little paster teaser for "Dracula's Daughter," upper part reading "She's meaner than her old man" was pasted on windows about town week ahead. Later the bottom part was added with copy carrying picture title and playdates. Joe reports these were printed on the theatre's multigraph machine and proved a very inexpensive gag.

BROWN CUTOUTS. This attractive front was constructed by L. A. Chatham, Sooner Theatre, Norman, Okla., for "Sons-o-Guns". Brown cutouts were planted at either side of boxoffice.

PRIZE WINNER. One of the smashing fronts that counted strongly in winning for Manager Harry Fuchs, Capitol, Portchester, N. Y., first prize in the two-month service drive conducted by the Skouras Theatres. Entire summer display of shrubbery, shingles and trellis work from front to mezzanine was promoted with construction done by members of the theatre staff.

"Adopt A Child" Day Sponsored by Bowser

Held in conjunction with the County Children's home, the newspaper and the merchants in his town, Les Bowser, Harris-Warren Theatre, Warren, Ohio, recently held his second annual "Adopt a Child Day." Held last year for the first time, Les again promoted the merchants for ice cream, pop corn and gifts for the kiddies in exchange for credits.

Children were conveyed to the theatre in busses and cars donated for the occasion, and ladies were invited to adopt a child for the day, calling for it in the morning, taking it to lunch, then the theatre and returning at the end of a happy day. Les recommends the stunt as being one of the best good-will builders he has ever put over.

Publicist Albert T. Johnson aided on the campaign.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Choral Groups Contacted For "Green Pastures" Date

An effective campaign was put on by Paul Short and Fred McFayden, Majestic Theatre, Dallas, for "Green Pastures" with two special screenings held for ministers and comment cards distributed; clergy recommending the film to their congregations. Choral clubs and music groups were contacted and told about the work of the Hall Johnson Choir in the picture and book stores devoted window displays to the novel and plugged the film.

Busses making tours of the centennial exposition carried standard size car cards and bumper strips, sound truck playing records of negro spirituals toured city and preview was held for exposition officials.

Personality Contest Staged For "San Francisco" Date

District manager H. E. Jameyson and city manager Ed Haas conducted a personality contest through the Wichita Eagle for the "San Francisco" date at the Miller Theatre in Wichita, Kansas, the winner to be given a screen test by MGM studios. Through arrangements made by Jameyson and the coast, the winner was sent to the studios with all expenses paid. The finals were selected on the stage opening day.

Radio station came through with spot announcements, main entrance of theatre carried a large illuminated shadowbox with pictures of Gable and MacDonald and outer lobby was devoted to two five-foot heads of the stars mounted on each side with large photos of balance of cast, etc.

Laugh Show Tops Paris Campaign On Marx Picture

Introducing "A Night at the Opera" and the Marx Brothers to Paris at the Olympia Theatre, E. Lapinere, publicist, put together a number of clever gags in his campaign that was voted the Quigley June Silver Plaque.

Two weeks ahead, a private screening was arranged for the most popular French comedians of stage and screen, the guests requested for their opinions with the puffs used for newspaper and lobby advertising. This was followed ahead and during the run by the creation of a lobby "Laugh Gallery" decorated in the burlesque character of the picture with distorting mirrors humorous photo-montage of the Brothers in various poses as illustrated in accompanying photo.

Other laugh exhibits included "Beauty Through the Ages" (see photo) showing reproductions of works of art representing classical beauty such as Venus de Milo, Mona Lisa, Mme. Recamier plus a colored enlargement of the Brothers. Also good for giggles was another exhibit called "Famous Historical Trophies" showing humorous takeoffs of articles legendary in history, such as a trumpet of Jericho, King Henry's pink feather, the Groucho's cigar, etc.

Invisible fish-bowl, laughing gramaphone records and other accessories helped roll up the laughs not the least of which was a quintet of dolls in the carriage under a sign reading "Alone at Last—Nurse Is Inside." Everyone was invited into the lobby to see the show free of charge and large crowds were as a result on hand at all times with a goodly percentage proceeding inside the theatre to see the picture.

Night Clubs Cooperated

Important tieups were made with seven of the leading Paris night clubs whereby from the opening day, between midnight and 1 A. M., all the club bands played only hit tunes from the picture. To build this up, Lapinere sent around a trio of eccentric musicians wearing special papier mache Marx caricature masks and also arranged to have free champagne served with these appearances. Cards on all tables at the clubs announced the pictures.

Top street stunt was a three-seat bicycle with riders in Marx costumes and masks and carrying back banners. Newspaper campaign was very big with the dailies going strong for the Laugh Gallery. Advertising and posting were also in keeping to complete a drive that brought in excellent grosses.

Baker Donates Cake For "Follow the Fleet"

Eddie Selette, Albany Theatre, Albany, N. Y., for "Follow the Fleet" tied up local baker who made up cookies in the shape of lifesavers which went on sale two days ahead of opening. In addition, baker made up cake which was decorated with flags and ships and was given to person writing the best letter on why they would like the cake. Stunt was plugged by store and theatre.

Padgett's "Show Boat" Street Gangplank

Padgett's Bathing Beach Bally

Many Water Gags Used by Padgett For "Show Boat"

Located right on the Gulf of Mexico, Manager Del Padgett sure went for water and marine tieups on his Quigley June Bronze plaque "Show Boat" entry from the Capitol Theatre, in Clearwater, Florida (pop. 7607), starting well ahead with a large docking post in the lobby to which was attached a sign reading, "Show Boat Docks Here." House personnel wore sailor hats.

Interest was created by Padgett's street gangplank (see photo) run from the safety zone to sidewalk out front, with side banners carrying "All Aboard" copy. Fishing boats carried the same copy and on opening day bather in trunks made the beaches, his back lettered (see photo) with picture and theatre.

Marine angle was carried out in hardware store tieup plugging marine equipment sale with center of window given over to prize-winning ship model. Second store advertised small boat equipment likewise, as did paint store plugging marine paint. Then in front of prominently located newsstand was displayed large ship's compass reading "Steer straight for Show Boat."

Organizations Raffle Tickets

Newsboys were given lettered sailor hats and a signature idea used whereby magazine juvenile house-to-house magazine vendors were given autograph pads carrying theatre copy. To each boy obtaining 100 signatures, two tickets were given free. Another slant that covered a lot of territory was a bannered sound truck that was used to furnish free amplification at ball games and also at countrywide political rally. Truck made all the surrounding territory playing hit tunes from the picture.

Free tickets were given to the Elks, Lions and K of P organizations, the ducats raffled at regular meetings for the benefit of charity funds.

And Padgett availed himself of another good slant by calling the entry from the theatre in the annual high school beauty contest, "Miss Showboat." Contest was staged two days ahead to capacity at the civic auditorium with much publicity obtaining for the theatre.

Classified page tiein featured Padgett's newspaper campaign which covered all towns in the drawing area. Special permission allowed placing cards in all school classrooms and outside billing was more extensive than usual. Window displays were topped with model in costume of the picture's period as compared with current styles and theatre front and lobby were in keeping with the rest of this well-executed campaign.

Stein's Flower Show

Plenty of publicity was garnered by Louie Stein, Stanley Theatre, Newark, for his recently staged flower show at the theatre with cooperating nurseries offering cash prizes to those submitting best samples of home varieties. Merchants in town also came through with donated prizes of merchandise, each store plugging the contest.

Omaha Suburban Managers Hold Monthly Meetings

Co-operative Car Giveaways Arranged and Theatre Problems Discussed in Harmony

by MARTIN J. CHICOINE from Omaha

The chamber of commerce, in collaboration with the two daily newspapers, the three leading radio stations and an outdoor advertising firm, distributed a new ballyhoo bulletin recently for what they termed "Nebriowa." Omaha was cited as the capital of this new "state."

Nebriowa is the junction of western Iowa and eastern Nebraska and it is from this combined territory that Omaha does all of its major business. Living within a one-hour automobile ride of Omaha are 469,525 Nebriowans. Those citizens have between them 118,286 automobiles.

And when they get to Omaha, they have the somewhat meager choice of three first-run theatres in which to obtain their entertainment. The three houses, two owned by the A. H. Blank circuit, and the third by the Mort H. Singer group, have been grinding out double features year in and year out, since the idea first bloomed in fact.

With competition reduced to its lowest possible minimum, the three houses can point to almost consistent records of box-office statements written in black ink. When a house slips near the red ink line, it's news.

The combined seating capacity of the first runs touches 6,300. In Omaha alone there is an estimated population of 225,000; in its smaller twin city across the river in Iowa, Council Bluffs, are 45,000 more persons. The same tram system connects the two cities.

That leaves 6,300 seats to be divided weekly between 270,000 city dwellers alone, leaving 200,000 more in small towns and in rural areas who are only an hour away by auto.

Omaha Is Accessible City

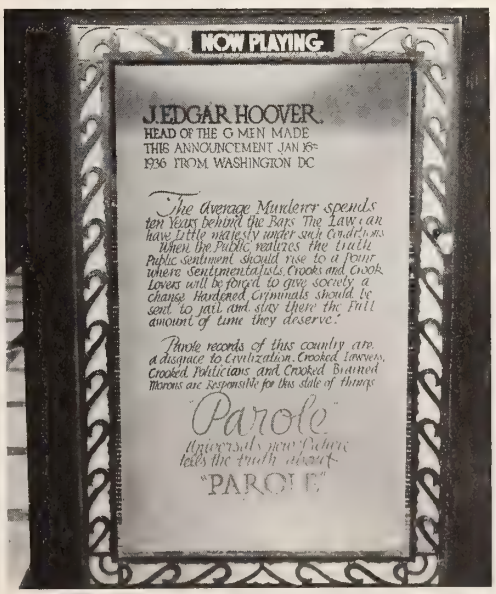
Because of the consistent double feature policy, short subjects, outside of cartoons and color reels, are practically unheard of in this town. A generation is growing up not knowing that hundreds of short subjects are manufactured annually in Hollywood and New York and quite generally shown on the screens of neighboring cities.

Independent product is also neglected, with only a rare few features seeing the light of local screens.

As a city, Omaha is noted for its stockyards; for its railroads, it being fourth in the nation with 10 trunk lines feeding it. However, its real business strength is derived from agriculture, though the chamber of commerce and other advertising channels are drumming up figures to show Nebriowa is strong as a manufacturing center. Owing to outlandish freight rate schedules factories have been uprooting and moving on to other cities where they may obtain the benefit of river-barge rates in competition with rail rates.

If for no other reason, Omaha stands unique as one of the few spots in this country where opposition theatremen get together regularly to "sweep out and keep their houses in order." That theatre business is generally good in the Nebraska metropolis is no doubt sufficient cause for a desire to keep it so by these monthly convenings—all of which is gone into in this stop in the Showman's Travelogue series of your Round Table.
A-MIKE VOGEL

Omaha is the originating point for the great Union Pacific system and its numerous subsidiaries, and has the western division offices of the Burlington and Northwestern lines. Likewise, the only coast-to-coast hard-surfaced highway passes through Omaha. Found here, also, is the home office of the Interstate Transit Lines, the largest single motor bus system in the world. And work is progressing on the Missouri river, thus soon to give Omaha a waterways outlet to the Gulf of Mexico as well as to Chicago and the Great Lakes.



In other words, Omaha is one of the most accessible cities in the United States. It is a fairly wealthy town, ranking 17th in bank clearings, even though the city ranks 31st in population. Interesting about its population is the fact it is a home-owning populace, nearly 60 per cent of the houses being owned by the dwellers.

Taxes are fairly reasonable despite a bungling and stupid county governmental system; state taxes are sane and the state government is in the finest financial shape of any commonwealth in North America, bar none. Nebraska is not only debt-free, but has millions stowed away in the bank and in sound government bonds.

Omaha, being the only metropolitan city in Nebraska, has the largest percentage of population of foreign extraction and Negro blood of any city in the state. Nearly one-fifth, or 38,788 persons, are foreign born or of foreign extraction, and there are 11,123 Negroes here. In the remainder of the state there are scarcely more than 3,000 Negroes.

Of the 93,308 gainfully employed persons according to U. S. figures in 1930, about 27,000 were engaged in manufacturing and mechanical industries; 14,000 in transportation; 24,000 in trade, banking and insurance; 8,000 in professional service, and the remainder scattered through steel and iron, printing, auto factories and repair shops, building industries, domestic and personal service, and agriculture.

HOOVER SAYS. Featured in the Lloyd Dearth-Jack Gross campaign on "Parole" at the Pantages-Hollywood and Los Angeles-Hillstreet was poster with statement on parole conditions by J. Edgar Hoover.

Theatre Situation Harmonious

The house managers attend to such exploitation angles as lobby displays, local window displays and each have small budgets to augment the advertising service as given by Schlaifer's office. The system is rather effective in that few angles are missed.

The Singer theatre, the Brandeis, is given considerable leeway in its operation since Will Singer, local manager, is a brother of Mort H. Singer, head of the circuit.

With a Hearst newspaper on the scene, both circuits vie in accumulating generous space in the Bee-News. The more dignified World-Herald holds down film space to a degree, but can be induced to join in co-operative pages and in mutual promotions. The Bee-News is a favorite with both circuits when it comes to staging contests which have become a heavily worked but effective means of attracting attention.

It is estimated A. H. Blank spends beyond $75,000 annually advertising in the "World-Herald" alone, and probably the same in the "Bee-News," though some skeptics regard the figures as high.

As it was stated before, the theatre situation, as far as exhibitor fraternizing is concerned, is probably one of the most pleasant and unique in the country. All of the suburban managers meet monthly on the mezzanine in the Omaha (A. H. Blank) and arrange a co-operative car give-away and generally take the occasion to discuss their problems in harmonious fashion. The co-operative auto give-away was adopted right after the demise of the NRA in order to forestall two-for-ones, china nights and other artificial b. o. stimulants. Not a single serious overt act or ungentlemanly deed has been recorded against a single exhibitor since Jiniral Johnson's blue eagle bit the dust.

As for the theatres, probably no town of comparable size could boast of a more peaceful and easy-going atmosphere than is found in Omaha. Admission prices have hardly varied a nickel's worth in five years, save for occasional stage shows when the ante is hiked. First run matinees have been 25 cents weekdays since the talkies began talking; 35 cents on Sundays; while night shows get 40 cents. The so-called deluxe neighborhood houses get 20 cents; the next group 15 cents, and there is one circuit of three houses charging a dime.

Omaha is the district office for Nebraska and western Iowa for the A. H. Blank circuit. District manager is E. R. Cummings, who oversees five towns with two houses in each.

The circuit operates its own advertising office here with Charles Schlaifer as manager. The latter takes the entire burden of advertising, exploitation, co-op ads, etc., for both Omaha Blank houses, and also for the Paramount, 2,900-seat deluxer, when open, which is kept dark in order that business can be kept concentrated in the two downtown houses.

There are only three or four suburban houses that rate a "deluxe" classification, with only two or three being even new buildings. To the credit of the second and subsequent run houses, it should be pointed out they have been operating consistently with hardly any turnover in management or ownership for a long period of years, thus showing them to be stable and fair money-makers. The division between suburban and downtown business has been at an even keel with little variation in favor of either. The suburbans live, and live well. The three downtown circuit houses are nearly always in the profit column.

The theatres, both downtown and in the suburbs, suffer keenest from competition from outside sources in the late spring and summer. The biggest drain on amusement money comes from the local Ak-Sar-Ben race track which operates from May 31 to July 4. Immediately after that is over, all the local bookies and gambling houses reopen (illegally), having shut down because of a gentlemen's agreement not to compete with a home industry during its short season of operation. Bookies operating the other 10 and a half months do an enormous gambling business.

MORE PHOTOMONTAGE. Another of the unique photomontage enlargements used by publicist Lapinere for the date on M-G-M's "Night at the Opera" at the Paris Olympia Theatre.

Night Clubs Called Competitive

Other big summertime outlets for amusement money are the numerous outdoor nightclubs which operate all around the city's borders. Some of the clubs are cheap and prices are low enough to permit an employe in the lowest salary brackets to pass up a 15-cent neighborhood show and go to a "night club" and spend 60 cents on six large beers with dancing free for himself and his gal.

Showmen have come to know the night clubs as painful competitors, but there's nothing they can do about it. They just happen to head a list of the other summertime diversions, such as pools, parks, joyriding, golf, tennis, etc.

Somehow, the downtown first run houses feel the pinch less than the suburbans, possibly because they are equipped with superior cooling plants.

Omaha's parking situation, like most cities, is in something of a mess, year in and year out. To begin with, some of the downtown streets could be wider. Parking lots are not handily located and garages downtown have a tendency to soak night theatre patrons.

Transportation Facilities Criticized

As for transportation facilities, before last year's disastrous and bloody street car strike, the local system of trams was one of the best in the country. The city is covered adequately with trolleys and busses and the service was fine until the late trouble with the union and company staging the fireworks. The tram company has never resumed its former fine service, though it is adequate enough even now.

Culturally, Omaha rates as a rather weak show town. Some go so far as to allege the town's taste is generally below par; that it is still frontier in its attitude. It once supported a fine symphony, but gave it up after a number of years. Finer photoplays are quite consistently neglected and starved out. Omaha is one of the few, if any key cities, that saw fit not to give "The Informer" a second run following its being given the Academy award. Elizabeth Bergner's "Escape Me Never" set a new low at the Orpheum, a glance at the MOTION PICTURE HERALD theatre receipts section will show.

Whether the show-going public reads the reviews or not can't be ascertained, but it is a known fact a panning has never been known to affect grosses. A race review is helpful, but never a dominant factor. Handling picture reviews is Keith Wilson for the World-Herald, and Jake (Jack Reel) Rachman for the Bee-News. Wilson, a year out of college, stepped into the critical shoes of the well-known Keene Abgott, who retired last June after 32 years of reviewing shows of every kind. Wilson surprised everyone with his capability and sound judgment. For a youth he keeps his critical blasts temperate. Jake Rachman is naturally governed by the well-known Hearst policy regarding motion pictures. Rachman, despite his imposed handicaps, has a definite reading public. He conducts a column of breezy show chatter called "Aisle Say," which is 90 per cent film stuff. Likewise he edits another column called "Round the Town" in which considerable theatre news is injected.

ATMOSPHERIC FRONT. Ken King, Melba Theatre, Batesville, Ark., covered his entire front with compo board on which pine trees were painted on "Lonesome Pine." Note display of scene stills.

Brown Stencils Streets For "Mr. Deeds" Date

Gil Brown, city manager, Irvin Theatre, Bloomington, Ill., on "Mr. Deeds" put his artist to work making a two-foot stencil of a pair of feet and stencil same on streets leading away from the theatre, copy on sole reading "Mr. Deeds is going to town, but he will be back on Sunday." Stunt was pulled week ahead of opening.

Radio station cooperated on a pixilation contest and station's street inquiring reporter approached theatre's perambulating stooge who would talk into mike, say he was Longfellow Deeds and that he had just come to town, etc. Same stooge seated in cooperating auto dealer's car was driven through town with motorcycle escort. Entire staff wore pixilated chest bands, taxi tire covers were imprinted and Western Union came through with neat display with stills and copy reading "When Mr. Deeds wires, he insists on" etc., etc.

Corkery Made Member Of Park Commission Board

Maurice Corkery, Central Square Theatre, Cambridge, Mass., recently came in for some swell publicity for himself and the theatre when Mayor John D. Lynch appointed him as a member of the Board of Park Commissioners, the only theatre man to be so honored.

Recently, working in conjunction with the Cambridge edition of the Boston Evening American, Maurice tied in the theatre to the X-9 Club. During regular Saturday matinee performance, Chief of Police, Timothy Leahy spoke to the boys and presented them with their membership cards and badges. The subject of his talk dealt with crime prevention.

Airplane Tieups Highlight Rotsky's "Things" Engagement

The Montreal Light Aeroplane Club was lined up by George Rotsky, Palace Theatre, Montreal, Canada, on "Things to Come," stunt was tied up with a contest which was featured in the various newspapers. Plane flew over city at a certain height and those guessing height received half-hour flight over city together with tickets to see picture. Stunt was pulled opening day.

Another air tieup was arranged with Canadian Colonial Airways on a contest with patrons viewing picture at theatre and writing reviews, prize was a free return trip on one of their planes to New York. Accompanying photo shows window display in leading department store.

On "Under Two Flags" chain store featured a blouse worn by Claudette Colbert using prominent window displays, each saleswoman featuring the blouse.

By special arrangement with the Valiquette people who bought the rights to a foreign legion radio serial which is broadcast twice weekly, mention was made immediately after broadcast to see another foreign legion playing at the Palace.

"Fighting Marine" Club Sells Date for Charninsky

To usher in his "Fighting Marines" date at the Capitol in Dallas, Texas, Louie Charninsky one week ahead ran special plugs in his ads inviting kids to join the new "Fighting Marines" Club. Special stories were run in all papers telling the youngsters how to join up. Club was played up in trailer two weeks before advising that membership cards were available at cooperating candy store.

For his lobby display, Louie, promoted machine guns, steel helmets and other army equipment. Schools were covered with heralds, daily announcements were made over radio and ice cream, cookies or some promoted novelty was given to each child attending the early showings.

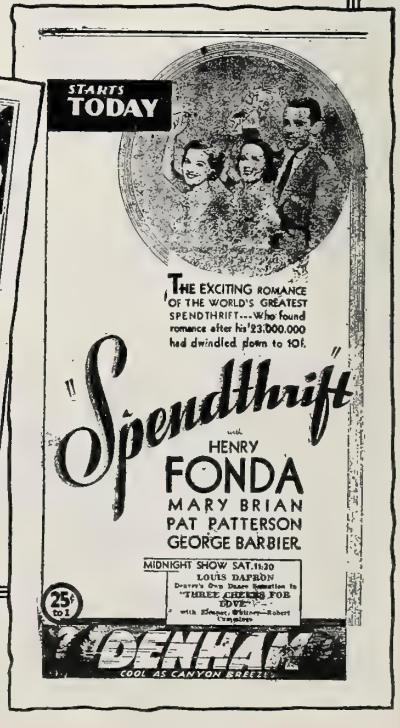
Baker Aids Spencer On "Country Doctor"

Through cooperation of leading baker, Art Spencer, Lonsdale Theatre, North Vancouver, B. C., promoted a birthday cake for "Country Doctor," cake was baked in five sections, each bearing one of the Quins' names. Accompanying photo shows the sweetmeat display in lobby, topped by photo of the babes. Every patron attending opening night received a slice, as did the kiddies on Saturday matinee. Florist donated display and stunt was advertised on programs and blotters which were distributed.

Doctors and nurses were circularized, bookmarks placed in all lending libraries, cutouts of the babes were planted about lobby and alcoves in theatre and various merchants came through with attractive window displays.

REPRESENTATIVE NEWSPAPER ADS



YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

ALBERT T. JOHNSON

is the advertising and publicity assistant at the Harris-Warren in Warren, Ohio, and says he started in showbusiness at the tender age of ten when he had a kiddie tent show. During the summer vacations Al worked for the Opera House, now the Harris-Warren, as a bill poster. After two years he joined the Robins Theatre of Warren as projectionist, also worked as advertiser for the County Fair, posting all paper. For a short time he left the theatre, working as press agent for a touring show and in 1933 assumed his present job.

manages the Melba Theatre in Batesville, Ark., and says since childhood he's always wanted to be in showbusiness, and he's one member that signs up the way we like 'em to. Ken sent along his first contribution with his application for membership and we've heard from him since, so this is just a formal welcome to our midst.

is the assistant manager of the Liberty Theatre in Horton, Kansas, and when he joined he wrote in and said we would hear from him from time to time and we're still waiting. We only have a few members from your fair city, Walter, so it's up to you to keep us posted on what you're doing.

is the assistant manager of the Apollo in Peoria, Ill., having started as usher at the Madison on day of graduation from grade school. From usher to balcony director, and then transferred as assistant to the Apollo. Jim started as a singing usher with the organist at the Madison and won a radio impersonation contest conducted over the entire Great States Theatre circuit.

is down in New Orleans, La., at the Poplar Theatre in the capacity of assistant and you know, Nolan, your obligation didn't cease with having joined the Club, we shall expect that contributions on your activities shall be forthcoming for use in our pages. How about it?

assistant manager of the Colney Theatre in Philadelphia, Pa., certainly ought to know what his obligations to us are. We have plenty of Round Tablers in Philly who are mighty active members and we'd like to swell the ranks with another by having your reports from time to time.

is the assistant manager of the Culver Theatre in Brooklyn, and is a brother of our good friend Joe at the Biltmore. Harry started as usher at the Commodore, Brooklyn, and then as display artist, chief of staff and was then transferred to the Alba and later promoted to his present assignment.

Above poster was created by Louis Chiaramonte, artist, Loew's State, Boston. Display was air brush in natural colors showing application of cutout.

manages the Royal Theatre in St. Paul, Kansas, and since he is the first member to join the club from there, it shall evolve upon him to keep us posted on how shows are put over in his fair city.

EUGENE RUSSELL HARDWICK

is certainly well known to all, having won a plaque recently for his outstanding campaign on "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." For the records, Russ is at the Lyceum Theatre in Clovis, New Mexico, and as he traces his career, it has been mighty interesting. Russ says in 1910 he was janitor, operator, stage hand and sometimes stooge of the Majestic Theatre in Roswell, New Mexico. In 1912 we find him managing and operator of the Majestic in Artesia, N. M., thence around with Independent or Right's Film Exchange as bookkeeper, office boy, stenog, shipping clerk, general flunkie, etc. In 1913 Hardwick became manager of the Grand Opera House in Amarillo, Tex., and in 1933 became manager of the Lyceum and Mesa Theatres, where he is now.

is in Wapata, Wash., managing the Liberty Theatre and started as projectionist in 1920, later left to enter hotel business and then taught school as industrial arts instructor which stood him in good stead when he completely remodeled his theatre. Paul says he is now building a balcony, erecting a new marquee and generally fixing up the whole building, and promises as soon as all this is completed to contribute to our pages.

manager of the Park Theatre, Roselle Park, N. J., needs no introduction to our pages having recently won a Mention on his very good campaign submitted for Award consideration. John started as an usher at the Strand Theatre in Birmingham, Ala., later chief and then treasurer of the Metropolitan in Houston, Tex., assistant at the same theatre and was transferred to M. J. as manager of the Crescent Theatre in Perth Amboy. From there we find that Tucker was made manager of Ed Hart's present hangout, the Oxford in Plainfield, thence to Long Island and Brooklyn until he landed back in New Jersey, from where we hope he'll keep in touch.

is in Alton, Iowa, managing the Palace Theatre there. Happy who has contributed to our pages has gone through the regular routine, doorman, assistant, etc., and has served his apprenticeship at the Fox State and Fox Palace Theatres in Corning, New York. Well, Happy, you say you'll keep your activities coming, we're waiting for more.

is certainly one of the boys that doesn't need an introduction, but we'll tell a little about his background. Ed, now managing the Palace in Peoria, Ill., worked as usher in Decatur houses, advanced to assistant, then to Danville as assistant and later transferred to La Salle as manager. From there Ed went to the Publix Home Office as front house representative covering states of Iowa and Nebraska, returned to Danville as secretary to Thomas P. Ronan, district manager.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Fargo, North Dakota

Dear Herald:

You no doubt have heard preachers and other people talk about hell. Well, this place isn't hell, but it is a suburb of it. We drove in here today in a blistering south wind that felt like it came out of a red hot oven and the government thermometer registered 114 in the shade, but if they have any shade around here we have failed to find it.

Our hotel room is as hot as a bake oven and we'll betcha that if it doesn't cool off before morning we will look like a fried catfish. We have about worn out the bellboy bringing us icewater. When we got in here today we were as limp as a dishrag and the only dry stitch on us was—well, there wasn't any.

We heard a fellow telling about North Dakota. He said up here they had an early fall, a long winter, a late spring and a dry summer, and we said to him, "Well, brother, outside of that the state is all right, isn't it?" and he replid, "Yes, it is, if you don't count the grasshoppers."

We had intended to go on into the state but have been advised not to go any farther because they told us that the farther we went the worse we would find conditions, and they are certainly bad enough around here. This town is located in the Red River Valley of the North, and the Red River Valley has been the backbone of the agricultural section of the state, but this year they won't raise enough to feed a grasshopper, unless he is on a diet like ourself, and who ever heard of a grasshopper being on a diet.

We called on J. W. McCarthy, who has 26 theatres in North Dakota, and J. W. says he has never known conditions as bad as they are this year, that many people are leaving the state and that the cattle are being moved to wherever they can find feed for them. Putting two and two together, we have concluded that North Dakota is in a bad way, from an agricultural standpoint, but outside of that we would say that she is all right, which, of course, includes Senator Lemke, who is going to run for president on some kind of a ticket, but we don't know what it will be yet. Our judgment is that a lot of the people out here are going to need some help from their Uncle Ezra or Uncle Sam or they will have a hard time getting through the winter, regardless of who is president.

When we came up from the south the other day we stopped at Wadena and called on J. C. Quincer, who operates the Wadena theatre, and right here we want to warn you boys to look out for anybody whose initials are "J. C." He may be all right, but as a rule he needs watching. This, of course, don't go for J. C. Quincer; he doesn't need any watching; he is 100 per cent, spring or fall, cold or hot, wet or dry. We had a nice visit with him, but it was a short one because he had company at his house and he couldn't fool away any time with a Vagabond Colyumnist. We couldn't blame him, but he said he didn't want us to let his subscription expire to the HERALD. That's just the way it is with these theatre boys: they all realize they need the HERALD, and why shouldn't they, because it covers the field like an April shower.

Today we called on Andy and Herb Anderson at Detroit Lakes. They have built a beautiful new theatre that is no doubt the pride of Minnesota. They already had a good one, but that's just the way it is with these Anderson boys: they are always right out in the front rank doing things, and they realize that Detroit Lakes needed something besides her beautiful lakes to write to the old folks back home about, so they put up a swell theatre that is the talk of the town, and if Detroit Lakes ever needs a better theatre they will build it. We would have liked to have stayed and visited with them longer, but we are a working man, even if it is hotter than—— Oh, gosh, gee whiz, we will have to call the bellboy to bring us some more icewater.

Bemidji, Minnesota

This is where the Chippewa Indians used to hunt and fish and where Big Chief Bemidji and his squaw lived before the Waerhauser Lumber Company came in and took possession of the country and cut off the timber. The town is named after this chief and there is a statue of Bemidji erected in a park on the edge of Bemidji Lake and they have the old chief looking northeast, the first one we ever saw looking in that direction. The reader has our permission to pronounce the name of this town anything he likes, but he must take his own chances. If he gets the lockjaw that will be his fault. He can probably pronounce it better when he has the mumps and takes a bite of lemon. Bemidji has a population of something like 7,500, quite a bunch of whom come here to spend the summer. It is a pretty good town except when it is 45 below zero. Right now it is 100 above and has been around 105 all day, and as a result we are inclined to go down and jump into Bemidji Lake.

The managers of the two theatres here in Bemidji had gone away when we called. Both were out of town and we didn't see them.

There is no doggone sense in people leaving a town like this one with a fine fishing lake right at their back doors, but some people will do it. We had the pleasure, however, of meeting an old friend who used to play the violin in the orchestra in our theatre with the Clint and Bessie Robins company, and the Clint and Bessie Robins company will be pleased to know that we met Bill Bender and that Bill sends them his regards. Clint and Bess now operate the Pace theatre at Gordon, Neb., for the Black Hills Amusement Co.

Coming over here today from Fargo, N. D., we stopped at Ada., Minn., and called on Mr. J. Ulman of the Orpheum theatre and had a very delightful visit with him. J. says we were there and called on him once before, but we had forgotten it.

Miss G. E. Gannon is building a new theatre at McIntosh. She said she thought it would be ready to open about August 1st. She already had one but she says she will turn that one into something else. McIntosh doesn't impress us as large enough for two theatres and when Miss Gannon gets her new one open it will be all McIntosh will require. Our call on her was a very pleasant one.

Mr. Danielson of the Liberty at Fosston was out of town when we called and we failed to meet him. Too doggone bad for both of us.

E. R. Wright still operates the Family theatre at Bagley; not only that, but he operates a drugstore also, and this keeps him pretty busy and keeps him from doing anything he shouldn't do. Our visit with him was a very pleasant one. We remember calling on him last year when we were on our way to Winnipeg, Canada. Bagley is located right in the deer country and the people of Bagley don't have to go hungry for meat. At one time it was an important lumber point, but today they go to the theatre instead of the sawmill.

It's going to get hotter than—; well, it is going to get hot today, and so we are going to cut this off and get on the road while it is cool. Some sense in that, isn't there?

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 33.—(A) What is good maintenance practice with respect to stocking spare sound equipment parts? (B) Give us your views regarding lens ports. This is an important matter so do not be too sparing of words and ideas.

Answer to Question No. 28

Bluebook School Question No. 28 was: (A) How is amplification secured in a three-element tube? (B) Name the essential things served by projection room ventilation.

Section (A) is answered by B. L. Shaw as follows:

"What we call 'amplification' is not really that at all, but in reality the controlling of a strong current by a very much weaker one. The three-element tube has three electrically active elements, called respectively the 'plate,' 'grid' and 'filament,' all located in a vacuum established within a glass enclosure or 'tube.' The action is as follows:

"The filament is connected to two wholly different circuits, one of which supplies d. c. current for the purpose of raising its temperature to incandescence, in which condition it throws off or emits clouds of negatrons energized by each of the two before mentioned circuits. Those having their source in the heating current, which we will call current A, return to the filament, since electrical action is always within its own power source and the circuits connected therewith.

"A second circuit, which we will call B, has its negative side attached to the filament, its positive side being connected to the 'plate,' a sheet of thin metal, though for the purpose of greater coolness some manufacturers use a metal ring for a plate. In any case the plate must present considerable area to the negatron action I shall describe.

"Thus we have filament and plate terminals of a circuit separated by space in the vacuum tube. When in action the incandescent filament fills the vacuum with negatively charged particles of electricity called 'negatrons.' This is termed a 'space charge.' Disregarding the filament circuit heating current negatrons, those that have their power source in current B, being electrically charged, would of course be attracted to the plate and thus a current would be established in circuit B that would be of even voltage and strength and of power equal to the ability of its power course to overcome the resistance set up in the circuit, including the vacuum space itself.

"However, between the positively charged plate and the filament that is negatively charged in so far as has to do with circuit B is a 'grid' that is connected with the negative side of the very weak photo-electric cell, hence is negatively charged. Now, as we all know, positive attracts negative, whereas negative repels negative. Since to reach the plate the negatrons from current B, which form the B current through the vacuum space, must pass through the grid, it follows that more or less of them will get through against the grid negative repulsion force, according to the instant-to-instant power impressed upon the grid by the P. E. cell circuit. That action should be easily understood. When the negative repulsion power (grid voltage) is less, more negatrons get through to the plate; when it is greater, less negatrons can pass.

"Remembering that at each instant of time the P. C. cell voice current alters in exact proportion to the amount of light reaching its active element from the film sound track, it is evident that the B current will be modified by the condition described exactly in accordance with the voltage variations in the voice or P. E. cell current. In other words, the stronger B current voltage will be made into an exact duplicate of the weaker voice or P. E. cell current voltage."

[NOTE: I submitted the foregoing to two of our best sound engineers, who both agreed that while perhaps not exactly correct from the scientific viewpoint, it nevertheless contains nothing basically wrong. Personally I regard it as the most understandable explanation of amplification I have yet seen—understandable to the non-technical man, I mean.—F. H. R.]

J. R. Prater explains it this way:

"In a three-element vacuum tube, amplification is secured through its valve-like action that enables a weak current to control a much stronger one. The three essential elements of the tube are anode, cathode and grid. More complicated tubes have other elements added, but they merely serve to modify or assist the three essential ones.

"The positive wire from a high voltage (moderately high only.—F. R. H.) pure d. c. power source is connected to the anode (Plate.—F. H. R.) and the negative wire to the cathode (filament.—F. H. R.). This, together with its power source and wires, forms the plate circuit.

"When the cathode is heated (brought to incandescence.—F. H. R.), negatrons are emitted from it, a great number of which are attracted to the positively charged anode, or plate. This flow of negatrons forms the plate current (through the tube vacuum space.—F. H. R.) and under this condition the current flow would be steady, its strength depending upon the numbers of negatrons reaching the anode. This latter in turn depends upon the number of negatrons emitted by the cathode and the voltage supplying the anode with its positive charge.

"The grid, which is located between anode and cathode, is also connected to a pure d. c. power source, but with negative to grid and positive to cathode, thus supplying what is termed the grid or 'C' bias. Grid and cathode form a condenser through which the grid circuit is completed.

"Now when the negatrons seek to pass from cathode to anode they encounter the negatively charged grid and are repelled, some of them being forced back and prevented from passing. The stronger the grid charge, the greater the repulsion, which action, it is obvious, operates to change the plate current exactly in proportion as the grid charge is changed. Actually a very small change in grid charge controls a relatively large number of negatrons, and it is this valve-like action that gives the tube its amplifying power.

"By connecting a source of sound current in series with the grid circuit, the grid bias or charge is altered in response to the frequency and strength of the sound current, which fluctuation causes a corresponding change in the much stronger plate current, thus superimposing on the steady plate current an a. c. component which is a powerful duplicate of the weaker original sound current supplied to the grid."

A. L. Cooper says:

"The three-element amplifying tube consists of a cathode and an anode placed in a vacuum tube, and a control grid so located between them that negatrons emitted by the cathode must pass through it to reach the anode. One wire (the positive) of the plate circuit is connected to the anode; the other to the anode.

"The grid circuit has two wires, one of which (the negative) connects to the grid, the other to the cathode, so that the grid and anode form, in effect, a small condenser. The grid is always kept negative with respect to the cathode, so that negatrons cannot contact the grid and short circuit the grid-cathode capitance. The two sources of power in the grid circuit are connected in series. One is the sound current to be 'amplified,' which may be from the secondary of a transformer. The other is plain d. c., with negative connected to grid and positive, as aforesaid, to cathode. This is called the grid or 'C' bias. It keeps the condenser always charged with cathode positive and grid negative, while the sound source in series varies the strength of the charge as its own frequency and strength to the cathode. Each fluctuation, no matter how slight, in the grid charge is instantly duplicated by a corresponding change in the much stronger plate current, making an a. c. ripple that exactly matches every fluctuation in the grid voltage that created it. The plate current ripple thus produced is therefore an amplified duplicate of the grid ripple."

There, gentlemen. You wanted the chance to know how different ones understood things, and here you have an example.

(B) W. C. Brown says:

"Projection room ventilation serves mainly to provide conditions wherein men may remain for several hours without fear of injury to health, and to remove all gasses and smoke as fast as formed in case of fire. Ventilation serves other things of value, but the two named are the essential factors. Men cannot do their best work in poorly ventilated quarters, therefore since box office income depends, in some measure, at least, upon good work by the projectionist, it is to the financial interest of the employer to provide it. Moreover, did a fire occur in a poorly ventilated room, smoke in all probability would ooze out into the auditorium around crevices in the various shutter-covered openings, sight of which might well cause a panic, with possibly very serious results.

"We then may say that good ventilation is a safeguard to both life and health."

A. Garlock answers thus: "The essential items served by proper projection room ventilation are: (a) To provide good air, thus conserving the health of the men working in the room, as well as setting up a condition tending to cause them to produce good work. (b) Proper ventilation is a decided safeguard in case of fire; see your Bluebook. (c) A proper flow of air tends to cause equipments to operate at lower temperature. (d) Proper air movement tends to carry off carbon and other dust which, did it lodge on film or in machinery bearings, would cause serious harm."

G. E. Doe holds this view:

"Without good ventilation during hot weather, at least, the projection room is a hot, uncomfortable place in which to work, to say nothing of health considerations. Men forced to work under such conditions will not do their best, hence the box office will suffer. Accidents are more likely to happen in such a room. Equipments will not receive the care they might and should have, therefore the repair and replacement bills will be higher than they would be were better working conditions provided. I am not defending poor work, even when the employer 'asks for it.' I am only telling you, or rather him, what will happen.

"In addition to all this, with poor ventilation the air will be more dust laden, with consequent injury to film and machinery bearings and the greater liability of ground noise in sound, and to top it all off, when or if a fire occurs in a poorly ventilated room, almost certainly at least, some of the smoke will get out into the auditorium, where it may start a panic. To sum up, good health, comfortable working quarters, clean air and protection from possible panic in time of fire are the essential points."

COMPANIES INCORPORATED

The following new companies in the motion picture field have been incorporated recently in the localities named:

In Arkansas:

Ozark Enterprises, Inc., to operate theatres, By W. F. Sonneman, E. H. Sonneman, M. A. Lightman and M. S. McCord. Capital stock is 1,000 shares, no par.

Payne Amusement Company, Inc., by E. C. Payne, Leila Pyane and Hal DeLongy.

In Florida:

Myrna Halifax Theatres, Inc., with capital of 10 shares, par value $100 each, by E. J. Sparks, M. C. Talley and L. H. Small.

Pan American Pictures Corporation with capital stock of 400,000 shares, no par value, as producers, by A. L. Brown, G. H. Bowles and C. D. Benson.

Perland Company, Inc., to engage in the motion picture business, by F. Rogers, F. H. Kent and G. A. Kenimer, Authorized capital is 100 shares at par value of $100 each.

Royal Theatre Enterprises, Inc., to operate theatres under an authorized capitalization of 100 shares, no par value, by J. A. Cunningham, D. Scott and C. L. Perry.

Veebee Theatres, Inc., by R. N. Kahleyard, Sr., R. N. Kahleyard, Jr. and M. C. Talley, with capital stock of 10 shares, par value $100 each.

In Missouri:

Fanchon and Marco Enterprises, Inc., to carry on general theatre and amusement business, by Harry Greenman, Charles E. Kurtzman and Rose Wiptler.

At Albany, N. Y.:

Harley Enterprises Ltd., theatrical business, with a capital of 100 shares, no par value, by Solomon Badesch, Esther Schutz, Nathan Berman.

Ionian Theatre Corporation, to operate theatres. Capital stock is 100 shares, no par value, by John Skouras, James Marcus, Euthermios Coolis.

Lake Placid Players, Inc., for theatrical productions by Elizabeth W. Stearns, Marion Rooney, Edith B. Stearns.

At Charlotte, N. C.:

Standard Theatres, Inc., with authorized capital stock of $100,000 and subscribed stock of $300, to own and operate motion picture theatres, by F. H. Beddingfield, J. M. Gregg and S. W. Craver.

In Ohio:

Cheviot Theatre Realty Company, Inc., by Dorothea Gano Loofbourow, J. E. Crawford and John R. Loofbourow, with capital stock of 250 shares, no par value.

Creation Amusement Inc., by N. R. Simon, J. M. Barbour and G. W. Rosenberg.

Fairfield Amusement Company, Inc., by Robert Dienst, A. B. Miller and A. F. Miller.

Valley Amusement Company, Inc., with authorized capital stock of $10,000 by David M. Levy, Alfred H. Myers and M. H. Koodish.

In Rhode Island:

Columbia Amusement Corporation, an exhibitor company, by William J. Carlos, Marshall B. Marcus and Irving Winograd.

Rockport Amusement Company, Inc., capitalized at $2,000, by A. C. Glass, Charles T. Picton and Fred Johnson.

In Virginia:

Brink Amusement Corporation, with capital of $10,000, to engage in a general entertainment business. James H. Brink of Covington, Ky., is president.

T. & P. Company, Inc., of which B. T. Pitts is president, has been granted a charter to a theatrical business under capital of $50,000.

Virginia Theatre Supply Corporation, with maximum capital of $5,000, to manufacture and deal in theatre supplies. H. Pollard Long is president.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1935, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1935-36 season.
